

Index

American Literary Scholarship, 1963

Partly in response to the first readers of the 1963 volume, this index is designed to increase for many years the usefulness of the essays contained in the annual. Like the essays themselves, it, too, can serve scholars as a measurement of literary activity.

The index is primarily an index of authors of critical works and of the authors who are their subjects. A movement or genre is indexed only if the work under discussion is significantly on that subject. Hence, an incidental reference to the Gothic novel would not be indexed, but if, for example, an article were about the influence of the Gothic novel on Faulkner, Gothic novel would be an index entry. However, the index does attempt complete coverage of literary figures referred to throughout the book. Works are cited only under authors who have at least a chapter devoted to them (i. e., those in Part I).
