October Is Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Visit “I Fight Like a Girl”: an exhibit that allows you to learn more about what it’s like to live with breast cancer. About 1 in 8 U.S. women (about 12%) will develop invasive breast cancer over the course of her lifetime. I Fight Like a Girl was created by Ann Beck and Angie Viscuso, two friends with a shared vision. Angie is a hospice social worker by trade and a survivor, which helps her interview the participants of this project with compassion and solidarity. Ann is a graduate of UT Arlington (class of 2000) and a professional photographer in the Dallas–Fort Worth area, who has, in the past, donated sessions to families with sick parents. They embarked on this larger project in 2010 and have so far interviewed and photographed close to 100 women from all over the United States. (Central Library, 2nd floor, through Oct. 31)

Focus on Faculty Presents Barbara Shipman

Barbara Shipman, associate professor of mathematics, will discuss the “Subtleties of Meaning in Mathematical Versus Common Use of Language” at Focus on Faculty Wednesday, Oct. 21, at noon on the sixth floor of Central Library.

Shipman explains, “In communicating mathematical ideas, we often speak in words and grammar that have their own variety of meanings in everyday English. These meanings can collide in unexpected ways when speaker and listener hear the words differently. At the same time, intuitive nuances of language aid mathematicians in giving form to concepts such as infinity, bending of surfaces, behavior of functions, and the nature of numbers. This interplay between mathematical and common use of language leads to interesting and sometimes surprising realizations about the beauty and versatility of the language that we use every day.”
