

“LANDS OF THE FUTURE:” GERMAN-SPEAKING IDENTITY,
NETWORKS, AND TERRITORIALITY
IN THE SOUTH ATLANTIC,
1820-1930

by

ISABELLE RISPLER

Presented to the Faculty of the Graduate School of The University of Texas at Arlington in Partial Fulfillment of the Requirements for the Degree of

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY

THE UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS AT ARLINGTON

and

UNIVERSITÉ SORBONNE PARIS CITÉ

Prepared at Université Paris Diderot

Under an International Cotutelle Agreement

August 2017

Copyright © by Isabelle Rispler 2017

All Rights Reserved

Acknowledgements

For my families around the Atlantic

Without Pilar González Bernaldo, who has supported me in my academic career since 2007, this dissertation would not have been possible. She helped me find my topic, set up the cotutelle agreement with the University of Texas at Arlington, and never lost faith in my ability to finish my project. I would also like to thank Nicole Gabriel, Liliane Crips, Lucrece Friess, and Nicole Chartier who have the merit of setting the foundations for my academic career at the Université Paris Diderot.

At the University of Texas at Arlington, I want to express my deep gratitude to Kenyon Zimmer for his inexhaustible energy to comment on my chapter drafts and help me sort out enrollment issues in his role as transatlantic history PhD advisor. I would like to thank Steven Reinhardt, David LaFevor, Imre Demhardt, Patrick Babiracki, and Kimberly Breuer. I thank Thomas Adam for having been my mentor for many years and having encouraged me to pursue this dissertation topic, as well as encouraging me to present at conferences and to publish portions of my work. Several of the arguments discussed in this dissertation have previously been presented at the following conferences: “Modernity at Large and its Imaginaries in Germany and Beyond” at Columbia University, New York (March 2011); the “Migration: Methodologies, Circulation, Receptions, Regulation” workshop co-organized by the University of Chicago and the Université Paris Diderot, Chicago, Illinois (April 2011); the conference “Globalising Germany: Exploration, Emigration and Empire, 1848-1918,” Flinders University, Adelaide, Australia (July 2012); the 36th Annual Conference of the German Studies Association (GSA), Milwaukee, Wisconsin (October 2012); the 13th Annual International Graduate Student Conference on Transatlantic History, The University of Texas at Arlington (October 2012); the “Transnationalism and Minority Cultures” Mid-America Conference, University of Oklahoma (September 2013); the seminar “German History, Literature, and Culture from a German Base,” 37th Annual Conference of the GSA, Denver, Colorado (October 2013); the International Summer School “Global History in France and in Francophone Africa” at the Institut Historique Allemand Paris, France (September 2014); the Fourth European Congress on World and Global History (ENIUGH), Paris, France (September 2014); the conference “Global Diasporas in the Age of High Imperialism,” University of Kassel, Germany (September 2014); the Third Joint Conference of the Northwest and California Affiliate of the World History Association “Empires: Across Time and Space,” Seattle, Washington, (February/March 2015); the 55th International Congress of Americanists (ICA) “Conflicto, paz y construcción de identidades en las Américas” in San Salvador, El Salvador (July 2015); the 16th Annual International Graduate Student Conference on Transatlantic History, The University of Texas at Arlington, Texas (September 2015); the 130th annual meeting of the American Historical Association (AHA) “Global Migrations: Empires, Nations, and Neighbors,” Atlanta, Georgia, (January 2016); and the workshop “Global Latin America,” Université Paris Sorbonne Nouvelle - Paris 3 in Paris, France (April 2016). A summary of the main ideas has been published in “Quelques réflexions pour un débat sur les germanophones sud-atlantiques au XIXe siècle: pratique coloniale et histoire connectée.” In Amérique latine globale: Histoire connectée, globale et internationale, edited by Daniel Emilio Rojas. Paris: Harmattan, 2017.

I am indebted to Robert Fairbanks and William Dulaney, who served as department chairs during my time at UT Arlington, as well as Deans Beth Wright, Kim van Noort, and Les Riding-In. All of them have provided me with the resources that made research travel possible. History department staff Robin Deeslie and Ryan Hamzeh helped connect the project with the funds. Completing this project would not have been possible without the following support: a fellowship from the Centre Interdisciplinaire d'études et de recherches sur l'Allemagne (CIERA), various UTA fellowships including the Carrizo and Utey fellowships as well as the Mustaq Ahmed's Global Research Fellowship with the College of Liberal Arts, as well as support from the laboratory ICT at Paris Diderot. I would like to express my gratitude to the responsible staff of video-conferencing for the defense: Olivier Marande (Paris Diderot), Terrance Tisdale (UTA), and Javier Aragón Benítez (Universidad Autónoma de Madrid).

Working on this dissertation has led me to meeting scholars, archivists, and librarians across the Atlantic world. I would like to thank the following people in particular. In Buenos Aires: Alicia Bernasconi (CEMLA), the staff of the BN, the staff of the CEMLA, and the staff of the AGN-DAI. In Namibia: Antje Otto (National Museum of Namibia), Gunter von Schuhmann (Namibia Scientific Society), Dieter Eßlinger (DELK), Werner Hillebrecht (National Archives of Namibia), and Angelica Flamm-Schneeweiss (Swakopmund tour guide). Wolfgang Apelt (VEM Wuppertal), Solveig Nestler (Bundesarchiv Berlin), Henner Grundhoff (EZA Berlin), the staff of Bundesarchiv Berlin, and the staff of IAI-PK Berlin. Rachel Robbins and the Inter-library Loan staff at UT Arlington.

The following scholars have provided me with helpful comments and suggestions at various meetings and conferences: Noemi Goldmann, Nadia Andrea de Christóforis, Regula Rohland de Langbehn, Irina Podgorny, Julio Djendjeredjian, Jorge Gelman, Marianne Zappen-Thomson, Matthew Fitzpatrick, Andrew Zimmerman, Benjamin Bryce, Nina Berman, Kit Belgum, Bradley Naranch, Sebastian Conrad, Matthias Middell, Michel Espagne, Dirk Hoerder, Mark Choate, Stefan Manz, Ulrike Kirchberger, Reinhard Wendt, Barbara Jean Traver, H. Glenn Penny, Alma Durán-Merk, Walther Bernecker, Glen Goodman, Kimberly E. Contag, Jim Grabowska, Patricia Anne Simpson, José Moya, Isa Blumi, and Geoff Eley.

I would like to thank all of my friends who were understanding for the lack of time I have afforded them over the past few years due to the increasing demands of research trips and finally the writing process of the chapters. In particular I would like to thank Agustina and Agustín for their help and accommodation in Buenos Aires, Sarah R. in Berlin, Birgit K. for setting up accommodation in Windhoek, and Khoulood and my French family for always providing a home away from home for me to stay in Paris. I would like to thank my American families for their moral support.

To Nicole and Rufki, for having suffered together: shared pain is only half the pain.

I would like to thank my parents, who have accompanied me on research travel to Namibia and conference travel to Central America, my sister for all her transcribing work, and my brother for giving me space to write.

To my husband Bryan who never got tired of discussing my work and improving my English skills, and our son Simon Loïc who patiently waited to see the light of the world until this dissertation was defended.

July 11, 2017

Abstract

“LANDS OF THE FUTURE:” GERMAN-SPEAKING IDENTITY, NETWORKS, AND TERRITORIALITY
IN THE SOUTH ATLANTIC,
1820-1930

“TERRES D’AVENIR:” IDENTITÉ, RÉSEAUX ET TERRITORIALITÉ
GERMANOPHONES DANS L’ATLANTIQUE SUD,
1820-1930

Isabelle Rispler, PhD

The University of Texas at Arlington and Université Sorbonne Paris Cité, 2017

Supervising Professors: Kenyon Zimmer and Pilar González Bernaldo

The movement of German-speakers to the South Atlantic did not begin with Nazis seeking refuge in Argentina in the aftermath of World War II, nor did it start with the organization of the German protectorate of South-West Africa in 1884. Throughout the nineteenth century, the great majority of German-speakers leaving Europe travelled and migrated to North America, but some German-speakers had begun settling in both Argentina and Namibia well before the turn of the twentieth century. German-speaking merchants and missionaries started travelling to and settling in the South Atlantic in the 1820s. These South Atlantic German-speakers were influenced by the changing conditions in Europe: the increasing mobility of people and goods through the advancement of technology, and the increasing dominance of Nation-states on Western Europe's political scene. After its founding in 1871, the German nation-state expanded its political reach with the German Empire's increasing desire for power on the global market. After 1900 in particular, politically active Germans sought to compete against the increasing economic competition from the United States by attempting to redirect German-speaking migrants from their U.S. rival to areas they deemed more apt for continued German state aid and control. In this context, many Germans recognized German South-West Africa as the only territory suitable for large-scale German settlement. Meanwhile, German-speakers in Argentina became involved in marketing Argentina as the ideal destination for German-speaking migration and numerous publications praised it as the "land of the future."

German-speaking migration to the United States and Canada is well documented, whereas scholars have paid less attention to those migrants who went to Argentina and Namibia. Within the existing secondary literature, scholars have treated German-speakers in Argentina mostly as foreign migrants in an established republic, while conversely studying German-speakers in Namibia primarily within the context of German colonialism. I argue that it is historians who have created this division which overemphasizes the differences between the continents' historically rendered trajectories, while hiding the connections and similarities from the viewpoint of nineteenth-century German-speaking migrants. I propose to study the everyday life experiences of nineteenth-century German-speakers on both sides of the South Atlantic within one single analytical field. I argue that even though the respective political circumstances varied, the everyday life experiences of these German-speakers on both sides of the South Atlantic were more similar than different. I analyze the writings and belief-systems of nineteenth-century contemporaries in order to overcome the dichotomy that historians have created as distinct and mutually exclusive types of global movement. What happened in the South Atlantic was "transnational colonization:" emerging nation-states were involved in the colonization process – Argentina in South America and Germany in Namibia – and civil servants helped further their growth. However, within these states, people who maintained a variety of European identities and origins, were active agents in the colonization process. My sources include texts produced by short- and long-term migrants, such as travel writings as well as community and government records currently held in archives in Germany, Argentina and Namibia.

Transnational and global history provide the larger framework for my study as they aim at overcoming national(ist) history writing by looking beyond and below the nation-state and instead focusing on connections rather than territorial divisions. While scholars have started to apply transnational history to the German case, German history writing still remains too national(ist) and exceptionalist and largely excludes from the “national narrative” migrants who left Central Europe. By broadening the field of German colonialism and incorporating cultural and transnational history, I aim to provide an alternative to this national(ist) narrative by reorienting the history of the official German colonies and including other migrant communities “outside” of the scope of the official empire within the same analytical field. More generally, I am expanding traditional German history to include those people beyond the boundaries of the German state that have been largely excluded in national and political history writing. I focus on the history of German-speakers rather than on a history of the German nation-state.

Nineteenth-century German-speakers lived with shared ideas about culture and the significance of their influence, which affected their outlook wherever they went. I argue that all German-speakers who left Europe between the 1820 and 1930 participated in (whether consciously or unconsciously) an imperial imaginary, and their reasoning for migrating took place under the same premises wherever they went. The migrants wanted to recreate home and thus created a hybrid space abroad. While undertaking a historical study, I work with methods and approaches that have been informed by the neighboring disciplines anthropology, sociology, literary studies, and cultural studies. The dissertation is organized around the three basic questions I seek to answer: who? what? how? Firstly, I explore the construction of German-speaking identity in the South Atlantic, both in Namibia and Argentina. Secondly, I analyze sociability within the German-speaking communities and the way they set up networks. Thirdly, I study German-speaking agricultural colonization in the South Atlantic and territoriality based in scientific and fictional accounts.

In all three cases, terminology changed over the course of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The term “German-speaker” replaced “German” as the latter turned into a synonym for citizens of the German Empire and therefore excluded those identifying with German-ness that lived in other states. “German” started out as a cultural concept that only later turned into a political one. In addition, a number of other identity labels concurred and overlapped with “German,” which illustrates the cultural complexity of German-ness in the South Atlantic. After the World Wars, the term German-speaking “community” eventually replaced the term of German-speaking “colony.” This was the case for the German-speaking community of Buenos Aires and for the German-speaking community of Namibia. German-speaking “trade colonies” were networks created by private individuals who wanted to raise the level of “civilization” of both their own communities as well as that of their receiving society while expanding German markets overseas. From a theoretical perspective, decolonization and postcolonial studies replaced “colonization” with “agriculture” as the favored term of South Atlantic German-speakers. “Colonization” was composed of three elements: “people,” “land,” and “control.” While migration studies focused on the study of the “people” and migrants, and empire studies on the “control” and sovereignty, the “use of land” focused on mere “agriculture.” I argue that this change in terminology, which left out the people as actors and the issue of control and sovereignty over the land, constituted a neutralization and silencing of the complicated matter of colonization.

Borrowing from transnational and global history allows for uncovering connections and similarities among South Atlantic German-speakers, who used both Argentina and Namibia as fields for experimentation in setting up community networks and practicing colonization in the form of controlling land through settlement.

Le mouvement de germanophones vers l’Atlantique Sud n’a pas commencé avec les Nazis cherchant refuge dans l’après-guerre, ni avec la mise en place d’un protectorat allemand au Sud-Ouest africain en 1884. Tout au long du XIXe siècle, la grande majorité des germanophones, ayant quitté l’Europe, a voyagé et migré en Amérique du Nord, mais un certain nombre de germanophones avaient choisi l'Argentine et la Namibie bien avant le tournant du XIXe siècle. Des marchands et missionnaires germanophones avaient commencé à voyager dans l'Atlantique Sud et à s'y installer dans les années 1820s. Ces germanophones de l'Atlantique Sud étaient influencés par les conditions changeantes en Europe : la mobilité accrue des personnes et des biens au travers de l'évolution technologique et de la dominance croissante d'Etats-nations sur la scène politique de l'Europe occidentale. Après sa fondation en 1871, l'Etat-nation allemand étendit son influence politique avec ses aspirations croissantes au pouvoir sur le marché global. Après 1900, en particulier, les Allemands, politiquement actifs, ont cherché à contrer la compétition croissante des Etats-Unis sur le plan économique ; en tentant de rediriger les migrants germanophones des Etats-Unis vers les territoires qu'ils considéraient plus aptes pour l'aide et le contrôle continu de l'Etat-nation allemand. Dans ce context, le Sud-Ouest africain était reconnu, par la majorité des Allemands, pour être le seul territoire à la hauteur de la colonisation allemande à grande échelle. Au même moment, les germanophones en Argentine devenaient actifs en promouvant l'Argentine comme destination idéale pour la migration germanophone, et un grand nombre de publications le louaient en tant que « pays d'avenir ».

Les publications sur les Allemands aux Etats-Unis et au Canada sont nombreuses, mais les germanophones ayant choisi l'Atlantique Sud n'ont pas fait déferler les chroniques. Au regard de cette littérature secondaire, les Allemands en Argentine étaient traités comme des migrants étrangers à la République, tandis que les Allemands en Namibie ont été, tout d'abord, étudiés en rapport avec le colonialisme allemand. Je postule que ce sont les historiens qui ont créé cette division qui accentue davantage les différences entre les trajectoires historiquement rapportées et qui cachent les connections et similarités qui étaient évidentes aux migrants germanophones du XIX^e siècle. Je me propose d'étudier ces germanophones dans un seul champ analytique. J'argumente que malgré les différences des circonstances politiques respectives, les expériences du quotidien des germanophones de ces deux côtés de l'Atlantique Sud étaient plus similaires que différentes. J'analyse les publications et les pensées des contemporains du XIX^e siècle afin de surmonter la dichotomie, créée par les historiens, en tant que genres de mouvements mondiaux distincts et mutuellement exclusifs. Ce qui s'est passé dans l'Atlantique Sud peut être appelé « colonisation transnationale » : des Etats-nations émergents étaient impliqués dans le processus de colonisation – l'Argentine en Amérique du Sud et l'Allemagne dans le Sud-Ouest africain – et des fonctionnaires aidaient à accroître leur expansion. Cependant, les personnes qui maintenaient une variété d'identités et d'origines européennes au sein de ces Etats, étaient des agents actifs dans le processus de colonisation. Mes sources primaires comprennent des textes produits par les migrants de courtes et longues durées, comme les récits de voyage, ainsi que les archives des communautés et des gouvernements actuellement situés en Allemagne, en Argentine et en Namibie.

L'histoire transnationale et globale fournit un cadre plus vaste pour mon étude car elle vise à surmonter l'écriture d'une histoire national(iste) en regardant autour et au-delà de l'Etat-nation. Bien que certains historiens ont commencé à appliquer ces nouvelles méthodes au cas allemand, l'histoire allemande demeure davantage national(iste) et exceptionalist, et elle exclut largement ces personnes ayant quitté l'Europe Centrale. En élargissant le champ du colonialisme allemand et en incorporant l'histoire culturelle et transnationale, j'envisage de fournir une alternative à ce récit national(iste) en réorientant l'histoire des colonies allemandes officielles et en incluant, dans le même champ analytique, d'autres communautés migratoires extérieures de l'étendue de l'empire. Plus généralement, j'étends le champ de l'histoire allemande traditionnelle pour inclure ces personnes en dehors des limites de l'Etat allemand dont elles ont été largement exclues dans l'écriture de l'histoire nationale et politique. Ce faisant, l'accent a été mis sur l'histoire des germanophones plutôt que celle de l'État-nation allemand.

Des idées sur la culture et l'influence germanophone étaient largement partagées au XIXe, de sorte qu'elles affectaient, partout où ils allaient, les visions des contemporains. J'argumente que les germanophones ayant quittés l'Europe entre 1820 et 1930 participaient (consciemment ou inconsciemment) à un imaginaire impérial, et leurs réflexions en faveur de la migration s'effectuaient sous les mêmes prémisses. Les migrants cherchaient à recréer leur « chez eux » et ils finissaient par créer un espace hybride. Bien que j'entreprenne une étude historique, j'emploie des méthodes et approches qui ont été informés par les disciplines voisines d'anthropologie, sociologie, études littéraires et études culturelles.

La thèse s'organise autour de trois questions de base auxquelles je tends à répondre : qui ? quoi ? comment ? Premièrement, j'explore la construction de l'identité germanophone dans l'Atlantique Sud, aussi bien en Namibie qu'en Argentine. Deuxièmement, j'analyse la sociabilité parmi les communautés germanophones et la manière avec laquelle elles ont mis en place des réseaux. Troisièmement, j'étudie la colonisation agricole germanophone dans l'Atlantique Sud et la territorialité sur la base de récits scientifiques et fictifs.

Pour l'ensemble des trois axes, la terminologie a changé à travers les XIX^e et XX^e siècles. Le terme « germanophone » a remplacé « allemand » quand le dernier est devenu un synonyme pour les citoyens de l'Empire allemand et, par conséquent, a exclu ceux qui s'identifiaient avec la Germanité mais qui vivaient dans un état différent. « Allemand » donc a donc commencé en tant que concept culturel et s'est transformé en concept politique. De plus, un certain nombre d'autres étiquettes identitaires concourraient et chevauchaient avec « allemand », ce qui démontre la complexité culturelle de la Germanité dans l'Atlantique Sud.

Après les guerres mondiales, le terme « communauté » germanophone a fini par remplacer le terme « colonie » germanophone. Ceci était le cas pour la communauté germanophone de Buenos Aires et pour la communauté germanophone de la Namibie. Les « colonies de commerce » germanophones étaient des réseaux créés par des individus privés qui voulaient relever le niveau de « civilisation » de leurs propres communautés ainsi que celui de leur société d'accueil tout en élargissant les marchés allemands d'outre-mer. La décolonisation et les études postcoloniales ont remplacé « colonisation » avec « agriculture » comme terme favori parmi les germanophones sud-atlantiques. « Colonisation » était composé de trois éléments : « gens », « terre » et « contrôle ». Pendant que les études migratoires focalisaient sur l'étude des « gens » et des migrants, et les études impériales sur le « contrôle » et la souveraineté, « l'usage de terre » focalisait seul sur « l'agriculture ». J'argumente que ce changement de terminologie, qui omettait les gens comme acteurs ainsi que le problème de contrôle et de souveraineté sur la terre, constituait une neutralisation et un faire-taire du problème compliqué de la colonisation.

L'emprunt de l'histoire transnationale et globale permet de mettre au jour des connections et des similarités parmi les germanophones de l'Atlantique Sud qui ont utilisé aussi bien l'Argentine que la Namibie comme champs d'expérimentation pour mettre en place des réseaux communautaires et pour pratiquer la colonisation à travers le contrôle des terres par l'installation et l'aménagement du territoire.

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	iii
Abstract	viii
Introduction	1
Part I. Identity: From “German” to “German-speaker”	19
Chapter 1. “German” as Transnational Category of Analysis	22
1.1 Historicizing the Concept of “German-ness”	23
1.1.1 The German People as a “Nation”	28
1.1.2 “Race” and German Identity	30
1.1.2.1 The Politics of “Race”	43
1.2 Synthesizing the Study of German-speaking Overseas Migration	50
1.2.2 Historical Neglect and the Fate of German-speaking Women	60
1.2.3 Social Class as Determining Factor for Settlement Destinations	69
1.2.4 South Atlantic Receiving Societies, Degrees of Europeanization, and Otherness	73
1.3 Conclusion	81
Chapter 2. Dimensions of German Cultural Identity Experienced in the South Atlantic	83
2.1. Types of Citizenship and Nationality of “Germans”	86
2.1.1 The Problem with Exact Figures	90
2.2 Contemporary Labels Overlapping with German-ness	96
2.2.1 Jewish	97
2.2.2 Russian-German	104
2.2.3 Dutch, Boer, and Belgian	115
2.2.4 Austrian	124

2.2.5 Swiss-German.....	131
2.2.6 Reichsdeutsche	139
2.3 The Role of the German Language in Constructing and Maintaining German-ness	143
2.4 Conclusion	149
Part I Concluding Remarks	153
Part II. Networks: From “Colony” to “Community”	156
Chapter 3. Problematizing the State-centeredness of Historiography on Imperialism.....	159
3.1 Re-evaluating Imperialism and Colonialism as Categories of Analysis	163
3.2 The British as Model and Rival for Contemporary German-speakers	172
3.3 German-speaking Colonies in the South Atlantic as Category of Experience	182
3.4 Conclusion	187
Chapter 4. “Advancement” and “Civilization” via Associations and Institutions	189
4.1 Churches at the Core of the Communities.....	191
4.1.1 German-speaking Protestants as Pioneers	193
4.1.1.1 The Protestant Church in Namibia.....	197
4.1.1.2 The Protestant Church in Argentina	201
4.1.1.3 Connections with English-speaking Protestants.....	203
4.1.1.4 South Atlantic Protestant Organizations with Seat in Central Europe.....	206
4.1.2 German-speaking Catholics as Imitators	207
4.1.2.1 German-speaking Catholics in Argentina.....	208
4.1.2.2 German-speaking Catholics in Namibia	209
4.1.3 Religious Institutions and their Relation to Colonization.....	209

4.2 Ensuring the Transmission of Knowledge.....	211
4.2.1 Private Schools and School Associations in Argentina.....	213
4.2.2 Private Schools and School Associations in Namibia.....	215
4.2.3 Agricultural Schools.....	215
4.3 Local Newspapers as Communication Hubs.....	216
4.4 Leisure Associations as a Means to Strengthen German-ness.....	226
4.4.1 Sports Clubs.....	226
4.4.2 Music Associations and Entertainment Clubs.....	233
4.4.3 Ethno-National Clubs.....	235
4.5 Philanthropic and Health Associations to Elevate the Destitute.....	236
4.6 Conclusion.....	246
Chapter 5. Associations and Companies for Enterprise and Expanding German
Markets.....	248
5.1 Trade Companies as Link between South Atlantic and Central Europe.....	249
5.2 Providing and Protecting Capital: Banks and Insurance Companies.....	264
5.2.1 Internationally Operating Banks.....	265
5.2.2 Banks Operating Locally.....	269
5.2.3 Agricultural Banks.....	270
5.2.4 Insurance Companies.....	271
5.3 Colonization As Shared Activity of Community Members.....	273
5.3.1 For-Profit Colonization Companies.....	275
5.3.2 Non-Profit South Atlantic Colonization Associations.....	297
5.3.3 Colonial and Colonization Institutions set up in Central Europe.....	305
5.4 Companies Involved in Large-scale Production of Food Stuffs.....	313
5.4.1 Beer – A Typically “German” Beverage.....	313

5.4.2 Wheat, an “Old-world” Crop Transplanted	315
5.5 German-speakers’ Participation in Bringing Technological Progress	318
5.5.1 Improving Means of Communication.....	319
5.5.2 Providing for Transportation	320
5.5.3 Expanding the Availability of Electricity	323
5.6 Conclusion	324
Part II Concluding Remarks.....	326
Part III. Territoriality: From “Colonization” to “Agriculture”.....	330
Chapter 6. Conceptualizing Colonization as Convergence of People, Land, and Control.....	332
6.1 A Path towards “Civilized People” and “Civilized Land”	335
6.1.1 A South Atlantic Frontier	335
6.1.2 “Civilization”	338
6.1.3 War	345
6.1.3.1 Conflicts between Europeans and Indigenous Peoples.....	346
6.1.3.2 Conflicts among Europeans	355
6.2 State-centered Colonization Concepts.....	364
6.2.1 Internal Colonization versus External Colonization.....	366
6.2.2 State Colonization versus Private Colonization	378
6.3 The Component Parts of Colonization	389
6.3.1 Focus on Migration and Settlement.....	389
6.3.2 Focus on Agriculture	395
6.4 Conclusion	399
Chapter 7. German-speaking Travel Writing as Colonization Propaganda.....	400
7.1 Publications with Educational Purpose	403

7.1.1 Scientific Writing Produced in an Academic Setting	404
7.1.2 Translating Science for the General Public	434
7.2 Literature with Entertainment Qualities	445
7.2.1 Remembering Lived Experiences (Erinnerungsliteratur)	445
7.2.2 Imagining Contingencies in Fiction – Kolonialliteratur	467
7.3 Conclusion	480
Chapter 8. Implementing Agricultural Colonization and Exploiting the Land.....	481
8.1 Examining Exemplary Terms	482
8.1.1 “Colonial Practitioner” (Praktiker).....	483
8.1.2 “Farmer”	484
8.2 Case Studies.....	486
8.2.1 Esperanza – The First Agricultural Colony in Argentina.....	488
8.2.2 Rio Pico – A German Colony in Patagonia?	490
8.2.3 Otjimbingwe – A Missionary Colony in Namibia.....	491
8.2.4 Klein-Windhoek – Colonization or Gardening?	494
8.3 Agricultural Produce.....	496
8.4 Conclusion	498
Chapter 9. Agricultural Colonization as Field of Increasing State Regulation.....	499
9.1 Namibia	500
9.1.1 Legal and Political Position of Namibia with Regards to Statehood.....	501
9.1.2 Gradual Emancipation of Namibia	503
9.2 Argentina	504
9.2.1 State Colonies	509
9.2.2 German-speakers Working for the Argentinean Government.....	511
9.2.3 Transfer of Knowledge by Argentinean Delegates	518

9.3 German States.....	525
9.3.1 The German Empire Interfering in the South Atlantic	527
9.3.1.1 Inquiries about Migration from Argentina to Namibia.....	538
9.3.2 Tensions between German- Argentineans and German Imperial Authorities	541
9.4 Conclusion	547
Part III Concluding Remarks.....	548
General Conclusion	551
Bibliography.....	562
Archival Sources	562
Newspapers	568
Published Sources	569
Biographical Information	717

Introduction

German-speakers commonly used the expression “Land der Zukunft” (land of the future) to refer to both Argentina and Namibia between 1851 and 1916.¹ For these German-speakers, “the future” represented potential and progress simultaneously. “The land of the future” provided a space for a better tomorrow. This dissertation analyzes how German-speakers in the South Atlantic created Argentina and

¹ Samuel Gottfried Kerst, Die Länder im Stromgebiete des La Plata, mit Rücksicht auf den deutschen Handel und die deutsche Auswanderung. Vortrag, gehalten am 12. Mai 1852 in der öffentlichen Sitzung des Central-Vereins für Deutsche Auswanderungs- und Kolonisations-Angelegenheiten in Berlin (Berlin: Selbstverlag des Vereins, 1852), 3; Karl Andree, ed., Buenos Ayres und die argentinischen Provinzen: Nach den neuesten Quellen (Leipzig: C. B. Lorck, 1856), vi; Ernst Bachmann, ed., Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, First Edition (Buenos Aires: Hugo Kunz & Cia., 1884), 2; Joh. G. Tjarks, “Die wirtschaftliche Entwicklung Argentiniens,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903), 813; Friedrich Wilhelm von Harder, “Das Land der Zukunft: Argentinien,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 5 (1903): 33–49; Max Josef v Vacano, Buntes Allerlei aus Argentinien: Streiflichter auf ein Zukunftsland (Berlin: Reimer, 1905), 22; Alfred Arent, Ein Land der Zukunft: Ein Beitrag zur näheren Kenntnis Argentiniens (München: Verlag der “Südamerika” (J. Greger), 1906); Moritz Alemann, Am Rio Negro: Ein Zukunftsgebiet germanischer Niederlassung: Drei Reisen nach dem argentinischen Rio Negro-Territorium. Ein Führer für Ansiedler, Unternehmer und Kapitalisten (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1907); Wilhelm Vallentin, Argentinien und seine wirtschaftliche Bedeutung für Deutschland: Vortrag gehalten am 23. Jan. 1907 im Deutsch-Brasilischen Verein zu Berlin (Berlin: H. Paetel, 1907), 15; 46-47; Ludwig Munzinger, Zukunftsländer am La Plata: Eine volkswirtschaftliche Reisestudie (München: Der Verfasser, 1907); “Allerhöchstes Urteil über Argentinien,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, December 1, 1908, 63, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 63; “Argentinien, das Land der Zukunft,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, October 1, 1909, BArch R 901/30426, pag. 12; José Greger, 100 Briefe von nach Argentinien (Südamerika) ausgewanderten Familien und einzelnen Personen (Freising vor München: Selbstverlag, 1913), 4; Otto Kasdorf, Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1916), 34; “Ein deutscher ‘Zukunftsstaat,’” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 4, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Wilhelm Külz, Deutsch-Südafrika im 25. Jahre deutscher Schutzherrschaft: Skizzen und Beiträge zur Geschichte Deutsch-Südafrikas, Second Edition (Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1909), 22.

Namibia as desired spaces and competing locations where they would construct that dreamed-of better future to ensure their own success and that of their descendants. The South Atlantic space had a long history of intercontinental connection dating back to the transatlantic trade in African slaves, with Africa and Latin America serving as “parallel sites of new European expansionist initiatives.”² Historians, however, have framed their work from the perspective of North Atlantic connections more extensively than connections in the South Atlantic, mainly due to extensive economic connections across the North Atlantic. This focus has served to reify other categories of economic disparity. Working on the South Atlantic as a historian requires thinking about categories such as “Global South.” Does it serve as a mere replacement for “Third World”? What made such a replacement necessary? Can we build on postcolonial history when studying the “oppressors”? Do we always have to think in categories of binaries like oppressor and oppressed, victim and perpetrator, colony and metropole? Historians have discussed issues of “race” in the Namibian case, while they have addressed similar issues in Argentina with the terminology of “ethnicity.” This study looks at the “in-between,” how the established categories and so-called truths overlap in the South Atlantic.

² Marília dos Santos Lopes argued for a South Atlantic framework with reference to the triangular trade, while limiting her focus to South-West Africa and Brazil; see Marília dos Santos Lopes, Fremdwahrnehmung und Selbsteinschätzung: frühneuzeitliche Reiseberichte aus dem südlichen Atlantikraum im Vergleich (Bamberg: Förderverein Forschungsförderung für Vergleichende Europäische Überseegeschichte in Zusammenarbeit mit dem Lehrstuhl für Neuere Geschichte an der Universität Bamberg, 1995), 5 f.; Mary Louise Pratt connected the British invasions of the Rio de la Plata region in South America and the Cape of Good Hope in Africa in 1806; see Mary Louise Pratt, Imperial Eyes: Travel Writing and Transculturation, Second Edition (London: Routledge, 2006), 11.

This dissertation builds on the linguistic and postmodern turns. Instead of writing linear history, it is an attempt to write history like a kaleidoscope, as fiction writer Penelope Lively has pictured it.³ In a mass of elements, a slight change in stance changes the view and the big picture we see. While previous historical works have used many of the sources I include in this study, my work shifts the kaleidoscope. Lively’s kaleidoscopic fiction overlaps with the historical agenda of histoire croisée.⁴ Histoire croisée as a method focuses on the subjectivity of both the sources and the scholars studying them, by inviting us to challenge the very categories in which we are accustomed to thinking. Throughout this dissertation, I confront primary and secondary sources on an equal footing. I am convinced that we not only need to historicize primary source documents, we also need to historicize secondary sources because they also have been created in a specific context. All recounting must account for subjectivity. I therefore continuously point out what I consider an “analytical category,” and what I am considering something as a “category of experience,” the former being a category historians use to understand the past and the latter a category that the people being studied used.⁵

³ Penelope Lively, Moon Tiger (New York: Grove Press, 1988).

⁴ Michael Werner and Benedicte Zimmermann, “Beyond Comparison: Histoire Croisée and the Challenge of Reflexivity,” History and Theory 45 (2006): 30–50.

This dissertation is at the crossroads of a number of academic disciplines. It draws from migration studies and empire studies, the area studies of Latin America and of Africa, as well as Germany history. All of these fields of study emerged in different points in time and under different contexts. While I consciously overlap and intersect these various historiographical traditions to come to new ways of seeing the past, I recognize the potential frictions that result from my undertaking. When I first started presenting on this topic at conferences, I experienced fierce resistance. I was told that I could not do what I was attempting to do; that I could not compare Germans in Namibia with those in Argentina, because I could not – and should not – compare a group of people in a “former colony” with those in a “sovereign republic.” Without any sense of irony, critics relished the opportunity to tell me that I could not simply compare apples with oranges, as if apples and oranges were the building blocks of history. What these critics failed to recognize, however, is that my intention is not to write classical comparative history. Instead, I am more interested in connecting the parts of German history that have long been written about as distinct and separate – even though the contemporary German-speakers viewed both as analogous colonization ventures. What follows in the pages below is a connected history that offers a critical re-interpretation isolated historical canons.⁶

⁵ Rodgers Brubaker and Frederick Cooper distinguish between categories of analysis and categories of practice, but I have replaced the latter with categories of experience in order to not confound it with the discussion about theory and practice of German colonization; see Rodgers Brubaker and Frederick Cooper, “Beyond ‘Identity,’” Theory and Society 29, no. 1 (2000): 1–47.

This dissertation traces is the following three-fold, intertwined changes over time: in the South Atlantic, “Germans” became “German-speakers”; their “colonies” turned into “communities”; and what they originally called “colonization,” they would gradually begin to label as “agriculture.” But while the signifiers changed, the signified remained the same at its core. The vocabulary just had to be adjusted to account for a changing world. By filling in the gaps between the numerous, unconnected subfields that converge in this study, I am offering a new interpretation that explains the transition in the terminology German-speakers used in self-awareness of their undertakings, enterprises, and identity in the South Atlantic.

Throughout the nineteenth century, German writings and expressions equated (German) society with a human being and human behavior. In 1842, Alexander von Bülow wrote that he considered all of (German) society as a “social body” (Gesellschaftskörper) that was sick and needed remedy.⁷ He considered colonization to be the cure for the ailing German organism. Just a few years later, in 1848, Wilhelm Roscher wrote that the act of founding a colony was like begetting a child.⁸ In 1862, Johann Jakob Sturz defined colonization as the reproduction (Fortpflanzung) of nations and states.⁹ In the same passage, he added that being incapable of practicing colonization was the equivalent of impotence for a nation. He then used the terms “daughter nation” and “mother country.”¹⁰ In 1879, Friedrich Fabri claimed that agricultural colonies were destined to develop as European “daughter” states.¹¹ At the German Colonial Congress 1905, Felix Stoerk claimed that every state “naturally” practiced colonization as expansion.¹² In 1906, General Alfred Arent, who had spent three years living in the Argentina with the Argentinean army, wrote about Patagonia as “quasi-virgin land” (sozusagen jungfräuliches Land).¹³ And in 1928, Richard Hennig promoted a similar definition of colonization in his book on geopolitics

⁶ Sanjay Subrahmanyam, “Connected Histories: Notes Towards a Reconfiguration of Early Modern Eurasia,” Modern Asian Studies 31, no. 3 (1997): 735–62; Caroline Douki and Philippe Minard, “Histoire globale, histoires connectées: un changement d’échelle historiographique?” Revue d’histoire moderne et contemporaine 5, no. 54–4bis (2007): 7–21.

⁷ Alexander von Bülow, “Pauperismus und Colonisation,” Die Grenzboten: Zeitschrift für Politik, Literatur und Kunst 2 (1842): 563.

⁸ Wilhelm Roscher, “Nationalökonomische Ansichten über die deutsche Auswanderung,” in Deutsche Vierteljahrs-Schrift (Göttingen, 1848), 99; “Wie der einzelne Mensch, um seine geistigen Fähigkeiten allseitig zu entwickeln, auch das Leben eines Hausvaters, einer Hausmutter durchmachen muß, so bedürfen auch ganze Völker des Kinderzeugens im Großen, d. h. der Coloniengründung.”

⁹ Johann Jakob Sturz, Kann und soll ein Neu-Deutschland geschaffen werden und auf welche Weise?: I. Ein Vorschlag zur Verwerthung der deutschen Auswanderung im nationalen Sinne (Berlin: Nicolai, 1862), 13: “Denn was ist überhaupt die Colonisation? Nichts anderes, als die Fortpflanzung der Nationen und Staaten, und Nichtcolonisationsfähigkeit bedeutet für eine Nation nicht mehr und nicht weniger als Impotenz.”

¹⁰ Ibid., 14.

¹¹ Friedrich Fabri, Bedarf Deutschland der Colonien?: Eine politisch-ökonomische Betrachtung (Gotha: F.A. Perthes, 1879), 31.

¹² “Kolonisation als Äusserung der Expansionskraft ist in der Natur jedes lebensfähigen Verbandes gelegen.“ See Felix Stoerk, “Die völkerrechtliche Staatengesellschaft und das koloniale Problem,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongreß (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906).

¹³ Alfred Arent, “Patagonien, ein deutsches Kolonisationsgebiet,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906), 729.

when he claimed that nation-states followed a similar pattern to humans and animals: they were born, reproduced, and died. Naturally, the reproduction phase meant colonization.¹⁴

Scholars of German history have long debated what they call “colonial fantasies.” Cultural and postcolonial turns in German history writing after the 1990s opened the study of German colonialism to its “theoretical and imagined side.” Scholars began to evaluate the aspirations, the plans, the unfulfilled and unrealized colonial desires of the German Empire, and found that the German state actually exercised little power in the colonies. These interpretations rightly show the limitations of state-centered programs, but fail to consider the changes wrought by individuals functioning outside the purview of the state. Political and economic approaches had started from the premise that German colonialism was short-lived (1884-1918) and geographically restricted to Africa and the Pacific. Susanne Zantop, however, applied the idea of colonial fantasies to South America – the continent where the German Empire never owned official colonies or protectorates.¹⁵ Zantop claimed that German-speakers there had “colonial fantasies” – a subliminal desire for territorial possession and German economic ¹⁴ See part VII. “Der staatliche Fortpflanzungstrieb (Kolonisation),” Richard Hennig, Geopolitik: Die Lehre vom Staat als Lebewesen (Leipzig, Berlin: B. G. Teubner, 1928), 215–301.

¹⁵ Susanne Zantop, Colonial Fantasies: Conquest, Family, and Nation in Precolonial Germany, 1770-1870 (Durham, N.C.: Duke University Press, 1997), 2; Based on Zantop’s idea, Birthe Kundrus argued that after 1884, Germans projected their colonial fantasies on their “official” colonies, see Birthe Kundrus, “Die Kolonien - ‘Kinder des Gefühls und der Phantasie,’” in Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, ed. Birthe Kundrus (Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003), 7.

influence in Latin America. Later, scholars like Birthe Kundrus applied this idea to the German protectorate South-West Africa, claiming that there, too, the colonial project failed because the colony was never heavily populated by Germans. Undertaking a cultural history of colonialism, Kundrus wrote: “With the appropriation of South-West Africa, many colonial enthusiasts hoped to redirect part of the migration flow to German South-West Africa. The colony should become a ‘New Germany,’ a ‘new German home across the ocean.’”¹⁶ Kundrus called these speculations on colonization in South-West Africa fantasies (Phantastereien): she claimed that empirical facts from scientist-explorers and these fantasies became mixed in a sort of science-fiction about Namibia as a potential place for German colonization.¹⁷ She further claimed that the wilderness of South-West Africa resonated with a German longing for happiness and boundlessness, and thus the dream of freedom from social convention.¹⁸ Just as Zantop saw German fantasies in South America, Kundrus saw a sexual component in the colonial fantasies in South-West Africa. She wrote that impressions of nature were infused with a libidinous charge and desires, including curiosity and the desire for power, domination, or sex.¹⁹

¹⁶ Birthe Kundrus, Moderne Imperialisten: das Kaiserreich im Spiegel seiner Kolonien (Köln: Böhlau, 2003), 44f.

¹⁷ Ibid., 46.

¹⁸ Ibid., 149.

¹⁹ Ibid., 154.

Other scholars have been very critical of the “colonial fantasies” paradigm. Hans-Ulrich Wehler has considered them to be speculations, ungrounded in existing scholarship.²⁰ Sebastian Conrad, however, acknowledged that: “In historiography, colonialism has for the most part remained an appendix to Germany history. In reality, exchange relationships with non-European cultures have played a much greater role than is apparent from the traditional perspective. [...] One should not be misled by the mere thirty-year duration of formal German colonial possession: both geographically and chronologically, the colonial imagination was not held to the limits of territorial possessions. This larger scope of colonial desire was in no way only a peripheral affair of colonial supporters; rather, it played a central and recognizable role in politics.”²¹ Conrad took the side of those using the terminology of German colonial fantasies: “Who was to remain a German even if he or she had left the physical nation state behind for good? Who remained within the imaginary boundaries of the nation, whether understood in cultural terms or in terms of the Volk? These movements out of the country were of particular importance during the nineteenth century, when emigration reached a level not seen before or since. Between 1820 and 1920, about 6 million

²⁰ Hans-Ulrich Wehler, “Transnationale Geschichte - der neue Königsweg historischer Forschung?,” in Transnationale Geschichte: Themen, Tendenzen und Theorien, ed. Gunilla Budde, Sebastian Conrad, and Oliver Janz (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2006), 163.

²¹ Sebastian Conrad, “Double Marginalization: A Plea for a Transnational Perspective on German History,” in Comparative and Transnational History: Central European Approaches and New Perspectives, ed. Heinz-Gerhard Haupt and Jürgen Kocka (New York: Berghahn Books, 2009), 63.

Germans left the country, mainly for the Americas. Emigration was a response to hopes and fantasies about overseas destinations as well as a reaction to unsatisfactory conditions at home.”²²

Other scholars have worked with the ideas similar to fantasy: Zantop’s colleagues attested to German-speakers’ “imperialist imagination.”²³ Geoff Eley coined the term “imperial imaginary,”²⁴ to describe German overseas interests long before the formal acquisition and rule of overseas territories in 1884. Mary Louise Pratt claimed that German-speaking travel writers in South America and Africa projected their imperial mindset on unfamiliar landscapes and viewed the world through “imperial eyes.”²⁵ And Kathleen Conzen has labeled the perspective of German-speakers who migrated to the United States in the nineteenth century and settled phantom landscapes on the “empty” frontier, a ²² Sebastian Conrad, Globalisation and the Nation in Imperial Germany (Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2010), 275.

²³ Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop, eds., The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998).

²⁴ Geoff Eley, “Imperial Imaginary, Colonial Effect: Writing the Colony and the Metropole Together,” in Race, Nation and Empire: Making Histories, 1750 to the Present, ed. Catherine Hall and Keith McClelland (Manchester; New York: Manchester University Press, 2010), 217–36; Geoff Eley, “Empire by Land or Sea? Germany’s Imperial Imaginary, 1840-1945,” in German Colonialism in a Global Age, ed. Bradley Naranch and Geoff Eley (Durham, London: Duke University Press, 2014), 19–45.

²⁵ Mary Louise Pratt, Imperial Eyes: Travel Writing and Transculturation (London: Routledge, 1992); Pratt, Imperial Eyes, 2006.

“colonizing vision.”²⁶ However, I have come to a different conclusion regarding the way South Atlantic German-speakers saw themselves and wanted to be seen.

Throughout the nineteenth century, more and more German-speakers from Central Europe exchanged their central European homes for distant places throughout the Atlantic basin. While the majority of German-speaking migrants chose the ever-expanding United States of America as their destination, others went to Chile and Brazil, and some went as far south as the River Plate in South America and Damaraland in southwestern Africa. They all created communities of their own and many maintained emotional contact with their home regions in Central Europe. Travellers and short-term migrants met with those migrants seeking to set up new lives in strange environments. With the German Empire’s increasing desire for power on the world stage, the nation-state expanded the geographical reach of its institutions beyond Central Europe. Particularly after 1900, politically active individuals, both in Germany and abroad, sought to undermine the emerging dominance of the U.S. by attempting to redirect German emigration to areas more apt for German state aid and control. In this context, Argentina and the only official German colony considered suitable for large-scale settlement, Namibia, both came to be seen as competing destinations for German migration, and thus “lands of the future.”

²⁶ Kathleen Neils Conzen, “Phantom Landscapes of Colonization: Germans in the Making of a Pluralist America,” in The German-American Encounter: Conflict and Cooperation Between Two Cultures, 1800-2000, ed. Frank Trommler and Elliott Shore (New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2001), 7–21.

While most organized projects and imperial institutional involvement occurred between mostly 1905 and 1914, settlement projects started an entire generation before the German state unification of 1871. In Namibia, German-speaking Protestant missionaries – the Rhenish Missionary Society in particular – became active north of the Orange River after 1840.²⁷ In 1863, the missionaries founded a small missionary colony [Missionskolonie] and took up trade with the indigenous population, consisting mainly of local Nama- and Herero-speakers.²⁸ On the other side of the South Atlantic, the Tornquist and Bunge families were among the first German-speakers to set up trade companies and banks in the nascent Argentine Republic.²⁹ The first German Protestant church was founded in Buenos Aires in 1843 and a number of other clubs and institutions, such as the German Gymnastics Club [Deutscher Turnverein], followed suit.³⁰

Borrowing from connected and entangled history, I analyze the experiences of German-speakers in the South Atlantic in the nineteenth century.

²⁷ See the archives of the Rhenish Missionary Society (RMG) in Wuppertal, Germany.

²⁸ Klaus Bade, “Missionsarbeit, überseeische Politik und Auswanderungsfrage,” in Friedrich Fabri und der Imperialismus in der Bismarckzeit: Revolution - Depression - Expansion (Osnabrück: Internet-Ausgabe: www.imis.uni-osnabrueck.de/BadeFabri.pdf, 2005), 93.

²⁹ Adela Harispuru and Jorge Gilbert, “El holding ‘Tornquist’ y su vinculacion con la comunidad belgo-alemana, en Argentina,” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 22/23, no. 65 (2009): 61–79; Mariela Ceva, “De la exportacion cerealera a la diversificacion industrial. Las empresas Bunge y Born en Argentina (1884-1940),” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 22/23, no. 65 (2009): 81–98.

³⁰ Congregación Evangélica Alemana en Buenos Aires, Deutsche Evangelische Gemeinde Buenos Aires: 1843 - 1968 [Informationsschrift aus Anlaß der 125. Jahrfeier] (Buenos Aires, 1968); Klaus-Wilhelm Lege, ed., Asociaciones Argentinas de Lengua Alemana: un aporte a la responsabilidad social = Argentinische Vereinigungen deutschsprachigen Ursprungs (Buenos Aires: Camara Argentino-Alemana de Buenos Aires, 2007).

Analyzing the German-speakers in the South Atlantic within the same analytical frame and evaluating them through a transnational lens allows for the writing of an integrated history of German-speakers. In addition to settling in foreign lands, the emigrants and sojourners on both sides of the South Atlantic shared the mindset of European superiority, which became increasingly rooted in eugenics during the second half of the nineteenth century. Such a mindset made possible their participation in the “Conquest of the Desert” [La conquista del desierto] in Argentina in the 1880s, a militaristic venture that harshly reduced the indigenous population. The Namibian War (or Herero and Nama War) in South-West Africa in 1904 had a similar effect, resulting in the deaths of hundreds of thousands. I argue that the motivations, the mindset, and the practice of German-speakers were not fundamentally different in Argentina and Namibia. Looking back from today’s perspective, one might say that the German Empire was officially involved in Namibia during the time of the protectorate, while not in the sovereign state Argentina, and German sovereignty there remained merely an unfulfilled fantasy. Indeed, scholars have constructed the histories of Argentina and Namibia as distinct places and therefore the experience of German-speakers in these places as incomparable. The historiographical tradition after WWII created two distinct types of German-speakers abroad, and those communities have come to embrace these types. This gives German-speakers in Argentina a different past from those German-speakers in South-West Africa. I want to disentangle this construction of difference.

In 1848, Friedrich Gerstäcker was sent to South America by the revolutionary government in Frankfurt in order to inquire about possibilities for German settlement in Argentina.³¹ In the 1860s, men such as Friedrich Fabri, Robert Jannasch, and others started discussions on Germany's overseas involvement.³² Advocates for such overseas involvement could be split into two groups: those in favor of territorial expansion and those in favor of the control of emigrating populations, and thus control of markets. Hans Ulrich Wehler has stressed Bismarck's preference of little state control abroad, but a strong colonial movement in Germany was involved in negotiating the rule of the protectorates.³³ Stefan Rinke has argued that Germany's trade with South America really took off after the First World War, when Germany ceased to be an empire.³⁴ But I argue that German imperialism cannot be confined to the era of 1884 to 1920. German imperialism existed before and after what historians call the "German colonial

³¹ Friedrich Gerstäcker, Gerstäcker's Travels: Rio de Janeiro - Buenos Ayres - Ride Through the Pampas - Winter Journey Across the Cordilleras - Chili - Valparaiso - California and the Gold Fields, Translation of Reisen: Südamerika (London: T. Nelson, 1854).

³² Klaus Bade, Friedrich Fabri und der Imperialismus in der Bismarckzeit: Revolution - Depression - Expansion (Osnabrück: Internet-Ausgabe: www.imis.uni-osnabrueck.de/BadeFabri.pdf, 2005).

³³ Hans-Ulrich Wehler, Bismarck und der Imperialismus, Second Edition, reprint of 1968 (Köln: Kiepenheuer & Witsch, 1969).

³⁴ Stefan Rinke, "Der letzte freie Kontinent": deutsche Lateinamerikapolitik im Zeichen transnationaler Beziehungen, 1918-1933 (Stuttgart: Heinz, 1996).

empire.”³⁵ For the study of German-speakers’ settlement in the South Atlantic, this temporal division is thus not a useful one.

For this dissertation, I have chosen two geographic areas that correspond to today’s countries of Argentina and Namibia. Scholars after the 1960s have written the histories of German-speakers in both countries as distinct and have made them fit in the larger narratives of these continents of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries: that of South America as one of independent states that received labor migrants, and of Africa as one of colonies dominated by European powers. Yet both territories received increased attention and interest from the general German public in the first decade of the twentieth century: the German protectorate South-West Africa was considered by many the only German colony suitable for German settlement; the Argentinean Republic was in the process of attempting to acquire a place among the “old and established (European) Kulturstaaten.” German colonial activists organized three German Colonial Congresses between 1902 and 1910 and specifically invited institutions and associations dedicated to the “German colonies and German areas of interest (Interessensgebiete).”³⁶ While they discussed the “worker question”

³⁵ Sebastian Conrad, German Colonialism: A Short History (Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2012).

³⁶ Deutscher Kolonialkongress, ed., Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902 (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903); Deutscher Kolonialkongress, ed., Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905 (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906); Deutscher Kolonialkongress, (Arbeiterfrage) with regards to South-West Africa, they sought to identify the best areas for German settlement and investment, and concluded that it was Argentina.

“Colonization” as a category of experience was divided between settlement and migration, on one hand, and the establishment of agricultural colonies on the other. But the term “colony” had been claimed exclusively by scholars of “colonialism” as signifying territory under European state sovereignty. Due to other factors, like the development of area studies that created “Latin America” as one field and “Africa” as a distinct one, German-speaking colonies and colonization in the South Atlantic have been put in mutually exclusive categories and have been considered as non-comparable. The German protectorate (or official colony) of German South-West Africa in Namibia has been studied as part of colonialism (or official imperialism), whereas German-speakers in Argentina have been studied as part of migration studies. Most scholars have preferred to put colonies and colonization in quotation marks whenever they came across them in Argentina, as this seemed impossible to reconcile with colonialism.

How am I shifting the kaleidoscope? I am writing a transnational and cultural history of “German colonialism and imperialism.” I am not only breaking away from the (nation-)state-centered history writing of colonization in the South Atlantic; I also deconstruct the category of “German” as a non-national category and thus a transnational one. Historians have used the term “nation” as an analytical category in different ways: some use it in reference to the “people” and thus in opposition to the “state.” Others use it as the adjective corresponding to “nation-state” and thus as a synonym to “state.” What I show in Part I of this dissertation is that the actors of colonization I am studying considered themselves as part of a “German” group, a group that shared certain characteristics grounded in language and culture, and that had an ambivalent and changing relationship to the developing and growing German nation-state in Central Europe. Analyzing the identity of these migrants, I describe the process of how, in the South Atlantic, the term “German,” which was first grounded in shared language and culture, gradually turned into “German-speaker” in order to maintain the same meaning while “German” became more and more narrowly attached to the German Empire and thus the German nation-state.

ed., Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1910 zu Berlin, am 6., 7. und 8. Oktober 1910 (Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1910).

In the second part, I continue to focus on this group of German-speakers that set up communities on both sides of the South Atlantic. I work with the nineteenth-century definition of the term “colony” as a settlement. I analyze the networks they set up. I argue that in practice the term “colony” gradually turned into “community,” as decolonization and post-colonial studies rendered the terms “colony” and “colonization” as morally unsustainable due to the emphasis on the abuse of the indigenous populations by Europeans. Meanwhile, this part also emphasizes German colonization as a “grass-roots movement” in the South Atlantic, where individuals and small groups took the initiative to set up associations and companies to organize their everyday life and create a market for German goods. Part III, then, discusses in more detail the issue of territoriality, and analyses the development of “colonization” as a concept that was split into its component parts of “settlement” and “agriculture,” corresponding to people and soil. It also discusses the literature German-speakers produced to attract more colonists to the South Atlantic and to practice discursive appropriation of those territories. This part also considers the complex relation between German-speakers and the growing state apparatuses of South Atlantic societies: the growing Argentinean state and the German protectorate that increasingly sought independent government imitating the British colonial system.

Part I. Identity: From “German” to “German-speaker”

The first part of this dissertation considers the question: who were those people from Central Europe that went to the South Atlantic? The first chapter discusses scholarly terminology, specifically “nation” and “race,” as well as the study of German-speaking mobility in the field of migration history. The second chapter elaborates on contemporary labels of identification that co-existed and competed with the label “German.” I situate my study of the identity of the protagonists of this dissertation – German-speakers as practitioners of colonization in the South Atlantic – within an overarching development I have observed in my analysis of primary and secondary sources: the migrants’ self-labeling gradually changed from “German” (deutsch) to “German-speaking” over the course of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. As “German” became increasingly exclusively linked to the German Empire and thus turned into a political designation, “German-speaker” replaced “German.” As a transnational category, “German-speaker” was not exclusively linked to a nation-state, but rather to a concept of language and culture.

Up to the mid-nineteenth century, “German” was a cultural identity rather than a political one: there was no single state that could have defined itself and its citizens as “German,” rather there was a multitude of states whose citizens spoke the German language (in a variety of accents and dialects) and who culturally identified with German-ness. When contemporary authors did make use of the word Germany – Deutschland literally translates to “German land” – it was with the purpose of referring to those Central European lands where German language and culture were prominent. Dr. Johann Eduard Wappäus for example spoke of South America being important for Deutschland as early as 1843.³⁷

During the first half of the twentieth century, “German-speaker” (deutschsprachig, Deutschsprechende, etc.) gradually replaced the term “German” – as a cultural identity – among the same migrants. They had previously used the term German (deutsch or germanisch) in reference to their cultural identity; they changed it to German-speaker after “German” became exclusively linked to the German Empire post-1871 and thus a political reference. The two world wars only accelerated this process. Many historians writing after the 1980s have also picked up this term “German-speaker,” and they also use it to denote a cultural identity, in order to mark its difference from “German” as a political reference to the German nation-state. However, most historians use the term “German-speaker” at the most to include Swiss-Germans and Austrians, and thus members or descendants of members of nation-states where German is an official language.

With the objective in mind to historicize the concept of a “German nation,” I discuss recent historiography on the two topics of nation and racialization, in order to confront them with contemporary understandings. Contemporary migrants also used the terms “nation” and “race,” and I argue that both of them were means to express their ideas of shared group identity, similar to the term “people,” and were grounded in a cultural-linguistic understanding of a particular group. In addition to “race,” we also consider two other main categories of analysis migration scholars’ use in their studies: gender and class. German-speakers actively shaped the South Atlantic societies – the receiving societies – in which they lived, both under a foreign government in Argentina and in the German protectorate in Namibia. They showed an interest in independent and self-reliant behavior: they set up their own community structures, at times with the help of their home governments, many times without or despite such government intervention.

³⁷ Johann Eduard Wappäus, Die Republiken von Südamerika geographisch-statistisch, mit besonderer Berücksichtigung ihrer Produktion und ihres Handelsverkehrs, vornehmlich nach amtlichen Quellen (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht, 1843), vii.

Reading contemporary sources, I noticed that the following labels of identification were most prominent: Germans or Reichsdeutsche (citizens of the German Empire), Swiss-Germans, Austrians, Boers, Belgians, Dutch, Russian-Germans, and German Jews. Reichsdeutsch, Swiss-German, and Austrian were political identities. Boer and Russian-German were cultural identities with an element of shared biology, whereas Jewish was both, or alternately, considered as religious and cultural identity. Not all of these identifications functioned the same way, nor did they have the same trajectory. Historians working since 1990 have taken up these labels and based their categories of analysis in these categories of experience, but few of them have studied these categories in direct connection to “Germans” and “German-speakers.” I critically deconstruct the labels that contemporaries used and which scholars working after the 1980s took up as a basis for their separate categories of analysis.

Chapter 1. “German” as Transnational Category of Analysis

In order to understand who the people were that left Central Europe to migrate to the South Atlantic, we first need to deconstruct how historians have studied these peoples, which categories they have used, and how this has shaped our current knowledge about, as well our perception and framing of, these people. With the German Empire and unified nation-state coming into existence only in 1871, we have to find other ways to account for how people organized themselves and created a group identity before that date. We will start by putting the German nation in its historical context by discussing the analytical concepts of “nation” and “race.” We will also consider the way German-speakers in the South Atlantic have been studied as part of migration studies.

Scholars of German history have attributed much importance to the creation of the German Empire (deutsches Kaiserreich) as the first German nation-state in 1871. The term Germany (Deutschland) usually refers to the German nation-state: today, the Federal Republic of Germany, which was preceded by the Third Reich, the Weimar Republic, and the German Empire. In other words, Germany represents a political category. For South Atlantic contemporaries, however, the term Deutschland (Germany) was not congruent with the creation of the German Empire of 1871. The term Germany (Deutschland) rather referred to the collection of Central European lands where German-speakers lived. The German nation was identical with the German people, independent from political and governmental structures. Germany was rather used as a cultural reference than a political designation.

1.1 Historicizing the Concept of “German-ness”

In 1913, contemporary historian Dr. Robert Hoeniger (*1855 – 1929) wrote in the introduction to one of his books that while “Deutschland” could be applied to the German Empire (deutsches Reich) and was used as a synonym, this was not accurate, as it did not include all regions where German-speakers lived, as for example Austria, or overseas Germans.³⁸ Many historians have started with the German nation-state as a given and then applied the term German as the necessary association with this nation-state. In this context, “German” is automatically considered a political category. Yet historians of German history point out that there was no unified German nation-state before 1871. At the beginning of the nineteenth century, “German” was not a political category yet. There was no country named “Germany.” Instead, there were a variety of states whose citizens or subjects labeled their language “German,” despite the great variety of accents and dialects. The modern concept of “nation” as a political entity, a state organization, was born in Europe with the French Revolution and subsequently scholars have been attempting to define it. They somewhat agree on the following aspects as prerequisites for a nation, which are desired but not all required: shared language, origin, culture, and religion.³⁹

³⁸ Robert Hoeniger, Das Deutschtum im Ausland, Aus Natur und Geisteswelt: Sammlung wissenschaftlich-gemeinverständlicher Darstellungen 402 (Leipzig, Berlin: B.G. Teubner, 1913), iii–iv.

While scholarship long postulated that the German nation-state only came into existence in 1871,⁴⁰ recent scholarly work has increasingly started to question this timeframe. For example, David Williamson’s 2005 study establishes the Congress of Vienna in 1815 as the starting point for a German nation-state.⁴¹ Helmut Walser Smith has argued that the German nation predated German nationalism; that German nationalists only made sense of the German identity that already existed.⁴² Sebastian Conrad studied the German nation-state through a global lense. Using the example of labor migration and mobility, he argued that Germans negotiated nationalism not only in Central Europe but also overseas as ³⁹ Siegfried Weichlein, Nationalbewegungen und Nationalismus in Europa (Darmstadt: Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft, 2006).

⁴⁰ Wolfram Siemann, Vom Staatenbund zum Nationalstaat: Deutschland 1806-1871 (München: Beck, 1995).

⁴¹ David Williamson, Germany since 1815: A Nation Forged and Renewed (Basingstoke Hampshire; New York NY: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005).

⁴² Helmut Walser Smith, The Continuities of German History: Nation, Religion, and Race Across the Long Nineteenth Century (Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2008).

well.⁴³ Stan Landry, meanwhile, attempted to redefine, and propose an alternative to the nation-state through German-speakers' religious affiliations.⁴⁴

Regardless, at the beginning of the nineteenth century, "German" was not yet a political category. In the aftermath of the French Empire's invasion and dissection of the Holy Roman Empire and the previous framework binding German states, German intellectuals, including the philosopher Johann Fichte, called for the unification of the German people in order to oppose the French invaders. He addressed a "German nation," but it was a nation in the sense of "a people" rather than in the sense of a modern nation-state.⁴⁵ The brief-lived Frankfurt parliament of the 1848 revolution was a first attempt at a unified modern German nation-state. However, several years earlier, the intellectual Wilhelm Stricker had published a book on the dispersal of the German people across the world.⁴⁶ Here, Stricker used the word "German people" (deutsches Volk). He wrote about the German people, and at a very early date, in the context of global migration. Yet this German migration was not defined or implemented by any one German state. In 1848, Wilhelm Roscher studied the impact of ⁴³ Conrad, Globalisation and the Nation.

⁴⁴ Stan M. Landry, Ecumenism, Memory, and German Nationalism, 1817-1917 (Syracuse, New York: Syracuse University Press, 2014).

⁴⁵ Johann Fichte, Addresses to the German Nation, ed. Gregory Moore (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2008).

⁴⁶ Wilhelm Stricker, Die Verbreitung des deutschen Volkes über die Erde: Ein Versuch (Leipzig: G. Mayer, 1845).

German migration on the German “national economy” (Nationalökonomie).⁴⁷ He later published a comprehensive history of the German national economy, just three years after the “official” German unification.⁴⁸ In 1862, Johann Jakob Sturz referred to a “German nation” and wondered how German migrants could be tied to the Central European German people in the long-term while being abroad.⁴⁹ He wrote about the creation of a “New Germany” abroad.⁵⁰ Sturz contemplated how German migrants abroad could remain useful for the German nation and thus Germans as a people in Central Europe. In Argentina, the newspaper Deutsche La Plata Zeitung (DLPZ) published an article on “Germany and Migration” in 1866.⁵¹ Its author stipulated that the urge to migrate was inherent the German “character” and that therefore none of the German governments would be successful in banning emigration. In the 1830s and 1840s, most German-speaking migrants ventured into the world within the British world-system, and not as part of a German Empire.⁵² They were part of the English-speaking system, worked for British firms abroad, and traveled on British ships.⁵³

⁴⁷ Roscher, “Nationalökonomische Ansichten über die deutsche Auswanderung.”

⁴⁸ Wilhelm Roscher, Geschichte der National-Oekonomik in Deutschland, Geschichte der Wissenschaften in Deutschland. Neuere Zeit 14 (München: R. Oldenbourg, 1874).

⁴⁹ Sturz, Kann und soll ein Neu-Deutschland geschaffen werden und auf welche Weise?

⁵⁰ Ibid.

⁵¹ “Deutschland und die Auswanderung,” Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, February 6, 1866.

⁵² John Darwin, The Empire Project: The Rise and Fall of the British World-System, 1830-1970 (Cambridge, UK; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2009).

⁵³ John R. Davis, Stefan Manz, and Margrit Schulte Beerbühl, eds., Transnational Networks: German Migrants in the British Empire, 1670-1914 (Leiden: Brill, 2012).

It is not easy to translate the word deutsch into the English language; this constitutes its own branch of research, as investigated by Thomas Shippey.⁵⁴ Deutschtum (German-ness) is a recurring term in primary as well as secondary sources. Similarly, the term Ausland(s)-Deutschtum (German-ness abroad) recurs in the sources as well. I argue that German-ness was constructed out of the shared experience of alterity rather than as a positive expression of identity. Deutschtum in the South Atlantic assembled a group of people that experienced enough differences with the other groups around them that they created a collective identity based on this shared difference. Deutschtum was what the others were not. Who these “others” were also changed over the course of a century. While German-speakers considered Latin peoples (including Spanish, French, and Italians) as the other at certain times, they also identified with them as fellow Europeans and thus members of “civilized” peoples. German-speakers sometimes included British people in their category of “Germans” (Germanen), just as the category “Anglo-Saxons” often included Germans as well as the English before the First World War.

⁵⁴ Thomas A. Shippey, “Germanen, Deutsche und Teutonen in der englischsprachigen Geistesgeschichte,” in Zur Geschichte der Gleichung “germanisch-deutsch”: Sprache und Namen, Geschichte und Institutionen, ed. Heinrich Beck et al. (Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2004), 325–41.

1.1.1 The German People as a “Nation”

In this section, we study the term “nation” as an analytical category, thus as a category that historians have used, in order to then confront it with the term “nation” as a category of experience, thus as contemporary German-speakers understood and used the term. I argue that questioning the definition of the term “German” and its use in the South Atlantic allows for a different view of the notion of the “nation” and the definition of “German” and German-ness.

Historians of German history have studied the question of nation and nation-building at length. There are different and competing definitions of “nation” that coexist among historians. The most common are the idea of a people that share certain characteristics, including the same origin, like a “people” or a “race;” or a nation-state as a community of choice. Throughout the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, the concept “nation” changed its primary definition from “a group of people” to “a people organized in a political structure.” The term “nation” became an “acceptable category of experience” as it became linked to the political organization of the state, and scholars often use it as a synonym for and confound it with the category of nation-state. Methodological nationalism continues to be a problem in academia. Meanwhile, “race” has had a different trajectory, discussed below.

Christian Geulen has addressed the ongoing tensions between the definitions of the nation as a community of choice versus the nation as a community of shared descent.⁵⁵ He classifies Ernest Gellner, Eric Hobsbawm, and Benedict Anderson as “constructivist” historians. Gellner and Hobsbawm postulated that the current or “modern” definition of “nation” stems from the French Revolution and is thus tied to modernity.⁵⁶ Hobsbawm listed the different factors included in the definition of a nation as shared territory, language, customs, and descent. He claimed that during the time of the French Revolution, the modern concept of the nation as a community of citizens emerged, and – building on other historians’ ideas – that there was not a clear definition of the “people” that lived on the territory associated with the “nation,” and those identifying as a “nation” were united by common interests and not shared ethnic origins.⁵⁷ Hobsbawm also pointed to the issue of a shared language, since the French at the time of their revolution did not have only one single language spoken on their territory.⁵⁸ Benedict Anderson has proposed to define the nation as “an imagined political community – and imagined as both inherently limited and sovereign.”⁵⁹ As such, nations depend on how their members imagine them to be. Most generally speaking, “nation” is just another form of distinguishing “us”

⁵⁵ Christian Geulen, Wahlverwandte: Rassendiskurs und Nationalismus im späten 19. Jahrhundert, 1st ed. (Hamburg: Hamburger Edition, 2004).

⁵⁶ Ernest Gellner, Nations and Nationalism (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1983); Eric Hobsbawm, Nations and Nationalism Since 1780: Programme, Myth, Reality (Cambridge [England]; New York: Cambridge University Press, 1990).

⁵⁷ Hobsbawm, Nations and Nationalism Since 1780, 20.

⁵⁸ Ibid.

⁵⁹ Benedict Anderson, Imagined Communities: Reflections on the Origin & Spread of Nationalism (London; New York: Verso, 1983), 6.

from “them.” It is a vague term that has an ideal definition that is not linked to a reality, or rather that remains an unfinished project. In his work on national movements and nationalism in Europe, Siegfried Weichlein has warned against oversimplifying the break between the traditional eighteenth century and the modern post-revolutionary period, stating that historians have to be careful to not use the thoughts and arguments used by the revolutionaries to glorify their deeds.

⁶⁰ Thomas Bender has been among those historians in the U.S. to question the usefulness of the nation as the dominant parameter of analysis.⁶¹ Scholars of new empire studies have also been critical of the nation-state, as for example Antoinette Burton and Catherine Hall in the case of the British Empire.⁶² We can conclude that the definition of nation still remains unsettled.

1.1.2 “Race” and German Identity

While Anglophone critical social sciences have introduced “race” as a category of analysis – alongside gender and class – scholars in France and Germany have been more reluctant to adopt the terminology of “race” due to the experiences of ⁶⁰ Siegfried Weichlein, Nationalbewegungen und Nationalismus in Europa (Darmstadt: Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft, 2006), 8.

⁶¹ Thomas Bender, A Nation among Nations: America’s Place in World History (New York: Hill and Wang, 2006).

⁶² Antoinette Burton, After the Imperial Turn: Thinking With and Through the Nation (Durham [N.C.]: Duke University Press, 2003); Catherine Hall and Keith McClelland, eds., Race, Nation and Empire: Making Histories, 1750 to the Present (Manchester; New York: Manchester University Press, 2010).

Nazism. I sympathize with those critics who continue to voice their concern that the analytical category can hardly free itself from the trap of reifying not only racialized but racist categories of analysis. In Germany, Thomas Brückmann et al. have argued for the importance of thinking of both the term “race” and scientific racism as one field, because of the extreme results that they are used to justify, from racist politics and everyday practices, including colonialism, the holocaust, NS apartheid.⁶³ While the use of the category “race” is problematic, it is extremely important to continue to study the term and be critical of its use inside and outside of academia. While most European social scientists today claim that there is no biological existence of “race,” the Anglophone approach considers “race” as a human construct: humans experience racial discrimination, which is an issue that scholars must address. I also agree with the observation that today “race” is often times just substituted with other terms like population, group, minority, ethnicity, or origin, without questioning or changing the categorization based on an alleged biological category.⁶⁴ In addition, as with most concepts, problems in scholarly work arise when “race” is considered as a given and essentialized. In particular in the United States, where government censuses work with the categories of “Caucasian/white,” “African-American/black,” etc., the racialized category of “black” has become a term of social empowerment.

⁶³ Thomas Brückmann, Franziska Maetzky, and Tino Plümecke, “Rassifizierte Gene: Zur Aktualität biologischer ‘Rasse’ - Konzepte in den neuen Lebenswissenschaften,” in Gemachte Differenz: Kontinuitäten biologischer ‘Rasse’-Konzepte, ed. AG gegen Rassismus in den Lebenswissenschaften (Münster: Unrast, 2009), 27.

⁶⁴ Ibid., 33.

For the South Atlantic, it seems that scholars are divided along continental lines or those of area studies. Historians of Africa mostly use the terminology of “race” (or Rasse) when analyzing relations and encounters between (“white”) German-speakers and (“black”) indigenous people on the African continent, whereas scholars working on Argentina give preference to the concept of “ethnicity.” Many scholars trained in the Anglophone research tradition want to apply “race” as an analytical category and a social construct to their object of study. However, they must be aware of too easily assuming that there were “black Africans” and “white Africans,” relying on categorizations common in the U.S. Or, in the Namibian case specifically, they sometimes fall back on the categories that stem from the apartheid system installed under South African rule between WWI and 1990. This system had three categories: black, white, and “coloured,” with the latter being for “mixed people.”⁶⁵ Anglo-American academic concepts of “race” as an analytical category have nonetheless influenced research on Namibia. After German rule Namibia was part of South Africa, first as part of the British Empire, then the British Commonwealth, and it has received interest from scholars of new empire studies. Historians like Catherine Hall⁶⁶ and Patricia Hayes⁶⁷ have put “race relations” between black and white in the center of their studies. More recently, Robbie Aitken has applied post-colonial theory and whiteness studies to deconstruct the fabrication of categories of “race” in the German protectorate South-West Africa.⁶⁸ Historians have also much written about the intersectionality of gender and race in the African colonial context. Martha Mamozai started looking at the issue of gender and race in the German case in the 1980s.⁶⁹ She uncovered the role women played in German colonialism. For the time period of the German protectorate of South-West Africa, Laura Wildenthal has studied the relationship between feminism and race throughout the German overseas empire, concluding that gender and race were always intertwined and often instrumentalized.⁷⁰ While Katharina Walgenbach has ⁶⁶ Catherine Hall, ed., Cultures of Empire: Colonizers in Britain and the Empire in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: A Reader (Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2000); Hall and McClelland, Race, Nation and Empire.

⁶⁵ Mixed between “black” and “white,” thus “racially mixed.”

⁶⁷ Patricia Hayes, “‘Cocky’ Hahn and the ‘Black Venus’: The Making of a Native Commissioner in South West Africa, 1915-46,” in Cultures of Empire: Colonizers in Britain and the Empire in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: A Reader, ed. Catherine Hall (Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2000), 329–58.

⁶⁸ Robbie Aitken, Exclusion and Inclusion: Gradations of Whiteness and Socio-Economic Engineering in German Southwest Africa, 1884-1914, Cultural Identity Studies 6 (Oxford: Lang, 2007).

⁶⁹ Martha Mamozai, Herrenmenschen, Frauen im deutschen Kolonialismus (Hamburg: Rowohlt, 1982); Martha Mamozai, Schwarze Frau, weiße Herrin (Reinbek bei Hamburg: Rowohlt, 1989); Martha Mamozai, “Einheimische und ‘koloniale’ Frauen,” in Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner (Berlin: Links, 2009), 14–30.

⁷⁰ Lora Wildenthal, “Rasse und Kultur: Koloniale Frauenorganisationen in der deutschen Kolonialbewegung des Kaiserreichs,” in Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, ed. Birthe Kundrus (Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003), 202–19; Lora Wildenthal, German Women for Empire, 1884-1945 (Durham, N.C.: Duke University Press, 2001); Lora analyzed the “white woman” as a carrier of German (superior) culture,⁷¹ Anette Dietrich has argued that both gender and race were constructed in particular ways in German colonialism.⁷² Susan Arndt has specifically analyzed language used in dictionaries as a location of racial theories in German Africa⁷³ while Lorena Rizzo took the analysis of the intertwining of gender and colonialism further by integrating it into transnational history.⁷⁴ From a perspective of literary studies, Joachim Warmbold⁷⁵ has worked on the concept of métissage and Rosa Schneider⁷⁶ on the construction of race and gender in German colonial literature.

In South American countries, the use of the Spanish concept “raza” has had a different trajectory. But it also carries within it a history of empowerment, as for example in the “día de la raza,” the day to celebrate Spanish heritage in Wildenthal, “Race, Gender, and Citizenship in the German Colonial Empire,” in Tensions of Empire: Colonial Cultures in a Bourgeois World, ed. Frederick Cooper and Ann Laura Stoler (Berkeley Calif.: University of California Press, 1997), 263–83.

⁷¹ Katharina Walgenbach, “Die weisse Frau als Trägerin deutscher Kultur”: koloniale Diskurse über Geschlecht, “Rasse” und Klasse im Kaiserreich (Campus Verlag, 2005).

⁷² Anette Dietrich, Weisse Weiblichkeiten: Konstruktionen von “Rasse” und Geschlecht im deutschen Kolonialismus (Bielefeld: transcript Verlag, 2007); Anette Dietrich, “Rassenkonstruktionen im deutschen Kolonialismus: ‘Weiße Weiblichkeiten’ in der kolonialen Rassenpolitik,” in Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner (Berlin: Links, 2009), 176–87.

⁷³ Susan Arndt, “Afrikafantasien, Wörter und Wörterbücher: Tradierte Schauplätze von ‘Rassen’theorien,” in Deutsche Sprache und Kolonialismus: Aspekte der nationalen Kommunikation 1884-1919, ed. Ingo H. Warnke (Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2009), 293–314.

⁷⁴ Lorena Rizzo, Gender and Colonialism: A History of Kaoko in North-Western Namibia, 1870s - 1950s, Basel Namibia Studies Series 14 (Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, Namibia Resource Center & Southern Africa Library, 2012).

⁷⁵ Joachim Warmbold, “If Only She Didn’t Have Negro Blood in Her Veins: The Concept of Métissage in German Colonial Literature,” Journal of Black Studies 23, no. 2 (1992): 200.

⁷⁶ Rosa B Schneider, Um Scholle und Leben: zur Konstruktion von “Rasse” und Geschlecht in der kolonialen Afrikaliteratur um 1900 (Frankfurt am Main: Brandes & Apsel Verlag, 2003).

South America. It has retained a much closer relationship to the notion of “a people” than it has in Germany or France, where “Rasse” and “la race” have practically been banned from everyday language and been relegated to racist, fascist, and neo-Nazi vocabulary. The Spanish equivalent to the “melting pot” concept is “crisol de razas,” which literally means “melting pot of races.” Argentinean historians like Hilda Sabato, Fernando Devoto, and Hernán Otero all suggested that Argentina was a multicultural society rather than a melting pot.⁷⁷ However, rather than “race,” scholars working in and on Argentina have given preference to the concept of “ethnicity” (etnicidad): Paula Seiguer⁷⁸ used it in her study on the Anglican church and the British community in Argentina; and Benjamin Bryce used ethnicity in his study of Germans in Argentina.⁷⁹ Giralda

⁷⁷ Hilda Sabato, “Pluralismo cultural en la Argentina: un balance crítico,” in Buenos Aires: Comité internacional de Ciencias Históricas. Comité Argentino: Historiografía Argentina (1958-1988), 1990, 350–66; Fernando Devoto and Eduardo José Miguez, Asociacionismo, trabajo e identidad étnica: los italianos en América Latina en una perspectiva comparada (Buenos Aires: CEMLA-CSER-IEHS, 1992); Hernán Otero, Crisol de razas e integración de inmigrantes en la estadística censal Argentina, 1869-1914 (São Paulo: Centro de Estudos de Demografia Histórica da América Latina, Universidade de São Paulo, 1996); Dedier Norberto Marquiegui, “Pluralismo social y cultural, crisol de razas y Multiculturalismo en el estudio de las migraciones masivas a la Argentina: una mirada histórica retrospectiva,” Astrolabio, no. 2 (2005).

⁷⁸ Paula Seiguer, “Considerando la relación entre religión y nacionalidad: La Iglesia Anglicana en la Argentina como refugio de etnicidad,” April 19, 2010; Paula Seiguer, “Religión y formas de producción de etnicidad: La iglesia Anglicana en la Argentina,” in Estudios de historia religiosa, ed. Ana María Rodríguez (Santa Rosa, La Pampa [Argentina]: EDUNLPam - Prohistoria Ediciones, 2013), 17–39.

⁷⁹ Benjamin Bryce, “La etnicidad en el Argentinisches Tageblatt, 1905-1918: la discusión de una comunidad germánica y alemana,” in La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, ed. Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda (Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008), 125–43; Benjamin Bryce, “Making Ethnic Space: Education, Religion, and the German Language in Argentina and Canada, 1880-1930” (Ph.D., York University, 2013).

Seyferth⁸⁰ and Frederick Luebke⁸¹ also used “ethnicity” to describe the particularities of the German(-Brazilian) group in Brazil in the 1990s. “Ethnicity” as an alternative category to “race” came from the U.S., and in recent decades Kathleen Conzen et al.⁸² published on the invention of ethnicity in the U.S., and Hans-Werner Retterath⁸³ has written on the ethnic construction of German-American-ness. For Namibia, Brigitta Schmidt-Lauber applied the term ethnicity to German Namibians in 1998.⁸⁴ Birte Kundrus⁸⁵ used the term “ethnic identities” in the context of the German overseas empire, George Steinmetz modified Pierre Bourdieu’s concept of social and symbolic capital into “ethnographic capital,”⁸⁶

⁸⁰ Giralda Seyferth, Nacionalismo e identidade étnica: a ideologia germanista e o grupo étnico teuto-brasileiro numa comunidade do Vale do Itajaí (Florianópolis S.C.: FCC Edições, 1982); Giralda Seyferth, ed., Representação do “trabalho alemão” na ideologia étnica teuto-brasileira. (Rio de Janeiro: Museu Nacional, 1982); Giralda Seyferth, “German Immigration and the Formation of German-Brazilian Ethnicity,” Anthropological Journal of European Cultures 7, no. 2 (1998): 131–54.

⁸¹ Frederick Luebke, “The German Ethnic Group in Brazil: The Ordeal of World War I,” in Germans in the New World: Essays in the History of Immigration (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1990), 123–37.

⁸² Kathleen Neils Conzen, Ewa Morawska, and Rudolph J Vecoli, “The Invention of Ethnicity: A Perspective from the U.S.A.,” Journal of American Ethnic History 12, no. 1 (1992): 3–41.

⁸³ Hans-Werner Retterath, Deutschamerikanertum und Volkstumsgedanke: zur Ethnizitätskonstruktion durch die auslandsdeutsche Kulturarbeit zwischen 1918 und 1945 (Marburg, 2000).

⁸⁴ Brigitta Schmidt-Lauber, Die verkehrte Hautfarbe: Ethnizität deutscher Namibier als Alltagspraxis (Berlin: D. Reimer, 1998).

⁸⁵ Birthe Kundrus, “Blind Spots: Empire, Colonies, and Ethnic Identities in Modern German History,” in Gendering Modern German History: Rewriting Historiography, ed. Karen Hagemann and Jean H. Quataert (Berghahn Books, 2008), 86–106.

⁸⁶ George Steinmetz, “The Colonial State as a Social Field: Ethnographic Capital and Native Policy in the German Overseas Empire before 1914,” American Sociological Review 73, no. 4 (2008): 589–612.

and John Friedman⁸⁷ used the term “ethnographic” for Namibia after independence and thus during the time of the Namibian nation-state. A parallel trend has been to move away from “racialized language” and towards a language of “identity”: examples are Hergen Junge et al. studying the identity of the German-speaking community in Namibia, Brigitta Schmidt-Lauber⁸⁸ analyzing German identity in Namibia, Walter Wentenschuh⁸⁹ studying the German language group in south-western Africa, and Alexander Wurm⁹⁰ analyzing the cultural identity of German Namibians. On the other hand, there was the development of anthropology and ethnography – the study of humans and humanity – as science. This took place both in Argentina and in Germany. Patricia Arenas⁹¹ has studied the contribution of German-speaking scholars in the development of anthropology in Argentina, and Carolyne Ryan⁹² has examined the role of Indians in the constitution of Argentinean anthropology. For Germany, ⁸⁷ John T. Friedman, Imagining The Post-Apartheid State: An Ethnographic Account of Namibia (Berghahn Books, 2013).

⁸⁸ Brigitta Schmidt-Lauber, Die abhängigen Herren: deutsche Identität in Namibia (Münster: Lit, 1993).

⁸⁹ Walter G. Wentenschuh, Namibia und seine Deutschen: Geschichte und Gegenwart der deutschen Sprachgruppe im Südwesten Afrikas, 1st ed. (Göttingen: Hess, 1995).

⁹⁰ Alexander Wurm, Identität im Dilemma?: Betrachtungen zur kulturellen Identität deutschstämmiger Namibier in Swakopmund (Regensburg, 2005).

⁹¹ Patricia Arenas, Antropología en la Argentina: el aporte de los científicos de habla alemana (Buenos Aires: Institución Cultural Argentino-Germana, 1991).

⁹² Carolyne Ryan, “Indigenous Possessions: Anthropology, Museums, and Nation-Making in Argentina, 1862-1943” (The University of Wisconsin - Madison, 2011).

Andrew Zimmerman⁹³ and H. Glenn Penny⁹⁴ have studied the making of anthropology as academic fields. In case of Amerindians, German-speakers took part in the study of these “other” peoples to preserve them from extinction.

More generally, and theoretically, the analytical categories of “race” and “ethnicity” are expressions of perceived and lived alterity in the context of the construction of group identity and sameness.⁹⁵ Historically, however, and as a category of experience, “race” has been linked to morality and science. A small number of scientists still today attempt to prove genetic difference and thus a biological foundation for “race.” “Ethnicity” is oftentimes used as a euphemism to avoid the difficult history and abuse of the term “race” as a category of experience. However, I argue that early nineteenth-century contemporary German-speakers had an understanding of “German-ness” that was very close to a cultural identity: they used the term “race” rather as a cognate for a cultural-linguistic group or family. In Stricker’s book from 1847, the “German element”⁹⁶ was synonymous to “German people,” or rather the group of Germans within a larger society. In this sense, “German element” is somewhat comparable to how ⁹³ Andrew Zimmerman, Anthropology and Antihumanism in Imperial Germany (Chicago: University Of Chicago Press, 2001).

⁹⁴ H. Glenn Penny and Matti Bunzl, eds., Worldly Provincialism: German Anthropology in the Age of Empire (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2003).

⁹⁵ Brückmann, Maetzky, and Plümecke, “Rassifizierte Gene: Zur Aktualität biologischer ‘Rasse’ - Konzepte in den neuen Lebenswissenschaften,” 23.

⁹⁶ Wilhelm Stricker, ed., Germania: Archiv zur Kenntniss des deutschen Elements in allen Ländern der Erde, vol. 1 (Frankfurt am Main: Heinrich Ludwig Brönnner, 1847).

Conzen et al. have defined ethnicity within U.S. society.⁹⁷ The Alemanns also use the terminology of the “German element” in Argentina.⁹⁸ Carlos Octavio Bunge (*1875 – 1918) published his book Nuestra America in 1903, where he discussed the formation of an “Argentine race” (raza argentina). The way he used “race” in his book comes close to the definition of “nation” in the sense of “a people.”⁹⁹ Bunge was part of the “generation of 1880,” he was a sociologist, and professor at the Universidad de Buenos Aires, following the sociologist José Ingenieros (*1877 Palermo, Italy – 1925 Buenos Aires).

Many turn-of-the-century publications distinguished between Germanic (germanisch) and Latin (romanisch) peoples. In 1898, Carl Dunker distinguished between Germanic and Latin as two major civilized peoples with different methods of colonizing: the Germanic way was to eliminate indigenous peoples, whereas the Latin way was to incorporate indigenous peoples.¹⁰⁰ He included the Germans (deutsch), British, and Northern Europeans in the Germanic group and France, Spain, and Portugal in the Latin category. In 1912, Georg Hiller interpreted the Argentine decrees of 1873 as an attempt to increase immigration of the “German/Teutonic race” as a counterweight to the strong immigration from

⁹⁷ Conzen, Morawska, and Vecoli, “The Invention of Ethnicity.”

⁹⁸ Theodor Alemann, Station und Emporio Stroeder: Reisebeschreibung (Buenos Aires, 1914), 14–15.

⁹⁹ Compare with Susana Villavicencio, “Sociología biológica y políticas raciales en la formación nacional. Lecturas del positivismo argentino” (Seminaire “Formations post-impériales et institution du social. Amérique latine (XIXe-XXe siècles),” Paris, France, February 2, 2016).

¹⁰⁰ Carl Dunker, Kolonien und Kolonisation (Berlin: R. Gaertners Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1898).

Latin lands.¹⁰¹ While he proclaimed “Aber das sind ja lauter Weiße!”¹⁰² (“But they are all white!”), he distinguished between a “German race” (Germanische Rasse) and a “Roman race” (Romanische [Rasse]).¹⁰³ In 1914, Rudolf F. Colditz wrote about the Volksrassen (roughly translated, “ethnic races”).¹⁰⁴ He claimed in the journal of the German-South American Institute that “the British and Germans have contributed much economically to advancing [Argentina]. They often married daughters of this country. Their descendants, the so-called Anglo-Porteños and German-Argentineans, are highly esteemed and have a say in the economic life. The banker of German descent, Ernesto Tornquist, was for a long time the decisive financier of Argentina without whose consent no state bonds were negotiated. As minister, Emilio Frers changed directions in agriculture. Francisco Seeber has distinguished himself in various economic areas. Both are of German descent. These men unite with cool superiority that audacious spirit of enterprise that the German in the old Heimat unfortunately lacks.”¹⁰⁵ He continued: “Germans have been the teachers to the young nation [Argentina] in many areas of engineering/technology.” They built the electric power stations, the ¹⁰¹ Georg Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien. Band 1: Einwanderung und Einwanderungspolitik (Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1912), 47.

¹⁰² Ibid., ix.

¹⁰³ Ibid., 47.

¹⁰⁴ Rudolf F. von Colditz, “Der Einfluß der Volksrassen auf die Entwicklung der Vereinigten Staaten von Nordamerika und der Argentinischen Republik,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 2 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914), 193–221.

¹⁰⁵ Ibid., 215.

first underground, bridges, and water towers, and imported numerous machines.¹⁰⁶

Wilhelm Keiper wrote in 1943 that Argentines favored the immigration of whites in Argentina.¹⁰⁷ He distinguished between “old criollos” on the one hand and “new criollos” or “Euro-Argentines” on the other. The former were the children of Spanish migrants only whereas the latter were the children of migrants from a variety of European countries since 1860s.¹⁰⁸ Nonetheless, he differentiated between “race” and “people” and said that Argentines might not become a “race,” but that they might become – probably would become – “a people” (ein Volk).¹⁰⁹ Keiper also cited Carlos Octavio Bunge in the way he was describing Argentines (“mentira criolla”):¹¹⁰ Keiper emphasized that Bunge was an Argentine-German who could understand the German viewpoint and criticism of the Argentine people.

In Namibia, contemporaries did use the terminology of black and white: white for Germans and black for the indigenous or local populations. The mixed family was first presented as positive by the Rhenish Missionary society, which argued (even in 1884) that intermarriage should help to fortify German authority

¹⁰⁶ Ibid., 216.

¹⁰⁷ Wilhelm Keiper, “Das Deutschtum in Argentinien: Sein Werden, Wesen und Wirken” (Berlin, September 22, 1943), 41, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁰⁸ Ibid., 42.

¹⁰⁹ Ibid., 43.

¹¹⁰ Ibid., 44.

in the German protectorate, and only later, by 1913, was mixture portrayed as bad.¹¹¹ In 1905, Hans Tecklenburg, the vice-governor of German South-West Africa, declared marriages between black and white to be prohibited.¹¹² In 1909, Paul Rohrbach developed in detail a racist theory of why he considered the “black race” to be inferior to the “white race.”¹¹³ In 1914, Theodor Grentrup studied the history of “mixed race marriages,” both in other the colonies of other European colonial powers as well as in the German protectorates.¹¹⁴ Half-white children (Halbweiße Kinder) in Namibia attended a special school set up by the Rhenish missionaries.¹¹⁵ They were the children of indigenous (eingeborene) mothers and German (deutsche) fathers.¹¹⁶ Kathrin Roller and Ursula Trüper have studied the Schmelen-Kleinschmidt-Hegner family and written about the implications of this mixed family, in particular with regards to the question of mixing between black and white in Germany and the law of 1913 prohibiting such unions. They have illustrated how the acceptance of these mixed families changed over time from

¹¹¹ Kathrin Roller, “Mission und ’Mischehen’, Erinnerung und Körper - geteiltes Gedächtnis an eine afrikanische Vorfahrin. Über die Familie Schmelen-Kleinschmidt-Hegner,” in Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, ed. Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig (Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004), 194–211.

¹¹² Kundrus, “Blind Spots,” 94.

¹¹³ Paul Rohrbach, Deutsche Kolonialwirtschaft, kulturpolitische Grundsätze für die Rassen- und Missionsfragen (Berlin-Schöneberg: Buchverlag der “Hilfe,” 1909).

¹¹⁴ Theodor Grentrup, Die Rassenmischehen in den deutschen Kolonien (Paderborn: F. Schöningh, 1914).

¹¹⁵ Augustineum: Erziehungsanstalt für halbweiße Kinder, 1906-1909 (Band 1), 1909 1906, RMG 2.650a; Augustineum: Erziehungsanstalt für halbweiße Kinder, 1910-1915 (Band 2), 1915 1910, RMG 2.650b.

¹¹⁶ Augustineum: Erziehungsanstalt für halbweiße Kinder, 1906-1909 (Band 1), 69.

toleration of the Rhenish Missionary Society in the 1860s to elimination in the Third Reich. Wolfram Hartmann has written extensively on the early merchants and their relations with locals in Namibia: he found that non-marital relationships between German-speaking traders and merchants were common throughout the nineteenth century as part of the “situation érotique et coloniale,” where local chiefs offered their women to Europeans as a form of social inclusion and control.¹¹⁷ Racialization thus played an important role in historians’ analysis of German-speakers in the South Atlantic, and it also played an important role in contemporary conceptualizations of encountering the other and naming perceived biological difference.

1.1.2.1 The Politics of “Race”

Since the 1960s, scholars have attempted to explain how Nazism could have come about, why such an evil regime could emerge from the German people. Many came to the conclusion that the Third Reich was the logical conclusion of German history that everything inevitably led to the catastrophe. This line of argument became known as “German Sonderweg” (German special path). In recent decades, historians have, aided by transnational and global approaches, moved away from the Sonderweg theory: they highlight instead the connections between Western countries and their shared responsibility in Nazism. One of the main concerns about the Sonderweg has been the trap of writing teleological history.

¹¹⁷ Wolfram Hartmann, “Sexual Encounters and Their Implications on an Open and Closing Frontier: Central Namibia from the 1840s to 1905” (Ph.D., Columbia University, 2002); Wolfram Hartmann, “Eine situation érotique et coloniale im 19. Jahrhundert: Männer und Frauen im südwestlichen Afrika,” in Die (koloniale) Begegnung: AfrikanerInnen in Deutschland 1880-1945, Deutsche in Afrika 1880-1918, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Reinhard Klein-Arendt (Frankfurt am Main; New York: Lang, 2003), 129–45; Wolfram Hartmann, “... als durchaus unerwünscht erachtet ...’: Zur Genese des ‘Mischehenverbotes in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” in Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, ed. Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig (Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004), 182–93; Dag Henrichsen, “... unerwünscht im Schutzgebiet ... nicht schlechthin unsittlich’: ‘Mischehen’ und deren Nachkommen im Visier der Kolonialverwaltung in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” in Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner (Berlin: Links, 2009), 80–90.

Outside of Germany, both Argentina and Namibia have been associated with Nazism but in two different ways. While Nazis fled to Argentina and Nazism lived on there, after 1945 scholars claim that the roots of Nazism are to be found in Namibia, in the Nama-Herero genocide of 1904 – as if Nazism moved in a triangle. That Argentina is infamous for having been a Nazi refuge can only partially be blamed on the film industry. Most certainly, Adolf Eichmann is the most famous German Nazi criminal who found refuge in Argentina.¹¹⁸ There is also the case of Erich Priebke, a German who went to Argentina and managed to live a peaceful life there – until his discovery and extradition from Argentina. In 2005, Cécile Patingre and Graciela Barrault made a documentary about Priebke’s life in Argentina.¹¹⁹ They filmed his neighbors in Bariloche, Southern Argentina, who all seemed shocked by Priebke’s Nazi past, summarily responding with the sentiment: “But he was such a nice neighbor – he could not have done anything wrong in his life.” It was important that two outsiders came to the village and investigated this topic. Locals were not ready to confront the issue and were rather covering up Nazis among them. Denazification has hardly taken place in Argentina and the critical reading of the literature Nazis produced in Argentina remains limited. Many members of the German Club were either Nazis or associated with the Nazi Party in some form. The club’s 1955 publication on the history of the German-Argentinean community remains one of the most important documents concerning accounts produced by its own members.¹²⁰ However, notably Karl Klingenfuss (*1901 Mannheim – 1990 Buenos Aires), one of its authors, who worked at the German embassy in Buenos Aires from 1939-1940, was an accomplice of the deportation of Jews, and even corresponded with Adolf Eichmann in 1942. After WWII, he was indicted for assisted murder during the Nuremberg trials but ultimately spared from punishment.¹²¹ Wilhelm Keiper (*1868 Seehof near Kolberg, Pommern – 1962 Remagen near Bonn, Germany) presents another curious case. He worked for the Argentine state school system. He published several informational and educational pamphlets in the 1920s and 1930s approved by Nazi authorities. Many of his remaining texts still bear the ¹²¹ See Uki Goñi, The Real Odessa: Smuggling the Nazis to Perón’s Argentina (London; New York: Granta, 2002).

¹¹⁸ Álvaro Abós, Eichmann en Argentina (Buenos Aires: Edhasa, 2007); Bettina Stangneth, Eichmann vor Jerusalem: das unbehelligte Leben eines Massenmörders (Zürich: Arche, 2011).

¹¹⁹ Cécile Patingre and Graciela Barrault, Monsieur Priebke, un nazi en Argentine (Paris: Sombrero productions, 2005).

¹²⁰ Wilhelm Lütge, Werner Hoffmann, and Karl Wilhelm Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien (Buenos Aires: Deutscher Klub, 1955).

Nazi administrative stamp while some of the books have had the stamps cut out carefully. Heinrich Volberg published a book on Germans in Argentina and their relation to the Third Reich, but he was a former leading member of the Nazi organisation abroad in Argentina and his publication had apologetic tendencies.¹²²

Historians began to construct a critical historiography about Nazis in Argentina in the 1970s. The U.S. historian Ronald Newton put focus on the Germans that already lived in Argentina before 1933.¹²³ He argued that the German community in Buenos Aires was thriving and welcomed the Nazi “refugees.”¹²⁴ The field has since produced an extensive body of literature, with contributions from both scholars working in Germany as well as in Argentina.¹²⁵

¹²² Heinrich Volberg, Auslandsdeutschtum und Drittes Reich: der Fall Argentinien (Köln; Wien: Böhlau, 1981); Tammo Luther, Volkstumspolitik des Deutschen Reiches 1933-1938: die Auslandsdeutschen im Spannungsfeld zwischen Traditionalisten und Nationalsozialisten (Franz Steiner Verlag, 2004), 12.

¹²³ Ronald C. Newton, “Social Change, Cultural Crisis, and the Origins of Nazism Within the German-Speaking Community of Buenos Aires, 1914-1933,” Northsouth 1 (1976): 62–105.

¹²⁴ Ronald C. Newton, German Buenos Aires, 1900-1933: Social Change and Cultural Crisis (Austin: University of Texas Press, 1977); See also Ronald C. Newton, The “Nazi Menace” in Argentina, 1931-1947 (Stanford Calif.: Stanford University Press, 1992).

¹²⁵ Holger Meding, Flucht vor Nürnberg?: deutsche und österreichische Einwanderung in Argentinien, 1945-1955 (Köln: Böhlau, 1992); Katrin Zielke, “‘Deutschtum’ in Chile und Argentinien: die Entwicklung deutscher Bauernsiedlungen zu Auslandsdeutschen des 3. Reiches; eine Untersuchung zum Verhältnis der deutschen Kolonien in Chile und Argentinien zum deutschen Nationalsozialismus” (Ph.D., Freie Universität Berlin, 1996); Jürgen Müller, Nationalsozialismus in Lateinamerika: die Auslandsorganisation der NSDAP in Argentinien, Brasilien, Chile und Mexiko, 1931 - 1945, Historamericana 3 (Stuttgart: Heinz, 1997); Goñi, The Real Odessa; Ignacio Klich, ed., Sobre nazis y nazismo en cultura argentina ([S.l.]: Hispamerica, 2002); Fundación de Investigaciones Históricas, Económicas y Sociales; Universidad de Buenos Aires. Instituto de Investigaciones de Historia Económica y Social, ed., Los nazis en la Argentina: política y economía (Buenos Aires: Fundación de Investigaciones Históricas, Económicas y Sociales, 2000); Sandra Carreras, ed., Der Nationalsozialismus und Lateinamerika: Institutionen - Repräsentationen - Wissenskonstrukte, Ibero-Online 3, I (Berlin: Ibero-Amerikanisches Institut, 2005); Gaby Weber, Daimler-Benz und die Argentinien-Connection: von Rattenlinien und

Moreover, there was also a strong anti-Nazi movement in Argentina that developed a collective identity.¹²⁶ The Alemann family was important in the anti-Nazi movement: Ernesto Alemann co-founded the Pestalozzi school for anti-Nazis and he even lost his doctor title from Heidelberg over the issue. However, several Alemann family members were heavily involved in Argentine dictatorship between 1976 and 1983.

In the case of Namibia, scholars have mainly focused on the question of how Nazism in Europe originated in German colonialism in Namibia. Since the 1980s, scholars have been analyzing continuity between German settler colonialism during the Kaiserreich in Namibia and the Nazis' eastward expansion in Europe. In 1989, historian Woodruff D. Smith linked settlement colonialism and Lebensraum ("living space") to Nazism.¹²⁷ The work of Hans Grimm had a large influence on the imagery and concepts used by the Nazis. In particular his book Volk ohne Raum (People without Space)¹²⁸ from 1926 nourished the idea of a need for more living space and larger territory for Germans. By the turn of the Nazigeldern (Berlin: Assoziation A, 2004); Gaby Weber, La conexión alemana: El lavado de dinero nazi en Argentina (Buenos Aires: Edhasa, 2005).

¹²⁶ Germán Friedmann, "Alemanes antinazis e identidad alemana en la Argentina. La conformación de una identidad colectiva en un grupo minoritario," Studi Emigrazione 46, no. 174 (2009): 447–67; Germán Friedmann, Alemanes antinazis en la Argentina, 1a. ed. (Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Editores, 2010); Germán Friedmann, "Alemania y los alemanes en la prensa alemana antinazi de Buenos Aires," Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 123–42.

¹²⁷ Woodruff D. Smith, The Ideological Origins of Nazi Imperialism (New York: Oxford University Press, 1989).

¹²⁸ Hans Grimm, Volk ohne Raum (München: A. Langen, 1926).

twentieth century, Grimm had lived over a decade in South Africa and visited Namibia. His time abroad surely influenced his work. Literary scholar Thomas Nolden has argued that “space” must be considered as an essential element of imperialist imagination in Grimm’s novels,¹²⁹ and Nadja Krämer claimed that “pseudoscientific discourses of race and Lebensraum (‘living space’)” were central to Grimm’s colonial project presented in his publications from 1913 to 1926.¹³⁰ In her scientific biography of Grimm, Annette Gumbel demonstrated Grimm’s roots in the far-right völkisch ideology of the turn of the nineteenth century, which only later was taken up by the Nazis as a foundation for their brand of racist nationalism.¹³¹ Some historians have claimed that the Namibian War was a genocide, and served as a test case for the holocaust, making a direct and continuous link between the German Empire and the Third Reich.¹³² In 2008, Karsten Linne put a specific focus on plans for Nazi colonization projects in Africa.¹³³ Kathrin Roller has shown how Nazi policies created problems for

¹²⁹ Thomas Nolden, “On Colonial Spaces and Bodies: Hans Grimm’s Geschichten Aus Südwestafrika,” in The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy, ed. Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998), 125–40.

¹³⁰ Nadja D. Krämer, “Auf, Freudige Germanen...!: Hans Grimm’s Colonial Project, 1913-1926” (Ph.D., Indiana University, 2002).

¹³¹ Annette Gumbel, “Volk ohne Raum”: der Schriftsteller Hans Grimm zwischen nationalkonservativem Denken und völkischer Ideologie (Selbstverlag der Hessischen Historischen Kommission und der Historischen Kommission für Hessen, 2003).

¹³² David Olusoga and Casper W. Erichsen, The Kaiser’s Holocaust: Germany’s Forgotten Genocide and the Colonial Roots of Nazism (London: Faber and Faber, 2010).

¹³³ Karsten Linne, Deutschland jenseits des Äquators?: Die NS-Kolonialplanungen für Afrika (Berlin: Ch. Links Verlag, 2008).

descendants of “African ancestors” from mixed marriages several generations later.¹³⁴

Birthe Kundrus has questioned the direct continuity between German colonial rule in Namibia and Nazi legislation in Germany.¹³⁵ She argued that continuity was not as straight forward between the Nama and Herero genocide and the Holocaust as some historians have claimed. Pascal Grosse also studied the question of how the Kaiserreich connected to Nazism.¹³⁶ Instead of assuming a direct linkage, he “propose[d] an approach based on correspondences between the two historical events instead of assuming direct lines of causality leading from one to the other. The substance of those correspondences seem[ed] to lie in a shared governing structure based on a common biopolitical intellectual foundation – namely, eugenic ideas of racial selection, racial reproduction, and territorial expansion, which [he calls] the ‘racial order.’”¹³⁷

The historiographies of race and Nazism seem to be bifurcated for the Argentinean and the Namibian case. The Argentine examples appear to focus on ¹³⁴ Kathrin Roller, “Zwischen Rassismus und Frömmigkeit - Biopolitik aus erfahrungsgeschichtlicher Perspektive. Über die Geschwister Hegner, Mathilde Kleinschmidt und Ludwig Baumann als Nachfahren einer deutsch-afrikanischen Missionarsfamilie,” in Rassenmischehen, Mischlinge, Rassentrennung: zur Politik der Rasse im deutschen Kolonialreich, ed. Frank Becker (Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 2004), 220-.

¹³⁵ Birthe Kundrus, “Von Windhoek nach Nürnberg? Koloniale ‘Mischehenverbote’ und die nationalsozialistische Rassengesetzgebung,” in Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, ed. Birthe Kundrus (Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003), 110–31.

¹³⁶ Pascal Grosse, “What Does German Colonialism Have to Do with National Socialism?,” in Germany’s Colonial Pasts, ed. Eric Ames, Marcia Klotz, and Lora Wildenthal (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2005), 115–34.

¹³⁷ Ibid., 118.

German migration (Nazi flight in many instances) and the attempt at integration within society, or integration of Argentine society to the Nazi cause. The Namibian example, conversely (and unsurprisingly), focuses more on territorial conquest in the perceived open spaces of the African continent and upon attempts at racial segregation and annihilation.

1.2 Synthesizing the Study of German-speaking Overseas Migration

In this section, we will discuss important secondary literature in migration history as well as consider how this literature applies to the migration of German-speakers to the South Atlantic. In 2009, Christiane Harzig and Dirk Hoerder published a book entitled *What is Migration History?*¹³⁸ They provided a summary of the changes that occurred both in the movement of people across continents and oceans, and in the study of those people who moved. The emergence of world systems theories in the 1970s heavily influenced their approach to migration. Harzig and Hoerder favored the systems approach, which consists of three elements: the sending society, the voyage and the receiving society. They describe how, over time, scholars took different degrees of freedom of the agents into account. The levels of study can vary between macro, meso and micro levels. The cultural and linguistic turns enabled scholars to reevaluate the migrants' lives on the individual and group levels. As Harzig and Hoerder stated, the study of migrants had been greatly influenced by the Chicago School of Sociology, originating in the 1920s with repercussions throughout the following decades. In 1951, Oscar Handlin published The Uprooted, which is – particularly in retrospect – considered the basis for migration history as a field.¹³⁹ Its interpretation stood unchallenged until as late as 1964, when Rudolf J. Vecoli heavily criticized Handlin for oversimplifying and reinforcing the myth of an American melting pot, where all immigrants coming to the United States gave up who they were in order to become something new.¹⁴⁰ In John Bodnar's The Transplanted – a second response to Handlin – the title revealed the main argument: instead of being “uprooted” and leaving the old European home behind, migrants and their cultures were transplanted to the new world.¹⁴¹ They remained who they were, they brought their “cultural baggage,” and they negotiated their identities in their new environment. A similar debate took place in Argentina between the 1950s and 1990s, with Gino Germani and José Luis ¹³⁹ Oscar Handlin, The Uprooted: The Epic Story of the Great Migrations That Made the American People (Boston: Little, Brown, 1951).

¹³⁸ Christiane Harzig, Dirk Hoerder, and Donna Gabaccia, What Is Migration History? (Cambridge UK; Malden MA: Polity, 2009).

¹⁴⁰ Rudolph J Vecoli, “Contadini in Chicago: A Critique of The Uprooted,” The Journal of American History 51, no. 3 (1964): 404–17.

¹⁴¹ John Bodnar, The Transplanted: A History of Immigrants in Urban America (Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1987).

Romero favoring the “melting pot idea,” and Fernando Devoto advocating the multicultural society model.¹⁴²

In the U.S., Handlin, Vecoli, and Bodnar had been influenced by sociology. After the 1990s, historians started to be heavily influenced by another neighboring discipline: anthropology. Clifford Geertz’s definition of culture as “webs of significance” took the study of culture to a new level based on semiotics.¹⁴³ In addition to archival material and statistics, the cultural productions of migrants now became a possible source for inquiry. Historians working in and after the 1990s created their own hybrid of social and cultural history, combining a variety of methods in different forms and degrees. Bodnar had already written about the tension between structures and the individual. This aspect was taken up by a number of scholars writing in the decades after him. In particular, José Moya provided a monumental study on Spanish migrants to Buenos Aires in Cousins and Strangers.¹⁴⁴ Moya collaborated with scholars from both the U.S. and Argentina. His study was an excellent example of the systems approach, as he dedicated one part to the migrants’ situation in Spain and then another on the migrants’ situation in Buenos Aires. He provided statistics on the local origin of the migrants in Spain and then looked at settlement patterns in the Argentine capital. Moya was critical of the push and pull approach, which Bodnar had used, but did not dismiss it entirely. He also attempted to integrate the cultural approach into his work, as he analyzed plays, letters, and other cultural productions of the migrants as sources for his study. Concerned with the tensions between structures and individual agency as well, Samuel Baily highlighted the importance of migrant networks in the migration process.¹⁴⁵

¹⁴² Sábato, “Pluralismo cultural en la Argentina”; Marquiegui, “Pluralismo social y cultural, crisol de razas y Multiculturalismo en el estudio de las migraciones masivas a la Argentina: una mirada histórica retrospectiva.”

¹⁴³ Clifford Geertz, The Interpretation of Cultures: Selected Essays (New York: Basic Books, 1973).

¹⁴⁴ José Moya, Cousins and Strangers: Spanish Immigrants in Buenos Aires, 1850-1930 (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1998).

The study of identities went hand in hand with contemporary politicization of immigrant groups. In 2000, Rogers Brubaker and Frederick Cooper published their article “Beyond ‘Identity.’”¹⁴⁶ In this work, they were highly critical of the concept of identity, stating that it was being overused. Given the (mis)use of the term within (American) society, they urged scholars to distinguish between categories of practice and categories of analysis. Furthermore, they pleaded for the substitution of the word “identity” by other, more useful and more specific terms, such as “identification,” “self-understanding,” and “groupness.” Brubaker and Cooper specifically wanted to distinguish between inside and outside views. In his study on eighteenth-century German-speakers’ journey from the Palatinate to New York via England, Philip Otterness provided an example of the implications of both self- and outside identification in the migration process and the resulting creation of an ethnic identity.¹⁴⁷ He argued that eighteenth-century German-speaking migrants became “German” only after having left Central Europe for the Americas. Before leaving the European continent, they identified with their local provenance like the Palatinate, Bavaria, or the Rhineland.¹⁴⁸ The experience of being surrounded by English-speakers, first in England then in America, created a group spirit among the German-speakers and they came to identify with the label that was attributed to them from the outside: “German.” Being confronted with other linguistic and cultural groups outside of their Central European homes highlighted the similarities of their dialects and lifestyles, which outweighed the differences they had previously perceived between themselves. He emphasized the importance of the instrumentalization and fluidity of identity.

¹⁴⁵ Samuel L Baily, Immigrants in the Lands of Promise: Italians in Buenos Aires and New York City, 1870-1914 (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1999).

¹⁴⁶ Brubaker and Cooper, “Beyond ‘Identity.’”

Another contested model for dealing with ethnic identity and transnationalism is the concept of diaspora. Since Robin Cohen published his book Global Diasporas in 1997, historians have debated the legitimacy and usefulness of this concept.¹⁴⁹ In particular in the second edition of his book from 2008, Cohen traced the development of the concept: starting out as a term to describe the unique experience of Jewish dispersal throughout the world, the term has been broadened to encompass more and more groups such as forced migration with the African Diaspora or trade diasporas such as the Lebanese and Chinese. While remaining highly critical of the concept of diaspora, Donna Gabaccia decided to use it as a tool in her study of Italian migration.¹⁵⁰ She argued, however, that instead of one single Italian diaspora, there were many Italian diasporas. This was her way to explain the geographic and spatial variety of the Italian migration experience. She aimed at providing an account of the global network of Italians. Some historians have studied Germans abroad as part of a German diaspora. In 2002, Dirk Hoerder published his article “The German-language Diasporas.”¹⁵¹ His intentions were similar to those of Gabaccia for the German case. Contrarily to her, however, he defined the members of this diaspora according to language. He used the notion of a German diaspora to bridge the gap between studying German-speakers in North America and Eastern Europe.¹⁵² Instead of integrating every German-speaking community worldwide, he excluded certain groups – including German-speakers in Argentina and Namibia. For Hoerder, the German-speakers in Argentina before 1933 did not qualify as a diaspora because they formed “clusters of rural islands” and “clusters of urban elites connected to indigenous elites with lasting ties to Germany,” whereas German-speakers in Namibia were simply left out of the discussion. More recently, Stefan Manz has analyzed German-speakers around the world through the lens of “diaspora under construction.”¹⁵³ He argued that diaspora was a useful concept for historical study as long as it focused on the process rather than diaspora as a given. In his typology of diaspora, which resembles a systems approach, sociologist Stéphane Dufoix distinguished between the following three elements: a “referent-origin,” a “home state,” and “migrant collectivities.”¹⁵⁴ In this diaspora model, the three elements function together and constitute the “diaspora as system.” While the referent origin is vaguely territorially grounded, the home state may be desired or in the making.

¹⁴⁷ Philip Otterness, Becoming German: The 1709 Palatine Migration to New York (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 2004).

¹⁴⁸ Ibid.; Fernando Devoto has argued similarly for the Italian case, see Fernando Devoto, Historia de los italianos en la Argentina (Buenos Aires: Editorial Biblos, 2006).

¹⁴⁹ Robin Cohen, Global Diasporas, 2nd ed. (London; New York: Routledge, 2008).

¹⁵⁰ Donna Gabaccia, Italy's Many Diasporas (Seattle: University of Washington Press, 2000).

¹⁵¹ Dirk Hoerder, “The German-Language Diasporas: A Survey, Critique, and Interpretation,” Diaspora: A Journal of Transnational Studies 11 (2002): 7–44.

¹⁵² Ibid.

In the collection of essays in the volume The Heimat Abroad, as well as in works by Bradley Naranch, the concept of diaspora seems to apply to all “Germans abroad.”¹⁵⁵ Specifically, Naranch’s article on “Creating the Auslandsdeutsche” claims that with the creation of the German Empire, increasing attention was given to those German-speakers residing outside its boundaries. For the case of Brazil, however, Seyferth contested that German-Brazilians did not want to be included in politics of the Empire, whereas Luebke argued that they did – at the same time – accept financial support for the maintenance of their (German) institutions in Brazil. Disregarding the internal views, anthropologist Janet Fuller used diaspora as an analytical tool.¹⁵⁶ For her, diaspora is existent when a group leaves a society where their language is the majority language in order to live in a society where their language is a minority language. Whereas for Kevin Kenny and his “Global Irish,” diaspora as a tool would be a means to overcome national(ist) history writing and uncover the existence of a “diasporic space,” Matthew Jacobson claimed (long-distance) nationalism to be a necessary condition for the existence of a diaspora.¹⁵⁷ In his book Special Sorrows, Jacobson undertook a convergent comparison of Irish, Polish and Jewish immigrant communities in the United States. According to Brubaker and Cooper’s ideas, Jacobson’s “diasporic consciousness” could be interpreted as self-identification of the individuals.

¹⁵³ See Stefan Manz, Constructing a German Diaspora: The “Greater German Empire,” 1871-1914, Routledge Studies in Modern European History 24 (New York: Routledge, 2014).

¹⁵⁴ Stéphane Dufoix, Diasporas (Berkeley: University of California Press, 2008).

¹⁵⁵ Bradley Naranch, “Inventing the Auslandsdeutsche: Emigration, Colonial Fantasy, and German National Identity, 1848-71,” in Germany’s Colonial Pasts, ed. Eric Ames, Marcia Klotz, and Lora Wildenthal (Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2005), 21–40.

Two important historians working on the role of the state in the regulation of migration are Mae Ngai and Mark Choate. In her 2004 publication Impossible Subjects, Ngai provided several examples of how interactions between immigration law and enforcement and by broader social conventions prevented migrant groups from total acceptance into the United States. Her work provides a good example of Brubaker and Cooper’s external identification of migrations within a receiving society, and how the state can impose categories onto people and thus attempt to exert power over them. A quite different example of state interference is Mark Choate's Emigrant Nation.¹⁵⁸ Here the author illustrated how the Italian state attempted to control Italians abroad. He specifically rejected the idea of diaspora, since according to his interpretation a diaspora can only exist if there is no state (yet). Thus for the case of Italy after 1860, the Italian state was dealing with Italian citizens abroad and not an Italian diaspora. Choate, however, provided an interesting and informative example for the integrated study of migration and colonialism in the Italian case that proves useful in analyzing the German example as well.

¹⁵⁶ Janet Fuller, “Language and Identity in the German Diaspora,” in German Diasporic Experiences: Identity, Migration, and Loss, ed. Mathias Schulze et al. (Waterloo Ont.: Wilfrid Laurier University Press, 2008).

¹⁵⁷ Kevin Kenny, “Diaspora and Comparison: The Global Irish as a Case Study,” Journal of American History 90, no. 1 (2003): 134–62; Matthew Frye Jacobson, Special Sorrows: The Diasporic Imagination of Irish, Polish, and Jewish Immigrants in the United States (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1995).

German-speakers who left Central Europe in the nineteenth century predominantly chose the United States as their migration destination, but lower numbers also went to Brazil, Chile, and Argentina.¹⁵⁹ Argentina experienced its height of European immigration (mainly Italian and Spanish) between 1869 and 1914, a time when over half of Buenos Aires inhabitants were foreign-born.¹⁶⁰

¹⁵⁸ Mark I. Choate, Emigrant Nation: The Making of Italy Abroad (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 2008).

¹⁵⁹ See Walter Kamphoefner, "¿Quiénes fueron al sur? La elección de destino entre los inmigrantes alemanes en el siglo XIX," Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 14, no. 42 (1999): 23–47; María Bjerg, Historias de la inmigración en la Argentina (Buenos Aires; Barcelona: Edhasa, 2009).

¹⁶⁰ The most prominent scholar having worked on the Italians in Argentina is Fernando Devoto; see Devoto, Historia de los italianos en la Argentina; Jose Moya is expert on Spanish migration to Argentina, see Moya, Cousins and Strangers: Spanish Immigrants in Buenos Aires, 1850-1930; Devoto has also published a very important general work on immigration to Argentina, see Fernando Devoto, Historia de la inmigración en la Argentina (Buenos Aires: Ed. Sudamericana, 2003); See also Bjerg, Historias de la inmigración en la Argentina.

Historians have studied German-speakers in Argentina from the perspective of migration rather than as an extension of German history. Much interest has been devoted to migration between 1933 and 1945.¹⁶¹ Anne Saint Sauveur published the most comprehensive study, attempting to cover the time between the 1500s and 1945.¹⁶² Following in her path, various scholars have studied smaller segments: Sandra Carreras, for example, has edited a volume on Prussia and Latin America.¹⁶³ However, little scholarship looks at German-speakers in Argentina from a Central European perspective. Few scholars have studied the German-Argentinean community itself during and before World War I. More recently, Benjamin Bryce's comparative dissertation on German-speakers in Argentina and Canada between 1880 and 1930 looks beyond the limited temporal range with a focus on ethnicity, schools, and churches.¹⁶⁴ However, a comprehensive study of Germans in Argentina still needs to be written.¹⁶⁵ German-speakers going to Namibia, by contrast, have been studied almost exclusively in the context of ¹⁶² Anne Saint Sauveur-Henn, Un siècle d'émigration allemande vers l'Argentine, 1853-1945 (Köln: Böhlau, 1995).

¹⁶¹ Meding, Flucht vor Nürnberg?; Holger Meding and Georg Ismar, eds., Argentinien und das Dritte Reich: mediale und reale Präsenz, Ideologietransfer, Folgewirkungen (Berlin: Wissenschaftlicher Verlag Berlin, 2008); Klich, Sobre nazis y nazismo en cultura argentina; Patrik Zur Mühlen, Fluchtziel Lateinamerika: Die deutsche Emigration 1933-1945: politische Aktivitäten und soziokulturelle Integration (Bonn: Verlag Neue Gesellschaft, 1988).

¹⁶³ Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, eds., Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur (Münster: LIT Verlag, 2004).

¹⁶⁴ Bryce, "Making Ethnic Space."

¹⁶⁵ See Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, eds., La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933 (Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008).

German colonialism rather than as migrants. Migration studies constitutes a newer field in history than empire studies, but not newer than the new imperial history originating in England. We should therefore study German-speakers moving from Central Europe to both Argentina and Namibia as part of migration history.

1.2.2 Historical Neglect and the Fate of German-speaking Women

Historians have started to make an effort to restore women to their place in history. Women have been neglected and ignored by historians at some times, and intensively studied at others.¹⁶⁶ The objective here is twofold: to connect the different – and seemingly contrary and opposite – experiences and actions of women: to render the invisible women visible and to discuss women’s complicity within the South Atlantic German-speaking communities, German-speaking colonies, and German colonization. Among the long silenced or forgotten women were local women in Namibia, like the Zara Schmelen¹⁶⁷ or Uerieta Kazahendike,¹⁶⁸ who worked in the shadow of famous German-speaking

¹⁶⁶ Karen Hagemann and Jean H. Quataert, eds., Gendering Modern German History: Rewriting Historiography (Berghahn Books, 2008).

¹⁶⁷ Ursula Trüper, The Invisible Woman: Zara Schmelen; African Mission Assistant at the Cape and in Namaland, Basler Afrika Bibliographien (Windhoek, Namibia: John Meinert Printing, 2006).

¹⁶⁸ Brigitte Lau, “Johanna Uerieta Gertze and Emma Hahn: Some Thoughts on the Silence of Historical Records, with Reference to Carl Hugo Hahn,” in History and Historiography: 4 Essays in Reprint, ed. Annemarie Heywood (Windhoek: Discourse/ MSORP, 1995), 53–64; Diane Hubbard, “Urieta (Johanna Maria) Kazahendike, God’s Peace and Blessing, Namibia 1861, German,” in Women Writing Africa: The Southern Region, ed. Margaret J. Daymond et al. (New York: Feminist Press at CUNY, 2003), 96–97; Kathleen E. Sheldon, Historical Dictionary of missionaries Johann Heinrich Schmelen and Carl Hugo Hahn. Nama-speaker Zara Schmelen was Heinrich Schmelen's first wife and the actual author of the Nama-German dictionary published under his name. Likewise, Herero-speaker Uerieta Johanna Gertze or Urieta (Johanna Maria) Kazahendike was the actual author of the Herero-German dictionary that brought Hahn fame and an honorary doctorate in Germany. Namibian historian Brigitte Lau also includes the wife of missionary Carl Hugo Hahn, Emma in the list of women who had been silenced by historiography, at least until the 1990s. Emma Hone had gone to South Africa as a missionary herself and taught at a school before meeting and marrying Carl Hugo and following him further north to Namibia. A published collection of her letters to family members in England provide detailed insight into her experiences in both South Africa and Namibia.¹⁶⁹ While English was her first language, she also learned some German herself, and her children were raised multilingual.

There were other women active among the German-speaking missionaries in Namibia, like Katherine Albertine Kleinschmidt,¹⁷⁰ who was born on 19 July

Women in Sub-Saharan Africa, Second Edition (Lanham, Md.: Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, 2016), 112.

¹⁶⁹ Emma Sarah Hahn, The Letters of Emma Sarah Hahn, Pioneer Missionary Among the Herero, ed. Dorothy Guedes and Peter Reiner (Windhoek; Johannesburg: Namibia Scientific Society; Thorold's Africana Books [distributor], 1992).

¹⁷⁰ K[atherine Albertine] Kleinschmidt, "[Colonist Letter 29] K. Kleinschmidt to Inspektor Friedrich Fabri," December 2, 1870, RMG 2.573, Bl. 88-92; her letters to the Rhenish Missionary Society in Barmen, Germany have survived in the Wuppertal archives, classified among the missionary colonist letters.

1847 as the daughter of Hanna and Franz Kleinschmidt.¹⁷¹ Katherine was the granddaughter of Heinrich Schmelen and his first wife Zara, as Hanna Kleinschmidt was their daughter. Among the other missionaries and missionary colonists sending their reports to the Rhenish Missionary Society in Germany, she was one of the few early women witnesses of life in Namibia before German imperial land claims. Katherine wrote the letter on 2 December 1870, when she was back in Namibia, after having stayed in Barmen, Germany for a few years with the missionary inspector Friedrich Fabri's family. She reported on the way the missionaries celebrated the German victory of the 1870-71 war with raising the German flag and a German-language church service. She also described her work in the local school. She later married Finish missionary Botolf Bernhard Börklund in 1874.¹⁷²

For Namibia, historians have claimed that feminism was intertwined with colonialism. Working as missionaries and nurses gave women the opportunity to cross the line between the private and the public sphere and enter the public workforce, but strengthened the colonial project in the process.¹⁷³ In 2009, ¹⁷¹ Carl Hugo Hahn, Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part V: Register and Indexes, ed. Brigitte Lau, vol. 5 (Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1985), 1269.

¹⁷² Emma Sarah Hahn, The Letters of Emma Sarah Hahn, Pioneer Missionary Among the Herero, ed. Dorothy Guedes and Peter Reiner (Windhoek; Johannesburg: Namibia Scientific Society; Thorold's Africana Books [distributor], 1992), 399.

¹⁷³ Andreas Eckl, "Grundzüge einer feministischen Missionsgeschichtsschreibung: Missionarsgattinnen, Diakonissen und Missionsschwestern in der deutschen kolonialen Frauenmission," in Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and historian Andreas Eckl pleaded for feminist missionary history writing.¹⁷⁴ He claimed that women missionaries, while still being understudied by historians, had an even greater impact on local and indigenous women with regards to changing their everyday life. Laura Wildenthal has argued that German women first asserted their desire for equality in the field of nursing in the official colonies.¹⁷⁵ Julia Besten has also argued that work as a missionary was a way for Euro-German women to gain more independence and emancipate themselves, as they were no longer at the bottom of the societal hierarchy.¹⁷⁶ At one time, women considered it part of fighting for women's rights to partake in colonization. Lina Stahlhut was such a woman.¹⁷⁷ Born as Lina Rohe, marrying Rhenish missionary Wilhelm Stahlhut in 1896 made it acceptable to her family that she became a missionary and left her home for Namibia. In Windhoek, she worked at a sewing school and helped teach "civilizing values" through "appropriate" clothing to local women. Similarly, Hedwig von Rhoden married widowed Rhenish missionary Johann Jakob Irle in 1890 and followed him to Mechthild Leutner (Berlin: Links, 2009), 132–45; Britta Schilling, "'Deutsche Frauen! Euch und Eure Kinder geht es an!': Deutsche Frauen als Aktivistinnen für die koloniale Idee," in Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner (Berlin: Links, 2009), 70–78.

¹⁷⁴ Eckl, "Grundzüge einer feministischen Missionsgeschichtsschreibung: Missionarsgattinnen, Diakonissen und Missionsschwestern in der deutschen kolonialen Frauenmission."

¹⁷⁵ Wildenthal, German Women for Empire, 13–53.

¹⁷⁶ Julia Besten, "Des Meisters Ruf: Lina Stahlhut: Missionarsehefrau und Missionsschwester der Rheinischen Mission," in Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner (Berlin: Links, 2009), 146–55.

¹⁷⁷ Aenne Trey, Leidsegnet: ein Lebensbild von Schwester Lina Stahlhut Südwestafrika (Wuppertal-Barmen: Verlag des Missionshauses, 1938).

Namibia. She published several books about her experiences in Namibia, in particular about the Herero.¹⁷⁸ However, it seems like that early missionary wives spent much of their time just being housewives. Francis Galton observed in 1851 that “[t]he wife does the whole housework, cleaning the rooms, managing the children, cooking the dinner, and, what I never liked, waiting at table. These ladies have the hardest and rudest of occupations, but, I must candidly say, they seem to like this life extremely, and I am sure that Missionaries must find great favour in the eyes of the fairer sex, judging from the charming partners that they have the good fortune to obtain.”¹⁷⁹

There were those women born in Euro-German lands who moved to the South Atlantic in their lifetime, usually as young adults; they had been socialized in Euro-German lands and brought their ideas with them. Secondly, there were those women who were “second generation” German-speakers, who were born in the South Atlantic as daughters of the former. As a third group, there were those women who were not primarily German-speakers, but whose everyday life was largely influenced by a German-speaker, be it through marriage or a marriage-like relationship, or through employment. And then there were those women who never travelled to the South Atlantic and wrote about it nonetheless, in a similar fashion as Karl May. We will discuss women authors who were involved in writing colonization propaganda like Frieda von Bülow, Adda von Liliencron, Valerie Hodann, and Christine Holstein (Margarete Jähne) in Chapter 8.

¹⁷⁸ Hedwig Irle, Die schwarze Johanna: Johanna Maria Gertse, die erste Hererochristin (Stuttgart: Jugend- und Volksschriften-Verlag, 1900); Hedwig Irle, Eine schwarze Prinzessin (Barmen: Missionshaus-Verlag, 1910); Hedwig Irle, Unsere schwarzen Landsleute in Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Gütersloh: Bertelsmann, 1911); Hedwig Irle, Wie ich die Herero lieben lernte (Gütersloh: Bertelsmann, 1914); Hedwig Irle, In Gottes Schule: Lebensbild einer Missionarin (Barmen: Verlag [Kontor] des Missionshauses, 1925).

¹⁷⁹ Francis Galton, Narrative of an Explorer in Tropical South Africa: Being an Account of a Visit to Damaraland in 1851 (Ward, Lock, 1889), 17f.

Delfina Bunge could also be considered a German-Argentine writer.¹⁸⁰ While Delfina was a child of the German-speaking Bunge family, whose wealth at the turn of the twentieth century mainly came from wheat exports, she was removed from her German heritage and loosely identified with European nobility at large. In her costly voyages to Europe with her mother, they preferred to visit Paris. Her granddaughter posthumously published parts of Delfina's diaries that give insight in her childhood and youth.¹⁸¹ Leonore Niessen-Deiters was a journalist working for the Kölnner Zeitung and published several articles on the topic of women in the German protectorates,¹⁸² before she started a relationship with Ernesto Quesada in 1914 and moved to Buenos Aires with him.¹⁸³ Writing

¹⁸⁰ Delfina Bunge de Gálvez, Viaje alrededor de mi infancia (Buenos Aires: [Lopez], 1941).

¹⁸¹ Lucía Gálvez, Delfina Bunge: Diarios íntimos de una época brillante (Buenos Aires: Editorial Planeta Argentina, 2000).

¹⁸² Leonore Niessen-Deiters, ed., Die deutsche Frau im Auslande und in den Schutzgebieten; nach Originalberichten aus fünf Erdteilen (Berlin: Egon Fleischel & Co., 1913); Leonore Niessen-Deiters, "Die deutsche Frau in den Schutzgebieten und im Ausland," in Das Frauenbuch: Stellung und Aufgaben der Frau im Recht und in der Gesellschaft, ed. Eugenie von Soden, vol. 3 (Stuttgart: Franckh'sche Verlagshandlung, 1914).

¹⁸³ Leonore Niessen-Deiters, Berichte aus Argentinien in der Kölnischen Zeitung 1913 und 1920, ed. Günter Vollmer (Berlin, 1994); Ernesto Quesada, a Germanophile, would later donate his library to the institution that would become the Ibero-American library in Berlin, see Sandra Carreras, "Die Quesada-Bibliothek kommt nach Berlin. Zu den Hintergründen einer Schenkung," in Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, ed. Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold (Münster: Lit, 2004), 305–20.

about German women abroad, she claimed that German housewives re-created small Germanies abroad.¹⁸⁴ German-speaking women were not only housewives. The group of “forgotten and silenced” women also includes those “nameless” women who moved to Argentina and do not show up in most historical analyses, and most certainly not in the context of colonization. For German-speaking women in Argentina, we can draw on newspapers as a source, and job advertisements in particular. These reveal that German-speaking women worked outside their homes as teachers,¹⁸⁵ hair dressers,¹⁸⁶ modists,¹⁸⁷ cooks,¹⁸⁸

¹⁸⁴ Niessen-Deiters, Die deutsche Frau im Auslande und in den Schutzgebieten; nach Originalberichten aus fünf Erdteilen, 7; Eleonore Niessen-Deiters specifically put together a book with accounts from German women abroad and not just in the German protectorates.

¹⁸⁵ H. Rudolf, “Aus dem Tagebuch einer Lehrerin,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, June 18, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Frau Kieberich, “Deutsches Schülerheim Haus Kieberich,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Auguste Schede, “Deutsche Mädchenschule,” Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt Für die Deutschredenden am La Plata, December 4, 1896, EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 73; Winslow, “Schwimmunterricht für Damen und Mädchen,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁸⁶ Charlotte Ehrke, “Anfertigung aller Haararbeiten zu mässigen Preisen. Fertige Haarflechten zu den billigsten Preisen: Frau Charlotte Ehrke, Friseurin,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 6, 1880, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Witwe Carlos Löther, “Bekanntmachung! [...] Haarfrisuren-Geschäft ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁸⁷ “Neuste Moden! Frau Schwer, Modistin, erlaubt sich hiermit, die geehrte Damenwelt von Buenos Aires zu dem Besuch ihres neu eingerichteten Geschäfts-Locales einzuladen,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, May 2, 1885, sec. coverpage, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Antonie Kania, “Als Schneiderin und Modistin empfiehlt sich den geehrten Damen von Windhoek und Umgegend ...,” Windhoek Anzeiger, August 31, 1899, NAN; Löther, “Bekanntmachung! [...] Haarfrisuren-Geschäft ...”

¹⁸⁸ Sta. E. Norbutat, “Deutsche, 30 Jahre alt, evang.-luth., welche perfekt englisch und spanisch spricht, tüchtige Haushälterin und Köchin, sucht Stellung in Privathause oder Estancia ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 8, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Frau und Tochter, 14 Jahre alt, suchen Stelle, die Frau als Köchin und Hausarbeit, die Tochter für Kindern und leichte Hausarbeit, auch nach auswärts,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 8, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Deutsche Köchin sucht Stellung auf dem Lande in der Nähe von Buenos Aires,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January midwives,¹⁸⁹ doctors,¹⁹⁰ barkeepers,¹⁹¹ and shopkeepers.¹⁹² In many cases widows continued to run the shared business after a husband's death. In some cases, mothers and daughters both sought jobs together in the DLPZ.¹⁹³ Some women highlighted the fact that they were from "better" family backgrounds.¹⁹⁴ In Argentina, girls also had their own schools: in 1866, the Colegio Central advertised being a German Girls School in the Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de La

8, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Gebildetes Fräulein, welches sehr gut kochen kann, sucht selbständige Stelle," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 8, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁸⁹ "Frau Elisabeth Charles: Deutsche Hebamme," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 28, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Elisa Heim, "Elisa Heim, Hebamme," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 1, 1878; "Wittwe Anna Berger, Geburtshelferin und Professorin der Massage," Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 4, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; D. Schäfer, "Frau D. Schäfer, Hebamme," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 6, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Frau Bornert Witwe, Hebamme," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 6, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Paula Janssen, "Hebamme (Oesterreicherin), staatlich geprüft, praktisch erfahren, empfiehlt sich der deutschen Kolonie ...," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 6, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁹⁰ Cecilia Grierson, "Fri. Doctora Cecilia Grierson. Prakt. Arzt, Spezialistin für Frauenkrankheiten und Geburtshülfe," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Maria Mauthe, "Maria Mauthe, Deutsch-amerikanische Zahnärztin," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Srta. Dr. Eyle, Médico," Germania 1, no. 7 (September 1, 1915).

¹⁹¹ M. Schurz, "Speisehaus von Frau M. Schurz in Windhoek. Täglich warme und kalte Speisen," Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 24, 1898, NAN.

¹⁹² "Wohnungsveränderung. Wittwe Helmund verlegte ihr Spielwaaren-Geschäft nach der Calle Uruguay Nr. 394 ...," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 9, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁹³ A. B., "Gesetzte Frau mit Tochter sucht Stellung als Wirtschafterin [...]; bevorzugt Herrenhaushalt," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 8, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Frau und Tochter, 14 Jahre alt, suchen Stelle, die Frau als Köchin und Hausarbeit, die Tochter für Kindern und leichte Hausarbeit, auch nach auswärts."

¹⁹⁴ "Bessere Deutsche sucht Stelle in Schneider- oder Putzatelier," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 8, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Gebildetes Fräulein, welches sehr gut kochen kann, sucht selbständige Stelle."

Plata.¹⁹⁵ In 1880, the DLPZ published an advertisement for Colegio Nuevo for girls and in 1896, there were two German schools exclusively for girls.¹⁹⁶ In 1899, the German Colonial Society specifically made German-speaking girls go to the German protectorate South-West Africa in order to ensure the perpetuation of German families and lineages.¹⁹⁷ There was a specific teaching farm (Lehrfarm) where German girls should learn farming – and thus colonizing – in the German protectorate.¹⁹⁸ On both sides of the South Atlantic, women organized in women’s associations (Frauenverein). In Argentina, the German women’s association advertised in the Protestant church paper as early as 1896.¹⁹⁹ By 1907, it also advertised its residential hall, which was exclusively for German-speaking

¹⁹⁵ E. Pfister, “Colegio Central. Deutsche Mädchenschule,” Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, January 2, 1866.

¹⁹⁶ J. Neumeier, “Colegio Nuevo für Mädchen,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 6, 1880, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Schede, “Deutsche Mädchenschule”; Clara Schwarz, “Deutsche Mädchenschule und Pensionat,” Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt Für die Deutschredenden am La Plata, December 4, 1896, EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 73.

¹⁹⁷ “Von den jungen Mädchen, die hierher gekommen sind, um Stellen anzunehmen ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, March 2, 1899, sec. Aus dem Schutzgebiet, NAN; “Deutsche Mädchen in Südwestafrika,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, May 25, 1899, NAN; “Von unseren neuen Mitbürgerinnen ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, February 2, 1899, sec. Local-Nachrichten, NAN; “Am Sonnabend vor Weihnachten trafen 5 junge Mädchen, die durch Vermittlung der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft die Reise ins Schutzgebiet gemacht haben in Windhoek ein ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 4, 1900, NAN.

¹⁹⁸ “Die Lehrfarm in Südwest-Afrika für junge Mädchen,” 1909 1907, BArch R 1001/1951, pag. 74.

¹⁹⁹ “Deutscher Frauenverein,” Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt Für die Deutschredenden am La Plata, December 4, 1896, EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 73; See also Regula Rohland de Langbehn, “La Iglesia Evangélica Alemana como promotora de asociaciones benéficas en Buenos Aires. Dos casos: el Deutscher Frauenverein y el Deutsches Seemansheim,” in La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, ed. Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda (Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008), 109–24.

women.²⁰⁰ In Namibia, the women's section of the German Colonial Society had a branch in Keetmanshoop by 1913.²⁰¹ A women's association for German-speaking women in Namibia was only founded in 1921, after the end of the German colonial time.²⁰² South Atlantic German-speaking women were thus active in a variety of ways and contributed to the founding of German communities in both Argentina and Namibia and participated in colonization in both locations.

1.2.3 Social Class as Determining Factor for Settlement Destinations

In 1914, the newspaper Deutsche La Plata Zeitung (DLPZ) featured an advertisement addressed to men inciting them to gift a piece of land in the Argentine interior to their fiancées, wives, or their children.²⁰³ Much of the historiography emphasizes the elite character of the German-Argentine merchant business families, and the fact that mostly men came to Argentina and married

²⁰⁰ "Heim des Deutschen Frauenvereins," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Vereins-Anzeigen, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Das Heim des Deutschen Frauenvereins," Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 5, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

²⁰¹ "Frauenbund der Deutschen Kolonial-Gesellschaft, Abteilung Keetmanshoop," Keetmanshooper Zeitung, April 24, 1913, sec. 2. Blatt zur „Keetmanshooper Zeitung“, SBB - Westhafen.

²⁰² "Der Deutsche Frauenverein: Der Deutsche Frauenverein wurde am 1. April 1921 gegründet. Seine Aufgabe sollte der Zusammenschluß Südweste Frauen zu gemeinsamer Arbeit, allgemeiner Wohltätigkeit, werktätiger Nächstenliebe und Unterstützung notleidender Menschen sein," Die Republikein, June 16, 1988, Deutsch-Südwestafrika / Duis-Suidwes-Afrika edition.

²⁰³ A. H. Archer, "Schenken Sie Ihrer Braut, Frau oder Kind eine Landparzelle in 'Valle Hermoso,'" Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 3, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

wealthy local women (though the reverse also occurred, as in the example of the Zimmermann and Halbach family).²⁰⁴ The 1955 German Club publication claimed that the German-speaking merchant families at the beginning of the nineteenth century were upper-class – as they received a multilingual education – and for that reason Argentinians confounded them with English-speakers and put them in the category of “ingleses” at a time when this term signified prestigious foreigner.²⁰⁵

In 1880, Ernst Bachmann promulgated that his newspaper, the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, brought all German-speakers in Argentina together, whereas in Europe class divisions ensured that not everyone read the same newspaper.²⁰⁶ Four years later, Bachmann wrote in the introduction to the yearbook and address calendar of the German colony of Buenos Aires that German-speakers in Buenos Aires were very enthusiastic about the 1870-71 war between Germany and France. Bachman had gone to Europe to participate in the war on the German ²⁰⁴ See Roy Hora, “Landowning Bourgeoisie or Business Bourgeoisie? On the Peculiarities of the Argentine Economic Elite, 1880-1945,” Journal of Latin American Studies 34, no. 3 (2002): 587–623; Stephanie Bower, “Political and Socio-Economic Elites: The Encounter of Provincials with Portenos in Fin-De-Siècle Buenos Aires,” The Americas 59, no. 3 (2003): 379–403; Yovanna Pineda, “Sources of Finance and Reputation: Merchant Finance Groups in Argentine Industrialization, 1890-1930,” Latin American Research Review 41, no. 2 (2006): 3–30; Peter Birle, ed., Elites en América Latina (Madrid; Frankfurt am Main: Iberoamericana; Vervuert, 2007); Leandro Losada, La alta sociedad en la Buenos Aires de la “Belle époque”: sociabilidad, estilos de vida e identidades (Bueno Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Editora Iberoamericana, 2008); Leandro Losada, Historia de las elites en la Argentina (Buenos Aires: Sudamericana, 2009); Andreas Schumacher, Die rheinischen Kaufmannseliten in Argentinien - vornehmlich am Beispiel der Familie Bunge (Wiesbaden: [Selbstverl.], 2010).

²⁰⁵ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 101.

²⁰⁶ E. Bachmann, “Redaktion,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 9, 1880, sec. coverpage, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

side.²⁰⁷ He described the 1871 victory as the “renaissance of Germanness” (“Wiedergeburt des Deutschthums”). Not knowing the outcome of the war after the ship Araucania had brought the news of the declaration of war on August 8, 1870, German-speakers formed a committee to collect donations for the fighting soldiers in Europe. The two German newspapers of the time printed the same invocation to the Germans in Argentina, which called the war a holy war.²⁰⁸ Bachmann also claimed that the German victory erased all political and class differences of the German colony in Buenos Aires and let it seem to be like a large family.²⁰⁹

Meanwhile, other primary sources reported ongoing class tensions in the South Atlantic German communities. In 1862, established members of Argentina’s German Protestant church, at that time their only ethnic institution, opposed the new “democrats” in their midst: the conflict resulted in the foundation of the socialist association Verein Vorwärts and the Neue Deutsche Schule (New German school).²¹⁰ More recently, several historians have studied German workers and socialists in Argentina: like the Bunge & Born workers in the flour mills, the club and newspaper Vorwärts (Forward), and the socialist

²⁰⁷ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 5.

²⁰⁸ Ibid., 6.

²⁰⁹ Ibid., 8.

²¹⁰ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschthums in Argentinien, 189.

Oswaldo Seyffert.²¹¹ There were thus wealthy merchants as well as modest workers among the German-speakers in Argentina.

In Namibia, scholars claim, mostly wealthy families sent their members to settle in the German protectorate of South-West Africa between the turn of the century and WWI. It is indeed noticeable how many family names included noble particles. However, historian Harald Sippel has asserted that during the time of the German protectorate, German settlers originated in all different layers of society, from wealthy aristocrats to penniless day laborers.²¹² There was, for example, legislation passed to protect workers in the German protectorates.²¹³ The missionaries who went to Namibia were, however, from a higher level of society: they came from well-to-do families who could afford to send their children to missionary schools in Central Europe, first to the London Missionary Society who had a school in Berlin, and later to the Rhenish Missionary Society school in ²¹¹ María Ester Rapalo and María Victoria Grillo, “Un caso de solidaridad obrera: el conflicto de 1918 entre Bunge y Born y los obreros de sus empresas molineras,” in En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, ed. Bart De Groof et al. (Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998), 99–105; Jessica Zeller, “Der Beitrag deutscher Sozialisten in den Anfängen der Arbeiterbewegung und des Sozialismus in Argentinien, Der Verein und die Zeitung ‘Vorwärts’ in Buenos Aires (1882-1901)” (Freie Universität Berlin, 2004); Regula Rohland de Langbehn, “Un socialista alemán de primera hora en Buenos Aires: Oswaldo Seyffert y sus observaciones sobre el submundo porteño de 1904,” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 109–22; Yovanna Pineda, Industrial Development in a Frontier Economy: The Industrialization of Argentina, 1890-1930 (Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 2009); Yovanna Pineda, “Manufacturing Innovation in Argentina, 1890-1930,” The Business History Review 83, no. 3 (2009): 539–62.

²¹² Harald Sippel, “Fremde oder Heimat? - Zur Funktion der kolonialen Rechtsordnung in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” in Deutsche in der Fremde: Assimilation, Abgrenzung, Integration, ed. Torsten Kühlmann and Bernd Müller-Jacquier (St. Ingbert: Röhrig Universitätsverlag, 2007), 196.

²¹³ Peter J. Schröder, Gesetzgebung und “Arbeiterfrage” in den Kolonien: das Arbeitsrecht in den Schutzgebieten des Deutschen Reiches, Europa-Übersee: Historische Studien 18 (Berlin: Lit, 2006).

Barmen. District officer Rudolf Böhmer said that the descendants of the missionary merchants and artisans who migrated to Namibia in the 1860s belonged to the most respected and esteemed families in Namibia in 1912.²¹⁴ Later on, officers working for the information office for migration in Berlin made known that migrants needed a certain budget in order to make it in Namibia and colonial advocates attempted to keep poor German-speakers from migrating to the official German colonies.

1.2.4 South Atlantic Receiving Societies, Degrees of Europeanization, and Otherness

“Receiving society” is the term migration historians use for the society welcoming the migrants. While migration scholars have applied this term to the Argentine state and other settler-colonial nations like the U.S. and Canada, they have not specifically considered the indigenous populations on both sides of the South Atlantic as the receiving societies for Europeans and German-speakers in particular. On the South American side, German-speakers met various indigenous peoples such as the Mapuches (Araucanians), Tehuelches, Ranqueles, and

²¹⁴ Rudolf Böhmer, “Deutsch-evangelisches Leben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Vortrag auf dem II. Deutschen Kolonial-Missionstage zu Kassel,” Mitteilungen des Vereins für deutsch-evangelisches Leben in den Schutzgebieten und im Ausland - E.V., October 1912, No. 13 edition, EZA 5/2916.

Patagons.²¹⁵ In Southern Africa, they met Otjiherero-speakers and various Khoisan or Nama groups (among them Orlam).²¹⁶

Swiss-German Carlos Beck Bernard wrote in 1868 that when the Spanish discovered the territory of present-day Argentina in the sixteenth century, it was sparsely populated by indigenous peoples [Ureinwohner] whom they called Indians [Indianer], which were composed of three main “races:” Guaranis in the north, Quichas in the north-west and Araunaian Mapuche [Araucanier] in the south-west.²¹⁷ Beck Bernard stated that remains of the “main races” and some of their “side tribes” [Nebestämme] still existed, “some in a wild, some in a somewhat civilized state”, but they were decreasing at a fast rate and mixing gradually with the white population of European descent. This latter group consisted of only Spaniards in the beginning, but incorporated immigrants of all European nations after 1824. He also claimed that the agricultural colonies never had to fear “wild Indians”: they were not against colonists per se, and they were afraid of “fire weapons.”²¹⁸ Moreover, in 1877, Johann Alemann wrote on the “Indians”:

²¹⁵ Raúl Mandrini, La Argentina aborigen: de los primeros pobladores a 1910, 1. ed (Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Ed., 2008); Brian Du Toit, Colonia Boer: An Afrikaner Settlement in Chubut, Argentina (Lewiston: E. Mellen Press, 1995); Ryan, “Indigenous Possessions: Anthropology, Museums, and Nation-Making in Argentina, 1862-1943”; Claudia Torre, El otro desierto de la nación argentina: antología de narrativa expedicionaria (Bernal: Universidad Nacional de Quilmes, 2011).

²¹⁶ Marion Wallace and John Kinahan, A History of Namibia: From the Beginning to 1990 (New York: Columbia University Press, 2011); Trüper, The Invisible Woman.

²¹⁷ Carlos Beck Bernard, Die Argentinische Republik als Auswanderungsziel (Bern: Allemann, 1868), 15.

Not without importance in this regard is the race mixing of the indigenous Indians, whose gradual disappearance can only be considered a matter of time [...]. But the Indian being or the Indian character will not get lost, because this being, as it seems, is a necessary product of this country, of the climate, of the soil and it becomes manifested in the immigrant after some time just as with the indigenous. It is a fact that cannot be denied that just like the Spaniard in America has become a different being than in the former home, that something Indian-like has become manifest in his character. The original image of that is the gaucho. One encounters this Indian-likeness in popular life in every step, and not only the Spaniard but also the descendants of other nationalities are ailing from it.²¹⁹

Alemann was thus convinced that migrant newcomers would also adjust to the Argentinean character through the environment.

Across the Atlantic at the beginning of the nineteenth century, the Orlam were a Nama group strongly influenced by Europeans: they dressed in European fashion, spoke Afrikaans, practiced Protestant Christianity, and carried European firearms.²²⁰ But contemporaneous Europeans did not accept and recognize them as valid authorities, as the partition of Africa at the 1884 Berlin congress and subsequent similar events illustrated. In 1850, traveler Charles John Andersson described the first “natives” he saw as savages (Wilde) of daunting appearance. But then he explained that he and Galton went towards them, and with the help of missionary Schöneberg communicated with signs and gestures, asking them to transmit a letter to missionary Bam further in the interior, offering tobacco in exchange.²²¹ Ursula Trüper has argued that local chiefs in Namibia wanted contact with missionaries, as they also brought trade goods, methods for agriculture, etc.²²²

²¹⁸ Ibid., 36.

²¹⁹ Johann Jakob Alemann, Bilder aus der Argentinischen Republik (Buenos Aires: Dampf-Buchdruckerei des “Courrier de la Plata,” 1877), 121.

²²⁰ Trüper, The Invisible Woman.

On both sides of the Atlantic, we can find examples of contemporary German-speakers labeling indigenous peoples as “nations” in the sense of “peoples.” At the end of the eighteenth century, the Jesuit missionary Martin Dobrizhoffer called the Abipones of Argentina and Paraguay a nation.²²³ In Namibia, the colonial soldier (Schutztruppler) Maximilian Bayer called the Rehoboth Basters a nation at the beginning of the nineteenth century.²²⁴ In 2003, Kristin Kjæret and Kristian Stokke have analyzed national discourses in Namibia

²²¹ Charles John Andersson, Reisen in Südwest-Afrika bis zum See Ngami in den Jahren 1850 bis 1854, trans. Hermann Lotze, vol. 1 (Leipzig: H. Costenoble, 1858), 19.

²²² Trüper, The Invisible Woman.

²²³ Martin Dobrizhoffer, Geschichte der Abiponer einer berittenen und kriegerischen Nation in Paraguay: bereichert mit einer Menge Beobachtungen über die wilden Völkerschaften, Städte, Flüsse, vierfüßigen Thiere, Amphibien, Insekten, merkwürdigsten Schlangen, Fische, Vögel, Bäume, Pflanzen und andere Eigenschaften dieser Provinz, trans. A. Kreil (Wien: J. Edler von Kurzbek, 1783); Martin Dobrizhoffer, Geschichte der Abiponer einer berittenen und kriegerischen Nation in Paraguay: bereichert mit einer Menge Beobachtungen über die wilden Völkerschaften, Städte, Flüsse, vierfüßigen Thiere, Amphibien, Insekten, merkwürdigsten Schlangen, Fische, Vögel, Bäume, Pflanzen und andere Eigenschaften dieser Provinz, trans. A. Kreil, vol. 3 (Wien: J. Edler von Kurzbek, 1784).

²²⁴ Maximilian Bayer, The Rehoboth Baster Nation of Namibia, ed. Peter Carstens (Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, 1984).

with regards to the Rehoboth Basters.²²⁵ Since Namibian independence, they have become one nation among many in the new nation-state that functions according to international conventions. Georgios Chatzoudis has studied the creation of the political system of the new Namibian nation-state.²²⁶ The Nama leader Hendrik Witbooi had written a document that essentially claimed Africa for the Africans in the 1880s and 1890s.²²⁷ Henning Melber has collected poems and texts on Namibian nation-building and resistance from local authors,²²⁸ and Jeremy Silvester has revised the role of resistance in Namibian history.²²⁹ Marion Wallace has published a comprehensive history of Namibia, giving a voice to all the different groups making up the current nation-state and writing a revisionist and de-centered “national” history.²³⁰ Ellen Ndeshi Namhila has critically deconstructed colonial record keeping in the Namibian national archives in order

²²⁵ Kristin Kjæret and Kristian Stokke, “Rehoboth Baster, Namibian or Namibian Baster? An Analysis of National Discourses in Rehoboth, Namibia,” Nations and Nationalism 9, no. 4 (2003): 579–600.

²²⁶ Georgios Chatzoudis, “Von der Kolonie Südwestafrika zum Nationalstaat Namibia - das politische System seit 1949,” in Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, ed. Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig (Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004), 258–73.

²²⁷ Hendrik Witbooi, Afrika den Afrikanern!: Aufzeichnungen eines Nama-Häuptlings aus der Zeit der deutschen Eroberung Südwestafrikas 1884 bis 1894, ed. Wolfgang Reinhard (Berlin [u.a.]: Dietz, 1982).

²²⁸ Henning Melber, It Is No More a Cry: Namibian Poetry in Exile and Essays on Literature in Resistance and Nation Building (Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, 2004).

²²⁹ Silvester Jeremy, ed., Re-Viewing Resistance in Namibian History (Windhoek: University of Namibia Press, 2015).

²³⁰ Wallace and Kinahan, A History of Namibia.

to restore their voice to local people in Namibian history writing.²³¹ Scholars working on Namibia are thus very concerned with restoring indigenous peoples to the history writing, which is in contrast to nineteenth century attitudes of most German-speakers.

Numerous scholars have identified the South Atlantic as a “frontier.” Frederick Jackson Turner had coined the term “frontier” in the 1870s for U.S. American westward expansion. Some aspects of the concept “frontier” are interesting for my study, such as the idea that territories were slowly and over time occupied, acquired, and colonized by Europeans and integrated into their systems of thought and economies. In Argentina, it was also a westward but also southward expansion, and in Namibia, it was rather a northward expansion. Throughout the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, Buenos Aires was a popular port of arrival from migrants before they continued traveling further north. Cape Town was similarly the major port of arrival for early German-speakers who arrived in Southern Africa. Only around 1900 did German shipping companies offer regular direct trips to ports in the German protectorate South-West Africa.

Another aspect is the fact that it was a space of encounter and negotiation, similar to the “middle ground” Richard White has described for the encounter between Europeans and indigenous people in North America.²³² In 1983, Peter Medding and Daniel Judah Elazar undertook a comparative study of “Jewish Communities in [the] Frontier Societies” Argentina, South Africa, and Australia.²³³ They claimed that while the timeframes were similar, the Jewish experience was unique in every location. David J. Weber and Jane M. Rausch have edited a volume on “Frontiers in Latin American History” which includes texts authored by Domingo Faustino Sarmiento, Frederick Jackson Turner and Walter Prescott Webb.²³⁴ Scholars Jeremy Adelman, Richard W. Slatta and Yovanna Pineda also specifically discussed Argentina as frontier society: Adelman compared the development of wheat cultivation in Argentina and Canada,²³⁵ Slatta discussed the role of the gaucho in the Argentinean frontier,²³⁶ and Pineda studied Argentina’s industrial development.²³⁷

²³¹ Ellen Ndeshi Namhila, “Recordkeeping and Missing ‘Native Estate’ Records in Namibia: An Investigation of Colonial Gaps in a Post-Colonial National Archive” (University of Tampere, 2015).

²³² Richard White, The Middle Ground: Indians, Empires, and Republics in the Great Lakes Region, 1650-1815 (Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2011).

²³³ Daniel Judah Elazar and Peter Medding, Jewish Communities in Frontier Societies: Argentina, Australia, and South Africa (New York: Holmes and Meier, 1983).

²³⁴ David J. Weber and Jane M. Rausch, eds., Where Cultures Meet: Frontiers in Latin American History (Wilmington, Del.: SR Books, 1994).

²³⁵ Jeremy Adelman, Frontier Development: Land, Labour, and Capital on the Wheatlands of Argentina and Canada, 1890-1914, Oxford Historical Monographs (Oxford; New York: Clarendon Press; Oxford University Press, 1994).

²³⁶ Richard W. Slatta, Gauchos and the Vanishing Frontier (Lincoln, Neb.: University of Nebraska Press, 1992); Richard W. Slatta, “The Gaucho in Argentina’s Quest for National Identity,” in Where Cultures Meet: Frontiers in Latin American History, ed. David J. Weber and Jane M. Rausch (Wilmington, Del.: SR Books, 1994), 151–64; Richard W. Slatta, “‘Civilization’ Battles ‘Barbarism’: The Limits of Argentine Indian Frontier Strategies,” in The Military and Conflict Between Cultures: Soldiers at the Interface, ed. James C. Bradford (College Station: Texas A&M University Press, 1997), 130–62.

²³⁷ Pineda, Industrial Development in a Frontier Economy.

In Southern Africa, notably the scholars Dorian Haarhoff, Tilman Dederling, and Wolfram Hartmann situated their studies in a South(-west) African frontier: Haarhoff assembled various publications set in the Namibian frontier,²³⁸ Dederling dealt with relations between different groups in the Frontier: locals and Germans, and the clashed of different European groups,²³⁹ meanwhile, Hartmann examined the sexual reations between locals and European newcomers in nineteenth-century Namibia.²⁴⁰ Most recently, Jürgen Osterhammel has pointed out the temporal synchrony of frontier processes in South America and South Africa.²⁴¹

South Atlantic states made different attempts to integrate their immigrant populations. The Argentinean state considered itself to be a “nation of immigrants” where migrants had to be nationalized.²⁴² Celebrations of religious and national holidays testified to the cultural identity of German-speakers in the South Atlantic, their maintenance of connections to Europe, as well as to their ²³⁸ Dorian Haarhoff, The Wild South-West: Frontier Myths and Metaphors in Literature Set in Namibia, 1760-1988 (Johannesburg: Witwatersrand University Press, 1991).

²³⁹ Tilman Dederling, Hate the Old and Follow the New: Khoekhoe and Missionaries in Early Nineteenth-Century Namibia (Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1997); Tilman Dederling, “The Ferreira Raid of 1906: Boers, Britons and Germans in Southern Africa in the Aftermath of the South African War,” Journal of Southern African Studies 26, no. 1 (2000): 43–59.

²⁴⁰ Hartmann, “Sexual Encounters and Their Implications on an Open and Closing Frontier.”

²⁴¹ Jürgen Osterhammel, “Frontiers: Subjugation of Space and Challenges to Nomadic Life,” in The Transformation of the World: A Global History of the Nineteenth Century, trans. Patrick Camiller (Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 2014), 322–91.

²⁴² Fernando Devoto, “Poblar, civilizar, nacionalizar: el tema de la inmigración en la cultura argentina,” in Argentina: un país de inmigrantes (Buenos Aires: Dirección Nacional de Migraciones, 1998); Michael Goebel, Argentina’s Partisan Past: Nationalism and the Politics of History (Liverpool [England]: Liverpool University Press, 2011).

adaption to local conditions. In Argentina, German-speakers saw it as their patriotic duty to also celebrate Argentinean national holidays, such as 25 May (of 1810) or 9 July (of 1816). In 1880, the newspaper DLPZ published an article that summarized how the Argentine press perceived the German participation at the 25 May festivities: the overall reception was very positive.²⁴³ German schools like the Germania-Schule organized a celebration at the occasion of 25 May in 1907.²⁴⁴ For the centenary of 25 May in 1910, German-speakers of Argentina even had a their own monument built – the German fountain which is located at the square Plaza Alemania.²⁴⁵ German-speakers in Argentina honored the holiday of 9 July just as much.²⁴⁶

1.3 Conclusion

In this first chapter, we have deconstructed the unit that constitutes the subject of this dissertation: the people who left Central Europe and who identified with German culture and language and who first labeled themselves as Germans. We ²⁴³ “Die Deutschen bei der Centennariumsfeier und die Presse,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 23, 1880, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

²⁴⁴ “Feier in der Germania-Schule zum 25. Mai,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 25, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

²⁴⁵ Wilhelm Keiper, Begleitworte zu den Wettbewerbsbedingungen für einen deutschen Brunnen in Buenos Aires (Buenos Aires, 1909); Wilhelm Keiper, Der deutsche Brunnen in Buenos Aires: Das Werk und der Künstler (Stuttgart: Stähle & Friedel, 1928).

²⁴⁶ Anaxagoras, “Betrachtungen zum 9. Juli,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, July 8, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Zum 9. Juli,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, July 7, 1907, sec. Sonntagsblatt der “Deutschen La Plata Zeitung,” Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

have looked at how historians use the categories of “nation” and “race” in order to study differences between groups of people. While “nation” is usually used as a category of analysis which designates a group of people with regards to their relation to a state, “race” as a category of analysis is usually used to differentiate between larger groups of people identifying based on actual or perceived biological markers. We confronted the analytical concepts of “nation” and “race” with categories of experience, that is, the categories and definitions contemporary migrants in the South Atlantic were operating with. I argue that while they used the terms “nation” and “race” in their lifetimes, their definition of both of these two terms was closer to “a people” (Volk) than to historians’ definitions. “German” was the designation of “a people” and was a cultural identity, not a political one.

In this chapter, we have also considered other categories of analysis migration historians use. Migration history has been instrumental in providing a framework for the study of mobility, and in this case for the transatlantic migration processes of German-speakers. In addition to “race,” we also specifically discussed how “gender” and “class” have been dealt with in the case of German-speaking migration to the South Atlantic: men and women migrated together, originating from various layers of society in Central Europe. Finally, we had a look at the study of the South Atlantic receiving societies. German-speakers encountered South Atlantic locals and their own identity was shaped through this encounter with alterity. Just as in Europe, processes of state creation were ongoing in the South Atlantic and German-speakers took part in these developments, both in their new places of residence as well as in their places of origin. We can thus say that at the beginning of the nineteenth century, “German” was not linked to a German state; instead, “German” was a transnational category.

Chapter 2. Dimensions of German Cultural Identity Experienced in the South Atlantic

In this chapter, we will view the nineteenth-century migration situation through the eyes of the German-speakers themselves. We will thus study South Atlantic German-speakers “from below.” Through reading and analyzing the contemporary sources, and studying the life trajectories of individuals and families, I have discovered a variety of additional labels that these German-speakers were confronted or identified with.

The category of practice or label that these people used to refer to themselves at the beginning of the nineteenth century was “German.” The political changes of state organization in Central Europe influenced migrants in the South Atlantic and brought about a gradual shift in the terminology they used and that scholars used to designate them. In this process, self-labeling and external labeling by historians are intertwined. It is important to consider how German-speakers in the South Atlantic perceived and were affected by the formation of the German nation-state and Empire (Deutsches Kaiserreich). The creation of the German Empire in 1871 and its economic success had a great impact on German-speakers in the South Atlantic: they hoped for financial support of German investors and “capitalists,” as they called them. By 1889, the newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt had agents in the German Empire, in Austria, and in Switzerland.²⁴⁷ Swiss-German and naturalized Argentinean journalist Moritz Alemann’s participation in the 1902 German Colonial Congress was symptomatic of this development. He introduced himself to his fellow congress participants as the representative of the German colony of Buenos Aires.²⁴⁸ But Alemann did not only seek support from investors in the German Empire, he also gave presentations in Switzerland with the same aim. It was on one of these trips in Europe that he died after having lived most of his life in Argentina, dedicated to increasing German-speaking colonization in Argentina.²⁴⁹

In 1908, the German Scientific Society of Buenos Aires (Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein zu Buenos Aires) launched call for papers for a “comprehensive scientifically useful” publication on the “position and activities of Germans in Argentina,” and “for this purpose want[ed] to perform a census of Reich-Germans, Austrian-Germans, Swiss-Germans, Russian-Germans etc. via a questionnaire.”²⁵⁰ This endeavor was specifically planned because “[n]aturally, the statistical examinations and publications of the German consular representatives abroad include only Reich-Germans and foreign states in overseas territories only rarely include descent and mother language of their citizens of German origin in their population censuses.”

²⁴⁷ “Agenten des Argentinischen Wochen- & Tageblattes,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, May 2, 1889, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

²⁴⁸ Moritz Alemann, “Argentinien als Siedlungsgebiet für deutsche Auswanderung,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903), 663–78.

²⁴⁹ “+ Moritz Alemann,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, October 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 46.

In this chapter we will thus briefly discuss citizenship and nationality of German-speakers and the problem with statistics, followed by a longer discussion of the various labels South Atlantic German-speakers identified with in addition to German, and a note on the role of the German language for these migrants.

²⁵⁰ “Süd-Amerika, Zählung der Deutschsprechenden Argentiniers,” Mitteilungen des Allgemeinen Deutschen Schulvereins zur Erhaltung des Deutschtums im Auslande 55 (November 24, 1908): “Der deutsche wissenschaftliche Verein zu Buenos-Aires beabsichtigt die Stellung und Tätigkeit der Deutschen in Argentinien auf den verschiedenen Gebieten des öffentlichen Lebens in einer zusammenfassenden wissenschaftlich brauchbaren Form darzustellen und will zu diesem Zwecke, durch Fragebögen eine Zählung sämtlicher Reichsdeutschen, Deutsch-Oesterreicher, Deutsch-Schweizer, Deutsch-Russen usw. veranstalten. Dieses Unternehmen des deutschen wissenschaftlichen Vereins, am besten noch ergänzt durch eine Statistik nach der Konfession, verdient auf der ganzen Erde, wo Deutsche in der Diaspora leben, die weiteste Nachahmung. Nur so wird es möglich sein, nicht nur für die wissenschaftliche Deutschkunde, sondern auch für alle deutschen Kulturaufgaben ein wirklich vollständiges Material zu gewinnen, das auch für die weltwirtschaftlichen Interessen des Deutschen Reichs nach dem Erfahrungsgrundsatz, daß der Handel der Sprache mehr noch als der Flagge folgt, von Bedeutung sein wird. Die statistischen Untersuchungen und Mitteilungen der deutschen Konsularvertretungen im Auslande erstrecken sich naturgemäß nur auf Reichsdeutsche und die fremden Staaten in überseeischen Gebieten lassen bei ihren Volksstatistiken nur in den seltensten Fällen Abstammung und Muttersprache ihrer Staatsbürger deutscher Herkunft hervortreten. Da der Verein für das Deutschtum im Ausland (All. Deutscher Schulverein) soeben eine „Zentralstelle für Erforschung des Deutschtums im Ausland“ geschaffen hat, so wird dieser eine solche Unterstützung ihrer Arbeiten durch das Auslandsdeutschtum besonders wertvoll sein.”; A few days later, the National Zeitung republished the article. “Eine Zählung der Deutschsprechenden Argentiniers,” Nationalzeitung, November 27, 1908, Nr. 565 edition, EZA 5/2061, p. 303.

2.1. Types of Citizenship and Nationality of “Germans”

Both citizenship (Staatsbürgerschaft) and nationality (Nationalität) are terms that we use today in connection with nation-states, and which we tend to use interchangeably; however, “citizenship” refers to membership of a nation-state and “nationality” to being member of a nation in the sense of “a people.”²⁵¹ The question of nation-state membership became increasingly important throughout the twentieth century. Many historians agree that passports gained importance and became mandatory as a means to control entire populations only in the aftermath of WWI. Passports as travel documents already existed in the nineteenth century: but before WWI, they primarily granted permission to leave a territory, and only later did they primarily granted permission to enter. An example is the pastor August Siegel, who received a passport from the Province of Buenos Aires in 1854 in order to travel to “su patria Alemania” (his home country Germany).²⁵² Note here that the location entered in the passport was Germany, despite there being no unified German nation-state and Germany thus not being a political category.

²⁵¹ Sandra Carreras distinguishes between citizenship, which she links to the French and American Revolutions, and nationality, which she attributed to the creation of modern nation-states. In addition, she distinguishes between two types of nationality: “Staatszugehörigkeit” as belonging to a state and “Volkszugehörigkeit” as belonging to a people, see Sandra Carreras, “Construcciones de identidad y ciudadanía entre los migrantes de origen alemán en Argentina,” in Ciudadanía vivida, (in)seguridades e interculturalidad, ed. Barbara Potthast, Juliana Stroebele/Gregor, and Doerte Wollrad (Buenos Aires: Friedrich Ebert Stiftung; Nueva Sociedad, 2008), 200–212.

²⁵² “Pasaporte Siegel,” August 25, 1854, EZA 5/4097, pg. 16.

In Argentina, starting with the constitution of 1853, anyone born in the territory of the Argentinean Confederation automatically possessed Argentinean citizenship.²⁵³ German-speakers in Argentina discussed whether even migrants born in Europe should be naturalized Argentinean. In 1889, a certain J. Wininger published an article in the Argentinisches Tageblatt in which he claimed that a reform of the naturalization law was necessary: immigrants should also have rights, given that half of the Argentinean population was foreign-born. He stated that naturalization was a right and a duty for both the natives/locals (“Einheimische”) and foreigners (“Fremde”). He added that people invited by the Argentinean government should not and could not merely be considered as workers without rights, rather they should be considered as equal citizens. He asserted that German-speakers wanted to be treated as what they were: cultured people and not African slaves. He thus appealed to Argentina as a modern and “white” state where anyone who lived there could become a citizen.²⁵⁴

Rhenish missionary Carl Hugo Hahn, who moved to Namibia in the 1840s, was a German-speaker, while being a Russian subject at the same time. In 1870, his wife Emma Hahn expressed her relief in a letter to her sister about how neither her husband, nor their sons who were born in Namibia, had to fight in the ²⁵³ In 1853, the province of Buenos Aires was not part of the Argentinean confederation, it only joined in 1859.

²⁵⁴ J. Wininger, “[1] Die Naturalisation. Ein Programmpunkt,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 29, 1889, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; J. Wininger, “[2] Die Naturalisation. Ein Programmpunkt (Schluss),” Argentinisches Tageblatt, May 2, 1889, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

1870-71 war between France and the North German Confederation.²⁵⁵ According to an anecdote published in the African Heimat Calendar in 1978 about missionary colonist's son Gottlieb Redecker's visit to his father's hometown, Gottlieb, who had been born in Otjimbingwe, Damaraland (Namibia) in 1871, was not considered a "German" citizen, because his father had lived outside of "Germany" for over ten years, and consequently a German official concluded that Gottlieb must be a Damara.²⁵⁶

This loss of German citizenship after ten years abroad posed a problem for proponents of German migration and overseas trade colonies like economist Robert Jannasch, who proposed a change in German migration law (Auswanderungsgesetz) to congress in 1893.²⁵⁷ While the law was changed in 1897,²⁵⁸ the majority of German settlers abroad continued to lose their German citizenship, as a newspaper observed in 1901.²⁵⁹ The 1902 German Colonial Congress embraced the issue: the lawyer Dr. Hermann Hesse pleaded in his congress presentation for the prolonged maintenance of German citizenship for

²⁵⁵ Dorothy Guedes and Peter Reiner, eds., "Emma Hahn to Mathilda (Sister), 1870," in The Letters of Emma Sarah Hahn, Pioneer Missionary Among the Herero (Windhoek; Johannesburg: Namibia Scientific Society; Thorold's Africana Books [distributor], 1992).

²⁵⁶ N. Mossolow, "Architekt Gottlieb Redecker," in Afrikanischer Heimatkalender 1978, ed. Kirchenbundesrat des Deutschen Evangelisch-Lutherischen Kirchenbundes in Süd- und Südwestafrika (Windhoek: Afrikanischer Heimatkalender, 1978), 22.

²⁵⁷ Robert Jannasch, Vorschläge zur Abänderung des Auswanderungs-Gesetzentwurfes [Eingabe] an das Präsidium des Hohen Deutschen Reichstages (Berlin: Gergonne, 1893).

²⁵⁸ Felix Stoerk, Das Reichsgesetz über das Auswanderungswesen vom 9. Juni 1897 nebst Ausführungsverordnungen und Anlagen (Berlin: Heymann, 1899).

²⁵⁹ "Deutsch-argentinische Wirtschaftsbeziehungen," National Zeitung, April 10, 1901, BArch R 901/30412, pag. 143.

migrants abroad²⁶⁰ and a congressional resolution officially requested a change in the existing German citizenship law.²⁶¹ Hesse was also interested in the topic of the legal status of Germans in Namibia.²⁶² In the German protectorate South-West Africa, colonial authorities distinguished between German citizens, other European or white people, and indigenous people.²⁶³ Only the Rehoboth Basters enjoyed a privileged legal position which was situated in between the white and indigenous regulations.²⁶⁴

Even within the German Empire, and thus a “united Germany,” individuals remained citizens of the various German states they lived in until a change in legislation in 1913. Botanist Gustavo Niederlein, for example, ²⁶⁰ Hermann Hesse, “Die Frage der Reichsangehörigkeit der Auswanderer,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903), 616–27.

²⁶¹ See Resolution V., in Deutscher Kolonialkongress, Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, 838. “Resolution V. // Der Deutsche Kolonialkongress 1902 hält es im Interesse der Aufrechterhaltung des Zusammenhanges der deutschen Auswanderer mit dem Mutterlande für notwendig, dass der in § 21 des Gesetzes über Erwerb und Verlust der Bundes- und Staatsangehörigkeit vom 1. Juni 1870 zur Geltung gelangte Grundsatz, dass durch zehnjährigen Aufenthalt im Auslande ohne Eintragung in die Konsulatsmatrikel die Reichs- und Staatsangehörigkeit verloren geht, beseitigt und die Verjährung als Verlustgrund der Reichs- und Staatsangehörigkeit nur in Bezug auf die Nachkommen ausgewanderter Deutscher unter gewissen Voraussetzungen und Beschränkungen zugelassen werde.”

²⁶² Hermann Hesse, “Reichs- und Staatsangehörigkeit,” ed. Gustav Meinecke, Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis 11 (1898): 97–136.

²⁶³ Schreiber-Stettin, “Die rechtliche Stellung der Bewohner der deutschen Schutzgebiete,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 760–; Rudolf Mallmann, Die Staatsangehörigkeit in den deutschen Schutzgebieten, Colonial government pamphlets 15 (Berlin, Leipzig: Brandstetter, 1912); Joachim Heinrich Lücke, Bevölkerung und Aufenthaltsrecht in den Deutschen Schutzgebieten Afrikas, Abhandlungen des Hamburgischen Kolonialinstituts 12 (Hamburg: L. Friederichsen & Co. (L. & R. Friederichsen), 1913).

²⁶⁴ Gentz, “Die Rechtliche Stellung der Bastards in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902).

emphasized in his Curriculum Vitae from 1907 that he always had maintained Saxon citizenship while he had spent extensive amounts of time in Argentina and the United States from the 1880s onwards.²⁶⁵ Only the citizenship law of 1913 then introduced a comprehensive “imperial citizenship“ for the German Empire, and this law ensured that migrants kept their citizenship indefinitely even while living abroad.²⁶⁶

2.1.1 The Problem with Exact Figures

Just as historians would like to know how many German-speakers were in the South Atlantic at any given point in time, contemporary German-speakers were also interested in having this information. The motivations of contemporaries in having concrete numbers varied: some simply wanted to know how many people were sharing their fate as migrants in a new place, others were eager to demonstrate that the numbers of their own group – Germans or German-speakers – was higher than that of other groups in the South Atlantic. This was particularly the case in Argentinean society where French-speakers and English-speakers were immediate competitors in the time leading up to WWI.

²⁶⁵ Gustavo Niederlein, “Curriculum Vitae: Ernst Gustav Niederlein, Zittau,” June 1907, BArch R 901/30421, pag. 15-31.

²⁶⁶ See Howard Sargent, “Diasporic Citizens: Germans Abroad in the Framing of German Citizenship Law,” in The Heimat Abroad: The Boundaries of Germanness, ed. Krista O’Donnell, Renate Bridenthal, and Nancy Ruth Reagin (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2005), 17–39; Naranch, “Inventing the Auslandsdeutsche: Emigration, Colonial Fantasy, and German National Identity, 1848-71.”

Historians have determined that approximately ninety percent of all German-speaking migrants in the nineteenth century went to North America, more specifically the United States and Canada. Their migration has been well documented and studied. By comparison, only a few historians, including Walther Kamphoefner, have examined German-speakers who went to South America.²⁶⁷ However, the few statistics that are available today all pose their own problems. There are the official Argentine government population censuses. Hernán Otero has studied computational issues that these censuses presented, including how the criteria for the labels used in the statistics changed over time.²⁶⁸ For example, the category “Russian” may also have included Russian-Germans who only identified as German-speakers once in Argentina. For the German statistics, Anne Saint Sauveur-Henn and Jean-Pierre Blancpain have also pointed to similar issues. Whether Germans were recorded as belonging to a political or cultural entity was not coherent throughout time and space. The changing political borders in Europe account for some of the fluidity in changing political labeling of migrants. In addition, the increasing tensions between French and German camps in Argentina probably influenced the creation of statistics, each in favor of their own camp. In 2011, Alicia Bernasconi from the Buenos Aires Center for the Study of Latin

²⁶⁷ Kamphoefner, “¿Quiénes fueron al sur? La elección de destino entre los inmigrantes alemanes en el siglo XIX.”

²⁶⁸ Hernán Otero, Estadística y nación: una historia conceptual del pensamiento censal de la Argentina moderna, 1869-1914 (Buenos Aires: Prometeo libros, 2007).

American Migration (CEMLA) pointed to the particularities of using Argentinean sources to study numbers of German-speakers in Argentina.²⁶⁹ For example, Argentine censuses only counted as immigrants those people having arrived by boat in second or third class and the names used to classify the migrants in the shipping records varied greatly over time, from Prussian, and Tirolian to Austro-German (austro-alemán and austro-germano).

For Argentina, state authorities collected two types of data: migration arrival statistics and censuses. Censuses were carried out in the following years: 1869, 1895, and 1914. Both migration arrival statistics and censuses distinguished between the following categories: German, Austrian, Swiss, Russian, and Belgian. The following table shows a selection of numbers from the Argentinean migration arrival statistics as well as from the censuses. For the time prior to 1871, it is not clear who was included in the category Germans (Alemanes).²⁷⁰ In addition, I have included some examples of other numbers German-speakers mentioned in their publications.

²⁶⁹ Alicia Bernasconi, “La inmigración de habla alemana en Argentina. Aproximación a partir de las listas de desembarco,” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 5–22.

²⁷⁰ Francisco Scardin, La Argentina y el trabajo: impresiones y notas (Buenos Aires: J. Peuser, 1906), 703; Maria Cristina Vera de Flachs, Emigraciones transoceánicas. Los alemanes en América. 1850 - 1914. El caso argentino. (Madrid: Servicio de Publicaciones de la Universidad Complutense, 2005), 88.

Year	Arrival statistics					Number of Residents (* = census years)
	Germ- an	Austri- -an	Swiss	Belgi- an	Russian	German	Austri- -an	Swiss	Bel- gian	Russi- an	German- speakers
1839						3,000 ²⁷¹
1857- 1859 ²⁷²	178	226	219	68
1860- 1869 ²⁷³	1,212	819	1,562	519
1869*						4,997 ²⁷⁴ 2,139 ²⁷⁵
1892						8,000 ²⁷⁶
1895*	1,067	549	465	211		17,143 ²⁷⁷
1896						23,000 ²⁷⁸
1897 ²⁷⁹	987	1,768	390	207	617	6,838 ²⁸⁰	3,057	2,829			11,183
1898
1899 ²⁸¹	732	950	343		1,686

²⁷¹ Heinrich Trachsler, Reisen, Schicksale und tragikomische Abendteuer eines Schweizers während seines Aufenthaltes in den verschiedenen Provinzen Südamerikas, Rio de Janeiro, Ilha Santa Catharina, Armação, São Pedro do Sul, Rio Grande, Corrientes, Montevideo, Buenos-Aires etc. in den Jahren 1828 bis 1835 (Zürich: H. Trachsler, 1839), 702f.

²⁷² Scardin, La Argentina y el trabajo, 703.

²⁷³ Ibid.

²⁷⁴ Flachs, Emigraciones transoceánicas, 89.

²⁷⁵ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 199.

²⁷⁶ "Das Fremden-Element in Buenos Aires," Kölnische Zeitung, May 23, 1892, BArch R 901/30408, pag. 78.

²⁷⁷ Flachs, Emigraciones transoceánicas, 89.

²⁷⁸ Guido von Drigalsky, "Land und Leute in Argentinien," Berliner Tageblatt, May 4, 1896, BArch R 901/30410, pag. 50.

²⁷⁹ "Der Einwanderungsstatistik für 1897 entnehmen wir folgende Ziffern...," Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 24, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

²⁸⁰ "Wegweiser für Argentinien zur Orientierung der Auswanderer und Kapitalisten. M. O. Preusse, Buenos Aires, 1897. Buchdruckerei von Herpig und Stoevcken, Corrientes 2322," 1897, 17, BArch R 901/30411, pag. 8-61.

1900
1901 ²⁸²	836	2,743	363		1,686
1904						20,723 ²⁸³
1909 ²⁸⁴	3,201	3,803	760		16,475
1914*						26,094 ²⁸⁵ 26,995 ²⁸⁶					100,000 287

For the 1869 census, for example, Lütge et al. provided a much lower number for the total of Germans living in Argentina than historian Vera de Flachs.²⁸⁸ Strikingly higher numbers than those provided by Argentinean state authorities were listed in a Cologne newspaper in 1892 and by Drisalsky in 1896. Otto Kasdorf claimed in 1916 that statistics on German-speakers in South America showed that German-speakers made up two percent of the Argentinean population; he included Reichsdeutsche and their Argentine-born children, as well

²⁸¹ “Moniteur officiel du commerce,” October 25, 1900, 68, BArch R 901/30412, pag. 68; Scardin, La Argentina y el trabajo, 703.

²⁸² “Mouvement de l’immigration dans la République Argentine en 1901,” Moniteur officiel du commerce, May 8, 1902, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 47; Scardin, La Argentina y el trabajo, 703.

²⁸³ “[„Danach würden sich in AR 20,723 Deutsche befinden.“] Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” September 20, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 66-67.

²⁸⁴ Memoria de la Dirección de Inmigración correspondiente al año 1909, Buenos Aires, 1910, p.109-110, cited in: Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 95.

²⁸⁵ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 306.

²⁸⁶ Flachs, Emigraciones transoceánicas, 89; Saint Sauveur-Henn, Un siècle d’émigration allemande vers l’Argentine, 246.

²⁸⁷ Hernán Otero, La guerra en la sangre: los franco-argentinos ante la Primera Guerra Mundial (Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 2009), 17 f.

²⁸⁸ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 199.

as Swiss-Germans, Austrians, Russians etc. in this calculation.²⁸⁹ Historian Hernán Otero has estimated, however, that the number of all German-speakers in Argentina stood at 100,000 members in 1914.²⁹⁰

The numbers of German-speakers were much lower for Namibia, but the records are less complete. The Rhenish missionary Heinrich Vedder collected numbers of missionaries and merchants for the time preceding the German protectorate.²⁹¹ There are also some censuses available from the German protectorate in the National Archives of Namibia, which differentiated between whites and indigenous. Statistics given for the German protectorate South-West Africa in 1894, however, are: 109 (corrected number: 362) Germans, 19 English, 5 Swedes, 9 Boers, 1 French, 2 Belgians. This yields a total of 145 (or 398) white inhabitants.²⁹² It is unclear why and by whom the original number was corrected, especially since there is a substantial difference between these two numbers. By 1912, the figures were 2,580 Germans, 26 Austrians and Hungarians, 5 Swiss, 29 Russians, 9 Dutch, 23 English, 159 Colonial English, 8 other Americans, and 5 North Americans.²⁹³ Most of these white migrants lived in the capital city of Windhoek, where the numbers of adult males recorded in 1910 included 1,100

²⁸⁹ Kasdorf, Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika, 27.

²⁹⁰ Otero, La guerra en la sangre, 17 f.

²⁹¹ Heinrich Vedder, Das alte Südwestafrika: Südwestafrikas Geschichte bis zum Tode Mahareros 1890. Nach den besten schriftlichen und mündlichen Quellen erzählt (Berlin: M. Warneck, 1934).

²⁹² Zählung der weißen Bevölkerung, 1894-1899, 1899, 5, NAN BWI 270 S.14.C (1).

²⁹³ "Die weiße Bevölkerung nach Nationalität, Geschlecht, Beruf und Konfession; Schutzgebiet Südwestafrika," 1912, NAN BWI 270 S.14.C.

Germans, 10 Austrians, 7 Swiss, 10 Russians, 8 Dutch, 25 English, 44 “Colonial English,” 2 Argentineans, and 2 North Americans.²⁹⁴

Overall, statistics collected in both Argentina and Namibia included categories according to states. However, contemporaries already remarked that these categories were not useful for establishing the number of German-speakers.

2.2 Contemporary Labels Overlapping with German-ness

Sources produced by nineteenth-century South Atlantic German-speakers, in addition to “German” and “German-speaker,” used various other labels that were connected to and intertwined with German-ness. These labels co-existed and overlapped with the term “German.” I have identified the following terms as group labels that some German-speakers identified with simultaneously: Jewish, Russian-German, Dutch, Boer, Belgian, Austrian, Swiss-German, and Reichsdeutsche (imperial Germans). We will discuss each of these categories in the following subsections. I have chosen to discuss the different groups in this order, starting with the smaller groups before discussing the category with the highest number of members for a number of reasons. Over time, this last group was the one whose territorial attachment in Central Europe underwent the most changes as the borders gradually changed and were re-drawn in Central Europe over the course of two hundred years: in the aftermath of the French revolution, in the 1860s, in 1871, in the 1920s, post-1945, and lastly in 1990. Meanwhile, the term “German” was still considered a cultural identity in after 1800, but was increasingly linked to the German Empire after 1871.

²⁹⁴ “Die weiße Bevölkerung nach Wohnort ...; Windhuk,” 1910, NAN BWI 270 S.14.C.

In each of the following subsections, I am juxtaposing primary sources with secondary literature. Many historians have taken looked from Central Europe outwards, using the German nation-state (or German Empire) as the starting point and thus projecting the German nation-state and allegiance to it back into the past.²⁹⁵ While I claim that historians have contributed to reifying these categories as closed and separate identities, I have nonetheless chosen to discuss these categories individually in order to show the diversity, complexity, and inclusiveness of the concept of German-speakers that contemporaries of the nineteenth century had.

2.2.1 Jewish

A certain percentage of Jews in the South Atlantic were German-speaking, but it is difficult to know any specific numbers. Some scholars have treated the question of whether Jews are a cultural or a religious group. Till van Rhaden has maintained that they are both.²⁹⁶ I maintain that “Jewish” is a category of analysis, whereas the terms contemporaries used varied.

²⁹⁵ As late as 2016, Frederick Schulze still only focused on (former) citizens of the German Empire in Southern Brazil and suggested that future research should study the realtions of these Germans to Swiss-Germans, Austrians, etc., see Frederik Schulze, Auswanderung als nationalistisches Projekt: ‚Deutschum‘ und Kolonialdiskurse im südlichen Brasilien (1824–1941) (Köln, Weimar: Böhlau Verlag, 2016), 347 f.

In both Argentina and Southern Africa, some Jews associated and were associated with so-called minority groups: Boers in Southern Africa and gauchos in Argentina. Elazar has claimed that Afrikaners or Boers saw Jews as their brothers as they were both a “chosen people.”²⁹⁷ Several books have been published on the “Jewish gauchos.”²⁹⁸ Alberto Gerchunoff’s *Gauchos Judíos*²⁹⁹ is a novel from 1910 that has become very famous in Argentina. Contemporaries also varied in the way they identified this group. In 1907, the Argentinean magazine Caras y Caretas published an article entitled “Colectividad Israelita” with pictures of prominent community members including “Señor Simón Ostwalt, judío alemán, argentinizado” and “Señor Aaron Vecht, judío holandés y general boer” with their pictures.³⁰⁰

In both Argentina and Southern Africa, Jewish migrants until the 1880s mostly originated from Western Europe. Between the 1880s and WWI, during the ²⁹⁶ Till Rahden, Juden und andere Breslauer: die Beziehungen zwischen Juden, Protestanten und Katholiken in einer deutschen Grossstadt von 1860 bis 1925 (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2000).

²⁹⁷ Elazar and Medding, Jewish Communities in Frontier Societies, 175.

²⁹⁸ Ricardo Feierstein, Los mejores relatos con gauchos judíos (Buenos Aires: Ameghino Editora, 1998); Argentina and Cultura y Deporte Ministerio de Turismo, Gauchos Judíos: huellas de la colonización agrícola: un recorrido por nuestra tierra, nuestra gente y nuestra diversidad cultural ([Buenos Aires]: Shalom Argentina: Ministerio de Turismo, Cultura y Deporte, 2001).

²⁹⁹ Alberto Gerchunoff, Los Gauchos Judíos (La Plata, 1910).

³⁰⁰ “La colectividad israelita en Buenos Aires,” Caras y Caretas: Semanario festivo, literario, artístico y de actualidades, January 19, 1907.

era of “mass migration,” most of them came from Eastern Europe. The 1983 comparative study of Jews in Argentina and South Africa from Elazar and Medding was published at a time when Namibia was part of the South African state.³⁰¹ In Southern Africa, Jews from England and Germany started to settle in Cape Town after the 1820s and in 1841, they founded their first own congregation.³⁰² In Namibia, Jewish Germans were listed in the school statistics: in 1908, there were 12 among 287 students.³⁰³ When I visited the National Archives of Namibia (NAN) in 2012, the folder on Jews was empty: there must have been information that was collected on them, but it has been displaced. In general, information on Jewish settlers in Namibia is scarce. The first Jewish settlers in Namibia of the 1880s were merchants, who developed a small Jewish community in Swakopmund and Windhoek and established synagogues in private houses.³⁰⁴

In Argentina, a small number of Jewish merchants arrived from the 1820s onwards, many of them from England, France, and Germany. They were largely secularized and only loosely organized as a cultural rather than a religious community. Jewish settlement projects in Argentina on a larger scale took place

³⁰¹ Elazar and Medding, Jewish Communities in Frontier Societies.

³⁰² Ibid., 166.

³⁰³ “Schulwesen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” Tägliche Rundschau, July 25, 1908, Nr. 345 edition, EZA 5/2985.

³⁰⁴ Ulrike Stockmann, “Jüdisches Leben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” Allgemeine Zeitung, June 28, 2016, sec. Geschichte, <http://www.az.com.na/nachrichten/jdisches-leben-in-deutsch-sdwestafrika>.

as a response to the pogroms in Russia and Eastern Europe (Poland and Romania) at the end of the nineteenth century. Over three thousand families settled in agricultural colonies in Argentina between the 1880s and WWI.³⁰⁵ In Argentina, these Jewish agricultural colonization projects were important to both the Argentinean state that sought settlers for the interior and to Jewish settlers that sought land to settle where they were not persecuted. In 1891, the banker and philanthropist Baron Mauricio (Maurice) Hirsch (*1831 Munich – 1896 [Hungary]) founded the Jewish Colonization Society (ICA) with its seat in London.³⁰⁶ In 1892, Hirsch commissioned Gustavo Niederlein to identify the land best suited for his Jewish colonization project in the Argentine territories Misiones and Chaco as well as in Paraguay.³⁰⁷ Hirsch never travelled to Argentina himself.³⁰⁸ The Argentinean magazine La Agricultura published an article on Baron Hirsch in 1893 and praised his accomplishments in agricultural colonization in Argentina.³⁰⁹ According to Elazar,³¹⁰ Hirsch's settler families were mostly Yiddish-speaking Jews from Eastern Europe, but according to a letter ³⁰⁵ Elazar and Medding, Jewish Communities in Frontier Societies, 5; 95.

³⁰⁶ Robert Weisbrot and Robert Murciano, The Jews of Argentina: From the Inquisition to Perón (Philadelphia: Jewish Publication Society of America, 1979), 44.

³⁰⁷ Gustavo Niederlein, Gutachten für Herrn Baron von Hirsch über die Colonisationsfähigkeit Paraguay's und der argentinischen Territorien Misiones, Formosa und Chaco Austral (Buenos Aires: Imp. Helvetia, 1892).

³⁰⁸ Roberto Schopflocher, Historia de la colonización agrícola en Argentina (Buenos Aires: Editorial Raigal, 1955), 63.

³⁰⁹ "El Baron Hirsch," La Agricultura: Organó de los intereses rurales é industriales 1, no. 18 (May 4, 1893): 205.

³¹⁰ Elazar and Medding, Jewish Communities in Frontier Societies, 9.

from German General Consul Wilhelm von Sanden to German chancellor von Bülow in 1906, the Jews of the Hirsch's colonization project were German-speaking Russian Jews.³¹¹ Sander noted that these Jewish settlers did not have a good standing with the local population and that their reputation was not better than in Russia, the place they had fled due to persecution. Because most of these agricultural Jewish settlers came from Eastern Europe and Russia, German-speakers – as well as larger Argentinean society – associated them with Russia in a similar way as they did with Volga-Germans/Russian-Germans, and called them “rusos.” Alfred Arent, Wilhelm Vallentin, and Preusse-Sperber also mentioned these Jewish agricultural colonies in the Argentine interior in their publications.³¹²

Whether the agricultural projects in the countryside were successful depends on the judgment of different authors. However, it seems like they were not as successful as the ICA and Hirsch had hoped and many Jewish settlers that started out in the countryside moved to Buenos Aires. Simultaneously to the agricultural colonies, Jews decided to settle in the capital Buenos Aires, where Jewish community life greatly expanded beyond the established small, semi-secular group founded by German, French, and English Jews. While the great majority (about ninety percent) of Jews in Argentina originated from Eastern ³¹¹ von Sanden, “Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat, Buenos Aires an Reichskanzler, Fürsten von Bülow [Ein Stroeder'sches Eisenbahnprojekt in Entrerios],” September 3, 1906, BArch R 901/30420, pag. 16-19.

³¹² Arent, Ein Land der Zukunft; Wilhelm Vallentin, Streifzüge durch Pampa und Kordillere Argentiniens, Sammlung belehrender Unterhaltungsschriften für die deutsche Jugend 27 (Berlin: H. Paetel, 1908), 57–58.

Europe in 1900, the elite of the community still stemmed from the more established Jews from Central and Western Europe. German-Jew Louis Hartwig Brie (*1834 Hamburg – ?), for example, married an Argentinean Catholic; after her death, he was an active member of several Jewish institutions in Buenos Aires until remarrying another Catholic.³¹³ He became the first president of the Jewish Mutual Aid and Burial Society in 1894.³¹⁴ Jews in Argentina were also active in socialist and anarchist circles. Anti-Semitism in Argentina manifested in the “Tragic Week” of January 1919, which was the first Argentinean pogrom.³¹⁵ Johanna Hopfengärtner studied Jewish women migrants during WWII and she claims that in the Jewish Aid society, gender roles were not changed and Jewish women were perceived as “alemanes” by larger Argentinean society, just like Nazi migrants.³¹⁶

Generally speaking, scholars have attributed most attention to Jewish refugees who went to Argentina between 1933 and 1945.³¹⁷ During this time ³¹³ Weisbrot and Murciano, The Jews of Argentina, 30–31.

³¹⁴ Ibid., 48.

³¹⁵ Eugene F. Sofer, From Pale to Pampa: A Social History of the Jews of Buenos Aires (New York: Holmes & Meier, 1982), 42 ff.

³¹⁶ Johanna Hopfengärtner, “Zwischen Emigration und Immigration. Deutschsprachige jüdische Frauen in Argentinien,” in Der Nationalsozialismus und Lateinamerika: Institutionen - Repräsentationen - Wissenskonstrukte, ed. Sandra Carreras, First Edition (Berlin: Ibero-Amerikanisches Institut, 2005).

³¹⁷ Jean-Pierre Blancpain has studied German Jews and anti-Semitism in South America between 1930 and 1950, see Jean-Pierre Blancpain, Les juifs allemands et l'antisémitisme en Amérique du sud: 1930-1950 (Paris: Harmattan, 2008); Carlota Jackisch has studied German refugees, see Carlota Jackisch, El nazismo y los refugiados alemanes en la Argentina, 1933-1945 (Buenos Aires: Editorial de Belgrano, 1989); Elena Levin has analyzed Jews in Argentina between 1933 period, approximately 45,000 German-speaking Jews arrived in Argentina.³¹⁸ Alfredo Schwarcz postulated that they went through a process of being “Jews in Germany” to being “German citizens of Jewish faith” to being “German-speaking Jews in Argentina.” Schwarcz claimed that the identity of a German-speaking Jewish community was born in 1933 with the Asociación Filantrópica Israelita – Jüdischer Hilfsverein (AFI) and it was then that Argentineans started to acknowledge these Jews more as Germans than as “rusos” or “turcos” as they had done with Jews before.³¹⁹ I disagree with him, as German-speaking Jews prior to 1933 were part of the larger Jewish community. The circumstances of 1933-45 only intensified the visibility and creation of a stronger independent German-Jewish identity in Argentina. Buenos Aires developed its own “Jewish quarter” with a Synagogue, in the “barrio Once.” German Jews also started publishing their own newspaper called Semanario israelita (Jewish weekly).³²⁰ Founded in and 1945, see Elena Levin, Historias de una emigración (1933-1939): Alemanes judíos en la Argentina, Second Edition (Buenos Aires: Ed. de Belgrano, 1997); Philipp Mettauer has put focus on the migration of Austrian Jews, see Philipp Mettauer, Erzwungene Emigration nach Argentinien: österreichisch-jüdische Lebensgeschichten, Studien zur Geschichte und Kultur der iberischen und iberoamerikanischen Länder; Bd. 14 (Münster: Aschendorff-Verl., 2010); Irene Münster has studied the bookstores and libraries of German Jews in Buenos Aires, see Irene Münster, “Librerías y bibliotecas circulantes de judíos alemanes en la Ciudad de Buenos Aires, 1930-2011,” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 157–76; Kirsten Moneke analyzed the role of Jewish mutual aid societies, see Kirsten Moneke, Die Emigration der deutschen Juden nach Argentinien: (1933 - 1945); zur Rolle der jüdischen Hilfsvereine (St. Ingbert: Röhrig, 1993).

³¹⁸ Alfredo Schwarcz, “La inmigración judeo-alemana. El proceso de integración a la luz de la continuidad generacional,” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 143–56.

³¹⁹ Ibid., 145.

³²⁰ Kerstin E. Schirp, Die Wochenzeitung “Semanario Israelita”: Sprachrohr der deutsch-jüdischen Emigranten in Argentinien (LIT Verlag Münster, 2001).

1934, the Pestalozzi Schule became the school for German-Jewish children and other anti-Nazis.³²¹ One of its co-founder was Ernesto Fernando Alemann, then editor of the Argentinisches Tageblatt, which was considered the newspaper of the resistance during Nazism in Argentina.³²² During the Jewish persecution by Nazis, the ICA welcomed German-Jews in Argentina and founded several agricultural colonies just for them.³²³

2.2.2 Russian-German

In 1845, Wilhelm Stricker (*1815 Frankfurt am Main – 1891 Frankfurt am Main), who was an active member of the National Association for German Colonization and Settlement (Nationalverein für deutsche Auswanderung und Ansiedelung) in Frankfurt, discussed Russian-Germans (Russlanddeutsche), including merchants and artisans in the Baltic provinces and farmers (Ackerbauern) at the Volga River and the Black sea.³²⁴ He called both kinds of settlements German colonies.³²⁵ As Stricker discussed, the Russian government had settled Germans from Württemberg, Hessen, and Saxony at the banks of the Volga River between 1763

³²¹ Hermann Schnorbach, Für ein "anderes Deutschland": die Pestalozzischule in Buenos Aires (1934-1958), Pädagogische Beispiele 9 (Frankfurt am Main: Dipa-Verlag, 1995).

³²² Hendrik Groth, Das Argentinische Tageblatt: Sprachrohr der demokratischen Deutschen und der deutsch-jüdischen Emigration (Münster: Lit, 1996).

³²³ Anne Saint Sauveur-Henn, "Problemas específicos de la integración: los colonos judío-alemanes en la Argentina 1933-1945," Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 49–64.

³²⁴ Stricker, Die Verbreitung des deutschen Volkes über die Erde, 40 ff.

³²⁵ See for example ibid., 48, 66.

and 1770.³²⁶ The Russian government provided every colony with a church and a school, and every individual with land, a house, a cow, a horse, and agricultural tools. Wheat and tobacco were the main crops they produced. In 1824, there were 73 Protestant colonies with clergy from Switzerland, Germany (in particular Prussia and Saxony), Holland, the Baltic provinces, Finland, and Saratov (the Russian province they were located in); the 29(?) Catholic colonies had Jesuit priests. The Germans at the Black Sea – mostly Swabians (Schwaben) – were invited to settle near Odessa around 1810.³²⁷ These colonies had about 25,000 inhabitants.

In Argentina, much has been written about the Russian-Germans – or Volga-Germans, as they have often been called – both by contemporary German-speakers and scholars in Argentina, but they published little themselves. In Argentina, Russian-Germans developed their own group identity; the community is still strong today.³²⁸ In 2003, they organized a second congress of descendants of Volga-Germans.³²⁹ Victor Popp and Nicolas Dening put emphasis on their ³²⁶ Ibid., 66 ff.

³²⁷ Ibid., 71 ff.

³²⁸ Héctor Maier Schwerdt and Vicente Schwab, eds., Nuestras colonias y nuestra gente: compendio histórico-cultural de los Alemanes del Volga = Unsere Kolonien und unsere Leute (Coronel Suarez: Ediciones Nuestras Colonias, 2001); Alemanes del Volga 1878-2003: ein treues Volk; 2. Congreso Argentino de descendientes de Alemanes de Rusia (Buenos Aires: o.Verl., 2004).

³²⁹ Alemanes del volga 1878-2003.

voyage from Russia via Europe to South America.³³⁰ Iris Graefe studied the Volga-Germans in Argentina as their own people (Volk),³³¹ Lydia Klötzel analyzed them as a national minority within the Argentine state,³³² and Yolanda Hipperdinger studied the development of their language in Argentina.³³³ Eric Schmuker analyzed their sacred spaces and practices of sacralization in the Argentinean Pampa.³³⁴ Most Russian-Germans came to Argentina for agricultural colonization. They had been agricultural colonists in Russia and made the decision to leave Russia at the end of the nineteenth century. Many went to the U.S. and Canada, others to Brazil and Argentina. The Protestant pastor Jakob Riffel (*1893 Blumenfeld, Samara, Russia – 1958, Argentina) was an activist for the German-Russian cause in Argentina and he wrote an anniversary publication for Volga-German presence in the La Plata states in 1928.³³⁵ He was a controversial figure in Argentina, who stood up for the Volga-Germans but was ³³⁰ Victor P. Popp and Nicolas Dening, Los alemanes del Volga: tras largo peregrinar por Europa hallaron patria definitiva en América (Buenos Aires: o. V., 1977).

³³¹ Iris Graefe, Zur Volkskunde der Russlanddeutschen in Argentinien (Wien: Schendl, 1971).

³³² Lydia Klötzel, Die Russlanddeutschen zwischen Autonomie und Auswanderung: Die Geschichte einer nationalen Minderheit vor dem Hintergrund des wechselhaften deutsch-sowjetischen/russischen Verhältnisses (Münster: LIT Verlag, 1999).

³³³ Yolanda Hipperdinger, Die Sprache(n) der Wolgadeutschen in Argentinien: die Kolonisierung des Bezirks Coronel Suarez, trans. Max Doppelbauer (Wien: Edition Praesens, 2005).

³³⁴ Eric Morales Schmuker, "El lugar de la religión. Espacios sagrados y prácticas de sacralización de los alemanes de Rusia en la Pampa Central. Colonia Santa María, 1908-1939," Secuencia: Revista de historia y ciencias sociales, no. 90 (2014): 123.

³³⁵ Jakob Riffel, Die Rußlanddeutschen insbesondere die Wolgadeutschen am La Plata (Argentinien, Uruguay und Paraguay) -- Festschrift zum 50-jährigen Jubiläum ihrer Einwanderung (Est. Lucas Conzalez, Entre Rios: Selbstverl. d. Verf., 1928).

(secretly?) accused by German officials of artificially maintaining a Russian connection instead of merely fostering ties to Germany.³³⁶

Some Russian-Germans also went to Namibia, but they did not create a separate group identity there. Carl Hugo Hahn (*1818 Riga, Russia – 1895 Cape Town, South Africa) came from such an elite urban family, but the designation “Russian-German” only gained wider prominence towards the end of his lifetime. I have not encountered this term with regards to him. While the missionary literature mentions that he was born in Riga, they do not dwell on his origins and birthplace Russia. Only his wife, Emma Sarah Hone (*1814 England – 1880 Cape Town, South Africa), specifically wrote to her mother introducing her husband with, “he is Russian.”³³⁷ Emma also mentioned in her letters to family in England that their three sons were also Russian subjects.³³⁸ There were other Rhenish missionaries in Namibia that came from Russia, like Christian Baumann (*1842 Lichtenthal, Bessarabia – 1888, Okombahe, Namibia). Baumann first came to Namibia as a missionary colonist and then later became ordained as missionary. Between 1903 and 1906, Russian-born Paul Rohrbach (*1869 Irgen, Latvia – 1956 Germany) was royal commissioner in German South-West Africa. Yet no specific Russian-German identity developed in Namibia, probably due to the lack in larger numbers.³³⁹

³³⁶ Heidenreich, “Betrifft: Erlass vom 8.VI. 1929 [„Russland-Deutsche Ecke“],” July 8, 1929, EZA 5/2061.

³³⁷ Hahn, The Letters of Emma Sarah Hahn, 60.

³³⁸ Ibid., 325.

German-Russian colonists arrived in Buenos Aires in 1878.³⁴⁰ They were farmers (Ackerbauern) and mostly settled in the Argentine Pampa.³⁴¹ They focused on settling in agricultural colonies. When greater numbers of Russian-Germans wanted to leave Russia after the 1880s, authorities from the German Empire wanted to control their resettlement. Written negotiations were exchanged between German imperial representatives in Germany, Argentina, and Namibia concerning Russian-Germans in 1903.³⁴² Hans von Wangenheim from the Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft Buenos Aires wrote to the German chancellor Graf von Bülow in April of that year.³⁴³ Wangenheim was responding to a request for information about propaganda concerning Russian-Germans being invited by Russia to return after various bad harvests; but this was misinformation. Wangenheim referred to a publication by Karl Kaerger, a German working as the ³³⁹ There was, however, Volga-Germans who went to German East-Africa between 1906 and 1913, see Waldemar Schmidt, Russlanddeutsche: die Auswanderung der Russlanddeutschen nach Deutsch-Ostafrika 1906-1913, Regensburger Hefte zur Geschichte und Kultur im östlichen Europa 7 (Regensburg: Beate Herget, 2008).

³⁴⁰ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 228; See also Fritz Krome, Deutsche in Südamerika (Leipzig: Verlag Lühe & Co., 1938).

³⁴¹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 266–67.

³⁴² They will be further studied in Part III.

³⁴³ Hans von Wangenheim, “[Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft 06.04.1903. deutsch-russische Einwanderer] Hans von Wangenheim to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” April 6, 1903, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 150.

agricultural expert for the Argentinean government, who supported a positive image of colonization prospects in Argentina.³⁴⁴

In Argentina, Russian-Germans were at times regarded as being part of the German community, and at times they were fiercely rejected. In 1883, the Argentinisches Wochenblatt wrote very depreciatively about Russian-Germans: “A few years ago, great efforts were made, even financial sacrifices made, to attract German-Russians, who are deeply below the education level of the gauchos...”³⁴⁵ The article claimed that Russian-Germans were too different to fit in well with the rest of Argentine society and were not a desirable group of migrants for Argentina. The article held the same opinion regarding Jews from Russia and Poland. Russian-Germans in South America were also discussed at the German Colonial Congress in Berlin in 1905: Bodems informed the audience that over 20,000 Russian-Germans lived in Provinces Entre Rios and Buenos Aires in mostly closed colonies.³⁴⁶ Volga-Germans had a difficult position of in the larger German-speaking community in Buenos Aires: they were considered as “being strange.”³⁴⁷ In 1907, Neubaur claimed that Russian-German farmers (Bauern) in ³⁴⁴ Karl Kaerger, Landwirtschaft und Kolonisation im Spanischen Amerika. Erster Band. Die La Plata-Staaten (Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1901).

³⁴⁵ “Assimilation,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 13, 1883, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

³⁴⁶ P. Bodems, “Die Deutsch-Russen in Südamerika,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906), 740–53.

³⁴⁷ “Unsere ‘Russen,’” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 18, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Argentina could not be counted as members of German-ness (Deutschtum) because they lacked the spiritual link to Germany.³⁴⁸ They were accused of considering Russia as their patria (Vaterland) rather than Germany.³⁴⁹ In 1929, the closure of the Russian-German newspaper was discussed. Representing the German La Plata Synod, Heidenreich wrote in 1929, “Russian-Germans are curiously timeless, history-less people. They love the Argentinean soil just as deeply as their fathers loved the Russian one. And their ‘Heimat’ (home) has always been Germany, often our German-Protestant church.”³⁵⁰ Then again, Lütge et al. claimed the Russian-Germans to be Germans and praised their contributions to the German-Argentinean community and to Argentine society at large.³⁵¹ However, Karl Ilg argues that the Volga-Germans and Black-Sea-Germans keep their distance from the Deutschländer (Germans from Germany) in Argentina.³⁵²

The question the German government authorities were asking themselves and that they were asked by Russian-Germans was: should members of this group be (re-)settled in Argentina or in Namibia? In 1903, Otto Peust from Paraná,

³⁴⁸ Paul August Ferdinand Neubaur, Der Norddeutsche Lloyd, 50 Jahre der Entwicklung, 1857-1907 (Leipzig: Fr. Wilh. Grunow, 1907), 182“Noch heute deutsche in ihrer Erscheinung, ihrer Sprache und ihren Lebensgewohnheiten, können sie doch kaum noch als Vertreter des Deutschtums bezeichnet werden, da ihnen jede geistige Gemeinschaft mit dem deutschen Vaterlande verloren gegangen ist.”

³⁴⁹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 230.

³⁵⁰ Heidenreich, “Betrifft: Erlass vom 8.VI. 1929 [„Russland-Deutsche Ecke“].” ³⁵¹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 223.

³⁵² Karl Ilg, Das Deutschtum in Chile und Argentinien (Wien: Österreichische Landsmannschaft, 1982), 77.

Argentina inquired with the German consulate in Buenos Aires about the possibility of resettling German-Russians in an official German colony.³⁵³ His request was sent to the German chancellor von Bülow in Berlin. The chancellor's staff member Stübel noted that it was curious the Russian-Germans wanted to leave South America and go to Africa instead,³⁵⁴ but he answered the German consul of Buenos Aires that in Africa, the colony they considered as being the best for settling Europeans was Namibia.³⁵⁵ He also said that while the German government could pay for the trip from South America to Africa, the settlers would have to have the necessary means to provide for themselves upon arrival, and he questioned whether these Russian-Germans would be able to do so. This financial question may have been a way to deter Russian-Germans from migration to an official colony that was supposed to be composed of "real Germans." Regardless, Stübel did forward the question to the Imperial Governor in Windhoek.³⁵⁶ In 1905, Julius von Waldthausen wrote the German chancellor von

³⁵³ von Sanden, "[Otto Peust aus Paraná: „etwaige Ansiedlung deutsch-russischer Kolonisten in den afrikanischen Kolonien des Deutschen Reiches um Auskunft bittet] Von Sanden to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow," December 4, 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 38.

³⁵⁴ Stübel, "[Otto Peust aus Paraná...]," February 9, 1904, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 38.

³⁵⁵ Der Reichskanzler. Im Auftrage. gez. Stübel, "[Otto Peust aus Paraná...] Reichskanzler to von Sanden," February 29, 1904, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 40.

³⁵⁶ Stübel, "[Otto Peust aus Paraná...] Stübel to Kaiserlicher Gouverneur in Windhuk," February 29, 1904, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 40.

Bülow that he thought encouraging Russian-Germans' migration to Argentina would only strengthen German-ness in Argentina and should thus be favored.³⁵⁷

The shipping company Norddeutscher Lloyd was employed in the settling of Russian-Germans in Argentina. In July 1905, the Norddeutscher Lloyd informed the Imperial Foreign Office about their plan to acquire land in the southern part of Argentina in order to settle Russian-Germans there that were unhappy in Brazil.³⁵⁸ In the letter, the company stated that the Argentine government would grant the land if the German government would grant confidential support for the endeavor. In a letter from Julius Föhr to the Norddeutscher Lloyd from October 1905, the desired settlement area was located in the Rio Negro (where the rivers Neuquen and Limay meet); Föhr acknowledged that Norddeutscher Lloyd could not function as a "concession society" itself, but wanted to found a new concession society with prominent (German-)Argentinean business members, such as Tornquist.³⁵⁹ On 8 November 1905, the Norddeutscher Lloyd reported to Mr. Goetsch in Berlin that [Ernesto] Tornquist had agreed to buy land and offer it for German settlement, administered by Nordeutscher Lloyd.³⁶⁰ The German Consulate Buenos Aires, meanwhile, did not see its role as that of a mediator between Russian-Germans and the Argentine state, though consul von Sanden did underline that the settling of Russian-Germans would strengthen the German-ness (Deutschtum) of Argentina.³⁶¹

³⁵⁷ Julius von Waldthausen, "[Btr. Deutsch-russische Bauern nach Argentinien] [Stärkung des Deutschtums] Deutsche Gesandtschaft bei den LaPlata Staaten to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow," February 22, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 20.

³⁵⁸ "Norddeutscher Lloyd to Kaiserlich Auswärtiges Amt," July 13, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 78-79.

³⁵⁹ Julius Föhr, "Julius Föhr to Norddeutscher Lloyd Bremen," October 3, 1905, BArch R 901/30417, pag. 51-60.

Meanwhile, Hermann Schroff wrote in June 1905 that Russian-Germans from Bessarabia were ready to be sent to an area that suited German interests.³⁶² He provided information on Gerhardt, the governor of Bessarabia, who was a Reichsdeutscher (citizen of the German Empire). Schroff claimed that Russian-Germans were the ideal “colonist material” as they were “land-hungry.” In December 1905, K. Gerhardt from Bessarabia requested information for the migration of five thousand Russian-German families to Argentina.³⁶³ He explained the most important points the potential migrants required from the Argentinean government: they wanted to be able to settle in a group and not be separated, they wanted to have their own school and church and a German language translator at court, and to be exempted from military service. In February 1906 then, Hacke from the La Plata embassy reported to the German chancellor von Bülow in Berlin about the changed plans of the Norddeutscher ³⁶⁰ “Direktion des Norddeutschen Lloyd, Bremen to Wirklicher Geheimer Legationsrat im Auswärtigen Amt Herr Goetsch, Berlin,” November 8, 1905, BArch R 901/30417, pag. 45-46.

³⁶¹ von Sanden, “Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires, Von Sanden to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” February 20, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 21.

³⁶² Hermann Schroff, “Hermann Schroff to Direktor,” June 22, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 80-90.

³⁶³ K. K. Gerhardt, “K. K. Gerhard, Gouv. Bessarabien, Kreis Akkermann, Südrußland to Kaiserlich Deutsches Konsulat Buenos Aires,” December 13, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 22.

Lloyd: how they originally planned to found a German colonization society and acquire land in the Buenos Aires province, but then adjusted their plans to the circumstances: they then wanted to settle Russian-Germans, alongside Swiss-Germans and Reich-Germans, on government land in the Rio Negro area.³⁶⁴ Two representatives of the Lloyd then travelled to the area in question, which they considered not suitable for their project. Further south, by the lake Nahuel Huapi, they did find land with good soil for agriculture, but they claimed that the missing connections hindered an immediate start of the German large-scale colonization project. Meanwhile Lloyd authorities had turned away from dealing with the Argentinean government and wanted to get land from Tornquist, who in turn refused then to offer them the land, claiming he was too busy. He referred to other land possibilities. Meanwhile, the first settlers already arrived with Lloyd ships and were accommodated by the Colonización Stroeder and Argentinean immigration authorities. In his letter to the chancellor, Hacke asked to be dispensed from having to answer inquiries on the Lloyd project until matters were resolved and they actually had bought land.

In September 1906, von Sanden described different types of colonization in the Argentinean interior. After the Jewish type with the Jewish Colonization Society, he described the Russian-Germans in Entre Rios. According to him, the latter bought their land from private entrepreneurs with an installment plan.³⁶⁵ They were assiduous workers and desired to be incorporated into the Argentinean “German-ness” (Deutschtum). He quoted them as saying that they wanted to be “put under German protection.”

³⁶⁴ Hacke, "Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft bei den La Plata Staaten to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow," February 2, 1906, BArch R 901/30417, pag. 148-151.

2.2.3 Dutch, Boer, and Belgian

German-speakers had a close, changing, and contested relationship with the Dutch, Boers, and Belgians on both sides of the South Atlantic, which reflected their close proximity on the European continent as well. After the Congress of Vienna, the United Kingdom of the Netherlands existed briefly from 1815 to 1839. Belgium split off in 1830, but their secession was only recognized by the Netherlands in 1839. Until Belgian secession, the names “Netherlands” and “Belgium” were used interchangeably for the region: Netherlands was used in Flemish/Dutch and “La Belgique” was used in French for the same territory. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, workers of the Dutch East India Company settled at the Cape of Good Hope in South Africa. They were of Dutch, German, and French Huguenot origin. They spoke Dutch and received the name “Boers” [Buren], which was derived from the Dutch word for farmer. The Dutch were considered to be niederdeutsch (Low-German). In the early days, some

³⁶⁵ Sanden, “Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat, Buenos Aires an Reichskanzler, Fürsten von Bülow [Ein Stroeder’sches Eisenbahnprojekt in Entrerios].”

German-speakers in Buenos Aires were appointed as consuls for the Netherlands, like Carlos Augusto Bunge (*1804 Remscheid – 1849 Buenos Aires) in 1827.³⁶⁶ Even in 1876, the Dutch consulate made an announcement in Argentina's German-language newspaper (Deutsche La Plata Zeitung).³⁶⁷ In 1901, the Argentinisches Tageblatt wrote that the German school association (Deutscher Schulverband) included all tribes/groups (Stämme) of the German tongue (deutscher Zunge) including Swiss, Austrian, Dutch, and more.³⁶⁸ But by 1900, it seems that Boers in Argentina were not included in the German-speaking community. In 1907, the Argentinisches Tageblatt advertised a "Transvaal hotel and restaurant,"³⁶⁹ and German-speakers wrote of the settlement of Boers in the Chubut region in Southern Argentina in 1902, with no indication that they shared a common identity with the writers.³⁷⁰

Nevertheless, the story of the Boers is closely intertwined with South Atlantic German-speakers in various ways: The conflict between Boers and English colonials in South Africa around 1900 caused anxiety and tightened the Anglo-German conflict, raising fears among the British that the German Empire

³⁶⁶ Jorge Navarro Viola, El Club de Residentes Extranjeros: 1841-1941 (Buenos Aires: Coni, 1941), 121.

³⁶⁷ "Consulat der Niederlande. Herr A. J. Musquetier oder derjenige, der über seinen Aufenthalt Auskunft geben kann ...," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 30, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

³⁶⁸ "Eine musterhafte Berichterstattung," Argentinisches Tageblatt, June 6, 1901, EZA 5/2061, p. 303.

³⁶⁹ C. J. Boezaart, "The Transvaal Hotel und Restaurant," Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 30, 1907, sec. advertisements, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

³⁷⁰ "Die Chubut-Kolonisten," Deutsche Nachrichten, May 19, 1902, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 48.

would support the Boers.³⁷¹ As a consequence of the Boer wars, many Boers decided to migrate. Consequently, Boers in the South Atlantic have their own entangled history, as many chose to migrate from Transvaal to Argentina as a consequence of the Boer wars. Brian du Toit has published a study of the Colonia Boer in Chubut, Argentina in 1995, arguing that Boers gradually lost their “Boerness” and integrated into Argentinean society completely after only a few generations.³⁷²

In December 1902, the New Settlement Society for Southwest Africa (Neue Südwestafrikanische Siedlungsgesellschaft) was founded in Berlin specifically with the aim to help Boer settlers to remain in South-West Africa after the Boer war.³⁷³ Throughout the nineteenth century, Boers were already moving across the territory of Namibia. In November 1879, Rhenish missionary Johann Georg Schröder described the settlement of Rietfontein: “Several farmer families [Bauernfamilien] used to live in Rietfontein, that had settled there provisionally. But when we arrived there, they had already left and returned to their previous home (Transvaal). [...] Some of their houses were still standing; they were inhabited by three English traders with their families that showed us much kindness.”³⁷⁴ In 1896, Joachim Graf Pfeil published a critical study on the

³⁷¹ See Dederling, “The Ferreira Raid of 1906.”

³⁷² Du Toit, Colonia Boer.

³⁷³ “Aufrufl,” December 12, 1902, BArch R 1001/1700, pag. 12.

³⁷⁴ Johann Georg Schröder, “[Rietfontein],” November 20, 1879, RMG 2.591, Bl. 15.

“Boer question in Southwest Africa.” He articulated the fear of the German government and conservative circles that the Boer migrants would conquer the German protectorate and create a Boer state within the colony. Pfeil also listed the arguments of the opponents of Boers settlement in South-West Africa: that they were inferior human beings and on a lower level of civilization, and thus not useful “colonist material” for the German colony; the Boer land management practices were wasteful and inefficient as they used too much land for too few animals; their exclusive trade with the cape colony would be detrimental for German trade; the Boers were still in favor of slavery and they would mistreat the indigenous population; and the Boers coming to South-West Africa were all poor and would greatly increase the proletariat of the German protectorate.³⁷⁵ Pfeil countered all these arguments in his essay, and concluded that Boers would be good settlers and useful for the German protectorate.

In 1899, the newspaper Windhoeker Anzeiger published several articles about the Boer question: while most Boers that had entered the German protectorate South-West Africa had come to the territory of the South-West Africa Company, many had already left South-West Africa within the last year (1898); but the article praised the good characteristics of the Boers and their knowledge of the country as a precondition for being good colonists.³⁷⁶ The article “Boers as Settlers” also argued that Boers should be welcomed as settlers in South-West Africa as they were already familiar with the country and they could become a connector [Bindeglied] between the South-West Africa Germans and Cape Colony Boers.³⁷⁷ Dr. Sander acknowledged that many Germans in Germany had an ambivalent view of the Boers – they were on their side in the fight against the British – but Germans’ love for them did not reach as far as to wanting them settle in South-West Africa.³⁷⁸ However, Sander claimed that Boers were needed in order to settle South-West Africa with whites.³⁷⁹ His article was published in the journal for colonial policy, which was a fervent advocate for Boer settlement in South-West Africa.

³⁷⁵ Joachim Graf Pfeil, “Die Boerenfrage in Südwestafrika,” ed. Gustav Meinecke, Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Achter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1895 8 (1896): 133–47.

In May 1902, a German-language newspaper from Valparaiso, Chile reported on Boer settlers in Chubut, Argentina, claiming that they were replacing the Welsh settlers in Patagonia.³⁸⁰ In 1905, the Afrikaner colony or “Colonia Boer” was administered by the Argentinean State through the Ministry of ³⁷⁶ “Rückblicke und Aussichten,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 5, 1899, NAN.

³⁷⁷ “Buren als Ansiedler,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, February 16, 1899, NAN.

³⁷⁸ I have not been able to find clear evidence if this Dr. Sander is the same as Ludwig Sander from the German Colonial Society for South-West Africa.

³⁷⁹ Dr. Sander, “Sollen wir Buren in Südwestafrika zur Ansiedelung zulassen oder nicht?,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 610–37.

³⁸⁰ “Die Chubut-Kolonisten.”

Agriculture.³⁸¹ In April 1907, the Ministry of Agriculture confirmed the administrator for this colony.³⁸² As of February 1908, the Ministry of Agriculture still administered the Boer families settled in Chubut,³⁸³ and that April, the Ministry of Agriculture regulated the position of Administrator of the land occupied by families from South Africa.³⁸⁴

There was temporary enthusiasm for Boers in the German Empire. German-speakers in Namibia as well as German media in the Kaiserreich discussed whether Boers were good “colonist material” (Kolonistenmaterial) and potential settlers for the German protectorate South-West Africa. In Namibia, Boers and the Dutch language (or Afrikaans, as the South African version was later called) were part of everyday life: Boers married at the German Protestant church in Windhoek,³⁸⁵ Boer children went to German schools, and in 1899, the South-West Africa colonial authorities even set up a school in Windhoek for farm children who otherwise could not attend school because their homes were located

³⁸¹ [Manuel] Quintana and D[amián] M[anue] Torino, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 20 diciembre 1905],” December 20, 1905, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 5300 del año 1905].

³⁸² [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Ezequiel Ramos Mexia, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 6 abril 1907],” April 6, 1907, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1236 T del año 1907].

³⁸³ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 21 febrero 1908],” February 21, 1908, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 692 T del año 1908].

³⁸⁴ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 7 abril 1908],” April 7, 1908, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1727 T del año 1908].

³⁸⁵ Richter, “Aufgebot,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, February 2, 1899, NAN; Richter, “Aufgebot,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, March 2, 1899, NAN.

too far away, specifically targeting Boers.³⁸⁶ In 1908, Drs. Kapler and Duske from the Protestant diaspora association Gustav-Adolf-Verein claimed that the Boers settled around Grootfontein were rather anti-German, but if the Protestants acted fast and founded a Protestant congregation in Grootfontein, the Boers could be tied to and made useful for the German community and would refrain from getting their own preacher from the Cape Colony.³⁸⁷ Therefore, the German protestant preacher employed and commissioned by the Evangelischer Zentralrat should also be Dutch-speaking to be able to reach and “Germanize” the Boer settlers.

Former South-West Africa governor Theodor von Leutwein claimed in 1907 that it was not advisable to settle too many Boers in the protectorate, but that individual Boers were good teachers for German settlers.³⁸⁸ Leutwein stated that there had been two attempts to settle Boers in South-West Africa: in 1895-96 by the South West Africa Company in the area of Grootfontein, and then around 1900 by the proper South-West Africa government with refugees from Transvaal.³⁸⁹ Leutwein also claimed that one quarter of the white population of ³⁸⁶ Otto, “Schul-Pensionat zu Windhoek (Namentlich auch für Burenkinder),” Windhoeker Anzeiger, December 21, 1899, NAN.

³⁸⁷ Dr. Kapler and Dr. Duske, “Aktentnotiz [13. Juni 1908],” June 13, 1908, EZA 5/2916.

³⁸⁸ Theodor Gotthilf von Leutwein, “Die wirtschaftliche Erschließung des Schutzgebietes,” in Elf Jahre Gouverneur in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, Second Edition (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1907), 414.

³⁸⁹ Ibid., 415.

South-West Africa in 1907 were Boers.³⁹⁰ Some German-speakers, including Wilhelm Vallentin and Bernhard Voigt, claimed them as being part of the “German race.” Vallentin was called Boerkaptain in Argentina in 1907; he had fought in the Boer war in South Africa before travelling extensively in Southern Argentina.³⁹¹ Bernhard Voigt was a writer who had spent time living in Namibia.³⁹²

A few historians have studied Belgian involvement in Argentina.³⁹³ In 1998, an edited volume supported by the respective embassies in Argentina and Belgium set out to study the relations between Belgium and Argentina, highlighting the long and multi-faceted relationship between the two countries.³⁹⁴ Argentina’s economic and financial relations with Belgium were very important. Belgium had banks there before the German empire did. German merchants in Argentina used Belgian connections in Europe. It was particularly the Bunge and Born family that took advantage of the changing political alignment of Belgium.

³⁹⁰ Ibid., 417.

³⁹¹ “Zur germanischen Grosskolonisation in Argentinien,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, July 1, 1907, BArch R 901/30420, pag. 95.

³⁹² Bernhard Voigt, Die Buren. Südafrikanisches Grenzerbuch (Berlin: Parey, 1929).

³⁹³ Johan Verberckmoes, “Flamencos en el Río de la Plata, siglos XVI-XVIII,” in En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, ed. Bart De Groof et al. (Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998), 37–47; Kristine Vanden Berghe, “Argentina en la comunidad literaria flamenca. Algunos datos,” in En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, ed. Bart De Groof et al. (Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998), 205–7

³⁹⁴ Bart De Groof et al., eds., En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX (Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998).

The family was originally from the Rhineland and then moved to the Netherlands and then Belgium. Ernesto Anton Bunge (*1846 Amsterdam, Netherlands – 1933 Gante, Belgium) moved to Buenos Aires in 1876, and founded “Ernesto Bunge y Jorge Born S.A.”³⁹⁵ together with his brother-in-law Jorge, in 1884. His father, Carl Gustaf Bunge (*1811 Amsterdam, Netherlands – 1884 Amberes, Netherlands), had moved Bunge & Co. to Antwerp in 1859, which became Anvers as part of Belgium. Carl Gustaf’s father, Johann Peter Gottlieb Bunge (*1781 Remscheid – 1865 Haarlem, Netherlands), had founded Bunge & Co. to trade grain in Amsterdam in 1818. Johann Peter Gottlieb was a brother of Johann Karl Friedrich Bunge (*1779 – 1858), whose son Carlos Augusto Bunge [Carl August Bunge Rauschenbusch] (*1804 Remscheid, NRW – 1849 Buenos Aires) would move to Buenos Aires, marry María Genara Peña Lezica (*1809 Buenos Aires – 1857 Buenos Aires) in 1834, and found the famous Bunge dynasty in Argentina.

The Argentinean Legation in Belgium (Legación en Bélgica) (1860 – 1903) was responsible for the German states before Argentina had a consulate in Berlin.³⁹⁶ In 1889, the newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt had two agents in ³⁹⁵ Jorge Schvarzer, Bunge & Born: crecimiento y diversificación de un grupo económico (Buenos Aires Argentina: CISEA; Grupo Editor Latinoamericano; distribuidor exclusivo Emecé Editores, 1989), 6.

³⁹⁶ MREC: Argentina. Archivo General del Ministerio de Relaciones Exteriores y Culto

Europe: one for Switzerland in Bern and one responsible for Belgium, Germany, and Austria in Antwerp.³⁹⁷

2.2.4 Austrian

A small number of Austrians went to Argentina and Namibia. For example, Leopold Schnabl (*1846 Pohrlitz, Moravia (Pohorelice, Czech Republic) – 1890 Gleichenberg (Bad Gleichenberg, Styria))³⁹⁸ was a optometrist and ophthalmologist who moved to Argentina in 1877 where he opened an Eye Institute (Instituto Óptico Occulisto); he returned to the Austro-Hungarian Empire in 1882 as consul of the Argentine Republic. Francisco Latzina (*1845 Brüm, Moravia – 1922 Buenos Aires)³⁹⁹ was a geographer, soldier, writer, and mathematician who worked as geographer and statistician for the Argentine state from 1871 onwards. Baron Eduardo de Holmberg (*1778 Austria – 1853 Buenos Aires) was the grandfather of the famous German-Argentinean botanist Eduardo Ladislao Holmberg. Jovita Epp (Leonor Hary-Epp) (*1909, Südtirol – ?), a writer, married an estanciero of French descent, Ernesto Carlos Hary, in 1931.⁴⁰⁰

³⁹⁷ “Agenten des Argentinischen Wochen- & Tageblattes.”

³⁹⁸ “Schnabl, Leopold,” in Österreichisches Biographisches Lexikon und biographische Dokumentation (Wien: Verlag der Österreichischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, 2003), 355–56, http://www.biographien.ac.at/oebL/oebL_S/Schnabl_Leopold_1846_1890.xml.

³⁹⁹ “Latzina, Francisco,” in Österreichisches Biographisches Lexikon und biographische Dokumentation (Wien: Verlag der Österreichischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, 2003), http://www.biographien.ac.at/oebL/oebL_L/Latzina_Francisco_1845_1922.xml.

⁴⁰⁰ <https://www.munzinger.de/search/portrait/Jovita+Epp/0/9330.html>

Johannes Rath (*1816 Vienna – 1903 Kuils Rier, Cape Colony, South Africa) was a Rhenish missionary in Namibia.

The Austrian Empire existed from 1804 to 1867. The German-speaking parts of the empire were part of the German Federation (Deutscher Bund). After the German Revolution of 1848, two state models were debated: a Greater Germany (großdeutsche Lösung) or Lesser Germany (kleindeutsche Lösung) – a united German nation-state with or without Austria. From 1867 to 1918, the Austro-Hungarian Empire was a multi-ethnic empire where German-speakers considered and labeled themselves as German (deutsch). William Johnston has claimed that before WWI, there was never a discussion about Austrian identity within “Austria.”⁴⁰¹ He claimed that a discussion about “Austrian-ness” only started shortly before 1914 and that before, it was assumed that German-Austrians belonged to German-ness (Deutschtum) and did not need their own, distinct identity.⁴⁰²

Together with the “proper” Germans and the Swiss-Germans, the Austrians constitute an “obvious” or expected category of German-speakers. With the existence of a state in Central Europe that has German as official language, their connection to German culture has been maintained until the present day and their state has been an advocate for Austrian citizens and their descendants in the South Atlantic.

⁴⁰¹ William Johnston, Der österreichische Mensch: Kulturgeschichte der Eigenart Österreichs (Wien: Böhlau, 2010).

⁴⁰² Ibid., 24 f.

Most histories of the “Austrian colony” in Buenos Aires focus on the post-WWI period. In 1992, Edith Blaschnitz examined the “Austrian colony” of Buenos Aires between the world wars with an emphasis on Austrian Jews.⁴⁰³ Holger Meding⁴⁰⁴ and Philip Mettauer⁴⁰⁵ have also studied Austrian refugees in Argentina. But Austrians were present in Argentina much earlier, and the term circulated in Buenos Aires long before the establishment of the Austrian Republic in 1918. German schools in Argentina listed “Austrian” as an independent category in their internal censuses. In 1888, Heinrich Hirsch published a work on overseas colonization by Austro-Hungary.⁴⁰⁶ In 1907, Friedrich Hey published an article in the journal of the Association of Austrian farmers on Austrian migration to Argentina where he identified Argentina as the best migration destination.⁴⁰⁷

“Austrian” or “Austro-Hungarian” were categories commonly used in Argentina throughout the nineteenth century. Austrians had their own political ⁴⁰³ Edith Blaschnitz, “Auswanderer, Emigranten, Exilanten – die österreichische Kolonie in Buenos Aires. Von den Anfängen bis zum Ende des Zweiten Weltkrieges, unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Jahre 1918 – 1945” (Diplom, Universität Wien, 1992).

⁴⁰⁴ Meding, Flucht vor Nürnberg?

⁴⁰⁵ Mettauer, Erzwungene Emigration nach Argentinien.

⁴⁰⁶ Heinrich Hirsch, Überseeische Kolonisation durch Österreich-Ungarn: Mit handelsstatistischen und handelsgeographischen Anhängen (Wien und Olmütz: Eduard Hölzel, 1888).

⁴⁰⁷ Friedrich Hey, “Argentinien und die österreichische Auswanderung,” in Zeitschrift für Volkswirtschaft, Sozialpolitik und Verwaltung: Organ der Gesellschaft österreichischer Volkswirte, ed. Eugen von Böhm-Bawerk et al., 17 (Wien; Leipzig: Wilhelm Braumüller, 1907), 359–65.

representative in Buenos Aires in the form of a consul.⁴⁰⁸ The migration propaganda publications published in German often specifically also addressed Austrian citizens.⁴⁰⁹ However, Austrians did not publish their own newspaper in the South Atlantic. In Argentina, they used both the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung and the Argentinisches Tageblatt to advertise their numerous stores and associations. Several Austrian associations in Argentina were very active: the Austro-Hungarian Club (founded in 1906),⁴¹⁰ the Austro-Hungarian Sociability Club,⁴¹¹ and a “German and Austrian Singing Academy.”⁴¹² In February 1907, the Austro-Hungarian Sociability Club invited readers of the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung to a “Farmers Ball.”⁴¹³ In 1880, an announcement was made that the “Bazar de Austria” had to be closed after two years of business.⁴¹⁴

⁴⁰⁸ “Reform des Consulatswesens,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 20, 1883, sec. coverage, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁰⁹ See, for example, Otto Preusse-Sperber, Wegweiser für Argentinien zur Orientierung der Auswanderer und Kapitalisten (Buenos Aires: Herpig & Stoeveken, 1897).

⁴¹⁰ “Oesterreich-Ungar. Club, gegründet Januar 1906,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 25, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴¹¹ “Oesterreich-Ungarischer Geselligkeits-Verein,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Vereins-Anzeigen, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴¹² “Deutsche und Oesterreichische Singakademie,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴¹³ “Oesterreich-Ungarischer Geselligkeitsverein. [...] II. Bauern-Ball,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 24, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴¹⁴ Teodoro Hegenbarth, “P. P. Dem deutschen u. außerdeutschen Publikum zur gefälligen Notiznahme, daß mit 1. Jan. 1880 das seit Mai 1878 in der Florida 136 versuchsweise eröffnete Detailhaus BAZAR DE AUSTRIA eingeht,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1880, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

In advertisements, however, the reference was usually Vienna instead of Austria. There were advertisements for Viennese furniture in the DLPZ⁴¹⁵ and the AT,⁴¹⁶ for a Viennese laundry⁴¹⁷ in Belgrano, and for a Viennese boot maker.⁴¹⁸ Likewise there were two Viennese bakeries that, in 1916, advertised their names in Spanish: “Panaderia la Viena”⁴¹⁹ and “Panaderia de Viena.”⁴²⁰ A certain Fritz Kühner ran a hotel called City of Vienna in 1916.⁴²¹ In job ads, people used both Austrian and Viennese to describe themselves. There are examples of gardeners,⁴²² a housekeeper,⁴²³ a midwife,⁴²⁴ and a married couple using both ⁴¹⁵ “Augusto Baltar. Auktion von Möbeln u. Wiener Artikeln ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 3, 1877.

⁴¹⁶ Baratti, “Die besten Wiener Möbel,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 30, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴¹⁷ “Wiener Wäscherei und Neuplättere, Belgrano,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴¹⁸ V. Zacek, “Wiener Massschuhmacherei,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴¹⁹ A. Gomez, “Panaderia la Viena,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴²⁰ Koldewey y Neuwirth, “Panaderia de Viena,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴²¹ Fritz Kühner, “Hotel ‘Stadt Wien,’” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴²² Josef Sikora, “Gelernter Gärtner, Oesterreicher, tüchtiger Arbeiter sucht baldige Stellung,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Stellengesuche, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴²³ “Junge deutsche Frau, Wienerin, sucht Stelle; kann sehr gut nähen, zu 1-2 Kindern oder Stubenmädchen, kann auch kochen,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Stellengesuche, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴²⁴ Janssen, “Hebamme (Oesterreicherin), staatlich geprüft, praktisch erfahren, empfiehlt sich der deutschen Kolonie ...”

terms while looking for employment.⁴²⁵ In 1877, the German-language newspaper DLPZ (which was called Die Heimath at the time), published a correction of an article in the Argentinean newspaper El porteño, which had been signed with “an Austrian.” The German paper stated that the author first claimed to be Austrian, then Belgian, but turned out to have been Prussian, and it wanted to ensure that this deception would not create a bad reputation for Germans or Austrians in Argentina.⁴²⁶

German-language newspapers in Argentina frequently reported on events in Austria, often on a daily basis. In 1866, German-speakers in Buenos Aires read about the conflict between France, Prussia, and Austria, where Austria was eventually defeated by Prussia at the battle of Königgrätz.⁴²⁷ In 1878, the newspaper DLPZ published an article with a pessimistic outlook on Austria’s future – it claimed to foresee an imminent end of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.⁴²⁸ Two days after the death of Empress Elisabeth of Austria, in September 1898, the AT published a long article about her life.⁴²⁹ A few months later, the AT published an article about the fiftieth anniversary of the reign of ⁴²⁵ “Junges deutsches Ehepaar bittet irgend eine Stelle hier oder auswärts. off. unter ‘Wiener’, Stadt Wien, 25 de Mayo 356,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Stellengesuche, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴²⁶ “Un Austriaco,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, July 25, 1877, sec. Tages-Chronik.

⁴²⁷ “Frankreich, Preußen und Oesterreich,” Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, January 18, 1866.

⁴²⁸ “Der Untergang Oesterreichs II.,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, March 21, 1878.

⁴²⁹ “Elisabeth von Oesterreich,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, September 12, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Franz Joseph I (*1848 – 1898).⁴³⁰ The DLPZ published an article on their cover page to honor emperor Franz Joseph's seventy-seventh birthday in 1907.⁴³¹ It highlighted the emperor's struggle with the nationality question in his empire. Earlier in the same year, the DLPZ had reported on the elections in the Austrian part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and the tense situation regarding the German and Czech nationalities within the empire.⁴³² The DLPZ was worrying about the future and continued existence of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.⁴³³ Also in 1907, the Argentinisches Tageblatt reported on the difficulties of trade between the Austro-Hungarian Empire and Argentina given the problems the Empire had with keeping together its two kingdoms, Austria and Hungary.⁴³⁴ The article also mentioned that the economic difficulties motivated Austro-Hungarians to migrate to Argentina. Still in the same year, Friedrich Hey published an article on Argentina and Austrian migration in the journal of the Association for Austrian Farmers where he proclaimed Argentina as the best destination for Austrian migration.⁴³⁵ An article with the same title was published in the Viennese ⁴³⁰ "Zum 50jährigen Regierungs-Jubiläum Franz Joseph I., 1848-1898," Argentinisches Tageblatt, December 2, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴³¹ "Kaiser Franz Joseph," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 18, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴³² "Die Wahlen in Oesterreich," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 11, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴³³ Gustav Wolf-Clor, "Die Zukunft Oesterreichs und Ungarns," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, September 19, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴³⁴ "Handel Argentinien mit Oesterreich-Ungarn," Argentinisches Tageblatt, September 4, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴³⁵ Hey, "Argentinien und die österreichische Auswanderung."

newspaper Neue Freie Presse in the same year.⁴³⁶ With the start of WWI, both German newspapers in Argentina followed the events in Europe, including within the Austro-Hungarian Empire, very closely.

2.2.5 Swiss-German

Numerous Swiss-Germans migrated to Argentina and were among the pioneers to settle in colonization colonies in the north at the border to Paraguay and Brazil. The Alemann family is among the most prominent examples of Swiss migrants coming to Argentina and remaining for many generations until today. Johann Allemann changed his name to Juan Alemann (*1826 Bern – 1893 Buenos Aires) once in Buenos Aires.⁴³⁷ Two of his sons, Mauricio (Moritz) Alemann (*1858 Bern – 1908 Bern) and Teodoro (Theodor) Alemann (*1862 Bern – 1925 Buenos Aires), became naturalized Argentineans and spent their lives in Argentina. Another Swiss-German family, but short-term migrants, were Carlos Beck Bernard (*1819, Switzerland – 1900), his wife Lina (*1824 Bitschwyler, Alsatia – 1888), and their children, who spent five years (1857 – 1862) in Argentina. Upon their return to Europe, Carlos served as the Argentine consul in Switzerland.⁴³⁸

⁴³⁶ “Argentinien und die österreichische Auswanderung,” Neue Freie Presse, November 13, 1907, BArch R 901/30421, pag. 74.

⁴³⁷ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 241.

⁴³⁸ “Beck-Bernard, Carl,” CERL Thesaurus: Accessing the Record of Europe’s Printed Heritage, 2010, <https://thesaurus.cerl.org/record/cnp01208297>.

José Greger was originally from Bavaria, but he became a naturalized Argentinean and actively promoted migration from Switzerland.⁴³⁹

On the other side of the South Atlantic, Hans Schinz (*1858 Zurich, Switzerland – 1941 Zurich, Switzerland) was a Swiss botanist who spent three years in Namibia (1884-1887), first as part of the exploring team for Adolf Lüderitz, then in his own terms.⁴⁴⁰ Conrad A. E. “von” Pestalozzi (*1851 Zurich – 1915), also took part in the Lüderitz expedition in 1883.⁴⁴¹ Carl Wilhelm Walser (*1856 St. Gallen – ?) with family arrived in Namibia in 1877 where he became a farmer.⁴⁴²

A history of colonialism or of colonization abroad is even less a part of today’s Swiss mindset and societal (historical) consciousness than in the case of Germany. Switzerland is not typically known for or thought of as having taken part in colonialism. However, historians like Andreas Zangger and Lukas M. Schneider have recently undertaken the endeavor to integrate Swiss history into global and connected history: Zangger has done so by studying “colonial Switzerland” and Swiss colonization in Southeast Asia, Argentina, and Brazil, but ⁴³⁹ “[J. Greger] Akten der k. b. Polizeidirektion in München,” 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 52.

⁴⁴⁰ Sandra Romer, Eine neue Heimat in Südwestafrika?: die Schweizer Auswanderung nach Namibia, 1870-1946 (Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien; Namibia Resource Center & Southern Africa Library, 2003), 111; Dag Henrichsen, ed., Hans Schinz: Bruchstücke: Forschungsreisen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, 2012), vii.

⁴⁴¹ Romer, Eine neue Heimat in Südwestafrika?, 111.

⁴⁴² Ibid., 128 ff.

not as part of the colonization projects of the Alemanns, Tornquist, and the like.⁴⁴³ Others have looked at the Swiss in Namibia and South America through the lens of migration history, but not colonialism. While Lukas M. Schneider did analyze (Swiss) colonization, he classified it as a subcategory of migration studies. He mostly studied the policies of the Swiss government with regards to Swiss colonization projects in Argentina and Brazil.⁴⁴⁴ In his analysis, Schneider focused on the Swiss only, not considering the larger German (germanisch-deutsch) discussion around the colonization projects of the Alemanns, Tornquist and the like.

Historians have dedicated studies to Swiss migrants both in Argentina and Namibia. In 1998, Oscar Berner published on the Swiss in Namibia⁴⁴⁵ and in 2003, Sandra Romer has published her study on Swiss migration to Namibia between 1870 and WWII.⁴⁴⁶ There is also an important connection between Switzerland and Namibia today: the African Research center in Basel, Switzerland currently represents an important location that funds research on Namibia. In 1996 already, Swiss historian Béatrice Ziegler distinguished between ⁴⁴³ Andreas Zangger, Koloniale Schweiz: Ein Stück Globalgeschichte zwischen Europa und Südostasien (1860-1930) (Bielefeld: transcript Verlag, 2014).

⁴⁴⁴ Lukas M. Schneider, Die Politik des Bundes gegenüber projektierten Kolonisationsunternehmen in Argentinien und Brasilien: Ein Beitrag zur organisierten Auswanderung aus der Schweiz (1880-1939), Geist und Werk der Zeiten: Arbeiten aus dem Historischen Seminar der Universität Zürich 87 (Bern: Peter Lang, 1998), 112.

⁴⁴⁵ Oskar T. Berner, Die Schweizer im ehemaligen Südwestafrika / The Swiss in the former South West Africa (Windhoek: Typoprint, Schweizer Club Namibia, 1998)

⁴⁴⁶ Romer, Eine neue Heimat in Südwestafrika?

Germans, Austrians, and Swiss leaving “Germany” for South America.⁴⁴⁷ In 1975, her and Martin Nicoulin had compiled a bibliography on Swiss people in South America for the time between 1815 and 1939, the Congress of Vienna, and the beginning of WWII.⁴⁴⁸

Switzerland was recognized (again) as an independent state at the Congress of Vienna in 1815, following the French revolution. It is and has been a multi-cultural and multi-lingual state with German, French, and Italian parts. In the South Atlantic, Swiss-Germans associated mostly with the larger “German” community. In Argentina, however, they conserved a partially separate identity. What particularly stands out is the number of leisure associations they had. The Swiss also had their own consul. The founders of one of the two big and enduring newspaper houses were of Swiss origin – the Alemann family – but they branded their newspaper as German first and Swiss only second. The Argentinisches Tageblatt – more than its rival the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung – gave space to the announcements from Swiss associations and institutions. But the DLPZ also published Swiss announcements, for example an 1876 notice for the “German-Swiss agency of Alemann & Suter.”⁴⁴⁹ The Alemanns first started with the weekly newspaper Argentinisches Wochenblatt and their aim was to have a space to discuss the situation of German-speakers in Argentina.⁴⁵⁰ For this reason, their front page prioritized Argentine news in German.

⁴⁴⁷ Béatrice Ziegler, “Auf der Suche nach Brot und Freiheit: Die Auswanderung aus Deutschland, Österreich und der Schweiz,” in Deutsche in Lateinamerika - Lateinamerika in Deutschland, ed. Karl Kohut (Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1996), 48–66.

⁴⁴⁸ Martin Nicoulin and Béatrice Ziegler, Émigration suisse en Amérique latine, 1815-1939: essai bibliographique (Zurich: Bibliothèque nationale suisse, 1975).

⁴⁴⁹ Alemann and Suter, “Deutsch-Schweizerische Agentur von Alemann & Suter,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 9, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

In 1889, the Alemann family added the daily newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt to their weekly one and the editors announced the intent of their new paper: to have the entire German colony (of Argentina) as their audience and to thank Argentina for its hospitality and repay it by being useful to the country.⁴⁵¹ “To pay back Argentina’s hospitality” – the Alemanns understood this in terms of the motto “gobemnar es poblar” (“to govern is to populate”) and they saw it as their patriotic responsibility to help increase migration to and colonization of Argentina. For this purpose, the AT also had two agents in Europe: one for Switzerland in Bern and one responsible for Belgium, Germany, and Austria in Antwerp.⁴⁵²

Swiss-Germans had several own grocery stores. Before the AT was founded, Swiss people advertised in the DLPZ (which changed names and owners several times before 1880). In 1876, one already identified itself in Spanish as “Almacén Suizo.” In 1877, it specifically advertised Swiss food items like Swiss ⁴⁵⁰ “An unsere Leser,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, July 7, 1883, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁵¹ “An unsere Leser!,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 29, 1889, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁵² “Agenten des Argentinischen Wochen- & Tageblattes.”

cheese,⁴⁵³ but also offered specialties from other German lands, like Westphalian ham.⁴⁵⁴ In 1883, the Argentinisches Wochenblatt also carried an advertisement from the Almacen Suizo.⁴⁵⁵ A number of other stores used Swiss in their name like a gun store,⁴⁵⁶ a photography studio,⁴⁵⁷ and two shoe stores.⁴⁵⁸ The Swiss pharmacy of Franz Xaver Rothlin advertised itself as such in the AT,⁴⁵⁹ the DLPZ,⁴⁶⁰ and the Spanish-language magazine Germania.⁴⁶¹ There were also several hotels and restaurants that specifically addressed a Swiss-German audience: The “Gasthof del Norte” advertised itself as particularly suited for Germans and Swiss.⁴⁶² There was also a guesthouse of “The Swiss League,”⁴⁶³ a ⁴⁵³ “Schweizer-Käse ... [...] Schweizer Almacen,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 25, 1877, sec. Tages-Chronik.

⁴⁵⁴ “Westfaelischer Schinken [...] Schweizer Almacen,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, September 15, 1877, sec. Tages-Chronik.

⁴⁵⁵ “Almacen Suizo,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, March 10, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁵⁶ G. Goth, “Schweizer Veterli- Repetir- Carabiner u. Scheiben-Stutzer,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, December 4, 1872.

⁴⁵⁷ “Schweizer Photographie,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, September 8, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁵⁸ “La Suiza,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 1, 1878; Solca, “Aux Suisses: Grosses Schuhwaaren-Geschäft,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 6, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁵⁹ Franz Xaver Rothlin, “Für Kolonisten: Die Schweizer-Apotheke,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, December 14, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁶⁰ Franz Xaver Rothlin, “‘Myrtillin’ [...] Schweizer Apotheke und Sanitäts-Geschäft von Franz Xaver Rothlin,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Franz Xaver Rothlin, “[...] Schweizer-Apotheke,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁶¹ “Farmacia Suiza de Franz Xaver Rothlin: La Botica de los Alemanes,” Germania 1, no. 7 (September 1, 1915).

⁴⁶² Juan Balzer, “Gasthof del Norte in Buenos Aires,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 17, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁶³ Juan Walter, “Gasthaus zum Schweizerbund,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 3, 1877.

Swiss (beer) hall,⁴⁶⁴ the Swiss restaurant “Wilhelm Tell,”⁴⁶⁵ the “La Swiss” restaurant,⁴⁶⁶ and the hotel and restaurant “Helvecia.”⁴⁶⁷ Few companies specifically advertised as being Swiss: one example is a Swiss watch factory;⁴⁶⁸ another is the company of C. F. Baily.⁴⁶⁹ The only announcements for Swiss banks I came across are from 1914 and 1916 for the Banco Suizo-Sudamericano. The name of the author of the 1914 announcement, Gsell, seems to be Swiss-German,⁴⁷⁰ while that of the 1916 one seems to be Swiss-Italian: Bernasconi.⁴⁷¹ Heinrich Trachsler in 1839⁴⁷² and Friedrich Jäggi-Gyger in 1875⁴⁷³ provided travel writings on Argentina particularly written from a Swiss perspective and addressed to a Swiss audience.

⁴⁶⁴ Theodor Zollinger, “Schweizer Halle,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 6, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁶⁵ “Restaurant Wilhelm Tell,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, April 4, 1885, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁶⁶ Eduardo Monti, “‘La Suiza’: Lunch- und Sandwichs-Lokal,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 4, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁶⁷ “Hotel und Restaurant ‘Helvecia’ von Albert Oberlin,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 2, 1907, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁶⁸ “Schweizer Uhren-Fabrik,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, June 15, 1877.

⁴⁶⁹ “Eine schweizerische Weltfirma, C. F. Baily, Söhne,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, December 24, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁷⁰ Guillermo Gsell, “Banco Suizo-Sudamericano,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁷¹ César Bernasconi, “Banco Suizo-Sudamericano,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 3, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁷² Trachsler, Reisen, Schicksale und tragikomische Abendteuer eines Schweizers während seines Aufenthaltes in den verschiedenen Provinzen Südamerikas, Rio de Janeiro, Ilha Santa Catharina, Armação, São Pedro do Sul, Rio Grande, Corrientes, Montevideo, Buenos-Aires etc. in den Jahren 1828 bis 1835.

⁴⁷³ Friedrich Jäggi-Gyger, Argentinische Zustände: Ein unbefangenes Urtheil, vol. 1 (Bern: B. F. Haller, 1875).

In Argentina in particular, other German-speakers attempted to attract Swiss German-speakers. The above-mentioned Alemann family as well as Carlos Beck Bernard with his wife Lina, Adolf Schuster, and José Greger took an active role in the German-speaking community. Juan Alemann described how he felt different from his fellow travelers who originated from Hamburg when he first traveled to Buenos Aires by ship, but once he was in Argentina, he associated with fellow German-speakers.⁴⁷⁴ His sons later went to Germany (the German empire) to study and Mauricio Alemann went to Berlin to participate in the German Colonial Congress and appeal for German financial aid and cooperation. The Alemann family also aimed to attract Swiss German-speakers, but they did not only focus on Swiss people. While they always ensured that the Swiss were represented in their newspaper, the Argentinisches Tageblatt, they emphasized a general German-speaking audience and belonging. Adolf Schuster, himself a Swiss-German, started his 1913 published description of Argentina with an emphasis on the Swiss community in Buenos Aires, followed by a much briefer discussion of Reichsdeutsche there.⁴⁷⁵ This section was followed by a discussion of associations, schools, and other organization, in which the author no longer distinguished between Swiss-Germans and Reichsdeutsche. “German-Argentineans,” however, had their own section of the book, where their contribution to Argentinean society was highlighted. José Greger also attracted German-speakers from Switzerland and Germany to Argentina, publishing the journal Südamerikanische Rundschau in Munich. He became naturalized Argentinean.

⁴⁷⁴ Alemann, Bilder aus der Argentinischen Republik.

⁴⁷⁵ Adolf Niclaus Schuster, Argentinien: Land, Volk, Wirtschaftsleben und Kolonisation (Diessen vor München: J.C. Huber, 1913).

From time to time there were announcements for schools in Switzerland that were recommended for Swiss-Argentineans to send their children to. But the Swiss did not have their own schools in Argentina, nor did they have their own separate religious institutions.

2.2.6 Reichsdeutsche

Most German-speakers in the South Atlantic came from those German states that would eventually, between 1871 and 1919, be combined into the German Empire (Deutsches Kaiserreich). The German Empire took many decades to develop, however, and while the entity proves useful as a demarcation for conceptualizing a group of disparate peoples under a national umbrella, it is also a fluid category of analysis. While “Reichsdeutsche” was a label that only came about with the creation of the Deutsches Reich (German Empire) in 1871, I have nonetheless chosen to use it to discuss German-speakers in this section that came from this vast territory with changing borders.

The German Confederation (Deutscher Bund) included thirty-nine states – and thus a majority of states in Central Europe between the Congress of Vienna of 1815 and the Austro-Prussian War of 1866, when the Kingdom of Austria left the German Confederation and merged with the Kingdom of Hungary into the Austro-Hungarian Empire. While political unification represents an important step toward national unity, it only represented one factor in this long-term process. Transnational history allows us to trace the movements of peoples, goods, and ideas beyond and through the fabricated territorial demarcations of nation-states. Such a viewpoint also allows us to indicate the importance of economic and migratory developments before the emergence of the German nation-state (or empire-state). The guild system, medieval free cities, and the Zollverein were all important steps in this direction. “German” unification relied as much on cultural and economic unity as it did on political unity under one state structure, perhaps even more so. Tracing patterns of migration flows over state agency and imperial conquest gives a much surer understanding of the German South Atlantic.

One institution that channeled migration to Namibia early on was the Rhenish Missionary society. While the church organization that the missionary society represented was tied to a specific area within the German-speaking area of Central Europe, the missionaries it recruited did not come from a specific area in Germany. German missionaries established intricate networks in South-West Africa that overlapped and intersected with other cultural institutions. On the Argentinean side of the German migration, rather than devotion to religious beliefs driving the impetus to travel outward, it was initially the devotion to profit that inspired merchants from the Rhineland to settle in Argentina. While there, these merchant families intermarried and thus broadened their social networks and influence across the Atlantic. As these network linkages intensified in density, other German-speakers from throughout Central Europe soon followed in a chain migration.

State borders in Central Europe shifted continuously. In many cases, the places where German-speakers were born – in various cities and states – passed into or out of official German control. When Karl Hermann Konrad Burmeister (*1807 Stralsund, Sweden – 1892 Buenos Aires) was born, the Swedish controlled Burmeister's hometown Stralsund. The city later came under German control during Burmeister's youth, following territorial reorganization during the Congress of Vienna. Burmeister was a botanist who traveled in Argentina between 1857 and 1860, before permanently moving there in 1861.

After the territorial settlements reorganizing the German Empire following World War I, the Kingdom of Prussia (1701-1919) was followed by the Free State of Prussia (1919-1935). Parts of Prussian territory were ceded to Poland or Russia after WWI, others after WWII. Several German-speakers from areas that are Poland today went to the South Atlantic. Several scholarly publications have been dealing specifically with the relationship between Prussia and Latin America. Marcelo Caruso portrayed the way Prussia functioned as a model for Argentine schooling reforms,⁴⁷⁶ and Bernd Schröter discussed the beginnings of Prussian diplomacy in South America⁴⁷⁷ in the 2004 conference edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold.⁴⁷⁸ While few scholars have studied relations between Saxony and the South American states, Jörg Ludwig has analyzed trade between Saxony and the South American states the years immediately following independence,⁴⁷⁹ and Michael Zeuske has specifically studied the Saxon members of the Rhenish-West Indian Company in the 1820s and 1830s.⁴⁸⁰ As far as city-states as concerned, Hamburg stands out as the most important German port city with connections to Argentina. In 1905, contemporary scholar Adolf Coppius published on the importance of Hamburg for German colonial policy,⁴⁸¹ and in 1915, German-Argentinean Ernesto Alemann wrote his dissertation on

⁴⁷⁶ Marcelo Caruso, “Zweideutige Verweise. Preußen als Vorbild argentinischer Schulreformen unter besonderer Berücksichtigung des Projekts von Carlos Saavedra Lamas,” in Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, ed. Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold (Münster: LIT Verlag, 2004), 285–304.

⁴⁷⁷ Bernd Schröter, “Die Anfänge der preußischen Diplomatie in Südamerika,” in Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, ed. Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold (Münster: Lit, 2004), 93–104.

⁴⁷⁸ Carreras and Maihold, Preussen und Lateinamerika.

⁴⁷⁹ Jörg Ludwig, “Sächsischer Handel und die südamerikanischen Freistaaten 1822-1828: die ‘Elb-Amerikanische Compagnie,’” in Sachsen und Lateinamerika: Begegnungen in vier Jahrhunderten, ed. Michael Zeuske, Bernd Schröter, and Jörg Ludwig (Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert Verlag, 1995), 201–27.

⁴⁸⁰ Michael Zeuske, “Deutsche ‘Hinterländer’ und Amerika: Die sächsischen Mitglieder der ‘Rheinisch-Westindischen Compagnie’ 1820-1830,” in Sachsen und Lateinamerika: Begegnungen in vier Jahrhunderten, ed. Michael Zeuske, Bernd Schröter, and Jörg Ludwig (Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert Verlag, 1995), 164–200.

⁴⁸¹ Adolf Coppius, Hamburgs Bedeutung auf dem Gebiete der deutschen Kolonialpolitik (Berlin: C. Heymanns Verlag, 1905).

Hamburg's trade with the La Plata states.⁴⁸² In 1968, Helmut Washausen put Hamburg in the context of the German Empire's colonial policy between 1880 and 1890.⁴⁸³ German-speakers on both sides of the South Atlantic thus came from these various states and city-states that operated under common denominator German Empire after 1871.

2.3 The Role of the German Language in Constructing and Maintaining German-ness

German-speakers in both Argentina and Namibia identified language as key to the maintenance of "German-ness" abroad and as a unifying factor for their respective communities. In both places, German was a minority language: in Argentina, most people spoke Spanish and in Southern Africa, people had adopted Afrikaans.⁴⁸⁴ In addition, the German language played an increasing role in the plans of some parts of German society to gain more influence on the world stage: at the 1902 German Colonial Congress, Alois Brandl argued that the German language was crucial for the German Empire's predominance overseas.⁴⁸⁵

⁴⁸² Ernesto Fernando Alemann, Hamburgs Schiffahrt und Handel nach dem La Plata (Heidelberg: Rössler & Herbert, 1915).

⁴⁸³ Helmut Washausen, Hamburg und die Kolonialpolitik des Deutschen Reiches 1880 bis 1890 (Hamburg: H. Christians, 1968).

⁴⁸⁴ The Nama, Rehoboth Basters and Boers spoke Afrikaans. See Eduard Moritz, Das Schulwesen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1914), 180 ff.

⁴⁸⁵ Alois Brandl, "Die Bedeutung der Deutschen Sprache über See für Deutschlands Machtstellung," in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and

By 1907, German associations from Europe such as the Allgemeiner Deutscher Sprachverein reached out to German-speakers in Argentina in 1907.⁴⁸⁶

German-speakers ensured that their children learned German even if they were born in the new South Atlantic home. In Argentina, the first school that German-speaking migrants founded was a Sunday school of the Lutheran church in 1843 as the “German Protestant School,” later renamed the “Germania-Schule.”⁴⁸⁷ While it was a religious school, education at the institution focused more on linguistic study. The curriculum of the “German Protestant School” from 1889 shows an emphasis on German language instruction with the largest number of class hours per week. First grades spent eight hours per week on language compared to two hours for Religion, while boys in the last year (seventh grade) studied at an hourly ration of 6:2 between language and religion, and girls of the same age group at 5:2.⁴⁸⁸ And while the German church itself, originally affiliated with the Prussian church,⁴⁸⁹ gradually became independent and turned into the 11. Oktober 1902, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903), 434–41.

⁴⁸⁶ “Aufruf des Allgemeinen Deutschen Sprachvereins,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, March 10, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁸⁷ Hermann Schmidt, Geschichte der deutschen evangelischen Gemeinde Buenos Aires, 1843-1943 (Buenos Aires: Deutsche Evangelische Gemeinde, 1943), 67; Keiper, “Das Deutschtum in Argentinien,” 90.

⁴⁸⁸ Unterrichts-Plan der Deutschen Evangelischen Gemeinde-Schule in Buenos Aires (Buenos Aires: Wilhelm Kraft, 1889).

⁴⁸⁹ “In Buenos Ayres, there now exists a German Protestant congregation, whose pastor and head is the Reverend A.L. Siegel. This congregation, according to its fundamental statutes, forms a branch of the United Evangelical Church of Prussia, to which it has attached itself since 1845. The Prussian rubric and liturgy is the law for its discipline and rites; and the consistory of the province of Brandenburg is to decide, in the last instance, every question of doctrine, public worship, and

Iglesia Evangélica del Rio de La Plata,⁴⁹⁰ the Germania-Schule secularized by 1904: “Since the Germania-Schule serves the entire German colony without distinguishing between the different denominations, religion classes are not mandatory; participation is at the discretion of the parents.”⁴⁹¹ The Argentinisches Tageblatt featured an article on German schools abroad in Argentina in 1907, stating that schools abroad were very different from schools in Germany as they were private schools, run by private individuals.⁴⁹² However, German imperial government officials made efforts increase cooperation with the German schools in Argentina and by 1908, the Germania-Schule was under close surveillance by the German government represented in Argentina by the German ambassador.⁴⁹³

In Namibia, missionaries taught the children of German-speakers,⁴⁹⁴ and many sent their children to Germany for schooling, including the sons of missionary Carl Hugo Hahn and of missionary colonist Wilhelm Redecker. The first institutionalized schools were introduced and funded under German state discipline, in as far as they do not come under the jurisdiction of the secular power.” Gerstäcker, Gerstäcker's Travels, 55–56.

⁴⁹⁰ See Claudia Häfner, Heimischwerdung am La Plata: Von der Deutschen Evangelischen La Plata Synode zur Iglesia Evangélica del Rio de la Plata, Kirchen in der Weltgesellschaft 3 (Berlin; Münster: LIT Verlag, 2008).

⁴⁹¹ Germania Schule, Lehrpläne: Germania-Schule (Buenos Aires: Herpig & Stoeveken, 1904).

⁴⁹² “Die deutschen Auslandsschulen: Neue Klippen und Verständnismangel,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 6, 1907, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁴⁹³ Germania-Schule (Realschule) zu Buenos Aires, Ordnung der Schlussprüfung der Prima ...: Germania-Schule (Realschule) zu Buenos Aires (Buenos Aires: Fessel & Mengen, 1908).

⁴⁹⁴ Britta Wellnitz, Deutsche evangelische Gemeinden im Ausland: ihre Entstehungsgeschichte und die Entwicklung ihrer Rechtsbeziehungen zur Evangelischen Kirche in Deutschland (Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 2003), 308.

control only in the 1890s: in 1894, Windhoek citizens requested a school from the local government.⁴⁹⁵ School inspector Eduard Moritz suggested that “the young Africans” should be sent to Germany in order to prevent future generations of German-speakers from losing their German culture.⁴⁹⁶ The first German school in Lüderitzbucht opened in 1908 and suffered from the difficulties of teaching children of different ages and level of German language in common classrooms. One local critic remarked, “of the 27 children of the beginning only 12 spoke German, while the others spoke Dutch and English. Since of those 12, 8 also spoke Dutch or English, the German-speaking children were in a strong minority. [...] It is remarkable that of today’s 46 children, only 10 are of English and Dutch descent. But of the remaining 36 children, definitely not all can speak German. Even though they are of German descent, it is only here that they had to learn German.”⁴⁹⁷

⁴⁹⁵ Moritz, Das Schulwesen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 150.

⁴⁹⁶ Ibid., 87–88.

⁴⁹⁷ A., “Die Lüderitzbuchter Schule,” Lüderitzbuchter Zeitung, May 1, 1909, SBB - Westhafen “Als der jetzige Leiter, Herr W. Baumgart, der vor seinem Eintritt in den kolonialen Dienst Rektor der zehnklassigen Schule in Kremmen bei Berlin war, den Unterricht der neubegründeten Schule übernahm, betrug die Schülerzahl 27 (11 Mädchen und 16 Knaben). Während diese Zahl der Schüler lange Zeit ziemlich konstant blieb, trat infolge des schnellen Anwachsens der Bevölkerung im Januar eine große Aenderung ein. Heute ist der große, lichte Raum, der seinerzeit den Anforderungen vollauf genügte, viel zu klein und die Anstellung einer zweiten Lehrkraft ein dringendes Bedürfnis geworden. Denn es übersteigt die Kraft eines, wenn auch noch so tüchtigen Lehrers, 46 Kinder (22 Mädchen und 24 Knaben) verschiedener Altersstufen und verschiedener Abteilungen allein zu unterrichten. Zu diesen Schwierigkeiten gesellen sich noch andere, mit denen ein kolonialer Schullehrer zu kämpfen hat, und von denen sich die wenigsten einen klaren Begriff machen. Von den 27 Kindern der ersten Zeit konnten nur 12 deutsch sprechen, während die übrigen holländisch resp. englisch sprachen. Da von den 12 deutsch redenden Kindern 8 auch holländisch oder englisch sprechen konnten, war die Folge, daß sich die deutsch sprechenden

While the idea of one homogeneous language was considered as the ideal, the development of different vocabulary in South Atlantic was noticeable: the Spanish and Italian languages influenced German in Argentina, and Dutch and English influenced the German language in Namibia. Already in 1902, Pastor Anz raised concerns about the degeneration of the German language in Namibia.⁴⁹⁸ Herbert C. Nöckler, who taught at several Namibian schools between the 1940s and 1960s, has studied the mix of languages in Namibia in detail.⁴⁹⁹ He provided examples of words borrowed from English, Afrikaans, and various indigenous languages mixed into the German language in Namibia. For the Argentinean side, Hartmut Stöblein has analyzed the language of German newspapers in Argentina, specifically at the example of the newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt.⁵⁰⁰ He concluded in his linguistic study that the German language used by German-speakers in Argentina was heavily influenced by the Spanish language. In Argentina, “Belgrano-Deutsch” refers to mixing Spanish expressions in German speech; it was named after the district Belgrano within the city of Buenos Kinder in starker Minorität befanden. In den Pausen hörte man in der ersten Zeit fast nur ausländische Töne. Heute hat das Deutsche ein starkes Uebergewicht erlangt und selbst die nichtdeutschen Kinder sind jetzt im Stande, sich deutsch auszudrücken und in den Pausen wird nur deutsch gesprochen. Bemerkenswert ist, daß von den 46 Kindern nur 10 englischer resp. holländischer Abkunft sind. Von den übrigen 36 deutschen Kindern könnten aber keineswegs alle deutsch sprechen. Obwohl deutscher Herkunft, haben mehrere hier erst deutsch lernen müssen.”

⁴⁹⁸ “Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” Berliner Neueste [Nachrichten], May 3, 1902, No. 206 edition, EZA 5/2916, p. 156.

⁴⁹⁹ Herbert Carl Nöckler, Sprachmischung in Südwestafrika, Schriftenreihe des Instituts für Auslandsbeziehungen 5 (München: Hueber, 1963).

⁵⁰⁰ Hartmut Stöblein, Deutsch-spanischer Sprachkontakt am Rio de la Plata: eine Untersuchung am Korpus deutsch-argentinischer Zeitungssprache (Bamberg: University of Bamberg Press, 2009).

Aires.⁵⁰¹ The Volga-Germans in Argentina can even be considered a special case among German-speakers as many of them maintained their own dialects, which they had taken from German lands to Russia and then to Argentina over the course of a century.⁵⁰²

To provide some specific examples of different vocabulary: in Argentina, the word “Campstädte” was used for “colonies” and thus settlements in the Argentine interior.⁵⁰³ In Argentina, Kampstädte were towns in the countryside, a word most likely derived from the Spanish word “campo” for field. In Namibia, the word “Kamp” also existed, but in the example of Kampwitwen, it referred to prisoner of war camps.⁵⁰⁴ In Namibia, the Afrikaans word “Pad” for path (or “Pfad” in German) found its way into the commonly used vocabulary as various publications testify.⁵⁰⁵

⁵⁰¹ Roberto Bein, “Aspectos lingüísticos de las minorías de origen alemán: mantimiento, hibridación y cambio de lengua,” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 27; Stößlein, Deutsch-spanischer Sprachkontakt am Rio de la Plata, 60–63.

⁵⁰² Hipperdinger, Die Sprache(n) der Wolgadeutschen in Argentinien.

⁵⁰³ In 1873, the La Plata Kalender spoke of “Campstädte” instead of “colonies” for the settlements in the Argentine interior, see Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873 (Buenos Aires: Ruhland & Reinhardt, 1873), 219; See also “Kamp” used in Córdoba in 1907, in: Louis Chiffard, “Kamp in Córdoba,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, July 9, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁵⁰⁴ See Hans-Volker Gretschel, Von Kampwitwen und-waisen: Berichte aus den Internierungsjahren in Südwestafrika, 1939-1946 (Windhoek: Klaus Hess Verlag, 2009) “Witwe” means widower; to be exact, Kampwitwe should be translated as widow from a war prisoner.

⁵⁰⁵ Margarethe von Eckenbrecher, “Padleben in Südwestafrika,” in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Kriegs- und Friedensbilder: Selbsterlebnisse, ed. W. Weicher (Leipzig: W. Weicher, 1907), 1–20; Else Ebner, Meine erste Pad in Südwest: Keetmanshoop - Kub, 1912 [Manuskript] ([Basel]: [Basler Afrika Biographien], 1988); Bernhard Voigt, Auf dorniger Pad. Aus Deutsch-Südwestafrikas alten Tagen (Berlin: Safari-Verlag, 1926); Klaus Dierks, “Pfade, Pads und

Similar concerns about the degeneration of the German language still exist today in the current German-speaking community in Namibia as an article published in the current German-language newspaper of Namibia Allgemeine Zeitung notes that contemporary singer EeS has published his own German-Namibian dictionary.⁵⁰⁶ Nowadays, German is taught mostly as secondary language in South Atlantic German schools.⁵⁰⁷ They are part of the network of German schools abroad PASCH, which promotes worldwide learning the German language.⁵⁰⁸

2.4 Conclusion

In the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, German-speakers in the South Atlantic were newcomers in societies that were considered frontier societies, where fellow Europeans met with indigenous peoples. In addition to identifying with the cultural label “German,” they increasingly had to deal with expanding nation-state influence and questions of nationality and citizenship that went hand-in-hand with Autobahnen: Verkehrswege erschließen ein menschenleeres Land,” in Vom Schutzgebiet bis Namibia 2000, ed. Klaus Hess and Klaus Becker (Göttingen; Windhoek: Hess, 2002), 359–71.

⁵⁰⁶ “Nix für Sprachpuristen: ‘Esisallesoreidt’. Totaler Sittenverfall: EeS veröffentlicht sein eigenes Namibia-Deutsch-Wörterbuch,” Allgemeine Zeitung, September 26, 2008, sec. Kultur & Unterhaltung.

⁵⁰⁷ Marianne Zappen-Thomson, Interkulturelles Lernen und Lehren in einer multikulturellen Gesellschaft: Deutsch als Fremdsprache in Namibia (Windhoek: Klaus Hess Publishers, 2000); Enseñanza de Alemán en los países del Mercosur. Una colaboración al plurilingüismo en el sistema educativo (Buenos Aires: Goethe-Institut Buenos Aires, 1998).

⁵⁰⁸ “Schulen: Partner der Zukunft,” accessed May 14, 2017, <http://www.pasch-net.de>; Bein, “Aspectos lingüísticos de las minorías de origen alemán,” 29.

this development. In addition to “German,” many of those people identified simultaneously with other labels of identity: Jewish, Russian-German, Dutch, Boer and Belgian, Austrian, Swiss-German and Reichsdeutsch. The use and maintenance of German language in the South Atlantic constituted an important component part of their identity. As “German” became increasingly linked to the German Empire and used as a political qualifier, the preferred term gradually switched to “German-speaker” around the turn of the twentieth century.

During WWI, the German Empire still played such an important part that the name chosen for the umbrella association for all German-speakers in Argentina was “Deutscher Volksbund.” But before members of the German colony agreed on this name, they had an intense debate over the terms “Deutscher” or “Germanischer” Volksbund.⁵⁰⁹ Occasionally, German-speakers celebrated decisive events in German European history: for example in 1898, Germans-speakers commemorated the conclusion of the Westfälischer Friede (Peace of Westphalia) in Buenos Aires,⁵¹⁰ and in 1913, Germans-speakers commemorated the centenary anniversary of the Völkerschlacht bei Leipzig in Keetmanshoop, Namibia.⁵¹¹ German-speakers on both sides of the South Atlantic practiced widely the cult of the Kaiser. In 1876, Ernst Nolte’s bookstore sold the portrait of Kaiser Wilhelm I,⁵¹² and a bar in Buenos Aires opened with the name “Kaiserhalle.”⁵¹³ On 22 March 1878, the newspaper DLPZ praised Kaiser Wilhelm I (*1797 – 1888) as the uniter of Germany, celebrating the Kaiser’s central role in unifying the German “nation.”⁵¹⁴ In 1891, the German colony Otjimbingwe in Namibia celebrated Kaiser’s birthday.⁵¹⁵ With Kaiser Wilhelm II’s (*1859 – 1941) ascension to the throne of the German Empire, his birthday 27 January became a “national” holiday for South Atlantic German-speakers.⁵¹⁶ The lines even blurred between national and religious holidays in January 1916, when church services were held both by the Protestant and Catholic churches in Argentina, in the capital Buenos Aires as well as in smaller cities like Rosario, in honor and celebration of Kaiser Wilhelm II’s birthday.⁵¹⁷ However, when Rhenish missionary and Russian citizen Carl Hugo Hahn noted in his diary in 1856 how he ⁵¹² Ernst Nolte, “Das große Brustbild des Deutschen Kaisers ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 7, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁵⁰⁹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien.

⁵¹⁰ “Zur Vierteljahrtausendfeier des westfälischen Friedens, 24. Oktober 1648,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, December 3, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁵¹¹ “Zur Hundertjahrfeier,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, October 23, 1913, SBB - Westhafen.

⁵¹³ C. Hornung, “Kaiserhalle [...] Eröffnung der neuen höchst elegant eingerichteten Bierhalle,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 12, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁵¹⁴ “Zum 22. März,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, March 22, 1878.

⁵¹⁵ Rudolf Ludloff, Nach Deutsch-Namaland: (Südwestafrika); Reisebriefe (Coburg: Dietz, 1891), 54.

⁵¹⁶ “Das Programm für die Feier des Geburtstages Sr. Majestät des Kaisers am 27. Januar ist wie folgt festgelegt ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 17, 1900, NAN; Jon Lehmann, Kaisers Geburtstag in Südwestafrika (Mühlhausen i.Th.: G. Danner, 1905); “Kaisers Geburtstag,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 3, 1907, sec. Tageschronik, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Feier des Geburtstages Sr. Maj. des Kaisers,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, January 29, 1914, SBB - Westhafen; “Germania a S.M. Guillermo II, Imperador de Alemania, Rey de Prusia; Enero 27 de 1916,” Germania 1, no. 16 (January 16, 1916); “Zum heutigen Nationaltage,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 27, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁵¹⁷ “Die Festgottesdienste in den deutschen Kirchen,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 27, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

showed the indigenous people a portrait of his Kaiser, both the deceased and current one, he must have been referring to the Russian Emperors Nikolaus I and Alexander II.⁵¹⁸

Moreover, there were also tensions between these different groups and as officials of the German Empire became increasingly involved in the South Atlantic, they attempted to regulate inclusion and exclusion of these different groups. For example, in 1907, the government official Neubaur claimed that Russian-German farmers (Bauern) in Argentina could not be counted as members of German-ness (Deutschtum) because they lacked the “spiritual link” to Germany.⁵¹⁹ Or in 1909, Külz specifically stated that the Rehoboth Bastards in Namibia were a good pillar for German-ness (“dem Deutschtum sind die Bastards immer eine gute Stütze gewesen”).⁵²⁰ German-speakers in the South Atlantic constantly negotiated their role between their local societies and German state authorities and belonging in Europe. Over time, cultural groups who did not develop or lost their own states, like Russian-Germans and Boers, developed associations like the Russian-Germans in Argentina.⁵²¹ As for Switzerland and ⁵¹⁸ Carl Hugo Hahn, Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part IV: 1856-1860, ed. Brigitte Lau, vol. 4 (Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1985), 909.

⁵¹⁹ Neubaur, Der Norddeutsche Lloyd, 50 Jahre der Entwicklung, 1857-1907, 182. “Noch heute deutsche in ihrer Erscheinung, ihrer Sprache und ihren Lebensgewohnheiten, können sie doch kaum noch als Vertreter des Deutschtums bezeichnet werden, da ihnen jede geistige Gemeinschaft mit dem deutschen Vaterlande verloren gegangen ist.”

⁵²⁰ Külz, Deutsch-Südafrika im 25. Jahre deutscher Schutzherrschaft, 60.

⁵²¹ Alemanes del volga 1878-2003.

Austria, they expanded their own state representation in the South Atlantic in order to foster relations between the states. From the perspective of Swiss and Austrian national history writing, it could be considered as an act of national emancipation to get “out of the shadow” of the realm of the German empire and write their own, independent histories. Nonetheless, this kind of focus on the national entities may obscure the cooperation and existence of a trans-German community in the South Atlantic. As we have seen in this chapter thus, “German” in the South Atlantic constituted a complex cultural identity in the nineteenth and twentieth century.

Part I Concluding Remarks

In this first part of the dissertation, we have critically examined the actors and agents and how the self-designation, and thus category of experience, changed over the course of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. “German-speaker” replaced “German” as the designation of cultural identity.

In the first chapter, we have put emphasis on “German” as a transnational category. German-speakers in the South Atlantic did not identify with one single nation-state in Central Europe. They attentively followed the development of several nation-states and chose a different destination as their home but distanced themselves from exclusive links to any of these states. While they firmly believed in belonging to a German people, they remained skeptical of the nation-state. In the second chapter, we studied the complexity of the “German” cultural identity that contemporary South Atlantic German-speakers practiced in their everyday lives. Various labels – some of them also organized in nation-states – co-existed with “German” and not all of them have been studied by historians in connection with German-ness yet.

A newspaper article in the newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt from 1901 reflected the relation between German-speakers in Argentina and Germans in the German Empire: the former felt misunderstood and misrepresented by the (Central European German) media and condemned a fraudulent article (Schwindelbericht) from the Berlin daily newspaper Die Deutsche Warte.⁵²² The Berlin newspaper article dealt with the German School Association (Deutscher Schulverein) founded in Rosario in 1901. The AT article underlined the fact that the association was specifically founded to include only schools without religious affiliation and that “the name ‘German School Association’ should not be interpreted to mean that it is only about “reichsdeutsche” schools, it rather includes all tribes of German tongue, that is Swiss, Dutch, Austrians, etc. etc.”⁵²³ German-speakers in Argentina were cautious about Germans from the German Empire engrossing them.

⁵²² “Eine musterhafte Berichterstattung.”

⁵²³ Ibid.

While the South Atlantic protagonists used “German” and then “German-speaker” as preferred self-designation, scholars writing about them after the 1980s have mostly used “German-speaker” to designate them regardless of the era. In many cases, the motivation of the scholars to do so was also in order to distinguish between cultural and political identities. However, writing from a Eurocentric view, they looked outwards from the German nation-state. As “German” referred to the German nation-state as political category, they chose “German-speaker” in order to designate the descendants of “Germans” from the German-nation state. In this context, it doesn’t seem too surprising that the validity of “German-speaker” as a useful term is contested as critics have remarked that many of the second-, third-, or fourth-generation migrants are no longer in command of the German language.

Part II. Networks: From “Colony” to “Community”

The second part of this dissertation is dedicated to the question: what did German-speakers do in the South Atlantic? It consists in three chapters. In chapter three, we will thus juxtapose the category of experience “colony” with the category of analysis “imperialism.” In the following two chapters, we will study the role of associations in the formation of the South Atlantic German-speaking communities. I emphasize particularly the fact that these associations were run by private people and not by state actors. Colony or community life originated in and was based in the cooperation of individuals, or what I call “association.” I define association very broadly as any type of cooperative endeavor. In the following section, I discuss different types of business associations like trade, colonization, banking, and food companies, and then different non-business associations like religious, school, leisure, health, science, and philanthropic organizations. The German colony of Buenos Aires first established institutions and clubs on its own, and only then requested financial help from the German Empire.⁵²⁴ In Namibia, the development was similar.

The overarching premise for this part is that the category of experience “colony” gradually turned into the category of experience “community.” German-speakers migrating to and settling in the South Atlantic initially used the term “colony” for their settlements. However, particularly after the world wars and with the decolonization movement and later the development of postcolonial studies, they and their descendants gave preference to the term community in order to refer to their settlements. This was particularly the case for the urban colony of German-speakers in Buenos Aires and the German protectorate South-West Africa, where “colony” came to be used as a synonym for protectorate.

⁵²⁴ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 293.

In the first decade of the twentieth century, the Central European German public was quarreling over the success of the German protectorate South-West Africa: some considered it as the only German overseas possession suitable for German settlement, while others considered it as unsuccessful and unuseful for colonization. At the same time, Argentina emerged as a new economic power – a young South American nation state that sought to become an equal to the so-called old and established (European) Kulturstaaten (cultured states). In this period of economic competition between the British, American, and German Empires in the world market, units of trade came to define power on a global scale rather than the number of formal territorial possessions an empire possessed. Developed within the model of mercantilism and trade between the metropole and the colony, the shift to free trade loosened the strict ties between countries and their overseas possessions. Trade with South America was channeled through Spain, and in the eighteenth century, German companies merely settled in Spain and were counted as “Spanish,” but even then, trade was never “national.” In Namibia, traders from Britain and Sweden were active before any British or German claims were made to the land. Two different types of colonialism co-existed: one of official claims to territory, and one of control of emigrant populations.

In order to reframe the topic of German overseas involvement through colonization and colonies instead of colonialism or imperialism, it is thus necessary to reconfigure the role of the states and of individual and group actors. Colonization meant making use of the land. Within the proclaimed sovereignty of another state, people of different nationalities (but usually white people) practiced this “improvement of the land”: Italians and Germans colonized the Argentine pampa, and Germans and Boers colonized Nama- and Damaraland. Throughout the nineteenth century, competing definitions of “colony” (Kolonie) among German-speakers coexisted. Contemporary intellectuals looked towards the great European colonial powers England, Spain, and France, and tried to define and distinguish between different types of colonialism. They settled on some defining elements that included the settlement of migrants and the economic purpose of the colonies – which meant, in the German case, colonies’ support of the economy of German lands and later the German Empire. In this second part, I work with the premise that over the course of a century, from the mid-1800s to the mid-1900s, the term “colony” gradually gave way to “community” for the German-speaking groups in both Argentina and Namibia while the characteristics in both places remained the same or very similar throughout the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Thus the meaning remained the same, while the label changed.

Chapter 3. Problematizing the State-centeredness of Historiography on Imperialism

In this chapter, we will examine the compatibility of “colony” as a contemporary category of experience and “imperialism” as a scholarly analytical category. The British served as model for contemporary German-speakers but they were also among their harshest rivals in the quest for domination of the world market and heading “civilization.” In particular in South America, the British coalesced with North Americans in perpetuating the belief of a “German peril” in South American societies, particularly Argentina and Brazil. This tension heightened in the context of the looming First World War. Starting in first half of the nineteenth century, German-speakers set up colonies in the South Atlantic that competed with those of the British.

Throughout the nineteenth century, various definitions of “colony” co-existed. Friedrich Fabri, known as the “father of German colonialism,” distinguished between two basic modern types of colonies in his famous text “Does Germany Need Colonies? [Bedarf Deutschland der Kolonien?]” from 1879: agricultural colonies (Ackerbau-Colonien) and trade colonies (Handels- Colonien).⁵²⁵ Until 1884 – the year the German Emperor granted Lüderitz’s acquisition formal protection and also year the Berlin conference took place – a formal colony of foreign territory under German rule was the exception, or rather something considered impossible, as many German-speakers believed that the world was already divided up amongst the other European powers. In Argentina, German-speakers were also influenced by the usage of Spanish-speakers: the Spanish term “colonia” came from the Latin word that was both used for “colony” and simply “settlement.” Much of the literature produced by German-speakers in Argentina gave preference to the terms “colony” and “colonization,” whereas in Namibia, the term “colony” was used as a synonym for the protectorate and within the protectorate, terms like “settlement” (Siedlung, Besiedlung, etc.) were used. In Argentina, there were the “colonization societies” (Kolonisationsgesellschaften), but in Namibia, they were usually called “settlement societies” (Siedlungsgesellschaften). In 1873, the La Plata Kalender still used the term “Campstädte” (countryside cities) instead of “colonies” to designate the settlements in the Argentine interior.⁵²⁶

In 1884, Ernst Bachmann started the introduction to his Address Calendar of the German Colony of Buenos Aires by describing celebrations in North America commemorating the two-hundredth anniversary of the first German colony on American soil.⁵²⁷ He asked whether the history of Germans in South America was less instructive or less encouraging than that of their North American counterparts. He claimed that Germans in South America – and in particular in Argentina – had achieved even more than those in the United States. They had achieved more materially – because a greater percentage of immigrant Germans had achieved affluence, prestige, rank and influence – and morally – because the German in Argentina was less likely to abandon his nationality, customs, language, and habits and thus become “denationalized.”⁵²⁸

⁵²⁵ Fabri, Bedarf Deutschland der Colonien?, 29.

⁵²⁶ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 219.

In Meyers Großes Konversations-Lexikon (Meyer's Great Encyclopedia) from 1907, one of the most influential German reference books of the time, we find the following entry for “colonies”: “Generally speaking, colonies are connected settlements, in particular those, whose members (colonists, latin: colonus, ‘farmer, settler’), maintain their clan particularities, customs and conventions etc. outside of their own people or state through maintenance of their traditional national and political connections, be it due to state protection by the metropole or through own free activity in their own social vital force.”⁵²⁹ In 1907, colonies were thus defined as settlements where a group of people maintained their culture and traditions abroad. This definition was based on the Greek and Romans models. It specifically declared that these settlements abroad could be under the political control of a metropole, but they do not have to be. The encyclopedia entry from 1907 continued:

⁵²⁷ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884.

⁵²⁸ Ibid., 2.

⁵²⁹ “Kolonien,” in Meyers Großes Konversations-Lexikon, vol. 11 (Leipzig, 1907), 291: “Kolonien sind im allgemeinen zusammenhängende Ansiedlungen, besonders solche, deren Angehörige (Kolonisten, v. lat. colonus, »Feldbauer, Ansiedler«), sei es auf Grund staatlichen Schutzes durch das Mutterland oder durch eigne freie Betätigung ihrer sozialen Lebenskraft, ihre Stammeseigentümlichkeiten, Sitten, Gebräuche etc. außerhalb des eignen Volkstums oder Staatswesens unter Festhaltung des überlieferten nationalen und politischen Zusammenhanges bewahren.”

This is where colony founding differs from emigration [the German word Auswanderung literally translates to “outwanderers”]; but both can be connected to each other, by “outwanderers” founding colonies in foreign countries and strengthening them through their influx, without maintaining close ties to the metropole or remaining under its rule. Thus the United States of North America are an English colony by having maintained English language and particularities. The same goes for Spanish and Portuguese South America. In a different sense, one speaks of Huguenot colonies in Germany, the Salzburger in Prussia, the Germans in the Baltic Provinces and in many other regions of Russia, where the colonists have dissolved completely in the union of the foreign state, even often having come to the country due to the initiative and promotion of this state itself.⁵³⁰

Most of the examples mentioned in this encyclopedia entry were thus settlements in foreign countries that were not controlled by another state or a “colonial power.”

⁵³⁰ Ibid., 291: “Hierdurch unterscheidet sich die Koloniengründung von der Auswanderung (s. d.); doch können beide miteinander verbunden sein, indem die Auswandernden in fremden Ländern Kolonien gründen und durch ihren Zustrom kräftigen, ohne in festen Beziehungen zum Mutterland oder unter dessen Leitung zu bleiben. So sind die Vereinigten Staaten von Nordamerika eine englische Kolonie, indem sie englische Sprache und Eigenart bewahrt haben. Entsprechendes gilt vom Spanischen und Portugiesischen Südamerika. In andern Sinne spricht man von den Kolonien der Hugenotten in Deutschland, der Salzburger in Preußen, der Deutschen in den Ostseeprovinzen und vielen andern Gegenden Rußlands, wobei die Kolonisten vollständig in den Verband des fremden Staates eintraten, ja oft auf Grund der Anregung und Förderung durch diesen Staat selbst in das Land kamen.”

The 1909 edition of Meyer's Great Encyclopedia declared that "Protectorates [was] the designation for those German colonies, that were put under suzerainty (protectorate) of the Empire."⁵³¹ In this case then, even in 1907, at the height of what most historians consider "German colonialism," German colonies or settlements in Argentina belonged under the larger use of the term colony, while German colonies or settlements in the German protectorate South-West Africa were the exception. Whereas the use of the term protectorate is important, and referred to the legal status and sovereignty, the legal situation was just one part of the everyday life experience of German-speakers in the South Atlantic; being an important element, it was not the determining one.

3.1 Re-evaluating Imperialism and Colonialism as Categories of Analysis

"Imperialism" encompasses the outreach of an empire. We distinguish between "formal imperialism" and "informal imperialism." "Formal imperialism" is congruent with "colonialism" and thus the empire's sovereignty over overseas territory. "Colonialism" is thus concerned with "official colonies" in the sense of officially controlled territory. "Informal imperialism" on the other hand deals with influence and control exercised through means other than territorial sovereignty, like economic involvement and the control of markets. I also consider “empire” to be an analytical category that can be used as a synonym for “nation-state” in this dissertation. “Empires” and “nation-states” as analytical categories share the characteristics of being evolving state structures that sought increasing control over territories, according to the perceived need of their people.

⁵³¹ "Schutzgebiete," in Meyers Großes Konversations-Lexikon, vol. 18 (Leipzig, 1909), 90: "Schutzgebiete, Bezeichnung für die deutschen Kolonien, die durch kaiserliche Schutzbriefe unter die Oberhoheit (Protektorat) des Reiches gestellt sind."

Both forms of imperialism are conceptualized within the category of “nation-state” and are empire- or “nation-state”-centered. However, both in colonialism and informal imperialism, the state or its agents are not the only actors; since nation-states and empires as actual entities were in perpetual movement and construction, with a tendency to grow and increase their influence, private individuals played important roles in carrying out and realizing the two types of imperialism. And “colonization,” as a category of practice, is at the core of imperialism as a category of analysis.

Historians of the British Empire maintain that the British mainly practiced formal imperialism in South Africa and informal imperialism in Argentina. German historians have adopted this division. They mute the activities of German-speakers at the German Colonial Congress 1902, where South Atlantic German-speakers from Argentina and Brazil tried to attract more attention to South America as trade and settlement – and thus colonization – destination.

When John Gallagher and Ronald Robinson launched a new discussion on the study of the British Empire in 1953, their approach was very innovative:⁵³² The two authors claimed that not only those areas “colored red” on the map should be studied in order to understand the scale and scope of the British Empire. Instead, they proposed to include all areas where Britain had extensive trade relations and exerted power through economic means. “Informal empire” then was to designate areas where the British exerted power through trade, without having direct political influence.

In the 1980s in particular, scholars studied British involvement in South America. They used world-systems approaches such as dependency theory. The tendency, however, was to portray Argentina as a trade partner of Britain and not as its victim. Yet, despite a certain amount of agency on Argentina’s part, Britain exerted significant power over it, and Peter J. Cain and Anthony Gerald Hopkins claim that just as there was a scramble for Africa, there had been a scramble for South America – the major difference being that a formal partition of South America did not take place.⁵³³ Contrary to Cain and Hopkins, who provide a macro-history of Britain’s empire including South America, David McLean ⁵³² John Gallagher and Ronald Robinson, “The Imperialism of Free Trade,” The Economic History Review 6, no. 1 (1953): 1–15.

⁵³³ Peter J. Cain and Anthony Gerald Hopkins, British Imperialism: Innovation and Expansion, 1688-1914 (London; New York: Longman, 1993).

presents a micro-history of British involvement in the River Plate.⁵³⁴ He specifically uses the term “informal empire” and discusses several instances in which Britain did not hesitate to intervene in Buenos Aires and Montevideo in order to secure British trade interests. Andrew Graham-Yooll, an Anglo-Argentine himself, has traced the history of the development of the English-speaking trade community in Buenos Aires and its influence on behalf of British interests, taking up the perspective from the community and its members and thus from the South Atlantic.⁵³⁵

The change in approach and methodology brought about by the shift from social to cultural history has also left its imprint on Empire studies, and the variety of conflicting and concurring positions is particularly apparent in Matthew Brown’s edited volume Informal Empire in Latin America.⁵³⁶ In this collection, Charles Jones argues that “informal empire” represented an entity, whereas “informal imperialism” represented a policy.⁵³⁷ In other words, it was a matter of structure versus agency. For Jones, the British Empire preceded British imperialism by several centuries. Whereas the British Empire came about more or ⁵³⁴ David McLean, War, Diplomacy and Informal Empire: Britain and the Republics of La Plata, 1836-1853 (London; New York: British Academic Press, 1995).

⁵³⁵ Andrew Graham-Yooll, The Forgotten Colony: A History of the English-Speaking Communities in Argentina (London: Hutchinson, 1981); Andrew Graham-Yooll, Imperial Skirmishes: War and Gunboat Diplomacy in Latin America (Oxford: Signal, 2002).

⁵³⁶ Matthew Brown, ed., Informal Empire in Latin America: Culture, Commerce and Capital (Oxford, UK: Blackwell Publisher, 2008).

⁵³⁷ Charles A. Jones, “Finance, Ambition and Romanticism in the River Plate, 1880–1892,” in Informal Empire in Latin America: Culture, Commerce and Capital, ed. Matthew Brown (Oxford, UK: Blackwell Publisher, 2008), 141ff.

less unplanned, British imperialism only started in the 1880s with planned strategies. Other contributors come to different conclusions with regards to the usefulness of informal empire for the study of Latin America. Overall, one could say that those scholars influenced by the cultural turn seem to favor “informal empire” as a tool, whereas the others seem more skeptical but do not agree on an alternative.

Scholarship also remains divided between works specializing in the study of Africa (as part of formal empire) and of South America. Only recently have scholars started to call for a study of South America and Africa within a single analytical field. John Darwin, for example, proposes a “British world system” divided into four elements: (1) the British Isles, (2) India, (3) the “commercial republic”, and (4) the “white dominions” (South Africa, Australia, Canada). In this hierarchy, Argentina as part of the commercial republic has even greater importance for the empire than South Africa.⁵³⁸ Similarly, Gary Magee and Andrew S. Thompson suggest speaking of a “British world” in which migration, empire, and globalization are all studied together from a cultural viewpoint. For them, culture is at the root all human transactions, and empire is a relational network where relations are the “software,” and the means of transportation and communication the “hardware.” However, they still consider Latin America to be an extra-imperial site.⁵³⁹

⁵³⁸ Darwin, The Empire Project.

Overall, Robinson and Gallagher renovated empire studies with the introduction of the concept of “informal empire” by legitimizing the inclusion of those areas that never were politically part of the British Empire. Their article was a first and necessary step towards turning the back to purely political history. However, throughout the 1980s and 1990s, scholars have divided into two camps, dealing with Africa as formal Empire and relegating South America to informal empire. Overcoming the dichotomy between formal and informal empire remains thus an important step towards the writing of transnational history.

German historians have tied their historiography to Prussian and Nazi expansionism and thus to territorial colonialism and formal imperialism. Both periods of territorial expansion, including the two world wars they triggered, were failed moments of colonialism: these states were ultimately destroyed because they were expansionist. They were expanding at the cost of other powers in an international order defined by balance-of-power politics, dating back to 1648 or 1815 (Westphalia or Vienna, respectively); it therefore makes sense that the rest of Europe (and the world) wanted to see this power limited. But reading all of German history as necessarily leading to these two failures is either teleological or hermeneutical, inevitably either leading to Nazism or to an interpretation that has come to be seen as the exclusive explanation. However, there were two currents of colonialism/imperialism that were conditioned by a distinction in economic theories: (1) territorial expansion, where sovereignty should bring about control over the local economy, and (2) the control of foreign production and markets without bringing territory under political control. These were two different views on markets and how they should work, either as spheres of direct control or as spheres of influence. Before 1884, Robert Jannasch distinguished between Kolonien and überseeische Interessensgebiete (colonies and overseas interest areas).⁵⁴⁰ Scholars of German history working after World War II, however, have almost exclusively focused on the colonies where the German Empire exerted direct control.⁵⁴¹

⁵³⁹ Gary Bryan Magee and Andrew S. Thompson, Empire and Globalisation: Networks of People, Goods and Capital in the British World, c.1850-1914 (Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2010).

Other scholars, however, have proposed more nuanced definitions of imperialism and colonialism. Historian Hans-Ulrich Wehler, for example, considers both direct (or formal) as well as indirect (or informal) control of foreign territories by Western industrial powers as imperialism.⁵⁴² Jürgen ⁵⁴⁰ Robert Jannasch, ed., Die Wege und Entfernungen zur See im Weltverkehr (Berlin; Leipzig: Verlag des "Export"; R. Friese, 1904).

⁵⁴¹ Among the few exceptions are Ian Lawrence Duff Forbes, German Commercial Relations with South America, 1890-1914 (University of Adelaide, 1975); Thomas D. Schoonover, Germany in Central America: Competitive Imperialism, 1821-1929 (Tuscaloosa, Alabama: University of Alabama Press, 1998).

⁵⁴² "Unter Imperialismus wird hier nach alledem diejenige direkte-formelle und indirekte-informelle Herrschaft verstanden, welche die okzidentalen Industriestaaten unter dem Druck der Industrialisierung mit ihrem spezifischen ökonomischen, sozialen und politischen Problemen und

Osterhammel claims, “‘Imperialism’ is the concept that comprises all forces and activities contributing to the construction and the maintenance of transcolonial empires. Imperialism presupposes the will and the ability of an imperial center to define as imperial its own national interests and enforce them worldwide in the anarchy of the international system. Imperialism thus implies not only colonial politics, but international politics for which colonies are not just ends in themselves, but also pawns in global power games.”⁵⁴³ He defines informal empire as securing the economic and strategic interests of nation states abroad.⁵⁴⁴ Trevor Getz and Heather Streets-Salter claim that, “Imperialism, therefore, is an ideology or doctrine in support of the creation and maintenance of empire.”⁵⁴⁵ Other scholars have attempted to differentiate between colonialism as political (state) control and imperialism as (mere) economic control. The problem with even these definitions of colonialism and imperialism is that in both cases, the focus is on the state as an actor, no matter if formally or informally. I suggest that we have to get away from this state-centered definition to study and analyze imperialism and colonialism in a different way. Overall, historians like Sebastian Conrad have started to include Brazil in the study of German overseas dank ihrer vielseitigen Überlegungen über die weniger entwickelten Regionen der Erde ausgebreitet haben.” Wehler, Bismarck und der Imperialismus, 23.

⁵⁴³ Jürgen Osterhammel, Colonialism: A Theoretical Overview, trans. Shelley Frisch (Princeton; Kingston: M. Wiener; Ian Randle Publishers, 1997), 21.

⁵⁴⁴ Ibid., 19.

⁵⁴⁵ Trevor R. Getz and Heather Streets-Salter, Modern Imperialism and Colonialism: A Global Perspective (Boston: Prentice Hall, 2011), 9.

involvement, but they continue to neglect Germans in Argentina as part of imperial interests.⁵⁴⁶

Henri Brunschwig proposed three phases of German imperialism: the period until 1815 (ancien régime), the period of liberalism (1815-1871), and then the period of colonial imperialism (after 1871).⁵⁴⁷ Matthew Fitzpatrick has continued on this path of studying German overseas colonies as part of German liberalism.⁵⁴⁸ Ian L. D. Forbes also argues that German informal imperialism existed in South America before WWI, with higher numbers of emigrants going to Brazil, but more intensive trade developing with Argentina.⁵⁴⁹

Klaus Bade argues, based on Friedrich Fabri's writings, that Germans considered South America a desirable settlement destination but, because the political situation in the nineteenth century made a formal acquisition impossible, Germans believed that organized migration and settlement projects should gradually and indiscernibly be turned into German free states. Bade writes that the ultimate goal was thus the creation of a semi-colonial, informal "New Germany in South America" with the River Plate as the "South American river Rhine" –

⁵⁴⁶ Sebastian Conrad, "'Here, the German Is Not Degenerating': Brazil, Emigration and the Nation's Fountain of Youth," in Globalisation and the Nation in Imperial Germany (Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2010), 275–333.

⁵⁴⁷ Henri Brunschwig, L'expansion allemande outre-mer du 15e siècle à nos jours (Paris: PUF, 1957), 207–8.

⁵⁴⁸ Matthew Fitzpatrick, Liberal Imperialism in Germany (New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2008).

⁵⁴⁹ Ian Lawrence Duff Forbes, "German Informal Imperialism in South America before 1914," The Economic History Review 31, no. 3 (1978): 384–398.

politically a foreign country, but with close cultural and economic ties to Germany.⁵⁵⁰ While historians have agreed that the period from 1884 until WWI was the era of German colonialism, there is no discussion about a periodization of non-state-centered German colonialism. Instead of focusing on formal or informal colonies, we should study the economic relations and importance of all German colonies abroad – including those in both Namibia and Argentina.

3.2 The British as Model and Rival for Contemporary German-speakers

British colonization in the South Atlantic had an important impact on German-speakers. Britain served both as model and as rival for German-speakers. British merchant houses dominated the Buenos Aires trade in the nineteenth century.⁵⁵¹ The British built and founded railroads in crisscrossed Argentina.⁵⁵² Britain practiced in Argentina what historians have variously called informal empire or ⁵⁵⁰ Klaus Bade, “Die ‘zweite Reichsgründung’ in Übersee: Imperiale Visionen, Kolonialbewegung und Kolonialpolitik in der Bismarckzeit,” in Die Herausforderung des europäischen Staatensystems: Nationale Ideologie und staatliches Interesse zwischen Restauration und Imperialismus, ed. Adolf M Birke and Günther Heydemann (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1989), 190: “Fernziel solch sukzessiver ”Teutonisierung“ war ein semikoloniales, informelles ”Neu-Deutschland in Südamerika“ mit dem La Plata als ”südamerikanischem Rhein“ - politisch zwar Ausland, kulturelle und wirtschaftlich aber eng verbunden mit dem Auswanderungsland. [14: Fabri, Kolonien, S.1-50; Ders., Auswanderung (siehe Anm. 5);...]” .

⁵⁵¹ Vera Blinn Reber, British Mercantile Houses in Buenos Aires, 1810-1880 (Harvard University Press, 1979).

⁵⁵² Winthrop R. Wright, British-Owned Railways in Argentina: Their Effect on the Growth of Economic Nationalism, 1854-1948 (Austin, TX: University of Texas Press, 1974).

Free Trade Imperialism, similar to what they were doing in Egypt until the late nineteenth century.⁵⁵³

Around 1800, most European settlers in South America originated from Spain, while most Europeans in Southern Africa had come with the Dutch East India Company from the Netherlands. Spanish and Dutch (Afrikaans) remained the dominant languages of communication in the respective regions. After 1800, a number of British individuals attempted to gain more influence in the South Atlantic.⁵⁵⁴ When Napoleon hindered Great Britain from further trade with the European continent in 1803, the British started to find alternative trade partners in the Atlantic, in particular in South America and Africa. The use of steamships after the 1820s allowed for improved British seaborne mobility. Migration from the British Isles increased alongside the opening of new markets overseas. Many English-speaking merchants chose Buenos Aires as their destination for long-term or permanent settlement. In Southern Africa mostly missionaries and explorers dared the encounter throughout the first half of the nineteenth century, with permanent British settlers remaining rather skeptical of permanent settlement in the region.

⁵⁵³ McLean, War, Diplomacy and Informal Empire; Bernard Semmel, The Rise of Free Trade Imperialism: Classical Political Economy the Empire of Free Trade and Imperialism, 1750-1850 (Cambridge, UK: Cambridge University Press, 1970).

⁵⁵⁴ Stig Förster, "Die Kontinuität der Flexibilität: Strategie und Praxis des britischen Imperialismus um 1800," in Imperialistische Kontinuität und nationale Ungeduld im 19. Jahrhundert, ed. Wolfgang Reinhard (Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, 1991), 31–49.

Having been Britain's main trade partner in Latin America, and an important settlement destination for English-speaking settlers, Argentina proved to be one of the most prominent examples of British "informal empire" in Latin America. Britain quickly attained influence as Spanish imperial control of the Americas waned. Spain had created the Viceroyalty of the River Plate in 1776, with Buenos Aires as its capital, but by 1806, a British commander involved in the capture of the Cape of Good Hope made the personal decision to invade Buenos Aires. He managed to set up British control of the city, but was soon defeated by a local Argentine uprising. A second attempt to invade in 1807 also failed to produce long-term, official British control in the region. This did not dissuade individuals from setting up businesses in the city. In 1809, British merchants founded the British Commercial Rooms of Buenos Aires, which was a sort of early chamber of commerce, and in 1816, Buenos Aires declared independence from Spain, opening up the city to expanded investment from a variety of external sources previously restricted from operating in the Spanish colony. After independence, merchants, mainly from Great Britain, German-speaking Central Europe, and France, relocated to Buenos Aires. By the 1820s, the British community of Buenos Aires had already created schools, churches, a cemetery, and a bank. The Anglo-Argentine treaty of friendship and trade of 1825 only legitimized existing practices and ties between the two countries. Buenos Aires granted British migrants the official right to practice Protestantism in Argentina and exempted British residents from Argentine military service. While Britain never tried to retake the region, interests in the area directed official state policy and intervention in South America. Britain got involved with Argentine-Brazilian border disputes and was influential in creating Uruguay as a buffer zone between the two countries. In the 1840s, the so-called Anglo-French blockade occurred when the British intervened in the River Plate as its trade was hindered.

Historians continue to debate to what degree the subsequent construction of railways in Argentina constituted British informal imperialism and thus imperialism based in expanding markets. Anglo-Argentine families and thus local families who permanently settled in Argentina first invested in railroad construction in 1853, but the capital they used came from banks located in London.⁵⁵⁵ Only later, in the 1880s, did British merchants located in Britain get involved in the railway business, by exerting pressure on the British government. Another example of blurred conditions is the Baring crisis of the 1890s, when the financial situation in Argentina had direct consequences on the banking system in London, and was resolved through British government intervention.

Investment and growing influence of other migrants groups soon eclipsed that of the British. Mass migration to Argentina from Italy had begun during the ⁵⁵⁵ Graham-Yooll, The Forgotten Colony.

1870s and 1880s, and Italian culture came to dominate Argentine society.⁵⁵⁶ Meanwhile, the German Empire and the United States emerged as more serious rivals to British economic influence in Argentina beginning in the 1880s. Many German-speakers in Argentina, ironically, had first worked for British companies and used British churches, and cemeteries, before founding their own.

In Sub-Saharan Africa, the histories of the British and German empires were more deeply entangled. Africa became particularly important to European powers in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century, and the German Empire admired Britain and learned from the British Empire's policy-making.⁵⁵⁷ But there was also exchange and cooperation, as both empires used their respective colonial neighbor as the main point of reference for shaping their own identities as colonial powers, as historian Ulrike Linder has shown.

British and German connections preceded the "Scramble for Africa," however. At the beginning of the nineteenth century, German-speakers were already profiting from and integrating into the "British world system."⁵⁵⁸ British and North American sailors practiced whale fishing at Walvis Bay (today ⁵⁵⁶ Donna Gabaccia, Italy's Many Diasporas (Seattle: University of Washington Press, 2000); Devoto, Historia de los italianos en la Argentina. Mark I. Choate, Emigrant Nation: The Making of Italy Abroad (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 2008).

⁵⁵⁷ Ulrike Lindner, Koloniale Begegnungen: Deutschland und Großbritannien als Imperialmächte in Afrika 1880-1914 (Frankfurt am Main: Campus, 2011).

⁵⁵⁸ Ulrike Kirchberger, Aspekte deutsch-britischer Expansion: die Überseeinteressen der deutschen Migranten in Grossbritannien in der Mitte des 19. Jahrhunderts (Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1999); Davis, Manz, and Beerbühl, Transnational Networks; Darwin, The Empire Project.

Namibia) and traded with the local natives. The British took the Cape of Good Hope from the Dutch in 1806, and missionaries from the London Missionary Society were active in the Cape region and were the first to cross the Orange River towards the north. Between 1844 and 1853, Wesleyan missionaries had a station at the place today known as Windhoek. In the 1850s, the Walvis Bay Mining Company became active in the region, and the Cape colony – having been granted limited self-government by Britain in the 1870s – attempted to gain influence in the region. An English magistrate, William Coates Palgrave, was sent as an inspector from the Cape, but persisting conflicts between the local Ojtiherero- and Nama-speakers hindered him from carrying out his annexation plans. Only Walvis Bay was annexed and put under the administration of the Cape Colony, with Palgrave at its head. He had studied theology in Halle, Germany and was thus – according to geologist Georg Gürich – well acquainted with the German character [Wesen]. Gürich therefore labeled the Walvis Bay a “European settlement” [Niederlassung] rather than an exclusively British one.⁵⁵⁹ The first German-speakers went to South Africa with the London Missionary Society; among them was Heinrich Schmelen, who founded the missionary station Bethany in Southern Namibia in 1814.⁵⁶⁰ After the 1840s, the Rhenish

⁵⁵⁹ Georg Gürich, Deutsch Südwest-Afrika: Reisebilder und Skizzen aus den Jahren 1888 und 1889, mit einer Original-Routenkarte (Hamburg: Friederichsen, 1891), 19.

⁵⁶⁰ Eduard Moritz and Maria Fisch, eds., Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 1999).

Missionary Society decided to expand their activities further north beyond the Orange River and sent German-speakers to “Namaland” and “Hereroland.”⁵⁶¹ In the 1870s, their inspector, Friedrich Fabri, even asked the British government for protection against hostile local groups.

The Berlin conference of 1884 put an end to informal empire in Africa as the European powers divided nearly all territory on the map amongst themselves. In Southern Africa, missionaries and explorers played an important imperial role. David Livingstone and Francis Galton are among the most prominent examples. Livingstone first travelled to Africa as a missionary with the London Missionary Society, he then focused his activities on exploration; Galton was accompanied by Charles Anderson and undertook research for the British Royal Geographic Society. For the South American case, Galton’s half-cousin, Charles Darwin, had travelled extensively in Patagonia, but since his travels did not lead to British annexation of Argentina, scholars have not seen a connection between this exploration and empire. Significantly, both Galton and Darwin also made substantial contributions to the development of eugenics, which served as a tool of European imperialism. There are temporal similarities between the British Empire’s interests in Southern America and Africa, as well: in both cases, trade first occurred in the 1780s. Britain acquired the Cape of Good Hope in 1806, the same year it attempted to gain political control over Argentina.

⁵⁶¹ Wallace and Kinahan, A History of Namibia, 62; For a discussion of the different peoples in Namibia from precolonial times to the present, see ibid., 11–13. Instead of “Herero,” Wallace used the designation “Otjiherero-speakers.”

Rivalry between English-speakers and German-speakers in South America was particularly tangible in the tale of the “German Peril” that English-speakers spread throughout Argentina and Brazil. For example, in June 1908, German government official Metternich sent a newspaper article from the London Morning Post to German chancellor Bernhard von Bülow informing him about the reception of the German colonization project in Great Britain. The British newspaper bore the title “German Expansion: An Enclave in Argentina.”⁵⁶² In July 1908, the German consul in Buenos Aires reported to the German chancellor that the project of the German-Argentinean Colonization Company (note here that he used the Spanish name now, Sociedad Germano-Argentina) had supposedly failed due to English banks.⁵⁶³ He included various newspaper clippings supporting this thesis; both *La Nación*⁵⁶⁴ and the *Argentinisches Tageblatt*⁵⁶⁵ commented on a cable from London about the newspaper article from the London

⁵⁶² Metternich, “Metternich [London] to Reichskanzler von Bülow,” June 30, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 175; “German Expansion: An Enclave in Argentina,” Morning Post, June 30, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 136-137.

⁵⁶³ von Sanden, “Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler von Bülow,” July 7, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 240.

⁵⁶⁴ “Los alemanes en la América del Sur [Anlage 1 zu Bericht Nr. 240 des Kaiserlichen Generalkonsulats vom 7. Juli 1908],” La Nación, June 30, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 241.

⁵⁶⁵ “Englische Eifersucht: Ein Londoner Kabel vom 30. Juni berichtet, dass die ‘Morning Post’ von selben Tag sich mit dem ‘deutschen Syndikat’ beschäftigt... [Anlage 2 zu Bericht Nr. 240 des Kaiserlichen Generalkonsulats in Buenos Aires vom 7. Juli 1908],” Argentinisches Tageblatt, June 30, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 242.

Morning Post in that large-scale German colonization projects in Argentina could alarm Argentinean patriots. A few days later, the newspaper AT published another article stating that British attempts to deter the Argentinean government from granting the land concessions to the German-Argentinean Colonization Company had not been successful as the Argentinean government supported the project and the company was not only German, but equally Argentinean.⁵⁶⁶ In July 1908, the newspaper DLPZ also published an article on the events, describing how the German colonization project in Argentina (the DLPZ was claiming that the company was founded in Berlin) and changing opinions among the Central European German press became more favorable with regards to redirecting German migrants from the U.S. to Southern South America. It also described Great Britain's fear of the enterprise, considering this redirection as a threat to their leading position in the world market.⁵⁶⁷ In August 1908, DLPZ published a longer article, taking a stand against British claims that the Germans were planning to invade Patagonia and labeling them "fantasies."⁵⁶⁸ The following month, in September 1908, the Argentine Ministry of Agriculture included the German-Argentinean Colonization Company in a decree regulating land use in Patagonia.⁵⁶⁹ In December 1908, the journal Süd-Amerika published news about the company: its territory could best be used for livestock.⁵⁷⁰ The company director, Bernhard Brinkmann, travelled to the colonies with the German-speaking agricultural specialist Johannes Hochberg and engineer Zimmermann. In March 1909, an employee of the Central Information Office for Migrants contacted the German Foreign Office with a list of misinformation the British company Edendale & Co. in London had fabricated and provided to German migrants traveling to Argentina.⁵⁷¹ For English-speakers, the tale of the “German peril” was an attempt to weaken German-speakers’ growing interest in challenging English-speaking dominance on the world market. Their success remained only a partial one as German-speaking colonies and commercial influence continued to grow at the turn of the nineteenth century.

⁵⁶⁶ "Germanisch-Argentinische Kolonisationsgesellschaft [Anlage 2 zu Bericht Nr. 240 des Kaiserlichen Generalkonsulats in Buenos Aires vom 7. Juli 1908]," Argentinisches Tageblatt, July 2, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 242.

⁵⁶⁷ "Die deutsche Einwanderung nach Argentinien," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, July 23, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 258-259.

⁵⁶⁸ "Phantastereien," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 16, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 12.

⁵⁶⁹ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, “Ministerio de Agricultura: Colonias Pastoriles en Santa Cruz; [‘Boletín Oficial’ vom 9. September 1908],” September 7, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 38.

⁵⁷⁰ “Die Germanisch-Argentinische Kolonisations-Gesellschaft in Buenos Aires,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, December 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 63.

⁵⁷¹ Wolff, “Central-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer to Auswärtiges Amt,” March 15, 1909, BArch R 901/30425, pag. 6-8.

3.3 German-speaking Colonies in the South Atlantic as Category of Experience

My aim is to redirect attention to the individual and group efforts of German-speakers in the South Atlantic to settle land and integrate it into the German (imperial) market and mindset. Contemporaries used the word “colony” to describe Germans in the Argentine interior in places like Esperanza, Santa Fe in 1860, and Buenos Aires starting in 1884, as well as for Namibia. I therefore refer back to the categories of practice German-speakers used at the time – colonization and colonies – and use the concept of the “German colony” in the South Atlantic as an analytical tool. Colonization was the act of settling the land, of “civilizing it.” While for the time period of 1884-1915, the political reality of German-speakers in Namibia – as a German protectorate – was different from that in Argentina, the everyday life of German-speakers in Argentina and Namibia was not as different as we might assume. Argentina was seen as a (potential) market the German Empire without itself being an official colony, through the German-speakers living in Argentina.⁵⁷² Those German-speakers in Argentina argued in favor of economics as the basis of colonialism: the market should come first, only then followed by political institutions and control.⁵⁷³ In addition to the Jannasch’s “overseas interest areas,” German-speakers used two other terms at the turn of the twentieth century to describe economic influence abroad: colonial economy (Kolonialwirtschaft)⁵⁷⁴ and economic cultural work (wirtschaftliche Kulturarbeit).⁵⁷⁵

⁵⁷² See Vallentin, Argentinien und seine wirtschaftliche Bedeutung für Deutschland: Vortrag gehalten am 23. Jan. 1907 im Deutsch-Brasilischen Verein zu Berlin.

⁵⁷³ See Oskar Bongard, Staatssekretär Dernburg in Britisch- und Deutsch-Süd-Afrika, Second edition (Berlin: W. Süsserott, 1909), 6.

While many historians have maintained that German-speakers practiced formal imperialism – and thus colonialism – in Namibia and informal imperialism in Argentina, in practice these categories were more complex and intertwined on both sides of the South Atlantic. I therefore agree with Lora Wildenthal’s assessment that in the German case the formal empire is mainly studied because “history-writing remains overwhelmingly defined by the nation-state. It is probably also due to a wish not to resuscitate a pan-German or Nazi-era expansionist view of German world power. From a number of points of view, it has been easier to minimize the history of German interactions with people around the world, and to be surprised when confronted with evidence of Germany’s economic and cultural reach.”⁵⁷⁶

In 1884 – and thus just around the time of the first official German colony or protectorate – Karl Emil Jung published a book entitled German Colonies: A Contribution to the Better Knowledge of Life and Effects of our Compatriots in all ⁵⁷⁴ Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, ed., Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft, vol. 1 (Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1899).

⁵⁷⁵ Vallentin, Argentinien und seine wirtschaftliche Bedeutung für Deutschland: Vortrag gehalten am 23. Jan. 1907 im Deutsch-Brasilischen Verein zu Berlin.

⁵⁷⁶ Lora Wildenthal, “The Places of Colonialism in the Writing and Teaching of Modern German History,” in German Colonialism: Another Sonderweg?, ed. Marcia Klotz, Special Edition, vol. 16, European Studies Journal 2 (Cedar Falls, Iowa: University of Northern Iowa, 1999), 10.

Parts of the Globe.⁵⁷⁷ He wrote: “In North America, Australia and the Cape Colony, the English have founded actual colonies with the support of many German migrants; and here, we find what characterized the Phoenicians and the old Greek: the settlements are molded by the mother countries. These colonies developed through migration and with the migrants came European customs and education.”⁵⁷⁸ Jung further praised German involvement in the settling and development of the United States, as well as South American states like Brazil.⁵⁷⁹ He specified that these settlements were German colonies but under foreign sovereignty.

Within a few years, colonial theorists began to expand their definitions of “colony” both to ventures under and external to state oversight. In his 1887 publication on German colonial history, Max von Koschitzky distinguished between the pre-history German colonization and colonial policy (Kolonialpolitik) of the German Empire.⁵⁸⁰ In the first part, he included a discussion of German colonies in Russia and Brazil, the second part focused on the German protectorates. By 1897 then, in the introduction to his colonial atlas, geographer-cartographer Paul Langhans (*1867 – 1952) argued that the definition of “colony” had become too narrow after the acquisition of the German protectorates: he ⁵⁷⁷ Karl Emil Jung, Deutsche Kolonien. Ein Beitrag zur besseren Kenntniss des Lebens und Wirkens unserer Landsleute in allen Erdteilen (Leipzig, 1884).

⁵⁷⁸ Ibid., 15.

⁵⁷⁹ Ibid., 19f.

⁵⁸⁰ Max von Koschitzky, Deutsche Colonialgeschichte (Leipzig: P. Froberg, 1887).

advocated that it should still include the entirety of German colonization abroad, which is why he included all German settlements abroad in his atlas.⁵⁸¹ Langhans was a member of the Pan-German League (Alldeutscher Verein), active in “nationality mapping,”⁵⁸² and in 1931, he became a member of the NSDAP. In 1900, French historian and economist Henri Hauser (*1866 – 1946),⁵⁸³ mentor of Fernand Braudel, published a study on German colonialism in which he wrote that one should not limit such a study to the German protectorates but rather consider all extra-European territories as colonies where Germans lived.⁵⁸⁴ He referred to Langhans’s atlas and distinguished in his publication between “imperial colonies” and “spontaneous colonies,” similar to the later distinction between formal and informal colonies.⁵⁸⁵ He discussed Germans in the protectorate of German South-West Africa, but also the distribution of Germans in South Africa.⁵⁸⁶ In another volume on South Africa, he listed all of the towns

⁵⁸¹ Paul Langhans, Deutscher Kolonial-Atlas: 30 Karten mit 300 Nebenkarten (Gotha: J. Perthes, 1897).

⁵⁸² Jason D. Hansen, Mapping the Germans: Statistical Science, Cartography, and the Visualization of the German Nation, 1848-1914 (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2015), 88.

⁵⁸³ Séverine-Antigone Marin and Georges-Henri Soutou, eds., Henri Hauser (1866-1946): Humaniste - Historien - Républicain (Paris: Presses Paris Sorbonne, 2006).

⁵⁸⁴ Henri Hauser, Colonies allemandes impériales et spontanées, Études d'économie coloniale (Paris: Nony & cie, 1900), ix-x: “Je n’ai pas cru devoir limiter cette étude aux seuls pays qui sont officiellement, impérialement allemands. Il me semble qu’il faut entendre sous le vocable colonies toutes les terres neuves, situées hors d’Europe, dont l’appropriation est tentée par des groupes d’Européens. Ainsi entendues, les plus importantes des colonies allemandes ne sont pas les territoires placés sous le protectorat de l’Empire (Schutzgebiete). Ces colonies spontanées, aux États-Unis, au Brésil, contribuent d’ailleurs à la richesse et à la puissance de l’Empire.”

⁵⁸⁵ Hauser, Colonies allemandes impériales et spontanées.

⁵⁸⁶ Ibid., 58f.

with German names, their German newspapers, churches, and so on. Hauser also stated that thirty-six German merchant houses in the Cape Colony owned twelve million marks of capital in 1900.⁵⁸⁷ Hauser concluded that German colonization was largely a result of private initiative, highlighting the importance of unofficial German colonies and their role in and contribution to the German Colonial Empire.⁵⁸⁸

The German Colonial Society (Deutscher Kolonialverein) organized three colonial congresses in 1902, 1905, and 1910.⁵⁸⁹ Officially, the congresses treated the subject of German colonies and “interest regions” (Interessensgebiete). The discussion originated within the colonial and migrant associations as well as merchants and thus the civil society; these interest groups coalesced and demanded greater intervention from the German Imperial government. In 1902, many Germans continued to perceive the discrepancy between German migration to foreign lands and that to official territory abroad as a dilemma. They considered the United States of America as an ever-stronger economic rival; this contributed to the felt need to send Germans to areas where they could “maintain their Germanness.” Overall, there was a divide between proponents of the official colonies and of the “unofficial colonies” at the German Colonial Congress. The latter camp was itself divided between advocates of Brazil and of Argentina as best destinations.⁵⁹⁰ As for the formal German Colonial Empire, there were many colonial enthusiasts who were happy that, finally, Germany possessed territory overseas. An 1884 pamphlet from Gerhard Rohlfs celebrated Angra Pequena “the first German colony in Africa.”⁵⁹¹ The territory around Angra Pequena claimed by the merchant Adolf Lüderitz in 1884 was a mere fraction of the later German South-West Africa.⁵⁹²

⁵⁸⁷ Richard Hauser, Die deutschen Überseebanken, Abhandlungen des Staatswissenschaftlichen Seminars zu Jena 3, 4 (Jena: G. Fischer, 1906), 60.

⁵⁸⁸ Hauser, Colonies allemandes impériales et spontanées, 131.

⁵⁸⁹ Deutscher Kolonialkongress, Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902; Deutscher Kolonialkongress, Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses; Deutscher Kolonialkongress, Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1910.

3.4 Conclusion

Imperialism, both informal and formal – as synonym with colonialism – is a concept that functions with the empire and nation-state as main actor. Imperialism is thus a nation-state-centered tool of analysis. In this sense, imperialism – along with colonialism – is limited in its usefulness as an analytical tool for my project of examining the activities of nineteenth-century German-speakers in the South Atlantic.

⁵⁹⁰ Hermann Meyer, “Die deutsche Auswanderung nach Südamerika, besonders nach Südbrasilien,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903); Alfred Funke, “Über die kulturellen Interessen und Aufgaben Deutschlands in Südbrasilien,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903), 479–93; Alemann, “Argentinien als Siedelungsgebiet für deutsche Auswanderung.”

⁵⁹¹ Gerhard Rohlfs, Angra Pequena: die erste deutsche Kolonie in Afrika; dem ganzen deutschen Volke gewidmet (Bielefeld; Leipzig: Velhagen, 1884).

⁵⁹² See Imre Demhardt, “Von der Schutzgewalt zur Kolonialgewalt: Die Schutzverträge und die rechtliche Entstehung des kolonialen Staatsraums,” in Föderative Raumstrukturen und wirtschaftliche Entwicklungen in Namibia, ed. Heinrich Lamping and Uwe Jäschke (Frankfurt am Main: Institut für Wirtschafts- und Sozialgeographie der Johann-Wolfgang-Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main, 1993), 17–58; Imre Demhardt, Deutsche Kolonialgrenzen in Afrika: historisch-geographische Untersuchungen ausgewählter Grenzräume von Deutsch-Südwestafrika und Deutsch-Ostafrika (Hildesheim; New York: G. Olms, 1995).

The British were both role model and bitter rival for German-speakers in the South Atlantic. The British Empire has also served historians as an example for how to approach the study of the German Empire. Nonetheless, I have argued in this chapter that “colony” as a category of experience represented for German-speakers in the South Atlantic mostly a group project that was privately motivated and carried out. While the activities of German-speakers were carried out by private individuals organized in small groups in the form of associations, both non-profit and for-profit, South Atlantic German-speakers also did seek contact with the Central European evolving nation-state entities.

Thus, the German-speaking (business) community in Buenos Aires only started to label itself as the “German colony of Buenos Aires” in their 1884 address book as a direct response to the acquisition of a small strip of land by Adolf Lüderitz in Southern Africa and the subsequent talk of “first German colony” or “first German colony in Africa.” The reaction of German-speakers in Buenos Aires was to send a message to Central European Germans. In the case of Namibia, the term “colony” was, from the beginning of the German protectorate South-West Africa in 1884, used as a synonym for the protectorate; “colony” being a word imported from the English, French, and Spanish, the (other) imperial powers.

In the Argentinean interior, Argentinean citizens and state officials used the term “colony” to refer to agricultural colonies throughout the nineteenth century. However, the use of “agricultural colony” in Argentina was also connected to European colonization theorists like Paul Leroy-Beaulieu and Wilhelm Roscher, who distinguished generally between “colonization (or settlement) colonies,” “commercial (or trade) colonies,” and “plantation colonies.” We will further discuss the links between agricultural colonies and colonization in the third part of this dissertation.

Chapter 4. “Advancement” and “Civilization” via Associations and Institutions

In April 1898, a contemporary German-speaker published an article on “societal self-aid.”⁵⁹³ He explained ongoing debates over the role of the state in regulating societal life in European states, proclaiming that state aid had failed and only self-aid, originating within the people, could be successful. Matschnig also linked the success of self-aid to the qualities of the Germans and ultimately to the German or ⁵⁹³ A. Matschnig, “Die gesellschaftliche Selbsthilfe (Stoff zum Nachdenken für die südamerikanischen Germanen),” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 20, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; A. Matschnig, “Die gesellschaftliche Selbsthilfe (Fortsetzung),” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 21, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; A. Matschnig, “Die gesellschaftliche Selbsthilfe II.,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 22, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; A. Matschnig, “Die gesellschaftliche Selbsthilfe (Fortsetzung),” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 23, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; A. Matschnig, “Die gesellschaftliche Selbsthilfe (Fortsetzung und Schluß),” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 25, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Teutonic “race.” He linked community spirit to a civilized and superior mind. As the subtitle of his article indicated, it was specifically addressed to South American Germans (Germanen): he described the duty of German-speakers in a less developed country as expressing their superiority through their supposedly racially inherent group spirit and forming associations in order to further develop South American societies. This perception that German-speakers had of their own role was in stark contrast with the actual development of Argentinean history. As Pilar González Bernaldo has argued, the Argentinean state was created through sociability and the founding of associations and clubs in the 1830s.⁵⁹⁴ More recently, scholar Alexander Kramer has pointed to the importance of studying German migrant associations.⁵⁹⁵

I define “associations” in this section very broadly, to include any type of collection of individuals who got together to create something. Thus I include here: for-profit companies, church associations, school associations, philanthropic associations, and leisure associations. Some of these were founded in the South Atlantic by the migrants themselves, others were created in Central Europe by people wanting to promote activities in the South Atlantic. In many cases, the seat of the association or society was registered in Germany, but the bulk of its activities were in Argentina or Namibia. These associations were usually private in origin. Sometimes they closely cooperated with the German or the Argentinean state. In some cases this cooperation existed from the start, in others it only developed over the course of time. South Atlantic German-speakers were proud of their associations. The terms Germans used at the time were Verein, Vereinigung, Gesellschaft, and Verband. They organized themselves in everyday life as “self-made men,” ideally without the interference of the state. The German-speaking communities in the South Atlantic were very much grass-roots movements. The types of associations we discuss in this first subsection are the non-profit ones: churches (both Protestant and Catholic), schools, local newspapers, leisure associations, and philanthropic associations.

⁵⁹⁴ Pilar González Bernaldo, Civilité et politique aux origines de la nation argentine: les sociabilités à Buenos Aires, 1829-1862 (Paris: Publications de la Sorbonne, 1999); Pilar González Bernaldo, Civility and Politics in the Origins of the Argentine Nation: Sociabilities in Buenos Aires, 1829-1862 (Los Angeles: UCLA Latin American Center Publications University of California Los Angeles, 2006).

⁵⁹⁵ Valentin Kramer, Zwischen den Heimaten: Deutsch-argentinische Einwanderervereine in Rosario und Esperanza, 1856-1933 (Bielefeld: transcript Verlag, 2016).

4.1 Churches at the Core of the Communities

On both sides of the South Atlantic, religious associations and institutions were closely tied to colony formation and colonization projects. In Argentina and Namibia, groups of German-speakers largely identified as Christians, both Lutherans and Catholics.

In Namibia, Christians of any nationality were in the minority, and before the establishment of Christian church communities, missionaries saw themselves in the position of having to proselytize to both natives and European whites. Many of the Nama-speakers had been introduced to Christianity (and a European lifestyle, as well as the Dutch language) through contact with the Cape Colony. These were exclusively Protestant missionaries. Catholics came to the region later and in higher numbers during the time of the German protectorate. In 1907, one pastor wrote about a serious rivalry between Catholics and Protestants in all German protectorates and colonies.⁵⁹⁶ Protestants and Catholics were in greater conflict with each other in Namibia than in Argentina. In Argentina, the great majority of the population, which descended mostly from Spanish and Italian migrants, was Catholic, and German-speaking Protestants first cooperated with English-speaking Protestants, before setting up their own religious community within the larger Argentinean society. Over time, the German-speakers in Argentina found more common ground in shared language and culture rather than religious differences. I argue that religious associations and colonization projects were closely entangled throughout the South Atlantic.

⁵⁹⁶ Johannes Spiecker, Welche Pflichten hat das evangelische Deutschland in Südwestafrika? - Referat des Herrn Missionsinspektors Pastor Spiecker, Barmen, in der Versammlung der Bergischen Gruppe des Evangelischen Bundes am 23. Oktober 1907 (Bonn: Carl Georgi, Universitäts-Buchdruckerei und Verlag, 1907).

4.1.1 German-speaking Protestants as Pioneers

The development of Protestant churches in Argentina and Namibia took place in different time periods but underwent similar processes: first there was a local demand for a church, once there were enough German-speakers in place. The request to affiliate with the Prussian Church (Germany) – and the German Protestant diaspora association Gustav-Adolf-Verein – came from the South Atlantic society. Both the Argentinean and Namibian churches requested pastors to be sent from Germany. Concerning financial maintenance, the Argentinean church was more independent and self-reliant as it received funding from German businesses and local wealthy individuals; the Namibian church was financially dependent on support from Germany. These Protestant churches evolved into their own, independent synods. Even in Namibia, the church survived colonial times and WWI because it was always, and remained, independent from colonial government matters.

Britta Wellnitz has studied the Protestant churches in Argentina and Namibia and come to the conclusion that they were more similar than different.⁵⁹⁷ While she uses the terms colonist congregations (Kolonistengemeinden) for South America and colonial congregations (Kolonialgemeinden) for southern Africa, she also insists on the fluidity of these categories.⁵⁹⁸ On both sides of the South ⁵⁹⁷ Wellnitz, Deutsche evangelische Gemeinden im Ausland.

⁵⁹⁸ Ibid., 18–24 .

Atlantic, Protestant church activities started to become more organized in 1842. In Argentina, the La Plata Calendar of 1873 claimed that the German colony of Buenos Aires originated with the set-up of the German-Protestant church in 1842.⁵⁹⁹ The merchants Christian Zimmermann, Louis de Chapeaurouge, and Carl August Bunge were among the key figures. In Namibia, the missionaries Carl Hugo Hahn and Franz Joseph Kleinschmidt are generally credited with starting the work of the Rhenish Missionary Society (RMG) in 1842 with Nama- and Herero-speakers.⁶⁰⁰ Others claim that it was Heinrich Schmelen, who worked for the London Missionary Society but was a German-speaker, who established the foundation enabling the RMG to come to Namibia.⁶⁰¹ Schmelen founded the missionary station Bethany in Southern Namibia in 1814.⁶⁰²

The German-speaking Protestant churches in Argentina and Namibia did not automatically constitute their own territorial state churches (Landeskirche).⁶⁰³ This seems obvious in Argentina, as it was not part of the German empire. But neither in Namibia did the church ever come under state (federal) control. In both places, the religious communities were born of the effort of individuals who got together to organize the congregations. The emerging church communities ⁵⁹⁹ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 115–16.

⁶⁰⁰ Wallace and Kinahan, A History of Namibia.

⁶⁰¹ Trüper, The Invisible Woman.

⁶⁰² Moritz and Fisch, Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842.

⁶⁰³ For the translation, see Manz, Constructing a German Diaspora, 4.

became part of the Prussian state church and, through the work of the Gustav-Adolf-Verein, they became part of the German diaspora. The congregations were not split up into regional or national categories (for example, Swiss or Austrian): they constituted a unifying factor for German-speakers along the lines of their Protestant faith. By 1914, both Protestant and Catholic churches were celebrating the Kaiser's birthday and thus closely linked to a shared German national identity. The initiative for the foundation of church communities originated in the South Atlantic, but these South Atlantic congregations did ask for aid from the Prussian church in Germany.

They were granted affiliation to the Prussian State Church (Preussische Landeskirche), a territorial state church (Landeskirche), and its Protestant Central Council (Evangelischer Zentralrat) imposed certain responsibilities upon them. While in Argentina, it was clear that the German-speaking church was under Argentine jurisdiction and had to be registered as a private association, this was different across the Atlantic. In Namibia, a contemporary discussion took place on whose matter the church was in Germany: was it a state (Land) matter? Or was it a federal (Reich) matter? In 1904, the journal of the German Colonial Society (DKG) published two articles about Colonial church law. In the first, author Schreiber-Stettin summarized the differences in opinion on this matter: there were those arguing that everything in the German protectorates was under federal jurisdiction and this included Protestant churches, and those countering that the church was a state matter in Germany and thus also should be such in the overseas protectorates.⁶⁰⁴ Schreiber-Stettin clarified that the affiliation with the Prussian church only entailed the sending of pastors from Germany to the overseas churches.⁶⁰⁵ In the second article, H. Edler von Hoffmann looked beyond just the German options and discussed models of Church authority in England and France.⁶⁰⁶ In 1911, the Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt für Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Protestant Church Newspaper for German South-West Africa) published an article on the legal foundation for the protestant churches.⁶⁰⁷ In 1912, Rudolf Böhmer asked whether the Protestant church should develop according to the German or the American model.⁶⁰⁸ He wrote that while in Germany, historically a connection between church and state had developed in form of the territorial state church (Landeskirche), which was regulated by public law, Protestant churches in Namibia were entirely of a private nature.

⁶⁰⁴ Schreiber-Stettin, "Koloniales Kirchenrecht," ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6, no. 12 (1904): 871.

⁶⁰⁵ Ibid., 873.

⁶⁰⁶ H. Edler v. Hoffmann, "Fragen des protestantischen Kolonialkirchenrechtes," ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 492–97.

⁶⁰⁷ Heyse, "Die Rechtsgrundlage unserer Gemeinden," Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt für Deutsch-Südwestafrika, March 1911, No. 3 edition, EZA 5/2916.

⁶⁰⁸ Böhmer, "Deutsch-evangelisches Leben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Vortrag auf dem II. Deutschen Kolonial-Missionstage zu Kassel," 191.

4.1.1.1 The Protestant Church in Namibia

The Lutheran church was active in South Africa already in the sixteenth century with Dutch, German, and French employees of the Dutch East India Company settling at the Cape of Good Hope.⁶⁰⁹ In 1861, the St. Martini church was founded in Cape Town as a church by and for German-speakers and its German school in 1883.⁶¹⁰ The South African Synod (Synode Südafrikas) was founded in 1895 in Hannover, Germany.⁶¹¹

In today's Namibia, the beginnings of organized German-speaking Protestant religion can be traced back to Schmelen from the London Missionary Society (LMS) as well as C. H. Hahn and Kleinschmidt from the Rhenish Missionary Society (RMG). They worked between the Nama- and Otji-herero-speakers.⁶¹² Schmelen had first gone to South Africa in 1806, after he met a Nama woman in London and was fascinated by her.⁶¹³ After his arrival in Southern Africa, he married a Zara, a Nama woman, and she helped him translate the New ⁶⁰⁹ Georg Scriba, "Chronologie der lutherischen Kirchengeschichte Südafrikas (1652-1928)," in Deutsche evangelische Kirche im kolonialen südlichen Afrika: die Rolle der Auslandsarbeit von den Anfängen bis in die 1920er Jahre, ed. Hanns Lessing et al. (Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, 2011), 285–306.

⁶¹⁰ Kurt Naumann, Deutsche Evangelisch-Lutherische St. Martini Kirche, Kapstadt: Festschrift Zum 100. Jährigen Jubiläum (Kapstadt: ABC, 1961).

⁶¹¹ Reino Ottermann, The Centenary of the Synod, 1895-1995 (Cape Town: Evangelical Lutheran Church in Southern Africa (Cape Church), 1995).

⁶¹² Wallace and Kinahan, A History of Namibia.

⁶¹³ Walter Moritz, Auf dem Reitochsen quer durch's südwestliche Afrika: Missionar Schmelen, Ein Pionier der Sprache der Nama (1811-1848) am Oranje, in Bethanien, Steinkopf, und Komaggas, Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 17 (Werther [Germany]: Moritz, 2004).

Testament into her native language.⁶¹⁴ Schmelen was the one who told the RMG, towards the end of his missionary activity, that they should expand their work further north beyond the Orange River, and thus into territory that is today Namibia. Hahn and Kleinschmidt arrived in Namibia in 1842.⁶¹⁵ The white Protestant church in Windhoek was founded in 1896⁶¹⁶ under pastor Anz.⁶¹⁷ In 1900, the Protestant church in Windhoek became independent.⁶¹⁸ The white Protestant church was founded in Swakopmund in 1905.⁶¹⁹ In 1913, the Keetmanshooper Protestant church became part of Prussian church.⁶²⁰

Still, on several occasions, German-speakers lamented that, seemingly, German-speaking settlers didn't found a congregation of their own immediately, and they got along well without one.⁶²¹ At the same time, they argued that settlers did not found a congregation immediately because the Rhenish missionaries were already active and present in Namibia by the time more German-speakers settled. And in small towns, the Rhenish continued to administer the churches until WWI.

⁶¹⁴ Trüper, The Invisible Woman.

⁶¹⁵ Carl Hugo Hahn, Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland, ed. Brigitte Lau, 5 vols. (Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1984).

⁶¹⁶ "Evangelisch Lutherische Kirche in Namibia (DELK)," accessed February 18, 2017, <http://www.elcin-gelc.org/>.

⁶¹⁷ "Windhuk soll in die Unterstützungsauszüge [...] aufgenommen werden" (Unterstützungsausg. Heft 65 für 1907, March 16, 1907), EZA 200/1/7131, pg. 25.

⁶¹⁸ Ibid.

⁶¹⁹ "Evangelisch Lutherische Kirche in Namibia (DELK)."

⁶²⁰ "Gemeindeversammlung der evangelischen Gemeinde Keetmanshoop," Keetmanshooper Zeitung, July 24, 1913, SBB - Westhafen.

⁶²¹ Sch., "Koloniales. Die evangelische Kirche in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika im 25. Jahre deutscher Herrschaft," Bleiblatt der Preussischen Zeitung, October 17, 1909, No. 499 edition, EZA 5/2916.

In the 1870s, the German missionaries had divided Namibia into different areas; they cooperated closely and met at certain intervals.⁶²² This creation of missionary stations had an impact on the lifestyle of indigenous people and created “urban” centers.

After the Namibian War, discussions took place in Germany on what the Protestant church should do in German South-West Africa. They were sparked by requests from the South Atlantic: In 1907, Rhenish missionary Eich asked the Evangelischer Zentralverein for more pastors for GSWA. He pointed out that most German settlers distinguished between the church and the missions: they hated the missions and considered them as inferior, in contrast to the church, which was for whites. Thus, the presence of more pastors should show the settlers that the Protestant church cared about them.⁶²³ Rhenish Missionary inspector Johannes Spiecker then became active, promoting more engagement of the Protestant church in GSWA.⁶²⁴

The German protectorate South-West Africa was then considered a field for “internal mission” (Innere Mission).⁶²⁵ The objective of the internal mission

⁶²² “[Statistik der Gemeinden des nördlichen Konferenzverbandes bis Mai 1876],” 1876, RMG 2.611, Bl. 95.

⁶²³ Eich’s letter is cited in: Johannes Spiecker, “Betr. Pastorierung des deutschen Schutzgebiets [Barmen, den 18. April 1907],” April 18, 1907, EZA 5/2916.

⁶²⁴ Spiecker, Welche Pflichten hat das evangelische Deutschland in Südwestafrika? - Referat des Herrn Missionsinspektors Pastor Spiecker, Barmen, in der Versammlung der Bergischen Gruppe des Evangelischen Bundes am 23. Oktober 1907.

⁶²⁵ “Innere Mission in Südwestafrika,” Deutsche Tageszeitung, February 16, 1908, BArch R 1001/1878, pag. 24.

was to take care of Germans with little means through aid societies (Hilfsvereine). For example, the RMG asked the Zentral-Ausschuß für Innere Mission to take care of the children of white fathers and indigenous mothers.⁶²⁶ On 16 October 1899, a meeting of the Windhoek Protestant parish discussed how to procure a new pastor and how to finance him.⁶²⁷ On October 26, the newspaper Windhoeker Anzeiger announced on the front page that the Protestant church of Windhoek was seeking to officially become part of the Prussian State Church (Preussische Landeskirche).⁶²⁸ In this article, the author argued that it was understandable that German congregations in foreign countries had to provide entirely for themselves, but he argued that German congregations in German colonies were in a different situation, as they were supposed to strengthen German-ness in the colonies, and thus needed financial support from Germany.⁶²⁹

Wilhelm Anz was pastor of the Windhoek congregation in 1896 when architect Gottlieb Redecker, son of missionary colonist Wilhelm Redecker, started planning the first church for whites, which was later called Christuskirche.⁶³⁰ The ⁶²⁶ Böhmer, “Deutsch-evangelisches Leben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Vortrag auf dem II. Deutschen Kolonial-Missionstage zu Kassel,” 197.

⁶²⁷ “Am Montag, den 16. d. Mts., Nachmittags 3 Uhr, findet im evangel. Kirchensaal eine Gemeinde-Versammlung statt ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 12, 1899, NAN.

⁶²⁸ “Die evangelische Gemeinde in Windhoek,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 26, 1899, NAN.

⁶²⁹ Ibid.

⁶³⁰ Mossolow, “Architekt Gottlieb Redecker”; Walter Moritz, Vier Generationen Redecker in Namibia seit 1866: Aus Westfälischer Vergangenheit in die Namibische Zukunft, Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 20 (Werther, Westfalen [Germany]: W. Moritz, (Windhoek, Namibia: John Meinert Printing), 2010).

construction started in 1907 and the church was inaugurated in 1910.⁶³¹ The Governor of German South-West Africa participated in the opening of the German church in Windhoek in 1910.⁶³² The colonial government representatives thus attended “lay activities.” Anz later participated in the diaspora conference, when he was already working in Germany again. Anz had been pastor of the Protestant congregation of Windhoek and continued to inform the public in Germany about the developments in the German protectorate after he had been called back to Germany.⁶³³

4.1.1.2 The Protestant Church in Argentina

German-speaking Protestants in Argentina were already setting up a German cemetery commission (deutsche Friedhofskommission) as early as 1833.⁶³⁴ The founding of the first Protestant church congregation in Buenos Aires is usually dated to 1843, although at least one source dates it to June 12 1842.⁶³⁵ Regardless, in 1843, the founders of the “German Church Buenos Aires” – Zimmermann, Carl

⁶³¹ Sch., “Koloniales. Die evangelische Kirche in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika im 25. Jahre deutscher Herrschaft.”

⁶³² Brückner, “Kaiserlicher Gouverneur von Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” October 15, 1910, NAN BWI 150 K.2, p.16.

⁶³³ [Wilhelm] Anz, “Evangelisch-kirchliches Leben in unseren Kolonien,” Deutsche Kolonialzeitung. Organ der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft, February 17, 1912, BArch R 8023/895a, pag. 31.

⁶³⁴ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 166.

⁶³⁵ Jerónimo José Granados, “Siegel, August Ludwig (1812-1883),” in Personalidades religiosas de Buenos Aires: Hombres y mujeres que dejaron su huella, ed. Marcos Gabriel Vancini and Alfredo Abriani (Buenos Aires: Gobierno de la Ciudad de Buenos Aires, 2012), 190.

August Bunge, and Deetjen, among others – met and discussed the acquisition of a German pastor.⁶³⁶ They contacted the Protestant Association for North America in Bremen, which sent August Ludwig Siegel as the church’s first pastor.⁶³⁷ The construction of the church in the calle Esmeralda began on 18 October 1851.⁶³⁸

The Protestant Central Archives in Berlin (Evangelisches Zentralarchiv) hold the correspondence between the German-speaking Protestant church committee in Buenos Aires and the church authorities in Germany. These documents include letters from the first pastor August Ludwig Siegel to the German Protestant congregation from June 1842, prior to his acceptance of the job offer and move to Buenos Aires.⁶³⁹ They also reveal that the church used its own liturgy.⁶⁴⁰ According to Bachmann, the church joined the Protestant church by free will and upon a vote by the church members on 20 April 1845.⁶⁴¹ By ⁶³⁶ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, ?

⁶³⁷ Granados, “Siegel, August Ludwig (1812-1883),” 190.

⁶³⁸ Die Feier der Grundsteinlegung zur Capelle der Deutsch-Evangelischen Gemeinde in Buenos Ayres am 18. October 1851, nebst einigen Notizen ueber die Gemeinde selbst (Buenos Ayres: Ymprenta de la Gaceta Mercantil, 1851).

⁶³⁹ August Ludwig Siegel, “An die deutsche protestantische Gemeinde in Buenos Ayres,” June 19, 1842, EZA 5/4095, pg. 37-38.

⁶⁴⁰ “Auszug aus der Liturgie für den Gebrauch der Evangelischen Gemeinde, in Buenos Ayres,” 1843, EZA 5/4095, pg. 50.

⁶⁴¹ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 2.

1847, the German congregation had its own statutes.⁶⁴² And by 1851, the first stone was set for the construction of the chapel in Esmeralda Street.⁶⁴³

4.1.1.3 Connections with English-speaking Protestants

A few Anglican missionaries were active among the Indians in Argentina's Patagonian Mission.⁶⁴⁴ Carl Hugo Hahn even noted the end of the Patagonian Mission in a diary entry written in Namibia on 25 January 1853. According to the editors of his published diary, this was a “[r]eference to seven missionaries who tried to establish a mission in southern Argentina but, deprived of local assistance, starved to death.”⁶⁴⁵

After this inauspicious start, German-speakers in Argentina forged close connections to English-speaking Protestants. The different denominations created churches in Argentina in the following years: Anglicans in 1825, Presbyterians in 1829, Methodists in 1836, Lutherans in 1843, Baptists in 1886, Valdenses in 1887, ⁶⁴² August Ludwig Siegel et al., Allgemeine Kirchen-Statuten für die Deutsch-Evangelische Gemeinde in Buenos Ayres (Buenos Aires: Imprenta de la Gaceta Mercantil, 1847).

⁶⁴³ Die Feier der Grundsteinlegung zur Capelle der Deutsch-Evangelischen Gemeinde in Buenos Ayres am 18. October 1851, nebst einigen Notizen ueber die Gemeinde selbst.

⁶⁴⁴ Gustav Warneck, Outline of the History of Protestant Missions from the Reformation to the Present Time: A Contribution to Recent Church-History, trans. Thomas Smith, Translated from the Second Edition (Edinburgh: Gemmell, 1884), 136 f.

⁶⁴⁵ Carl Hugo Hahn, Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Namaland and Damaraland. Part III: 1852-1855, ed. Brigitte Lau, vol. 3 (Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1985), 641.

and Adventists in 1894.⁶⁴⁶ The Anglicans were English, the Presbyterians Scottish, and the Methodists, Baptists and Adventists American in origin. The Treaty of Commerce and Friendship of 1825 between the United Provinces (Provincias Unidas) and England guaranteed freedom of religion in Argentina.⁶⁴⁷

Church records indicate that German-speakers got married at English-speaking churches: for example, Gotthelf Reinecke and Christina Amalia Weigel, both born in Freiburg in Saxony, were married by Pastor William Brown at St. Andrew's Scots Presbyterian Church in Buenos Aires on 12 September 1839, as were Augustus Edward Möller, born in Hamburg (sic!) and Rosamunda Adelaide Bocrrie, born in Bremen, on 22 December 1842.⁶⁴⁸ On 29 May 1843,

⁶⁴⁶ Paula Seiguer, "La iglesia anglicana en la Argentina: Religión e identidad nacional," Anuario del IEHS 17 (2002): 202–203. Dates taken from Jean Meyer, Historia de los cristianos en América Latina, siglos XIX y XX, (México, Vuelta, 1989), 112.

⁶⁴⁷ Seiguer, "La iglesia anglicana en la Argentina: Religión e identidad nacional"; Paula Seiguer, "¿Son los anglicanos argentinos? Un primer debate sobre la evangelización protestante y la nación," Revista Escuela de Historia 5.1, no. 5 (2006); Paula Seiguer, "La Iglesia anglicana en la Argentina y la colectividad británica: identidad y estrategias misionales, 1869-1930" (Ph.D., Universidad de Buenos Aires, 2009); Seiguer, "Religión y formas de producción de etnicidad"; Paula Seiguer, "Los inicios de un debate: el lugar del protestantismo histórico en la Argentina," in Experiencias plurales de lo sagrado: la diversidad religiosa argentina, ed. Fabián Claudio Flores and Paula Seiguer (Buenos Aires: Imago Mundi Ediciones, 2014).

⁶⁴⁸ See ibid.; Paula Seiguer has studied the relation between English-speaking Protestants and Argentinean society, see Seiguer, "La iglesia anglicana en la Argentina: Religión e identidad nacional"; Paula Seiguer, "¿Son los anglicanos argentinos? Un primer debate sobre la evangelización protestante y la nación," Revista Escuela de Historia 5.1, no. 5 (2006); Paula Seiguer, "La Iglesia anglicana en la Argentina y la colectividad británica: identidad y estrategias misionales, 1869-1930" (Ph.D., Universidad de Buenos Aires, 2009); Paula Seiguer, "Religión y formas de producción de etnicidad: La iglesia Anglicana en la Argentina," in Estudios de historia religiosa, ed. Ana María Rodríguez (Santa Rosa, La Pampa [Argentina]: EDUNLPam - Prohistoria Ediciones, 2013), 17–39; Paula Seiguer, "Los inicios de un debate: el lugar del protestantismo histórico en la Argentina," in Experiencias plurales de lo sagrado: la diversidad religiosa argentina, ed. Fabián Claudio Flores and Paula Seiguer (Buenos Aires: Imago Mundi Ediciones, 2014).

Danish citizen Heinrich Pingel was married to German citizen Julianna Carlista Santo in the Buenos Aires Episcopal Methodist Church by Reverend William H. Norris.⁶⁴⁹ German-speakers continued to be married by English-speaking pastors even after the founding of the German-speaking church and the acquisition of a pastor from Germany. In 1831, German-speakers, along with English-speakers, obtained a section of the newly founded Chacarita cemetery.⁶⁵⁰ C. Wolff noted in 1856 that religious freedom was granted without problems and Protestants were treated as equals as long as both partners were Protestant.⁶⁵¹ In mixed couples, however, the Catholic partner had a more favorable position.

In 1842, the pastor of the Scottish Presbyterian church of Buenos Aires, William Brown, addressed some advice to the German Protestant congregation about how to found a (Protestant) church in Argentina.⁶⁵² Brown warned against attempting to missionize or speak bad about the majority Catholic population. The committee to form a German-speaking church in Buenos Aires met at the Scottish church.⁶⁵³ The German Protestant search committee forwarded Brown's letter to ⁶⁴⁹ "Iglesia Evangélica Metodista Argentina Buenos Aires Episcopal Methodist Church, Marriages 1843-1860," British Settlers in Argentina and Uruguay - Studies in 19th and 20th Century Emigration, August 2010, http://www.argbrit.org/Methodist/MethMarrs1843_60.htm.

⁶⁵⁰ Omar Lopez Mato Vizzari Hernan S., Ángeles de Buenos Aires: Historia de los cementerios de la Chacarita, Alemán y Británico (Olmo Ediciones, 2011).

⁶⁵¹ C. Wolff, "Die Religionsfreiheit in der Argentinischen Republik II. [Preußische Correspondenz, 1856, No. 130. Berlin, den 6. Juni 1856]" (R. Decker, June 6, 1856), EZA 5/2061, p. 305.

⁶⁵² William Brown, "[Copy] [To] J.C. Zimmermann Esqr., Louis de Chapeaurouge Esqr.; Buenos Ayres June 19, 1842," June 19, 1842, EZA 5/4095, pg. 11-17.

⁶⁵³ Ibid.

Siegel and he wrote an endearing response to Brown, thanking him for the advice given and stating that his letter enticed him even more to move to Buenos Aires and answer the call to be the first German pastor in Buenos Aires.⁶⁵⁴ As we have seen previously, the first German-speakers in Namibia arrived with the London Missionary Society (LMS), like Schmelen and the Albrecht brothers.⁶⁵⁵

4.1.1.4 South Atlantic Protestant Organizations with Seat in Central Europe

The Protestant Association for the La Plata States in Germany (Evangelischer Verein für die La Plata Staaten in Deutschland) was founded in Bremen on January 27, 1902.⁶⁵⁶ Its president was Gustav Lahusen. In his letter to the leadership [Centralvorstand] of the Gustav-Adolf-Verein in Leipzig, Lahusen stated that the growing diaspora community in the La Plata states made such an aid association (Hilfsverein) necessary.⁶⁵⁷ In the same year, the founders of the association also published a call for membership of their association, asking Germans who had lived in the la Plata states or who had relatives living there, in

⁶⁵⁴ August Ludwig Siegel, "Dear Sir! [Brown, Minister of the Scottish Presbyterian Church of Buenos Ayres]," March 9, 1843, EZA 5/4095, pg. 39.

⁶⁵⁵ Moritz and Fisch, Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842.

⁶⁵⁶ Gustav Lahusen, "Evangelischer Verein für die La Plata Staaten in Deutschland," March 1, 1902, EZA 200/1/4240, pg. 1-4; "Statuten des Evangelischen Vereins für die La Plata Staaten in Deutschland," 1902, EZA 200/1/4240, pg. 5.

⁶⁵⁷ Lahusen, "Evangelischer Verein für die La Plata Staaten in Deutschland."

particular, to support their cause.⁶⁵⁸ In 1907, the newspaper DLPZ published the annual report of the association on its cover page, which still listed Gustav Lahusen as president.⁶⁵⁹ The Berlin federal archives contain a document that lists Lahusen among businessmen with substantial landownership in Argentina.⁶⁶⁰ This is an example of a personal link between a religious institution, a business enterprise, and colonization. Britta Wellnitz has studied the development of German protestant churches abroad and the development of their legal relations to the Protestant church in Germany.⁶⁶¹

4.1.2 German-speaking Catholics as Imitators

On both sides of the South Atlantic, German-speaking Catholics set up their own parishes and church buildings only after German-speaking Protestants had founded congregations and built churches. Cooperation and competition among German-speaking Catholics and Protestants varied in both Argentina and Namibia in time and location. While they tended to be rivals in Namibia over the long-term, they tended to cooperate in Argentina.

⁶⁵⁸ Gustav Lahusen, "Aufruf zum Beitritt um Evangelischen Verein für die La Plata Staaten in Deutschland," 1902, EZA 200/1/4240, pg. 9.

⁶⁵⁹ "Jahresbericht des Evangelischen Vereins für die La Plata Staaten in Deutschland für das Jahr 1906," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 29, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁶⁶⁰ "[deutsche Firmen Lahusen, Bremen: Joh. Daniel Fuhrmann, Th. Bracht & Co. = Antwerpen. „verfügen über bedeutenden Grundbesitz in Argentinien.“],” 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 74.

⁶⁶¹ Wellnitz, Deutsche evangelische Gemeinden im Ausland.

4.1.2.1 German-speaking Catholics in Argentina

While the first German-speaking Catholics in Argentina had been Jesuits in the eighteenth century, they did not work in a German-speaking environment but they rather worked with their Spanish-speaking colleagues in missionizing the indigenous people of Paraquaria.⁶⁶² According to William Brown, the Scottish pastor of Buenos Aires, there were also already many German-speaking Catholics in Argentina in 1842.⁶⁶³ In 1866, a Catholic German school advertised in the German newspaper in Buenos Aires.⁶⁶⁴ By 1911, German-speaking Catholics were using the Chapel San Roque.⁶⁶⁵ They regularly advertised and published reports of their parishes in the German-language newspapers AT and DLPZ, alongside the Protestant congregations. They labeled themselves the “community of German-speaking Catholics” (Gemeinde deutschredender Katholiken).⁶⁶⁶

⁶⁶² Angelika Kitzmantel, “Die Jesuitenmissionare Martin Dobrizhoffer und Florian Paucke und ihre Beiträge zur Ethnographie des Gran Chaco im 18. Jahrhundert” (Ph.D., Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München, 2004).

⁶⁶³ Brown, “[Copy] [To] J.C. Zimmermann Esqr., Louis de Chapeaurouge Esqr.; Buenos Ayres June 19, 1842.”

⁶⁶⁴ “Katholische deutsche Schule,” Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, April 17, 1866.

⁶⁶⁵ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 306.

⁶⁶⁶ “Gemeinde deutschredender Katholiken,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Gemeinde deutschredender Katholiken,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

4.1.2.2 German-speaking Catholics in Namibia

Publications in Germany were eager to track and compare Catholic and Protestant involvement in the German protectorate of South-West Africa. Protestants called the Catholic efforts “Roman Propaganda.”⁶⁶⁷ Since 1896, the Oblates of Mary Immaculate (Oblaten der heiligen unbefleckten Jungfrau Maria) were active in Windhoek and Swakopmund, and the Salesianer were active in the southeast region of the protectorate.⁶⁶⁸ The Prefecture Apostolic of Cimbebasia was established in 1892. It was renamed the Apostolic Prefecture of Cimbebasia in 1921, then the Apostolic Vicariate of Windhoek in 1926, and finally the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Windhoek in 1994. The construction of the St. Mary’s Cathedral (St. Marien-Kathedrale) took place between 1906 and 1908.

4.1.3 Religious Institutions and their Relation to Colonization

There is a large secondary literature on the connections between missions and colonization in Namibia.⁶⁶⁹ Scholars have studied the role of the missionaries in ⁶⁶⁷ Gustav Müller, Die römische Propaganda in unseren afrikanischen Kolonien, Flugschriften des Evangelischen Bundes (Leipzig: Verlag der Buchhandlung des Evangel. Bundes, 1899).

⁶⁶⁸ C. Hofer, “Aus dem Bereich der Mission in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 579.

⁶⁶⁹ Heinrich Loth, Die christliche Mission in Südwestafrika; zur destruktiven Rolle der Rheinischen Missionsgesellschaft beim Prozess der Staatsbildung in Südwestafrika (1842-1893) (Berlin: Akademie-Verlag, 1963); Lothar Engel, Kolonialismus und Nationalismus im deutschen Protestantismus in Namibia 1907 bis 1945: Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen evangelischen Mission und Kirche im ehemaligen Kolonial- und Mandatsgebiet Südwestafrika, Studien zur interkulturellen Geschichte des Christentums 7 (Bern: Lang, 1976); Ernst Dammann, “Die deutsche Mission in den ehemaligen deutschen Kolonien zwischen den beiden Weltkriegen,” in the territory for the time before it became, during, and after it had been the German protectorate.

Missionaries in Africa did not only bring Christianity to the locals, they first and foremost brought their European lifestyle.⁶⁷⁰ Rhenish missionary Carl Hugo Hahn created “missionary trade colonies” in Namibia in order to make life in Namibia more like life in Central Europe. In his diaries and reports to the RMG, he repeatedly described the hardships of having to provide for a standard of living worthy of Europeans, and he wanted assistance from others. This is how the idea of having missionary colonists come and help him came to his mind. In the 1860s, he advocated for the creation of “missionary trade colonies” (Missionshandelskolonien). Johann Wilhelm Redecker was among the first missionary colonists (Missionskolonisten) and while not being a missionary, he Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, ed. Klaus Bade (Steiner, 1982), 289–305; Horst Gründer, “Deutsche Missionsgesellschaften auf dem Wege zur Kolonialmission,” in Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, ed. Klaus Bade (Steiner, 1982), 68–102; Lothar Engel, “Die Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft und die deutsche Kolonialherrschaft in Südwafrika 1884-1915,” in Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, ed. Klaus Bade (Steiner, 1982), 142–64; Niels-Peter Moritzen, “Koloniale Konzepte der protestantischen Mission,” in Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, ed. Klaus Bade (Steiner, 1982), 51–67; Horst Gründer, Christliche Mission und deutscher Imperialismus: eine politische Geschichte ihrer Beziehungen während der deutschen Kolonialzeit (1884-1914) unter besonderer Berücksichtigung Afrikas und Chinas, Sammlung Schöningh zur Geschichte und Gegenwart (Paderborn: Schöningh, 1982); Thomas Braun, Die Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft und der Missionshandel im 19. Jahrhundert (Erlangen: Verlag der Evangelisch-Lutherischen Mission, 1992); Jan-Bart Gewalt, “Flags, Funerals and Fanfares: Herero and Missionary Contestations of the Acceptable, 1900-1940,” Journal of African Cultural Studies 15, no. 1 (2002): 105–17; Thorsten Altena, “Ein Häuflein Christen mitten in der Heidenwelt des dunklen Erdteils”: zum Selbst- und Fremdverständnis protestantischer Missionare im kolonialen Afrika, 1884-1918 (Münster: Waxmann Verlag, 2003); John H Darch, Missionary Imperialists?: Missionaries, Government and the Growth of the British Empire in the Tropics, 1860-1885 (Milton Keynes: Paternoster, 2009); Christian Albrecht, Friedrich Fabri und seine Bedeutung für die Missionsgeschichte (München: GRIN Verlag, 2010).

⁶⁷⁰ Martin Ballard, White Men’s God: The Extraordinary Story of Missionaries in Africa (Oxford, England; Westport, Conn.: Greenwood World Pub., 2008).

reported on their progress in letters he sent to the headquarters of the Rhenish Missionary Society in Germany between 1866 and 1870.

In Argentina, scholars have neglected to study possible connections between the Protestant church and colonization in Argentina. The relation between colonization and the churches was more complex or hidden. Particularly in Buenos Aires, the German-speaking church served as a meeting place for important merchants, companies, and other colonization players – they also contributed financially to the maintenance of the church. Church records list the individual amounts that people and companies donated to the church.

4.2 Ensuring the Transmission of Knowledge

The link between German cultural identity and the German language rendered teaching and maintenance of the language abroad extremely important in the eyes of German-speakers. In Central Europe, the Allgemeiner Schulverein (General School Association), founded on 2 July 1880 in Vienna, pushed for the importance of schools and teaching German abroad as being central for the development and maintenance of German trade relations and colonization.⁶⁷¹ But not only in Germany did people consider schools important – the very first German-speaking migrants to the South Atlantic wished for their children to be educated in German. They either sent their children back to Germany for schooling, or – gradually – starting setting up their own schools in the South Atlantic.

⁶⁷¹ “Deutscher Schulverein,” in Meyers Großes Konversations-Lexikon, vol. 4 (Leipzig, 1906), 738.

At first, German-speakers in the South Atlantic just wanted to teach their children their own language so that they could communicate with them. Later, the German Empire and Germans in Europe also became interested in the power that came with maintaining a population abroad. For example, Boers were asked to learn German in the German protectorate of Namibia in order to integrate into German society.

Looking to Europe for best education, merchants and missionaries first sent their children to “Germany” for schooling after the 1800s. Even a century later, the German newspapers in Argentina still advertised schools in Europe, most of these institutions being located in Switzerland and catering to wealthier Germans.⁶⁷² Still in 1891, Georg Gürich documented that German missionaries were accompanying their children from the interior to Walvis Bay from where they were sent to school either in Cape Town or in Germany.⁶⁷³

⁶⁷² Christian Heusser, “Colegio en Suiza,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, March 28, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Julius Woeniger zu Schwerin in Meckleburg (Deutschland), “Pensionat für Söhne aus den gebildeten Ständen,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, December 29, 1877; “Schon oft sind wir nach guten Schulanstalten in der alten Heimath gefragt worden von Eltern, welche ihre Söhne in Europa erziehen lassen wollten ...,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, June 18, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Töchterpensionat Freiegg, Herisau (Schweiz),” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 2, 1907, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁶⁷³ Gürich, Deutsch Südwest-Afrika, 21.

4.2.1 Private Schools and School Associations in Argentina

After the 1890s, German schools in Argentina were organized more thoroughly as private associations founded and maintained by the children's parents. The Buenos Aires School association formed in 1898. Numerous school associations across Argentina in other larger cities and colonies, such as Bahia Blanca, followed. These associations founded and maintained the schools. Later, in cooperation with the German Empire, these schools were included in the system of "German schools abroad" (Deutsche Auslandsschulen).

The first school in Argentina started as the Sunday school of the Protestant German church on Esmeralda Street in 1843.⁶⁷⁴ Johann Gottfried Hermann Frers (*1823, Hohenwestedt, Schleswig-Holstein – 1890, Buenos Aires) arrived in Argentina as the first teacher for the German Protestant school.⁶⁷⁵ In 1856, the German Protestant school counted about eighty children who were taught by two teachers.⁶⁷⁶ In 1876, the school required that admitted children already have received basic instruction in German.⁶⁷⁷ In 1880, W. Imhof announced that the Sunday school instruction no longer took place on Sundays, but rather on ⁶⁷⁴ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 133.

⁶⁷⁵ Ibid., 187; Eduardo José Cárdenas and Carlos Manuel Payá, La familia de Octavio Bunge (Buenos Aires: Edición Sudamericana, 1995), 41.

⁶⁷⁶ C. Wolff, "Die Religionsfreiheit in der Argentinischen Republik I. [Preußische Correspondenz, 1856, No. 129. Berlin, den 5. Juni 1856]" (R. Decker, June 5, 1856), EZA 5/2061, p. 303.

⁶⁷⁷ A. Titius, "Deutsche Evangelische Gemeindeschule," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 2, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Wednesday evenings between eight and ten o'clock.⁶⁷⁸ The school accepted children aged five and older.⁶⁷⁹ The first kindergarten in Argentina opened in 1869 under Leopold Böhm.⁶⁸⁰

In Namibia, missionaries set up a school for locals to be trained as missionaries: the Augustineum. Children of (white) missionaries and merchants were first taught at home in small groups by private teachers. Only around 1900 did the colonial government step in and regulate schooling for German children in Namibia. The first school association there was planned in Lüderitzbucht in 1909. The Swakopmund school association formed in 1919, after WWI, when Namibia was no longer under formal German control and German-speakers had to organize their community life without any aid from the German Empire. In 1908, a total of 287 white children (138 boys and 149 girls) were schooled in the German protectorate South-West Africa; of those, 246 were Protestant, 29 Catholic, and 12 Jewish.⁶⁸¹

⁶⁷⁸ Wilhelm Imhof, "Sonntagsschule," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1880, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁶⁷⁹ Herold, "Deutsche Gemeindeschule," Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 6, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁶⁸⁰ Wilhelm Lütge, Werner Hoffmann, and Karl Wilhelm Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien (Buenos Aires: Deutscher Klub, 1955), 190 Throughout their "History of Germanness in Argentina," Lütge et al. dedicated sections to the further development of German schools. See also 336.

⁶⁸¹ "Schulwesen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika."

4.2.2 Private Schools and School Associations in Namibia

The Women's Association of the Colonial Society started the construction of the Keetmanshoop Heimathaus in 1910⁶⁸² and the first German girls were sent to Namibia in 1911.⁶⁸³ They were supposed to learn how to be good German wives to farmers in Namibia. Also in 1911, the Youth House Lüderitzbucht (Jugendheim Lüdrizbucht) was founded as a place where young children could be taken care of while their mothers were busy keeping the household.⁶⁸⁴ The children were supposed to be raised as good Germans.

4.2.3 Agricultural Schools

In 1899, the Argentine Ministry of Agriculture regimented “practical agricultural schools” (escuelas prácticas de agricultura).⁶⁸⁵ The three years of coursework included Spanish classes, math, geography and history of Argentina, and sciences, in addition to more specialized subjects such as agriculture, horticulture and arboriculture, chemistry, physics and meteorology applied to agriculture, hygiene of animals and plant diseases, topography, rural construction and machinery, economy, administration, and rural accountancy. Students had to be between 14

⁶⁸² Else von Boetticher, Das Heimathaus in Keetmanshoop und das Jugendheim in Lüderitzbucht, die 'Adda v. Liliencron-Stiftung! (Berlin: (Linden-Druckerei), 1914), 4.

⁶⁸³ Ibid., 8.

⁶⁸⁴ Ibid., 12.

⁶⁸⁵ [Argentinean Vice-president] and Emilio Frers, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 21 August 1899]” (Buenos Aires, August 21, 1899), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 2652 D del año 1899].

and 22 years of age and of good health. The same decree that created these schools also regulated the creation of agronomic stations. As of 1903, the state continued to be responsible for the practical agricultural schools.⁶⁸⁶

In 1914, E. W. Schmidt claimed that colonization in Argentina should be carried out jointly by private individuals and the state in order to be successful.⁶⁸⁷

The Argentine ministry of agriculture set up schools for colonists where they should learn to plant more successfully in order to maintain Argentina's status on the world market as a grain exporter.⁶⁸⁸

4.3 Local Newspapers as Communication Hubs

Print media played an important role in the German colonies in the South Atlantic. All newspapers provide rich sources for the German-speaking colony life on both sides of the South Atlantic. They were an important means of communication and distribution of information. In Argentina, for most of the period under study, two newspaper houses, the Argentinisches Tageblatt and the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, competed and represented different political views: the La Plata Zeitung was considered pro-empire and the Argentinisches Tageblatt

⁶⁸⁶ [Julio Argentino] Roca and Wenceslao Escalante, "El Senado Cámara de Diputados de la Nacion Argentina reunidos en Congreso etc..." (Buenos Aires, June 10, 1903), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1549 del año 1903].

⁶⁸⁷ E. W. Schmidt, "Entwicklungstendenzen der argentinischen Landwirtschaft," in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 2 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914), 246.

⁶⁸⁸ Ibid., 248.

pro-republic.⁶⁸⁹ The Alemann family founded the Argentinisches Tageblatt and it is still operating it today. The Deutsche La Plata Zeitung has more complicated origins, with several newspapers being merged and passed around until the Tjarks family operated it between 1880 and WWII.

While in Argentina the newspapers were operated by family companies and became family institutions, newspapers in Namibia covered different geographical areas and linked interests. In both places, the newspapers served as mouthpieces for associations and as a means of distributing advertisements for products and services available in the colonies. And the German government – through consulates in Argentina and the protectorate government in Namibia – also used the newspapers as a way to distribute information. Most of the articles were in German, but early on in Argentina, advertisements and job offers were either printed in Spanish or bilingual. Only during WWI did Germans also publish a magazine entirely in the Spanish language in order to provide non-German Argentineans with “more information” on the German Empire.

The early history of the daily German La Plata Newspaper, the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung (DLPZ), is difficult to trace for several reasons: firstly, various small German newspapers, with lesser and greater success, merged at times, and secondly, the newspaper(s) changed names various times in the early days. The ⁶⁸⁹ Georg Ismar, Der Pressekrieg argentinisches Tageblatt und deutsche La Plata Zeitung 1933 - 1945 (Berlin: wvb Wiss. Verl., 2006).

DLPZ only was stable after 1878, when it obtained the name Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, and in particular after the Tjarks family took it over in 1880⁶⁹⁰ and ran it for two generations until 1945. The chronicle of the German Health Association from 1957, for example, dated the founding of the DLPZ to 1863.⁶⁹¹ On 12 April 1863, Leopold Ferdinand Boehm and Heinrich Curth, operating under the name Boehm & Curth, founded the weekly La Plata Zeitung as Argentina's first German newspaper and, according to Arndt and Olson, the editors of a compilation on German-language newspapers throughout South America, this date has been considered the birthdate of the German-language press in Argentina.⁶⁹² But this newspaper didn't last long and on 17 March 1865, Curth founded the Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata.⁶⁹³ One year later, Curth sold that newspaper to Richard Th. Napp, and it lasted until 26 October 1870.⁶⁹⁴ While there was some continuation in the staff, the 1863 newspaper was a different one from the 1865 one.

⁶⁹⁰ Hermann Tjarks, "Wie die Leser der 'Deutschen La Plata Zeitung' aus dem Vorstehenden ersehen, ist die Direktion dieses Blattes sowie die 'Imprenta Germania' in meine Hände übergegangen," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 9, 1880, sec. coverpage, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina They later added the weekly "Deutsche La Plata Post.," Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 241.

⁶⁹¹ Wilfred von Oven, 100 Jahre Deutscher Krankenverein: 1857-1957; ein Jahrhundert deutsch-argentinischer Gemeinschaft im Spiegel des Wachsens und Werdens ihrer grössten und bedeutendsten Vereinigung (Buenos Aires: Impr. Mercur, 1957), 17.

⁶⁹² Karl John Richard Arndt and May E. Olson, eds., The German Language Press of the Americas (München: Verlag Dokumentation, 1973), 36.

⁶⁹³ Ibid.

⁶⁹⁴ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 238–39.

Meanwhile, a new newspaper started on 2 July 1870 under the name Freie Presse (Free Press).⁶⁹⁵ The Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata (German Newspaper: Organ of the Germanic Population at the Rio de la Plata) was founded in 1871 by the company Ruhland & Reinhardt, with Richard Napp and Luis Wagenknecht as editors.⁶⁹⁶ It appeared three times a week: on Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays. At the beginning of the year 1872, the owners of the Deutsche Zeitung, Ruhland & Reinhardt, bought the Freie Presse and merged the two. Beginning 10 May 1874, the newspaper was issued under the name Deutsche La Plata Zeitung. Arndt and Olson thus date the beginning of the DLPZ to 10 May 1874.⁶⁹⁷ However, between 14 June 1877 and 21 March 1878, the paper was sold under the title Die Heimath, Deutsche La Plata Zeitung.⁶⁹⁸ Then, in 1880, Hermann Tjarks bought the DLPZ and led it to great success. In 1910, Hermann Tjarks published a special festive edition for the Argentine centenary of 1910.⁶⁹⁹ In 1913, Paul Gast, the editor of the Bulletin of the German South-American Institute in Berlin, reprinted various articles from the ⁶⁹⁵ Arndt and Olson, The German Language Press of the Americas, 36.

⁶⁹⁶ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 240; Arndt and Olson, The German Language Press of the Americas, 56.

⁶⁹⁷ Arndt and Olson, The German Language Press of the Americas, 50.

⁶⁹⁸ Ibid.

⁶⁹⁹ Hermann Tjarks, Zur Jahrhundertfeier Argentinens 1910: Festausgabe der Deutschen La Plata Zeitung und La Plata Post (Buenos Aires: Hermann Tjarks & Cía, 1910).

DLPZ and the AT in order to provide a larger audience in Germany for these articles published in Argentina.⁷⁰⁰

The Argentinisches Tageblatt (AT) would become the other great German-language newspaper of the German-speaking community in Argentina. This newspaper was entirely undertaken as a family business by the Swiss-German Alemann family. While Wilhelm Peuser had founded a newspaper under the name Argentinisch-Deutsches Wochenblatt in 1874, it only lasted until 30 May 1876. That same year Suter, with the Alemanns, advertised as a German-Swiss information bureau.⁷⁰¹ On 8 March 1878, the Alemann family started the weekly Argentinisches Wochenblatt,⁷⁰² and then launched the daily Argentinisches Tageblatt on 29 April 1889.⁷⁰³ By 1898, the AT was a stock company (Aktiengesellschaft).⁷⁰⁴ The AT is the only German-language newspaper still published today in Argentina. At several occasions, the AT edited anniversary

⁷⁰⁰ Paul Gast, ed., “Deutsche La-Plata-Zeitung (Buenos Aires): Ein Stimmungsbericht über die argentinische Wirtschaftslage,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 134–35; Paul Gast, ed., “Deutsche La-Plata-Zeitung (Buenos Aires): Ein Leitartikel,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 135–37; Paul Gast, ed., “Argentinisches Tageblatt (Buenos Aires): Deutschland und Argentinien,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 137–40.

⁷⁰¹ Alemann and Suter, “Deutsch-Schweizerische Agentur von Alemann & Suter.”

⁷⁰² Arndt and Olson, The German Language Press of the Americas, 37.

⁷⁰³ “An unsere Leser!”

⁷⁰⁴ “Aktiengesellschaft ‘Argentinisches Wochen- & Tageblatt’ [...] Ordentliche General-Versammlung,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, March 10, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

publications, as for example In 1940, when it celebrated its fiftieth⁷⁰⁵ and in 1989 for its 100th anniversary.⁷⁰⁶

During WWII, the AT functioned as a mouthpiece for German-speaking democratic and Jewish migrants.⁷⁰⁷ The DLPZ and the AT clashed during WWII, when the AT represented resistance to the Nazi regime while the DLPZ fully embraced it.⁷⁰⁸ However tensions between the two newspapers appeared already at the beginning of the twentieth century. In particular in 1907, numerous articles accused the other paper of “attacks,”⁷⁰⁹ “polemics,”⁷¹⁰ and “castigation.”⁷¹¹ Katrin Hoffmann has analyzed the role of the editors Theodor Alemann (AT) and Hermann Tjarks (DLPZ) in the construction of a German-speaking community during WWI.⁷¹² She was very skeptical of the idea that there was a community – a ⁷⁰⁵ Peter Bussemeyer, 50 Jahre Argentinisches Tageblatt, Werden und Aufstieg einer Auslandsdeutschen Zeitung ([n.p., 1940).

⁷⁰⁶ Alemann S.R.L., Argentinisches Tageblatt im hundertsten Jahrgang 1889-29. April - 1989: Sonderdruck aus der Jubiläumsausgabe vom 29. April 1988 (Buenos Aires: Alemann S.R.L., 1988).

⁷⁰⁷ Groth, Das Argentinische Tageblatt.

⁷⁰⁸ See Ismar, Der Pressekrieg argentinisches Tageblatt und deutsche La Plata Zeitung 1933 - 1945.

⁷⁰⁹ “Die ‘Deutsche La Plata Zeitung’ unternimmt wieder einmal einen grimmingen Angriff auf - unsere Abonnenten!” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 4, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷¹⁰ “Es ist immer ein schlimmes Zeichen, wenn die ‘Deutsche La Plata Zeitung’ im Laufe einer Polemik ‘zahlreiche Glückwünsche’ aus ihrem Leserkreis empfängt,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 5, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷¹¹ “Ein Mitleidiger. Ihre Geißelung der Dr. Dr. lit. et hum. vom ‘Argent. Tageblatt’ haben wir erhalten ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, February 10, 1907, sec. Briefkasten der Redaktion, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷¹² Katrin Hoffmann, “¿Construyendo una ‘comunidad’? Theodor Alemann y Hermann Tjarks como voceros de la prensa germanoparlante en Buenos Aires, 1914-1918,” Iberoamericana 9, no. 33 (2009): 121–38.

coherent group – of German-speakers in Argentina during WWI. She rather claimed that the German colony was fractured and not unified. But I think that her conception of “community” is too narrow.

Both the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung and the Argentinisches Tageblatt published several articles about German South-West Africa. In January, the DLPZ published an article about the situation in German South-West Africa, focusing on the problems the German Empire had with its protectorate and the indigenous population in particular.⁷¹³ In February, the AT countered this “official news coverage” with article from its own informant, someone who had lived in Argentina for some time and had now been in Namibia for some years.⁷¹⁴ The author pointed out the good climate for Europeans and the good conditions for Germans to settle; he described the Herero and Nama as practicing “Ackerbau und Viehzucht” and suggested that blacks should be models [Vorbilder] for European colonists. He also opined that Germany still had made no progress with regards to useful colonization in Namibia.

Other newspapers included the Buenos Aires Handelszeitung, published by the Banco Tornquist between 1888 and 1924, the Argentinischer Volksfreund, published by Volga-Germans (but addressed to all Catholic German-speakers) in ⁷¹³ “Die Lage in Deutschsüdwestafrika,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 4, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷¹⁴ L., “Ueber Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 18, 1907, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Buenos Aires between 1895 and 1960,⁷¹⁵ as well as the Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt der La Plata Synode, and Vorwärts, the newspaper of the German-speaking socialists. During WWI, the journal Germania was published in Buenos Aires in the Spanish language. This journal had the purpose of educating the Argentinean population about the German empire during World War I.⁷¹⁶

Also very active in Argentina were publishing houses and libraries founded by German-speakers: the Kraft publishing house was founded in 1864 and the Peuser publishing house in 1867.⁷¹⁷ Peuser advertised frequently in the German-speaking newspapers in Argentina.⁷¹⁸ Other printing houses were the Imprenta Germania,⁷¹⁹ Heidtmann & Cia,⁷²⁰ and J. Weiss & Preusche.⁷²¹ The German-speaking bookstores in Buenos Aires included Ristenpart's⁷²² and Ernst ⁷¹⁵ "Argentinischer Volksfreund," Argentinischer Volksfreund, accessed February 12, 2017, <https://argentinischervolksfreund.wordpress.com/>; Arndt and Olson, The German Language Press of the Americas, 44.

⁷¹⁶ "La prensa nacional y 'Germania,'" Germania 1, no. 8 (September 16, 1915).

⁷¹⁷ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 238.

⁷¹⁸ "Die Buchbinderei von Jacob Peuser befindet sich ab jetzt ...," Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, December 4, 1872; "Buchhandlung Jacobo Peuser," Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 8, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Jacobo Peuser, "Deutsche Buchhandlung von Jacobo Peuser," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷¹⁹ "Imprenta Germania," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 1, 1878.

⁷²⁰ "Buchdruckerei und Lithographie von A. Heidtmann & Cia.," Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 6, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷²¹ "Imprenta, Fotograbados, Tricromías: J. Weiss & Preusche, Grabadores é impresores de la revista Germania," Germania 1, no. 7 (September 1, 1915).

⁷²² Ristenpart & Co., "Die Buchhandlung von H. Ristenpart & Co.," Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 13, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Nolte's⁷²³ bookstore. German-speakers in Argentina played an important role in the production and re-production of tangible knowledge.

In Namibia, the weekly newspaper Windhoeker Anzeiger started in Windhoek in 1898⁷²⁴ before it was moved to Swakopmund three years later and renamed the Deutsch-Südwestafrikanische Zeitung.⁷²⁵ German-speakers in Southern Namibia started their own local newspapers with the Lüderitzbuchter Zeitung in 1909⁷²⁶ and the Keetmanshooper Zeitung in 1913.⁷²⁷ In addition, German-speaking Protestants published a church paper for German South-West Africa.⁷²⁸ In 2001, Carsten von Nahmen published a book on the history of German-speaking media in Namibia.⁷²⁹ Eberhard Hofmann claims that German-language media in Namibia always wanted to be independent from the political regimes and managed to do so in different degrees – from its beginnings around

⁷²³ Ernst Nolte, "Libreria Alemana - Deutsche Buchhandlung: Ernst Nolte, Buenos Aires," Argentinisches Wochenblatt, April 4, 1885, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷²⁴ "Leser im Schutzgebiet bitten wir ...," Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 12, 1898, NAN.

⁷²⁵ Eberhard Hofmann, "'Denn was du schwarz auf weiß besitzt ...': Ein Blick auf die Medien," in Vom Schutzgebiet bis Namibia 2000, ed. Klaus Hess and Klaus Becker (Göttingen; Windhoek: Hess, 2002), 158–59.

⁷²⁶ Die Schriftleitung der Lüderitzbuchter Zeitung, "Einleitung. Der Wunsch nach einem eigenen Organ hat sich schon seit längerer Zeit im Süden fühlbar gemacht," Lüderitzbuchter Zeitung, February 13, 1909, SBB - Westhafen.

⁷²⁷ "Zur Einführung," Keetmanshooper Zeitung, April 24, 1913, SBB - Westhafen.

⁷²⁸ Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt für Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Swakopmund: Swakopmunder Buchhandlung, 1914).

⁷²⁹ Carsten von Nahmen, Deutschsprachige Medien in Namibia: vom Windhoeker Anzeiger zum Deutschen Hörfunkprogramm der Namibian Broadcasting Corporation: Geschichte, Bedeutung und Funktion der deutschsprachigen Medien in Namibia, 1898-1998 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2001).

1900, throughout German imperial rule, under the South African government, and finally under independence since 1990.⁷³⁰ In 1899, the German Colonial Society advertised their bookstore in Swakopmund with books in German, English, Dutch and French in the Windhoeker Anzeiger.⁷³¹ The Swakopmunder Buchhandlung (Swakopmund bookstore) was founded in 1900 and is still operating today.

In addition to the locally published newspapers, many German-speakers in the South Atlantic also read the publications of the German Colonial Society, the Deutsche Kolonialzeitung (German Colonial Newspaper). The first issue was published in 1884 and included an article about “Land and People in Argentina” by Ernst Bachmann.⁷³² Another prominent publication for German-speakers abroad was the magazine Kolonie und Heimat (Colony and Home).⁷³³ The Südwestafrikanische Gemeindeblatt (South-West African Church Paper) was published by the Protestant-Lutheran Synod of South Africa in Cape Town by 1909.⁷³⁴

⁷³⁰ Hofmann, “‘Denn was du schwarz auf weiß besitzt ...’: Ein Blick auf die Medien.”

⁷³¹ “Buchhandlung der Deutschen Colonial-Gesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika in Swakopmund: Grosses Lager von Büchern in deutscher, englischer, holländischer und französischer Sprache,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, September 14, 1899, NAN.

⁷³² Ernst Bachmann, “Land und Leute in Argentinien,” in Deutsche Kolonialzeitung, ed. Richard Lesser, vol. 1 (Frankfurt am Main: Verlag des Deutschen Kolonialvereins, 1884), 8–11, 35–37, 56–59.

⁷³³ Catherine Repussard, Idéologie coloniale et imaginaire mythique: la revue Kolonie und Heimat de 1909 à 1914, Faustus, études germaniques (Strasbourg: Presses universitaires de Strasbourg, 2014).

⁷³⁴ Sch., “Koloniales. Die evangelische Kirche in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika im 25. Jahre deutscher Herrschaft.”

4.4 Leisure Associations as a Means to Strengthen German-ness

On both sides of the South Atlantic, German-speakers founded leisure associations. The aim was to not only practice activities in their free time but rather to unite German-speakers and strengthen their group feeling. Leading leisure activities were sports and music, in particular gymnastics and choir singing. Both have been said to promote German nationalism. More overt in pursuing nationalist goals were ethnic clubs composed of German-speakers.

4.4.1 Sports Clubs

According to historian Anne Saint Sauveur-Henn, a first German leisure association in Buenos Aires existed already in 1820, with Franz Halbach as a member.⁷³⁵ The most prominent German leisure association in Buenos Aires, however, has been the German Club (Deutscher Klub), which even continues to this day.⁷³⁶ Over time, it has gone through some changes: it started out as with the name German Gymnastics Club (Deutscher Turnverein) in 1855 as a club for affluent men; today it counts both men and women among its members. While it originally focused on German-speakers only, today's club is a member of the Club Europeo (European Club), which assembles the clubs historically formed as ⁷³⁵ Saint Sauveur-Henn, Un siècle d'émigration allemande vers l'Argentine, 32.

⁷³⁶ "Club Alemán en Buenos Aires - Deutscher Klub in Buenos Aires," accessed December 4, 2016, <http://www.clubaleman.com.ar/>.

institutions of the different migrant groups originating from Europe.⁷³⁷ Four members of the Hamburg Gymnastics Association first founded the German Club as the German Gymnastics Association (Deutscher Turnverein) on 18 October 1855.⁷³⁸ Mostly newly arrived migrants but also already established people were among the founders: Hugo Bunge, Germán Frers, and Adolf Bullrich, just to mention a few.⁷³⁹ The Turnverein frequently organized garden concerts in the 1870s⁷⁴⁰ and also a German gymnastics fest in 1876.⁷⁴¹ At times, the localities of the Turnverein were also used for political events like Wilhelm Vallentin's lecture on colonial-political studies of Argentina in 1904.⁷⁴² In 1910, the association changed its name to Deutscher Klub (German Club).⁷⁴³ In 1913, the club also supported German contemporary art in Argentina.⁷⁴⁴ The club remains active, and in 2005 some of its members published a comprehensive history of the 150 years ⁷³⁷ "Club Europeo," accessed February 24, 2017, <http://www.clubeuropeo.com/>.

⁷³⁸ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 146, 151, 190.

⁷³⁹ Ibid., 191.

⁷⁴⁰ "Deutscher Turnverein [...] Zweites Gartenkonzert," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 7, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Deutscher Turnvereien [...] Fünftes Garten-Concert," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, March 19, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁴¹ "Das deutsche Turnfest," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, October 11, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁴² Wilhelm Vallentin, Kolonialpolitische Studien mit besonderer Berücksichtigung Argentinien: Vortrag im grossen Saale des Deutschen Turnvereins zu Buenos Aires am 25. August 1904 (Buenos Aires: [s.n.], 1904).

⁷⁴³ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 301.

⁷⁴⁴ Sociedad promotora del arte alemán en el exterior, Segunda Exposición de Arte Alemán Contemporáneo, Buenos Aires 1913 (Buenos Aires: Club Alemán, 1913).

of the club's history.⁷⁴⁵ Due to its exclusive membership and interest in activities other than gymnastics, certain members split off and founded the Neuer Deutscher Turnverein (New German Gymnastics Association or NDT) in 1911.⁷⁴⁶ In 1912, they published their own statutes.⁷⁴⁷ They became a member of the German Gymnastics Syndicate.⁷⁴⁸ Its twenty-fifth anniversary book in 1936 used Nazi terminology: “25jährige völkische Deutschtumsarbeit in Uebersee,”⁷⁴⁹ which could be translated as “twenty-five years of maintaining folkish/racial German-ness overseas.” Then there was also a Swiss gymnastics club in Buenos Aires,⁷⁵⁰ which helped out the NDT in its beginnings by lending them gymnastics equipment.⁷⁵¹

In Namibia, the gymnastics associations were founded much later than in Argentina. According to Günter F. Kesselmann, the men's gymnastics club ⁷⁴⁵ Deutscher Klub, ed., Club Alemán en Buenos Aires: su sesquicentenario. Un recorrido por sus 150 años de vida, 1. ed. (Buenos Aires: Club Alemán, 2005).

⁷⁴⁶ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 301.

⁷⁴⁷ Neuer Deutscher Turnverein Buenos Aires: Satzungen (Buenos Aires: Herpig, 1912).

⁷⁴⁸ “Neuer Deutscher Turnverein, Mitglied der Deutschen Turnerschaft,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁴⁹ 25 Jahre Neuer Deutscher Turnverein, Buenos Aires: 1911-1936 (Neuer Dt. Turnverein, 1936).

⁷⁵⁰ “Schweizer Turnverein,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 30, 1907, sec. advertisements, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Schweizer Turnverein,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 5, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁵¹ 25 Jahre Neuer Deutscher Turnverein, Buenos Aires, 3–5.

Swakopmund was founded on 4 December 1898.⁷⁵² Anyone who was older than eighteen and not in “conscious opposition to German-ness” could become a member if authorized to do so by the monthly assembly.⁷⁵³ In January 1900, people got together to discuss the founding of such an association in Windhoek.⁷⁵⁴ It was founded in the following month, on 15 February 1900.⁷⁵⁵ The declared purpose of the Turnverein Windhuk was the “opportunity to provide lessons in regulated gymnastics as a means for corporal and moral invigoration, as well as the maintenance of German national consciousness and patriotism.”⁷⁵⁶ By 1903, the Turnverein Windhuk addressed the Imperial government to request the status of a legal person (juristische Person) in order to be able to purchase a locale for ⁷⁵² Günter F. Kesselmann, “Frisch, fromm, fröhlich, frei: Der Turnverein als gesellschaftlicher Faktor in Südwestafrika,” in Vom Schutzgebiet bis Namibia 2000, ed. Klaus Hess and Klaus Becker (Göttingen; Windhoek: Hess, 2002), 414.

⁷⁵³ “Satzungen des Männer-Turnvereins Swakopmund,” September 9, 1910, BArch R 1001/1737, pag. 65-73 “Mitglied des Vereins kann jeder Unbescholtene werden, welcher 18 Jahre alt ist und sich nicht im bewussten Gegensatz zum Deutschtum befindet, sofern die Monatsversammlung die Aufnahme genehmigt.”

⁷⁵⁴ “Am 6. d. Mts. Abends, fand in Folge ergangener Einladung im Utz’schen Lokale eine Versammlung statt zwecks Berathung über die eventl. Gründung eines Turnvereins ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 17, 1900, NAN.

⁷⁵⁵ “Satzungen des Turnvereins Windhuk in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika” (Druck von Weber und Weidemeyer, 1909), BArch R 1001/1737, pag. 75; According to Kesselmann, it was founded a day later, on February 16, 1900, see Kesselmann, “Frisch, fromm, fröhlich, frei: Der Turnverein als gesellschaftlicher Faktor in Südwestafrika,” 414.

⁷⁵⁶ “Zweck, Name und Sitz des Vereins [Turnverein Windhuk],” n.d., BArch R 1001/1736, pag. 36-38 “Der Zweck des unter dem Namen „Turnverein Windhuk“ bestehenden Vereins ist, Gelegenheit zur Anleitung von geregelten Turnübungen zu geben, als eines Mittels zur körperlichen und sittlichen Kräftigung; sowie die Pflege deutschen Volksbewusstseins und vaterländischer Gesinnung.”

the training sessions.⁷⁵⁷ Being located in the protectorate, the club needed the approval of the German Bundesrat (“Federal Council”). Governor Theodor Leutwein supported this requested an added in his letter to the Foreign Ministry in Berlin that this case should be seen a precedent for more cases and that German legislation should apply to the protectorate in the case of clubs.⁷⁵⁸ There were also gymnastics clubs in other parts of Namibia. The Gymnastics Club Karibib was founded on May 6, 1905.⁷⁵⁹ Men’s Gymnastics Club in Usakos was on the list of associations in Namibia in 1910.⁷⁶⁰ In 1913, the Gymnastics Club Keetmanshoop celebrated its sixth anniversary.⁷⁶¹

Gymnastics Club ⁷⁶²	Founding Date	Members
Männerturnverein Swakopmund	4 December 1908	80
Turnverein Windhoek	16 February 1900	180
Turnverein Gut Heil Keetmanshoop	1 May 1907	82
Männerturnverein Lüderitzbucht	26 November 1907	170

⁷⁵⁷ Thomas and Rudat, “Turnverein Windhuk to Kaiserliches Gouvernement,” August 18, 1903, BArch R 1001/1736, pag. 22.

⁷⁵⁸ [Theodor Gotthilf] Leutwein, “Kaiserliches Gouvernement für Südwest-Afrika in Windhoek an die Kolonial-Abteilung des Auswärtigen Amtes, Berlin,” September 8, 1903, BArch R 1001/1736, pag. 21.

⁷⁵⁹ “Satzungen des Männer-Turn-Vereins Karibib in Deusch-Südwest-Afrika. Gegründet am 6. Mai 1905,” May 6, 1905, BArch R 1001/1736, pag. 110-116.

⁷⁶⁰ “[list associations/clubs in German South-West Africa],” April 1910, BArch R 1001/1737, pag. 1.

⁷⁶¹ “Sein sechstes Stiftungsfest feiert der Turnverein „Gut Heil“” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, May 29, 1913, sec. Aus Keetmanshoop, SBB - Westhafen.

⁷⁶² Information taken from: Kesselmann, “Frisch, fromm, fröhlich, frei: Der Turnverein als gesellschaftlicher Faktor in Südwestafrika,” 414.

Männerturnverein Usakos	27 February 1908	35
Männerturnverein Tsumeb	3 February 1918	90
Schutztruppen Turnverein Aus	20 December 1919	?
Turnverein Kolmanskoppe	22 November 1926	75
Turnverein DV Okahandja	13 March 1927	25
Turnabteilunf DV Omaruru	29 June 1927	25
TV Walfischbucht Deutscher Klub	4 August 1927	51
Turnabteilung DV Othiwarongo Deutsche Kamaraden	?	18

Another pastime, similar to gymnastics, was the shooting association (Schützenverein). In Argentina, the Swiss were the first to form their own shooting association: on 23 June 1872, the Swiss Shooting Association (Société de Tir Suisse – Schweizer-Schuetzengesellschaft) was founded in Belgrano.⁷⁶³ In 1914, a Buenos Aires Shooting Association (Schützenverein Buenos Aires) advertised in the DLPZ.⁷⁶⁴ Across the Atlantic, the Windhoek Schützenverein formed in 1894.⁷⁶⁵ In 1898, the Windhoek Schützenverein announced its ⁷⁶³ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 14; 1876, the DLPZ noted it to be the Swiss shooting association of Buenos Aires: J. Dufour, “Schweizer Schützen-Gesellschaft in Buenos Aires,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 30, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; ; and in 1883, the AT noted it as being located in Belgrano: “Schweizer Schützengesellschaft in Belgrano,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 6, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁶⁴ “Schützen-Verein Buenos Aires,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁶⁵ “Mit dem 25. d. Mts. trat der Schützenverein zu Windhoek in das fünfte Jahr seines Bestehens ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, March 30, 1899, NAN.

upcoming meetings in the newspaper Windhuker Anzeiger.⁷⁶⁶ The meetings took place in the pub of A. Schmerenbeck.⁷⁶⁷ At its fifth anniversary, Governor Leutwein was named honorary president of the association.⁷⁶⁸ A Schützenverein in both Karibib and Jakobswater was included in the list of German associations in Namibia in 1903.⁷⁶⁹ A Schützenverein in Okahandja and a Schützengilde in Buca were listed in 1910.⁷⁷⁰ Likewise, a Schützenverein in Tsumeb was listed in 1912,⁷⁷¹ and one in Kuibis in 1914.⁷⁷² There was also a Renn-Verein in Keetmanshoop in 1913.⁷⁷³ In Argentina, other pastimes included soccer and rowing: there were a German Soccer Club Buenos Aires⁷⁷⁴ and a Soccer Club Victoria⁷⁷⁵ by 1907. The rowing club Teutonia was founded in 1890,⁷⁷⁶ which still exists today.⁷⁷⁷

⁷⁶⁶ “Schützenverein Windhoek,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 27, 1898, NAN.

⁷⁶⁷ “Schützenverein Windhoek,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 5, 1899, NAN.

⁷⁶⁸ “Mit dem 25. d. Mts. trat der Schützenverein zu Windhoek in das fünfte Jahr seines Bestehens ...”

⁷⁶⁹ “[list of associations/clubs in German South-West Africa],” March 1903, BArch R 1001/1736, pag. 1.

⁷⁷⁰ “[list associations/clubs in German South-West Africa].”

⁷⁷¹ “[list of associations/clubs in German South-West Africa],” 1912, BArch R 1001/1738, pag. 2.

⁷⁷² “[list of associations/clubs in German South-West Africa],” April 1914, BArch R 1001/1740, pag. 1.

⁷⁷³ “Renn-Verein,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, April 24, 1913, sec. Aus Keetmanshoop, SBB - Westhafen.

⁷⁷⁴ “Deutscher Fußballklub Buenos Aires,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 4, 1907, sec. Vereinsnachrichten, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁷⁵ “Fußballklub Victoria,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 7, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁷⁶ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 301.

⁷⁷⁷ “Club de Remo Teutonia,” accessed February 24, 2017, <http://www.rvteutonia.org/>.

4.4.2 Music Associations and Entertainment Clubs

The other important pastimes of South Atlantic German-speakers with “nationalist” intentions were choral societies and entertainment clubs. There were numerous choral societies that lasted several years or decades. For examples, in Argentina, the singing and entertainment club Germania was founded on 10 December 1855, as a continuation of the school and church choir that the teacher Hermann Frers had assembled.⁷⁷⁸ The Gesang- und Geselligkeitsverein Teutonia (choral society and social club) formed in 1861.⁷⁷⁹ Subsequently, it was only advertised as Club Teutonia in the DLPZ.⁷⁸⁰ In 1865, the choral society Heimat was founded in Buenos Aires.⁷⁸¹ The German Men’s Choral Society Buenos Aires (Deutscher Männer-Gesangverein) was very active between the 1880s and the 1920s, giving various concerts⁷⁸² and organizing other events for its members, ⁷⁷⁸ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 192; “Gesangverein ‘Germania’ [...] 1855 Gegründet 1855,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Vereins-Anzeigen, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁷⁹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 192.

⁷⁸⁰ “Club Teutonia,” Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, January 20, 1866.

⁷⁸¹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 197.

⁷⁸² “Deutscher Männergesangs-Verein [...] Familien-Conzert,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 3, 1880, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Deutsche Männer-Gesangverein Buenos Aires’ 10. Konzert,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, July 19, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Deutscher Männergesangverein Buenos Aires,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, September 17, 1907, sec. Vereins-Nachrichten, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Deutscher Männergesangverein Buenos Aires,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Deutscher Männergesangverein Buenos Aires,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 5, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

like an excursion to the Suisse-German shooting club in April 1907.⁷⁸³ There was also the German Sing Academy in Buenos Aires,⁷⁸⁴ the German music Association Buenos Aires⁷⁸⁵ with a mixed choir, the singing association Eintracht, founded in 1894,⁷⁸⁶ and Swiss men's choirs in Rosario⁷⁸⁷ and Buenos Aires.⁷⁸⁸ The Swiss Union (Union Suisse) was founded on 14 June 1882 with the aim to found a band and organize concerts.⁷⁸⁹ Moritz Alemann was a member. In 1883, the Swiss Union celebrated its first anniversary.⁷⁹⁰

In Namibia, the Gesang-Verein was advertised in the Windhoeker Anzeiger in October 1898.⁷⁹¹ The Swakopmunder Männergesang-Verein was founded in 1902 and continues to be active today with the proclaimed aim of ⁷⁸³ “Der Deutsche Männergesangverein Buenos Aires hat für nächsten Sonntag, den 21. April, einen Ausflug nach dem Tiro Suizo in Belgrano angesetzt ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 16, 1907, sec. Vereins-Nachrichten, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁸⁴ “Deutsche Sing-Akademie in Buenos Aires,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 3, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Deutsche Singakademie,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, March 20, 1878.

⁷⁸⁵ “Deutscher Musikverein Buenos Aires. Gemischter Chor,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 25, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁸⁶ “Gesangverein Eintracht,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 31, 1907, sec. Vereins-Nachrichten, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Leopold Franke, “Gesang-verein ‘Eintracht’ Buenos Aires. Gegründet am 2. August 1894,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 6, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁸⁷ “Der Schweizer Männerchor in Rosario ...,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 1, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁸⁸ “Schweizer Männerchor Buenos Aires,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 21, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁸⁹ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 11.

⁷⁹⁰ “Das erste Stiftungsfest der ‘Union Suisse,’” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, June 23, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁹¹ Gebhardt, “Gesang-Verein,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 27, 1898, NAN.

cultivating the German folksong.⁷⁹² The men's Gesang-Verein Lüderitzbucht was advertised in December 1909 in the Lüderitzbuchter Zeitung.⁷⁹³

In addition to the leisure associations, there were a few German companies that provided leisure entertainment in form of opera and theatre: for example, in 1876, a certain Mr. Schumann advertised his "large transatlantic company" in the DLPZ⁷⁹⁴ and in 1907, two German opera companies advertised: the Oden-Theater and the Teatro de la Opera.⁷⁹⁵

4.4.3 Ethno-National Clubs

Clubs organized according to shared national origin only existed in Argentina and not in Namibia. These clubs were Swiss, Austro-Hungarian, and German. In 1898, the AT published the statutes of the Swiss-Argentinean Club (Club Suizo-Argentino).⁷⁹⁶ In the same year, Swiss associations considered joining together to ⁷⁹² "Swakopmunder Männergesangverein von 1902," accessed February 24, 2017, <http://www.smgv02.com/>.

⁷⁹³ "Männer-Gesangs-Verein, Lüderitzbucht. Feier des Weihnachts-Festes," Lüderitzbuchter Zeitung, December 11, 1909, SBB - Westhafen.

⁷⁹⁴ "Teatro Colon: Große transatlantische Compagnie des Herrn Schumann," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 28, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁹⁵ "Oden-Theater: Deutsche Opern- und Operetten-Gesellschaft: Empresa Da Rosa," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Theater-Anzeigen, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Teatro de la Opera: Deutsche Operetten-Gesellschaft, Empresa Donndorff," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Theater-Anzeigen, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; "Teatro de la Opera: Deutsche Operetten-Gesellschaft, Empresa Donndorff," Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 7, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁹⁶ "Statuten des 'Club Suizo-Argentino' mit Sitz in Buenos Aires," Argentinisches Tageblatt, September 2, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

cooperate.⁷⁹⁷ The Austro-Hungarian Club was founded in 1906.⁷⁹⁸ The DLPZ advertised a German Club (Deutscher Verein) in 1876,⁷⁹⁹ and a German Club Buenos Aires (Deutscher Verein Buenos Aires) as having been founded in 1906.⁸⁰⁰

4.5 Philanthropic and Health Associations to Elevate the Destitute

In Central Europe, with rising concerns about the growing poverty of workers related to increasing industrialization and urbanization, private individuals and groups attempted to find solutions to deteriorating lifestyles and the risk of workers “drifting into sinful lives.” In Namibia, this movement was also called an “internal mission,” like in the German Empire. The term “internal mission” was also at times used interchangeably with “internal colonization”: a means to educate and orient poorer people and help them back on the track of “civilization.” While in Namibia some of these institutions, like hospitals, were put in place with the help of missionaries and religiously motivated people, in Argentina these activities were mostly the work of mutual aid societies that ⁷⁹⁷ “Das Einigungsprojekt der Schweizervereine,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, September 10, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁷⁹⁸ “Oesterreich-Ungar. Club, gegründet Januar 1906.”

⁷⁹⁹ “Deutscher Verein [...] Generalversammlung,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 28, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁸⁰⁰ “Deutscher Verein Buenos Aires. Gegründet am 25. Juni 1906. Sonnabend, den 5. Januar 1905 abends 10 Uhr: Neujahrs-Ball im Saale “La Argentina ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, sec. Vereins-Anzeigen, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

emerged out of German-speaking civil society. The Argentinean Social Museum (Museo Social Argentino) formed in 1911 in order to study and improve the socio-economic living conditions of Argentineans.⁸⁰¹ Gustavo Niederlein represented the Argentinean Social Museum at the World Exhibition in Ghent, Belgium in 1913.⁸⁰² In 1915, Emilio Frers was director of Argentinean Social Museum, and the German Scientific Society Buenos Aires encouraged its members to also support the Social Museum by becoming members.⁸⁰³

In Argentina, the Asociación Filantrópica de Inmigración (Philanthropic Immigration Association) was founded in 1857. According to Lütge et al., German-speakers were heavily involved in this association: Franz Halbach was one of first directors and other German members included Eduardo Freyer, Enrique Lorenz, Germán Burmeister, Germán Roosen, E. Schröder, and R. Kratzenstein,⁸⁰⁴ with Jorge Tornquist as secretary.⁸⁰⁵ Its promotion of immigration was closely linked to the promotion of colonization in Argentina.

⁸⁰¹ Instituto de Información, Estudio y Acción Sociales, ed., Museo Social Argentina 1911 (Buenos Aires: Gran Campaña Social, 1911).

⁸⁰² Becerra, “La economía social argentina en las exposiciones internacionales. La Exhibición del Museo Social Argentino en la Exposición Universal e Industrial de Gante (1913),” in Argentina en exposición: ferias y exhibiciones durante los siglos XIX y XX, ed. Andrea Lluch and María Silvia Di Liscia (Sevilla: CSIC, 2009), 209–38.

⁸⁰³ “Zeitschrift des Deutschen wissenschaftlichen Vereins zur Kultur- und Landeskunde Argentiniens.,” Zeitschrift des Deutschen wissenschaftlichen Vereins zur Kultur- und Landeskunde Argentiniens., 1915.

⁸⁰⁴ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 223.

⁸⁰⁵ Jorge Gilbert, “Ernesto Tornquist, entre los negocios y las políticas económicas,” Revista de Instituciones, Ideas y Mercados, no. 58 (May 2013): 74.

On 15 June 1882, German-speakers then founded an association specifically to aid Germans in Argentina, the Association for the Protection of German Migrants (Verein zum Schutze Germanischer Einwanderer).⁸⁰⁶ It is important to note here that the reference chosen was “germanisch” and not “deutsch” as it was more inclusive term directed at German-speakers and not to citizens of the German nation-state. The association had its own information office in Buenos Aires by 1883⁸⁰⁷ and received financial support from the Argentinean government.⁸⁰⁸ Its aim was to support German migrants in Argentina, and particularly to help the unemployed find jobs. In 1884, Francisco Seeber was the president of the association and published the annual report.⁸⁰⁹ Other prominent members were Ernst Bachmann, Ernst Nolte, and Juan and Moritz Alemann.⁸¹⁰ In 1897, the association counted Otto Staube, Th. Hegenbath, Rudolf Boesenberg, Herman Tjarks, and Moritz Alemann among its active ⁸⁰⁶ “Wichtig für Auswanderer nach Argentinien! Verein zum Schutze Germanischer Einwanderer (Philantropische Gesellschaft) Sociedad Protectora de Inmigrantes Germanicos. Gegründet 1882 Buenos Aires Calle (Strasse) Moreno 740.,” n.d., EZA 200/1/1768, pg. 80; Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 75–76; Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 301; Bachmann wrote that the association was founded on 10 June 1882. Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 7.

⁸⁰⁷ “Der hiesige Verein zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderung hat nun schon seit längerer Zeit in Aussicht genommen ständige Auskunfts- und Nachweisungs-Bureau nunmehr eröffnet,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, February 17, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina. Seeber later became mayor of Buenos Aires.

⁸⁰⁸ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 76.

⁸⁰⁹ Francisco Seeber, “Verein zum Schutze Germanischer Einwanderer. Bericht für das Jahr 1884,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, February 8, 1885, BArch R 901/30397, pag. 64.

⁸¹⁰ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 7.

members.⁸¹¹ The Berlin Federal Archives hold the associations' reports for the years 1904 and 1905.⁸¹² In 1905, the association changed its name to Association for the Promotion of German Migration (Verein zur Förderung germanischer Einwanderung).⁸¹³ In 1906, the association published its own handbook – not only did it aim at promoting migration to Argentina with advice for newly arriving migrants, now it had also added the promotion of German colonization, i.e. the settlement and agricultural use of land, to its statutes.⁸¹⁴ However, according to Georg Hiller, who worked for the Central Information Bureau for Migrants (Zentral-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer) of the German Empire in Berlin, the colonization project remained unsuccessful and the association changed its name back to the previous one in 1909. The journal Süd-Amerika likewise focused a 1908 article about the organization entirely on employment success stories in Argentina rather than colonization projects.⁸¹⁵ Throughout ⁸¹¹ “Bericht des Vereins zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderer in Buenos Aires für das Jahr 1897,” 1897, 70, BArch R 901/30411, pag. 70.

⁸¹² “Jahresbericht des Vereins zur Förderung germanischer Einwanderung für das Jahr 1904 (Buenos Aires)” 1906, BArch R 901/30418, pag. 64-66; “Jahresbericht des Vereins zur Förderung germanischer Einwanderung für das Jahr 1905 (Buenos Aires)” 1906, BArch R 901/30418, pag. 61-63.

⁸¹³ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 76.

⁸¹⁴ Verein zur Förderung germanischer Einwanderung in Buenos Aires, Argentinien als Ziel für germanische Auswanderung: Handbuch herausgegeben vom Verein zur Förderung germanischer Einwanderung in Buenos Aires; nebst einem Stadtplan und der neuesten Eisenbahnkarte (Buenos Aires: Buchdruckerei von H. Herpig, 1906).

⁸¹⁵ “Der Verein zum Schutze und zur Förderung deutscher Einwanderer in Buenos Aires,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, November 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 60.

WWI, the association also advertised bilingually, in German and Spanish: “Verein zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderer – Sociedad Protectora de Inmigrantes Germánicos.”⁸¹⁶

In Argentina, German-speaking socialists founded the association Vorwärts on 1 January 1882.⁸¹⁷ They had great influence on the founding of a socialist movement in Argentina.⁸¹⁸ Both the AT and the DLPZ frequently reported on the events of the association, such as anniversaries or carnival balls.⁸¹⁹ 1907, the association specifically announced that it was the assembly point for German-speaking socialists in Buenos Aires.⁸²⁰ The association also published its own journal with the same name. In Namibia, the Association Against

⁸¹⁶ Verein zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderer. Sociedad Protectora de Inmigrantes Germánicos, “Germanen, welche Arbeitskräfte irgendwelcher Berufsarbeit benötigen, werden höflichst gebeten, sich an den Verein zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderer zu wenden,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 27, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁸¹⁷ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 16; Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 301.

⁸¹⁸ Alfredo Bauer, La Asociación Vorwärts y la lucha democrática en la Argentina (Buenos Aires: Editorial Legasa, 1989); Sandra Carreras, Horacio Tarcus, and Jessica Zeller, eds., Los socialistas alemanes y la formación del movimiento obrero argentino: antología del Vorwärts, 1886-1901 = Die deutschen Sozialisten und die Anfänge der argentinischen Arbeiterbewegung, Ed. bilingüe (Buenos Aires: Buenos Libros; IAIPK Instituto Ibero-Americano Patrimonio Cultural Prussiano; CeDinCi Editores, 2008).

⁸¹⁹ “Das Stiftungsfest des Vereins ‘Vorwärts’ ...,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 3, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Verein Vorwärts: Sonntag den 10. Februar Abends 10 Uhr: 1. Maskenball,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 7, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁸²⁰ “Verein Vorwärts,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 2, 1907, sec. advertisements, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Alcoholism (Alkoholgegnerbündnis) had the name Vorwärts.⁸²¹ It also published a journal with this name in 1914.⁸²²

In Namibia, citizens organized in at least two cities: in 1910, the Association of Swakopmund Citizens (Verein Swakopmunder Bürger) put together their statutes, and in 1913, the Keetmanshooper Zeitung published a brief article on its citizen association (Bürgerverein Keetmanshoop).⁸²³

Name	Date	Seat
Philanthropic Immigration Association (Asociación Filantrópica de Inmigración)	1857	Buenos Aires
German Health Association (Deutscher Krankenverein)	1857	Buenos Aires
German Hospital Association (Deutscher Hospitalverein)	1867	Buenos Aires
Austrian Aid Society (Österreichischer Hilfsverein)	1878	Buenos Aires
Association Vorwärts (Verein Vorwärts)	1882	Buenos Aires
Association for the Protection of German Migrants	1882/ [1904-	Buenos Aires

⁸²¹ “Akten-Vermerk [Vorwärts],” 1914, NAN ZBU 1017 J.XIV.A.2, p.3.

⁸²² [Theodor] Seitz, “Kaiserlicher Gouverneur von Deutsch-Südwestafrika an das Kaiserliche Bezirks-Distrikts-Amt,” August 24, 1914, NAN ZBU 1017 J.XIV.A.2, p.7; “Unser ‘Vorwärts’ ...,” “Vorwärts” - Mitteilungen des Alkoholgegnerbundes für D.-S.-W.-A. 1, no. 3 (September 1, 1914).

⁸²³ “Satzungen des Vereins Swakopmunder Bürger,” 1910, BArch R 1001/1737, pag. 3; “Bürgerverein,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, April 24, 1913, sec. Aus Keetmanshoop, SBB - Westhafen.

(Verein zum Schutze Germanischer Einwanderer)/ [Association for the Promotion of German Migration (Verein zur Förderung germanischer Einwanderung)]	1909]
Swiss Philanthropic Society (Schweizer Wohltätigkeitsgesellschaft)	1895	Buenos Aires
Austro-Hungarian Philanthropic Society Franz Josef I. (Sociedad de Beneficiencia Austro-Hungaro Francisco José I.)	1905	Buenos Aires
Association of Swakopmund Citizens (Verein Swakopmunder Bürger)	1910	Swakopmund
Argentinean Social Museum (Museo Social Argentino) ⁸²⁴	1911	Buenos Aires
Citizen Association Keetmanshoop (Bürgerverein Keetmanshoop)	1913	Keetmanshoop
Johanniter Krankenhaus	1913
German Philanthropic Society (Deutsche Wohltätigkeitsgesellschaft)	1917	Buenos Aires

In Argentina, German-speakers founded their own health associations as a form of mutual aid society. The Swiss Philanthropic Society (Philantropique Suisse) was founded on 17 March 1861 with the aim to support all Swiss who had experienced misfortune without being blamed.⁸²⁵ The Swiss Health Aid Society ⁸²⁴ The Argentinean Social Museum was not founded by German-speakers, but at times influential German-speakers were involved in this institution, like Emilio Frers and Gustavo Niederlein.

⁸²⁵ “Schweizer Philantropischer Verein (Gegründet den 17. März 1861),” Argentinisches Tageblatt, May 7, 1889, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

(Schweizer Kranken-Unterstützungsverein Helvetia) formed on 1 September 1871.⁸²⁶ In the same year, the Deutsche Zeitung advertised a Swiss Aid Society (Schweizer Hilfsverein).⁸²⁷ The DLPZ advertised a Swiss Philanthropic Society (Société Suisse Philanthropique) in 1878.⁸²⁸ According to Lütge et al. the Swiss Philanthropic Society (Schweizer Wohltätigkeitsgesellschaft) was founded in 1895.⁸²⁹ The Austrian Aid Society (Österreichischer Hilfsverein) was founded on 14 April 1878 to support Austrians in case of disease or other miseries.⁸³⁰

The German Health Association (Deutscher Krankenverein) was founded on 23 March 1857.⁸³¹ A hundred year later, its centenary publication claimed it to be the largest and most important association of the German-Argentinean community.⁸³² The DPLZ, and later the AT as well, reported regularly on the improvement and growth of the German Health Association.

At a meeting of the German Health Association, some members decided that they wanted to found a hospital for poor Germans in Buenos Aires. For that project, they founded another association: the German Hospital Association ⁸²⁶ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 36.

⁸²⁷ “Schweizerische-Hilfs-Gesellschaft,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, July 3, 1872.

⁸²⁸ J. Dufour, “Société Philanthropique Suisse à Buenos Aires,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 4, 1878.

⁸²⁹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 303.

⁸³⁰ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 244.

⁸³¹ “Deutscher Kranken-Verein Buenos Aires, gegründet im Jahre 1857,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 8; Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 198.

⁸³² Oven, 100 Jahre Deutscher Krankenverein.

(Deutscher Hospitalverein) on 20 August 1867.⁸³³ Some Germans had already been playing with the idea of a hospital as the next project after the creation of a Protestant German church in 1855,⁸³⁴ but this project would take another twenty years to become realized.

The German Hospital opened on 14 April 1875.⁸³⁵ The majority of the patients treated at the hospital were poor people who were treated at no cost.⁸³⁶ In 1889, emphasis was still put on the hospital being for mainly for German and related patients (“deutsche und stammverwandte Kranke germanischer Zunge”) if they could prove they had little means; but it was also announced that paying patients would be kept in separate rooms.⁸³⁷ By 1907, the hospital distinguished between first- and second-class patients – the first class cost twice as much as the second – but Germans and German-speakers still had to become members of the Hospital association and pay an annual membership fee.⁸³⁸ In 1920, the migration office in Berlin of the Weimar Republic wrote that the German hospital

⁸³³ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 5; Benjamin Bryce, “Los caballeros de beneficencia y las damas organizadoras: El Hospital Alemán y la idea de comunidad en Buenos Aires, 1880-1930,” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 84.

⁸³⁴ “Unterstützung, Auszüge [...] Süd-Amerika [...] Buenos Ayres,” 1855, EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 44.

⁸³⁵ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 5; José Greger, Die Republik Argentinien. Reisehandbuch für Geschäftsleute, Fremde und Auswanderer, Second edition (Basel und Buenos Aires: Verlag von José Greger, 1887), 570.

⁸³⁶ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 6.

⁸³⁷ “Deutsches Hospital,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, May 7, 1889, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁸³⁸ “Deutsches Hospital,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 30, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

participated in the competition of highly qualified specialists and medical institutions and was among the most highly ranked in Buenos Aires.⁸³⁹

In 1898, the Allgemeine Deutsche Kranken-Unterstützungskasse met in the headquarters of the socialist association Vorwärts.⁸⁴⁰ On its website, the German Philanthropic Society (Deutsche Wohltätigkeitsgesellschaft) claims that it was founded on 23 April 1917,⁸⁴¹ but the DLPZ advertised a German Philanthropic Society already in April 1916.⁸⁴²

In Namibia, the wives of Rhenish missionaries often worked as nurses. Missionary Kleinschmidt set up a health station (Krankenstation) in Rehoboth in 1850.⁸⁴³ The first doctor of the German colonial troops (Schutztruppe), Dr. Richter, arrived in March 1893.⁸⁴⁴ In 1903, Franciscan nuns started working in the Windhoek military hospital; the Windhoek Catholic Hospital was opened in 1906, followed by the Catholic Antonius Hospital in Swakopmund in 1907.⁸⁴⁵ The Windhoek Elisabeth House served as a maternity ward between 1908 and 1981

⁸³⁹ Reichswanderungsamt Berlin, "Merkblatt Nr. 5 (2. Auflage): Aussichten für Ärzte in Argentinien," 1920, 5, BArch R 8023/114, pag. 117.

⁸⁴⁰ "Allgemeine Deutsche Kranken-Unterstützungskasse," Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 29, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁸⁴¹ "Quiénes Somos," DWG - Sociedad Alemana de Beneficiencia, 2017, <http://www.dwg.org.ar/quienes-somos.php>.

⁸⁴² "Deutsche Wohltätigkeits-Gesellschaft [...] Gebt Arbeit!," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 13, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁸⁴³ Norbert Forster, "Für alle wird gesorgt: Die Entwicklung des Gesundheitswesens," in Vom Schutzgebiet bis Namibia 2000, ed. Klaus Hess and Klaus Becker (Göttingen; Windhoek: Hess, 2002), 167.

⁸⁴⁴ Ibid., 168.

⁸⁴⁵ Ibid., 169.

and was operated by the German Red Cross.⁸⁴⁶ Around 1905, two German government hospitals were set up in Lüderitzbucht and Swakopmund (the latter with segregated beds: 20 for whites and 33 for blacks); 1910 a government hospital with 14 beds was opened in Windhoek.⁸⁴⁷ In 1913, the Johanniter hospital was inaugurated in Keetmanshoop.⁸⁴⁸ The German government medical system ended in 1915 with South African occupation.

4.6 Conclusion

Scholars have studied the missionaries, merchants, and traders who went to the South Atlantic. But people were never only merchants or only missionaries. Early missionaries in Namibia brought with them their lifestyle, their eating habits, clothing habits, and so on, which differed from those habits of established locals. Merchants in Argentina were not just merchants, they brought their beliefs and cultural systems with them, and many of them were Lutherans. For many German-speakers, religion was an important component of their identity: many identified as Christians, as either Lutherans or Roman Catholics, and some identified as Jews.

⁸⁴⁶ Ibid.

⁸⁴⁷ Ibid.

⁸⁴⁸ “Einweihung des Johanniter-Krankenhauses,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, July 28, 1913, SBB - Westhafen.

Setting up churches and schools was a way for German-speakers to practice, maintain, and further “civilization.” “Civilization,” in their eyes, meant progress and superiority. Leisure associations were a sign of a superior lifestyle as freetime was only available to the bourgeois (Bürgerliche).⁸⁴⁹ Taking care of the poor and organizing health care was also signs of civilization.

As we have discussed in this chapter, German-speakers set up many of these shared institutions in the South Atlantic, including houses of worship (divided along denominational lines), German-language schools, and newspapers. German-speaking associations and social clubs were separated along political and regional lines – for example, Swiss, Austrian, and (regional) German associations co-existed – but in Argentina they all united together under an umbrella association, the deutscher Volksbund, during World War I, and then again in 1955 under the Federation of German-Argentine Associations (F.A.A.G.).⁸⁵⁰ All of the associations discussed in this chapter helped foster a shared “German,” and later still, “German-speaking” identity by providing places for reunion, exchange of ideas, and cooperation.

⁸⁴⁹ See Thorstein Veblen, The Theory of the Leisure Class (Oxford; New York: Oxford University Press, 2007).

⁸⁵⁰ Rodolfo Hepe, Crónica sobre 50 años de historia: Federación de Asociaciones Argentino-Germanas = Chronik über 50 Jahre Geschichte. Verband der deutsch-argentinischen Vereinigungen (Buenos Aires: FAAG, 2005).

Chapter 5. Associations and Companies for Enterprise and Expanding German Markets

German-speakers had economic interests in both Argentina and Namibia. In 1851, Gottfried Wilhelm Kerst lamented the fact that, while the national assembly of 1848 had planned on treating emigration as a “national cause,” with its dissolution this idea also disappeared.⁸⁵¹ He wished that it would be picked up by the German customs union (Zollverein).⁸⁵² He dreamed of a large German population in the River Plate maintaining an intimate relation to the “mother country” (Mutterland) in order for Germany to maintain its “trade-political” (handelspolitisch) independence in the future.⁸⁵³ This German population should operate under the protection of the German Zollverein in order to compete with the British, the French, and the North Americans,⁸⁵⁴ but would also require a strong German navy. In 1884, Ernst Bachmann claimed that the great migration flows of Germans should be redirected from North America – where they were absorbed into the industry (Industrievolk) – to the South American east coast where Germans could develop a new market for export trade, industry and its productive forces and provide space for German colonization projects.⁸⁵⁵ By 1916, Otto

⁸⁵¹ Samuel Gottfried Kerst, Die Länder am Uruguay. Vortrag, gehalten in der Sitzung des Berliner Vereins zur Centralisation deutscher Auswanderung und Colonisation am 8. October 1851 (Berlin: Julius Sittenfeld, 1851), 2.

⁸⁵² Ibid., 3.

⁸⁵³ Ibid., 14.

⁸⁵⁴ Ibid., 15.

⁸⁵⁵ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 2.

Kasdorf argued that strong German activity in Argentina would ensure the independence of South American countries and prevent U.S., British, and French dominance in the continent.⁸⁵⁶ He portrayed Germany as South America's friend.⁸⁵⁷ He also criticized companies that used "international money" and thus served nations other than Germany, as for example Liebig Co. with its seat in London.⁸⁵⁸

In addition to the non-profit associations discussed in the previous chapter, South Atlantic German-speakers also founded a variety of associations that functioned as for-profit companies. In this chapter, we will thus discuss the trade companies, banks and insurance companies, colonization companies and associations, companies involved in large-scale production of foodstuffs, as well as those companies that brought new technological tools to the South Atlantic.

5.1 Trade Companies as Link between South Atlantic and Central Europe

Trade companies served as an important link between German-speakers in Central Europe and the South Atlantic. Some have proven to be fleeting ventures, lasting only a few decades, while others continue to function as connections between the continents today. Viewed as a whole, these companies contributed to the increase ⁸⁵⁶ Kasdorf, Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika, 67.

⁸⁵⁷ Ibid., 68.

⁸⁵⁸ Ibid., 70.

of the German interaction in the world market. Various address books and calendars were published in the South Atlantic by and for German-speakers. All of these publications included lists of trade companies. In 1873, the Buenos Aires publishing house Ruhland & Reinhardt published the German La Plata Calendar.⁸⁵⁹ Ernst Bachmann, journalist and temporary Argentine consul in Europe, published two yearbooks of the German Colony in Buenos Aires, one in 1884 and one in 1886.⁸⁶⁰ In 1896, Gustav Meinecke included an article on German colonization aims in non-German countries in his Colonial Yearbook.⁸⁶¹ This article discussed the Südamerikanische Kolonisationsgesellschaft (South American Colonization Society) headed by Ernst Hasse. In 1914, the publishing house Verlag Amerika's Address Book of Germans Abroad had a volume on South America.⁸⁶² In 1945, Argentine scholar Luis Víctor Sommi published the history of expansion of German capital in Argentina.⁸⁶³ Then, there are also publications by historians that provide information on German companies in Argentina: In 1948, U.S. scholar Fred Rippy published on German investments in ⁸⁵⁹ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873.

⁸⁶⁰ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884; Ernst Bachmann, ed., Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, Second Edition (Buenos Aires: Hugo Kunz & Cia., 1886).

⁸⁶¹ Gustav Meinecke, ed., "Deutsche Kolonisationsbestrebungen in nichtdeutschen Ländern," Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Achter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1895 8 (1896): 14–15.

⁸⁶² Verlag Amerika, Adressbuch der Deutschen im Auslande, I. Band: Südamerika (Berlin: Verlag Amerika, 1914).

⁸⁶³ Luis Víctor Sommi, Los capitales alemanes en la Argentina: Historia de su expansión (Buenos Aires: Editorial Claridad, 1945).

Argentina.⁸⁶⁴ In 1977, Ronald Newton assembled a detailed history of German merchants and trade companies in Buenos Aires prior to WWII.⁸⁶⁵ In 2007, Thomas Fischer published on German merchants in Latin America between 1830 and 1930.⁸⁶⁶

Publications on German companies in Namibia include: 1903 Pierre Decharme's book in French on German colonial companies and societies.⁸⁶⁷ In 1904, the German colonial handbook was published,⁸⁶⁸ and in 1907, von der Heydt's colonial handbook was published.⁸⁶⁹ Johannes Tesch published a yearly colonial-trade address book.⁸⁷⁰ In 1908, the first address book just for German South-West Africa was published in Berlin.⁸⁷¹ In the rest of this section we will discuss some of the companies that were successful in the longterm. Several of the ⁸⁶⁴ J. Fred Rippy, "German Investments in Argentina," The Journal of Business of the University of Chicago 21, no. 1 (1948): 50–54.

⁸⁶⁵ Newton, German Buenos Aires, 1900-1933.

⁸⁶⁶ Thomas Fischer, "Deutsche Kaufleute in Lateinamerika - 1830 bis 1930," in Deutsche in der Fremde: Assimilation, Abgrenzung, Integration, ed. Torsten Kühlmann and Bernd Müller-Jacquier (St. Ingbert: Röhrig Universitätsverlag, 2007), 163–90.

⁸⁶⁷ Pierre Decharme, Compagnies et sociétés coloniales allemandes (Paris: Masson et cie, 1903).

⁸⁶⁸ Rudolf Fitzner, ed., Deutsches Kolonial-Handbuch nach amtlichen Quellen bearbeitet (Berlin: Paetel, 1904).

⁸⁶⁹ von der Heydt, Von der Heydt's Kolonial-Handbuch, Jahrbuch der deutschen Kolonial- und Uebersee-Unternehmungen. Herausgegeben von Franz Mensch und Julius Hellmann... (Berlin: Verlag für Börsen- und Finanzliteratur, 1907); Franz Mensch and Julius Hellmann, eds., Von der Heydt's Kolonial-Handbuch: Jahrbuch der deutschen Kolonial- und Uebersee-Unternehmungen, vol. 5 (Berlin, Leipzig, Hamburg: Verlag für Börsen- und Finanzliteratur, 1911); Franz Mensch and Julius Hellmann, eds., Von der Heydt's Kolonial-Handbuch: Jahrbuch der deutschen Kolonial- und Uebersee-Unternehmungen, vol. 7 (Berlin, Leipzig, Hamburg: Verlag für Börsen- und Finanzliteratur, 1913).

⁸⁷⁰ Johannes Tesch, ed., Kolonial-Handels-Adressbuch 1912 (16. Jahrgang), vol. 16 (Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1912); Johannes Tesch, ed., Kolonial-Handels-Adressbuch 1914 (18. Jahrgang), vol. 18 (Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1914).

⁸⁷¹ Adressbuch für Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Berlin: Paetel, 1908).

trade companies and societies active in the South Atlantic in the early 1800s originated in the Rhineland, including the Rheinisch-Westindische Companie (Rhenish West-Indian Company) – active in Argentina – and the Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft (Rhenish Missionary Society) – active in Namibia.

The Rhenish-West-Indian Company was founded in Elberfeld, Germany on 30 March 1821 in order to export German goods (“Teutsche Fabrikate”) to the West Indies, North and South America.⁸⁷² It included export of linen, cotton, wool, silk, iron, and metal goods (“Quincaillerie”). The editor of the journal publishing the statute of the Rhenish-West-Indian Company added a postscript stating, “Finally the time has come for us Germans (“wir Teutschen”) to awaken from our disgracing somnolence, to act and do, instead of just lamenting disdainfully, when we can help ourselves.”⁸⁷³ In 1823, Friedrich Wilhelm Schmalzing was nominated as representative of the Rhenish-Westindian Company in Buenos Aires (“Plata Strom”).⁸⁷⁴ The report of the 1826 directorial meeting described the difficulties with flour export from Elberfeld to Buenos Aires, due to both war between Argentina and Brazil, and changing commercial relations between Germany and the Netherlands with regards to access to the Rhine

⁸⁷² Friedrich Justin Bertuch, ed., “Statuten der Rheinisch-Westindischen Companie,” Neue allgemeine geographische Ephemeriden 10 (1822): 21–31.

⁸⁷³ Ibid., 31.

⁸⁷⁴ C. C. Becher, “Folgender Vortrag wurde in der Direktorialraths-Versammlung der Rheinische-Westindischen Kompanie, zu Elberfeld, am 26. Juli 1823 gehalten...,” Allgemeine Zeitung, August 28, 1823, Beilage zur Allgemeinen Zeitung edition, 570.

River.⁸⁷⁵ While the Political Journal from 1826 claimed that the company focused on the import of flour,⁸⁷⁶ Otto Quelle wrote in 1919 that the company – at least in Argentina – focused on the import of textiles.⁸⁷⁷ In 1825, it named a Prussian trade agent for Buenos Aires.⁸⁷⁸ In 1915, August Beckmann published a dissertation on the company.⁸⁷⁹ According to an article published by Otto Quelle from the German-South-American and Iberian Institute on the trade relations between the Rhineland and Latin America in 1919, the Rhenish-West-Indian Company was active in Buenos Aires between 1822 and September 1831, as the Buenos Aires branch was closed in 1831.⁸⁸⁰ Historian Michael Zeuske has told the story of the Rhenish-West-Indian Company and provided statistics on trade between Germany and Argentina for the years 1821 to 1826 which showed that ⁸⁷⁵ “Die Rheinisch-Westindische Compagnie,” Politisches Journal nebst Anzeige von gelehrten und anderen Sachen, 1826, 414.

⁸⁷⁶ Ibid., 411.

⁸⁷⁷ Otto Quelle, ed., “Zur Geschichte der rheinischen Handelsbeziehungen mit Lateinamerika,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 7 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1919), 73.

⁸⁷⁸ “Mit den Niederlanden und Frankreich steht die Republik bereits in förmlichen Handels-Verbindungen, die Rheinisch-Westindische Compagnie handelt besonders nach Mexiko und auch Preußische Handels-Agenten sind bereits in Mexiko, wie in Buenos Ayres, ernannt.” “Historisch-politische Übersicht des Jahrs 1825,” Politisches Journal nebst Anzeige von gelehrten und anderen Sachen, 1826, 113.

⁸⁷⁹ August Beckmann, Die Rheinisch-Westindische Compagnie, ihr Wirken und ihre Bedeutung (Borna-Leipzig: Robert Noske, 1915).

⁸⁸⁰ Quelle, “Zur Geschichte der rheinischen Handelsbeziehungen mit Lateinamerika.”

trade steadily increased during those years.⁸⁸¹ They traded in goods that included linen, wool, and cotton.

The Rhenish Missionary Society was founded in Elberfeld in 1828. It became active north of the Orange River, in Southern Africa after 1840.⁸⁸² Missionaries traded with the locals; this was called “missionary trade” (Missionshandel).⁸⁸³ In 1863, the missionaries founded a missionary colony [Missionskolonie] and took up trade with the indigenous population, mainly the Nama- and Herero-speakers.⁸⁸⁴ They also founded the Missionary Trade Stock Company (Missions-Handels-Actien-Gesellschaft – MHAG) in 1870 under inspector Friedrich Fabri who had imperialist leanings.⁸⁸⁵ The company operated until 1881. Thomas Braun has studied nineteenth-century RMG trade in Namibia and portrayed the development and set up of the trade company and trade posts.⁸⁸⁶

The Damara and Namaqua Trade Company (Damara- und Namaqua-Handelsgesellschaft) was founded in Hamburg in 1894.⁸⁸⁷ In 1899, a subsidiary

⁸⁸¹ Zeuske, “Deutsche ‘Hinterländer’ und Amerika: Die sächsischen Mitglieder der ‘Rheinisch-Westindischen Compagnie’ 1820-1830.”

⁸⁸² See the archives of the Rhenish Missionary Society (RMG) in Wuppertal, Germany.

⁸⁸³ Thomas Braun, Die Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft und der Missionshandel im 19. Jahrhundert (Erlangen: Verlag der Evangelisch-Lutherischen Mission, 1992), 11.

⁸⁸⁴ Bade, “Missionsarbeit, überseeische Politik und Auswanderungsfrage,” 93.

⁸⁸⁵ Braun, Die Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft, 11.

⁸⁸⁶ Braun, Die Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft.

⁸⁸⁷ “Damara- und Namaqua-Handels-Gesellschaft m.B.H.,” December 3, 1894, BArch R 1001/1630, pag. 12.

opened in Swakopmund.⁸⁸⁸ In 1899, the Damara and Namaqua Trade Company advertised the Woermann shipping line in the Windhoeker Anzeiger.⁸⁸⁹ In 1909, Adolph and Eduard Woermann, Max Brock and Arnold Amsinck took over the company and renamed it Woermann, Brock & Co.⁸⁹⁰ The Swakopmunder Handelsgesellschaft was a subcompany of the Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft für SüdwestAfrika, founded in 1900 with its seat in Berlin.⁸⁹¹ A list of trade houses in Swakopmund in 1907 included: Georg Ahrens, Boysen Wulff & Co., Erhard und Schultz, Haensgen und Baumgarten i. Liqu., L. Koch Nachfolger, Mertens & Sichel Ges. m. b. H., Robert Schurig, Swakopmunder Buchhandlung Ges. m b. H., Wecke & Voigts and Westafrikanische Handels-Gesellschaft Gerecke & Hill.⁸⁹² The Deutsch-Afrikanische Handelsgesellschaft was active in Namibia in the 1920s.⁸⁹³

Many of the early trade companies with seats in the South Atlantic were also family companies; that is to say, they were run by one or several families and ⁸⁸⁸ “Bekanntmachung. In das Gesellschaftsregister des Kaiserlichen Gerichts zu Swakopmund ist heute zufolge Anmeldung vom 30. Oktober/14. November 1899 unter No. 9 die in Swakopmund errichtete Zweigniederlassung der Damara- und Namaqua-Handelsgesellschaft m. b. H. unter der Firma ‘Damara- und Namaqua-Handelsgesellschaft m. b. H., Zweigniederlassung Swakopmund’ eingetragen worden ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 23, 1899, NAN.

⁸⁸⁹ Damara- und Namaqua-Handels-Gesellschaft, “Woermann-Linie,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, May 25, 1899, NAN.

⁸⁹⁰ Adolph Woermann et al., “Die Unterzeichneten haben am 1. April d. J. die Firma Woermann, Brock & Co. errichtet ...,” April 1909, BArch R 1001/1630, pag. 34.

⁸⁹¹ “Swakopmunder Handelsgesellschaft m.b.H.,” April 12, 1900, BArch R 1001/1668, pag. 2.

⁸⁹² “Gründungs-Urkunde des Verbandes selbstständiger Kaufleute Swakopmunds,” June 15, 1907, BArch R 1001/1736, pag. 93-94.

⁸⁹³ “[Deutsch-Afrikanische Handelsgesellschaft],” October 1926, BArch R 1001/1732, pag. 3.

over multiple generations. Many of them are still operating today. In Namibia, such companies included Mertens & Sichel, Schmerenbeck, and Wecke & Voigts. In the 1890s, these companies set up stores in Windhoek.⁸⁹⁴ By 1888-89, the German merchants Mertens and Sichel had already set up a warehouse in Walvis Bay.⁸⁹⁵ In 1898, Mertens & Sichel advertised in the Windhoeker Anzeiger as an import and export business⁸⁹⁶ and purveyor of articles such as photography equipment.⁸⁹⁷ In 1899, they opened an additional branch in Rehoboth.⁸⁹⁸ A. Schmerenbeck announced the selling of land in the Windhoeker Anzeiger in 1898.⁸⁹⁹ In 1898, Wecke & Voigts also advertised its import-export business in the Windhoeker Anzeiger.⁹⁰⁰ In 1899, Richard Voigts, another Voigts brother, joined the company as co-owner.⁹⁰¹ In the 1910s, Wecke & Voigts regularly

⁸⁹⁴ Kurd Schwabe, "Die Entwicklung des Handels und der Siedelung," in Mit Schwert und Pflug in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Vier Kriegs- und Wanderjahre, Second Edition (Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1904), 359.

⁸⁹⁵ Gürich, Deutsch Südwest-Afrika, 19.

⁸⁹⁶ "Mertens & Sichel [...] Import und Export," Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 12, 1898, NAN.

⁸⁹⁷ Mertens & Sichel, "Für Photographen und Amateure!," Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 12, 1898, NAN.

⁸⁹⁸ Richter, "Bekanntmachung. In das Firmenregister des Kaiserlichen Gerichtes zu Windhoek ist heute bei Nr. 9 unter der Firma 'Mertens & Sichel' die in Rehoboth errichtete Zweigniederlassung ...," Windhoeker Anzeiger, December 21, 1899, NAN.

⁸⁹⁹ A. Schmerenbeck, "Land-Verkauf," Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 24, 1898, NAN.

⁹⁰⁰ Wecke & Voigts, "Wecke & Voigts [...] Import - Export: 100 Pferde, dreijährig, stehen zum Verkauf auf Farm Voigtland," Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 27, 1898, NAN.

⁹⁰¹ Wecke & Voigts, "Wir bringen hiermit zur öffentlichen Kenntniss, dass wir Herrn Richard Voigts v. 1. Januar 1899 an als Theilhaber in unsere Firma aufgenommen haben," Windhoeker Anzeiger, March 30, 1899, NAN.

reported their beverage stock to the protectorate government.⁹⁰² Contemporary writer Hans Grimm dedicated one of his books to a biography of Gustav Voigts, where he portrays Voigts life.⁹⁰³ Other trade companies mentioned in the Windhoeker Anzeiger include Alexander Lübbert & Co.⁹⁰⁴ in 1898, Wronsky & Co.⁹⁰⁵ and Jacques Sander⁹⁰⁶ in 1899, and Denker & Co.⁹⁰⁷ in 1900. Georg Gürich wrote in his travel account from 1889 that all German companies [Gesellschaften] had an agent in Cape Town.⁹⁰⁸ An example for a German company he gave was Poppe, Russouw & Cie. in Cape Town.⁹⁰⁹

⁹⁰² Wecke & Voigts, “Wecke & Voigts, Aris an das Kaiserliche Bezirksamt Windhuk,” August 2, 1910, NAN BWI 429; Wecke & Voigts, “Wecke & Voigts, Aris an das Kaiserliche Bezirksamt Windhuk; Getränkeanmeldung,” May 7, 1911, NAN BWI 429; Wecke & Voigts, “Wecke & Voigts, Aris an das Kaiserliche Bezirksamt Windhuk; Getränkeanmeldung,” July 6, 1911, NAN BWI 429; Wecke & Voigts, “Wecke & Voigts, Aris an das Kaiserliche Bezirksamt Windhuk,” May 4, 1913, NAN BWI 429; Wecke & Voigts, “Wecke & Voigts, Aris an das Kaiserliche Bezirksamt Windhuk,” November 1, 1914, NAN BWI 429; Wecke & Voigts and Möhring, “Wecke & Voigts, Aris an das Kaiserliche Bezirksamt Windhuk,” December 10, 1914, NAN BWI 429.

⁹⁰³ Hans Grimm, Gustav Voigts: ein Leben in Deutsch-Südwest [Afrika], Third edition (Gütersloh [Germany]: Verlag C. Bertelsmann, 1942).

⁹⁰⁴ Richter, “Bekanntmachung. In das Gesellschaftsregister des Kaiserlichen Gerichts in Windhoek ist unter [...] unter der Firma Alexander Lübbert & Co. mit dem Sitze in Hatzamas errichtete offene Handelsgesellschaft, ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 27, 1898, NAN.

⁹⁰⁵ Der Kaiserliche Richter, “Oeffentliche Zustellung. Die offene Handelsgesellschaft W. Wronsky & Co. zu Omaruru ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 19, 1899, NAN.

⁹⁰⁶ Richter, “Bekanntmachung. In das Firmenregister des Kaiserlichen Gerichtes zu Windhoek ist heute unter Nr. 8 die Firma Jacques Sander zu Windhoek [...] eingetragen worden,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, March 30, 1899, NAN.

⁹⁰⁷ Richter, “Bekanntmachung. In das Gesellschaftsregister des Kaiserlichen Gerichts zu Windhoek ist heute unter No. 8 die am 1. Juli 1898 unter der Firma M. Denker & Co. mit dem Sitze in Okahandka errichtete offene Handelsgesellschaft ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 17, 1900, NAN.

⁹⁰⁸ Gürich, Deutsch Südwest-Afrika, 9.

⁹⁰⁹ Ibid.

In Argentina, Johann Christian Zimmermann was among the first successful German-speaking merchants to establish themselves. In 1817, he was involved in founding the company Zimmermann, Frazier & Co., which was involved in the shipping business in Argentina.⁹¹⁰ Lütge et al. have portrayed the history of German merchant houses in Argentina in the nineteenth century in detail.⁹¹¹ Trade between Buenos Aires and Hamburg was important throughout the nineteenth century. In her 2003 study, Annette Christine Vogt has put the story of the Wappäus family in the context of Hamburg-South America trade relations and the emerging world market of the nineteenth century.⁹¹² Johann Eduard Wappäus (*1812, Hamburg – 1879, Göttingen), the professor in Göttingen who published intensively on German migration to and colonization in South America, came from this Hamburg merchant family active in trade with South America. Other authors have pointed out the importance of Hamburg for trade with Argentina.⁹¹³ Juan Alemann even wrote in his travel writing that Argentineans thought Hamburg must be for Germany like Paris was for France.

⁹¹⁰ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 140.

⁹¹¹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien.

⁹¹² In her introduction, Vogt stated that scholars have not agreed upon a single definition of the “world market” and its emergence, see Annette Christine Vogt, Ein Hamburger Beitrag zur Entwicklung des Welthandels im 19. Jahrhundert: die Kaufmannsreederei Wappäus im internationalen Handel Venezuelas und der dänischen sowie niederländischen Antillen (Stuttgart: Steiner, 2003).

⁹¹³ Jörn Helmuth Arfs, Die Beziehungen der Hansestadt Hamburg zu den La Plata-Staaten, 1815-1866, Hamburger Beiträge zur Überseegegeschichte 1 (Münster: LIT Verlag, 1991).

His grandson Ernesto Alemann wrote his dissertation on trade with Hamburg in 1915.⁹¹⁴

Ernst Bachmann wrote that in 1837, Hamburg, Bremen, and Frankfurt am Main had consuls in Buenos Aires, and there were four large German trade houses: Bunge, Huetz & Co. (founded again as Bunge, Bornefeld & Comp. on January 1, 1849), Zimmermann, Frazier & Comp., Mohr & Ludovici and C.H. Andersen (continued as Klick & Comp. after 1838).⁹¹⁵ Company owners thus also served as consuls. This testified to a connection between trade and government representation carried out by individuals. Bachmann asserted that many trade houses founded in Buenos Aires in the 1840s did not survive until 1884,⁹¹⁶ and many of those that did repeatedly changed names over the course of decades. O. Bemberg (founded in 1856) changed to Bemberg, Heimendahl & Comp. in 1864; A. Mantels (founded in 1857) changed to Mantells & Pfeiffer in 1860; Altgelt, Ferber & Comp. (founded in 1857) changed to Ferber, Huehn & Comp. in 1864 and became Ernesto Tornquist & Comp. in 1872; H. Peltzer & Comp. (founded in 1862) became Succesores Theodor Bracht & Comp. in 1867; Koenig, Boese & Comp. (founded in 1869) became Koenig, Rhodius & Comp. in 1874, then changed to Th. Koenig & Comp. in 1876, before becoming Hardt, Koch & Comp.

⁹¹⁴ Alemann, Hamburgs Schiffahrt und Handel nach dem La Plata.

⁹¹⁵ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 4.

⁹¹⁶ Ibid., 13.

in 1879.⁹¹⁷ Bachmann stated that despite a large part of German trade houses exporting local products (Landesproducte) to English, Belgian, and French ports, three German steamer lines were busy to assure the transportation of goods between Buenos Aires and Hamburg and Bremen.⁹¹⁸

Much has been written about Ernesto Tornquist y Cía. His companies were involved in various areas. In 1873, he was involved in the sugar industry,⁹¹⁹ but also with the saladeros [meat and fish salting] and the frigoríficos [freezers].⁹²⁰ In 1874, Tornquist incorporated the bank “Altgelt, Färber & Cia.” with Albert de Bary from Bremen as partner.⁹²¹ Between 1883 and 1908, Tornquist’s economic activity and involvement included companies both in Argentina as well as in Antwerp.⁹²² In 1907, the DLPZ wrote the following lines about Tornquist:

Mr. Ernesto Tornquist is a native Argentinean and as such highly esteemed by both locals and foreigners; he is currently even a member of the national chamber of deputies. We, however, also value him as a one of the most distinguished German-Argentineans, who, like Francisco Seeber and Dr. Emilio Frers, never disclaim their German upbringing and have preserved vivid sympathies for Germanness, and who know how advocate for it if necessary. Being the director of one of the oldest German companies [in Argentina], Mr. Ernesto

⁹¹⁷ Ibid.

⁹¹⁸ Ibid.

⁹¹⁹ Institución Ernesto Tornquist., Ernesto Tornquist, 1842-1942 (Buenos Aires: Talleres de la Compañía Impresora Argentina s.a., 1942), 23 ff.

⁹²⁰ Ibid., 31 ff.

⁹²¹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 237.

⁹²² Gilbert, “Ernesto Tornquist, entre los negocios y las políticas económicas,” 59.

Tornquist is yet considered as respected member of our German colony, where he [counts] so many his friends.⁹²³

In 1908, the journal Süd-Amerika dedicated an article to Ernesto Tornquist and praised his achievements in Argentina as a German-Argentinean entrepreneur.⁹²⁴

Recently, Argentine economic historians have studied him as one of the most important Argentine businessmen of the turn of the twentieth century. Argentinean scholars have attributed different “national” terms for the Tornquist family and their businesses in Argentina. Recently, many scholars have shown interest in Ernesto Tornquist and his achievements. While the German-speaking community claimed him as one of theirs, Argentinean scholars have also used different labels for him. In 1998, Graciela Silvestri has studied the relation between Tornquist and Belgian capital.⁹²⁵ Adela Harispuru and Jorge Gilbert have

⁹²³ “Ernesto Tornquist,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, June 16, 1907, sec. Sonntagsblatt der “Deutschen La Plata Zeitung,” Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina “Herr Ernesto Tornquist ist geborener Argentinier und als solcher von Einheimischen und Fremden hochgeschätzt, wie er auch gegenwärtig noch Mitglied der Deputiertenkammer der Nation ist, doch schätzen wir ihn auch als einen der hervorragendsten Deutsch-Argentinier, welche, wie Francisco Seeber und Dr. Emilio Frers, ihre deutsche Erziehung nie verleugnen und für das Deutschtum stets die lebhaftesten Sympathieen bewahren und, wenn es notwendig ist, auch dafür einzutreten wissen. Herr Ernesto Tornquist wird nun jedoch noch mehr als Chef einer der ältesten deutschen Firmen am Platze als angesehenes Mitglied unserer deutschen Kolonie gerechnet, in der er so viele Freunde [hat].”

⁹²⁴ “Don Ernesto Tornquist,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, September 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 1.

⁹²⁵ Graciela Silvestri, “Proyectos urbanos y proyectos industriales en los años de la racionalización. La empresa Tornquist y los capitales belgas en la construcción de Buenos Aires, 1925-1940,” in En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, ed. Bart De Groof et al. (Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998), 107–14.

modified Belgian by Belgian-German.⁹²⁶ The Tornquist group continued to be important in Argentine economic history. In particular Jorge Gilbert has published on Tornquist: one article on the Tornquist group and modern Argentina,⁹²⁷ and one on Tornquist and political economy.⁹²⁸ Geoffrey Jones and Andrea Llach even published an article in English in the Harvard Business Review on Tornquist in 2007.⁹²⁹

In addition to merchants based in Argentina like Tornquist or Hermann Altgelt,⁹³⁰ there were also companies with their main office in Germany and branches in Argentina. Examples of the later are: Staudt & Cie., Berlin; John. Bernhard Hasenclever & Söhne, Remscheid; Aug. A. Claussen, Bremen (Firma Linck & Co); Karl Kropp, Aachen; Felten & Guillaume, Carlswerk; and R. Sievers, Hamburg.⁹³¹ Other German companies disposed of important real estate in Argentina, like the companies Lahusen from Bremen and Joh. Daniel

⁹²⁶ Harispuru and Gilbert, “El holding ‘Tornquist’ y su vinculacion con la comunidad belgo-alemana, en Argentina.”

⁹²⁷ Jorge Gilbert, Empresario y empresa en la Argentina moderna: el Grupo Tornquist, 1873-1930 (Victoria Pcia. de Buenos Aires: Universidad de San Andrés, 2002).

⁹²⁸ Gilbert, “Ernesto Tornquist, entre los negocios y las políticas económicas.”

⁹²⁹ Geoffrey G. Jones and Andrea Llach, “Ernesto Tornquist: Making a Fortune on the Pampas,” Harvard Business Review, 2007.

⁹³⁰ W. Paats y Cia., “Al comercio. Habiendo concluido nuestro Contrato de Sociedad, el Señor Don Hermann Altgelt por mutuo acuerdo ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 9, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Hermann Altgelt, Buenos Aires,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 13, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Hermann Altgelt & Co.,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 29, 1889, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹³¹ “[deutsche Häuser mit Filialen in Buenos Aires],” March 15, 1906, BArch R 901/30418, pag. 23.

Fuhrmann, and Th. Bracht & Co. from Antwerpen.⁹³² Lahusen was also the president of the Protestant Association for the La Plata States in Germany.⁹³³

In 1909, the trade company Plaut & Co. of Buenos Aires concluded a contract with the Argentinisch-Deutsche Handelsgesellschaft (Argentine-German trade Company) of Berlin.⁹³⁴ As a sample contract from 1909 shows, while it was named a “trade company,” its actual aim was to be a mediator between European colonists and the Argentine government in order to practice cattle breeding on a lot of land sold by the latter for that purpose – it was thus rather a colonization company.⁹³⁵

In 1905, the German ambassador [Gesandter] Julius von Waldthausen informed the German government about the project of a German society for economic endeavors in Argentina.⁹³⁶ In 1909, Erwin Taubmann informed the

⁹³² “[deutsche Firmen Lahusen, Bremen: Joh. Daniel Fuhrmann, Th. Bracht & Co. = Antwerpen. „verfügen über bedeutenden Grundbesitz in Argentinien.“.]”

⁹³³ Lahusen, “Evangelischer Verein für die La Plata Staaten in Deutschland.”

⁹³⁴ “Zwischen der Argentinisch-Deutschen Handelsgesellschaft m.b.H. in Berlin [...] und der offenen Handelsgesellschaft in Firma Plaut & Co. in Buenos Aires mit Zweigniederlassung in Berlin ...,” August 7, 1909, BArch R 901/30425, pag. 82.

⁹³⁵ “[Sample contract; Argentinisch-Deutsche Handelsgesellschaft],” August 7, 1909, BArch R 901/30425, pag. 85-86.

⁹³⁶ Julius von Waldthausen, “[Dr. Vallentin und die geplante Gründung einer deutsche Gesellschaft für wirtschaftliche Unternehmungen in Argentinien] Julius von Waldthausen to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” January 4, 1905, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 119-120.

German consul of Buenos Aires that he had founded an office for the support of trade between Germany and Argentina in Hamburg.⁹³⁷

5.2 Providing and Protecting Capital: Banks and Insurance Companies

In his 1912 dissertation, Rudolf Staab wrote, “the economic expansion of a people (Volk), the search for foreign markets and the implication of distant economic territories into the domestic national economy (Volkswirtschaft), was always a sign of advanced economic development.”⁹³⁸ He continued that the centralized states of England and France had shown an early tendency towards economic expansion, which was mostly disguised as colonial conquest. Banks played a central role in this process of economic expansion and “development.” Four types of banks operated in Argentina: banks operating internationally, banks for money transactions operating locally, banks or money operations organized by local communities (for example health associations), and banks for agricultural and thus colonization purposes. Lastly, I discuss insurance companies in this section. Insurance companies should provide a means to protect the various endeavors of German-speaking migrants and colonists in the South Atlantic.

⁹³⁷ Erwin Taubmann, “Bureau zur Förderung des Handels zwischen Deutschland und Argentinien an das Kaiserlich Deutsche General-Konsulat des Herrn von Sanden, Buenos Aires,” November 11, 1909, BArch R 901/30426, pag. 38-39.

⁹³⁸ Own translation. Rudolf Staab, Die Unternehmertätigkeit deutscher Banken im Auslande: eine besondere Form des deutschen Kapitaleports (Lörrach (Baden): Wiesentäler Handelsdruckerei Carl W. Auer, 1912), 5.

5.2.1 Internationally Operating Banks

In the first decades of the German colony in Buenos Aires, German-speakers either used other institutions to carry out their financial transactions – Bachmann stated that German Buenos Aires trade houses served the function of banks, due to their reputation of trustworthiness in the “commercial world of Buenos Aires”⁹³⁹ – or they used banks branded under other nationalities for their financial transactions. The latter is reflected in the following banks advertising in the German-language newspapers in Argentina in the 1870s: the Banco Argentino,⁹⁴⁰ the Banco Mercantil del Rio de la Plata,⁹⁴¹ Also advertising in German-language newspapers were the London and La Plata Bank,⁹⁴² the Banco Franco-Platense,⁹⁴³ and the Banco de Italia y Rio de la Plata.⁹⁴⁴ There was also a German-Belgian bank in 1872, the Deutsch-Belgische La Plata-Bank with W.

⁹³⁹ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 14.

⁹⁴⁰ “Banco Argentino,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, July 3, 1872.

⁹⁴¹ “Banco Mercantil del Rio de la Plata,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 2, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁴² “Die London und La Plata Bank,” Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, January 2, 1866; G. E. Maschwitz and J. E. Naylor, “London und La Plata Bank,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, July 3, 1872; G. E. Maschwitz, “London und La Plata-Bank,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 3, 1877.

⁹⁴³ G. Stump, “Banco Franco-Platense,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, July 3, 1872.

⁹⁴⁴ “Banco de Italia y Rio de la Plata,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Moll and U. Locher as managers.⁹⁴⁵ According to Lütge et al., the Deutsch-Belgische La Plata-Bank was co-founded by the Berliner Diskontogesellschaft, and the Köln Bankhaus Solomon Oppenheim together with a Belgian and an Austrian bank.⁹⁴⁶ Adam Altgelt was named director of the Buenos Aires branch in 1872.⁹⁴⁷ The bank, however, only lasted from 1872-1875.⁹⁴⁸ Many of these banks were cooperating transnationally or internationally, that is to say, there was not only one single national state affiliation of the bank.

This changed around 1900 when several banks clearly identified with the German Empire. In 1906 already, Richard Hauser wrote a dissertation on the German overseas banks.⁹⁴⁹ There were two German “Big Banks” that were most advertised for German-speakers in Argentina: one was the Banco Alemán Transatlántico, founded in 1887 as an Argentinean branch of the Deutsche Übersee Bank (called the Deutsche Überseeische Bank since 1893).⁹⁵⁰ This bank advertised in both the AT⁹⁵¹ and the DLPZ,⁹⁵² as well as in the magazine

⁹⁴⁵ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 212; W. Moll and M. Cassel, “Deutsch-Belgische La Plata Bank: Köln & Buenos Aires,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, December 4, 1872.

⁹⁴⁶ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 237.

⁹⁴⁷ Gilbert, “Ernesto Tornquist, entre los negocios y las políticas económicas,” 51.

⁹⁴⁸ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 14.

⁹⁴⁹ In 1906 already, Richard Hauser wrote a dissertation on the German overseas banks. See Hauser, Die deutschen Überseebanken.

⁹⁵⁰ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 297.

⁹⁵¹ “Banco Aleman Transatlántico,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 2, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁵² “Banco Aleman Transatlántico,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 28, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Banco Aleman Transatlántico Buenos Aires,”

Germania.⁹⁵³ In 1907, it already had three offices in Buenos Aires, and one each in Bahia Blanca, in Córdoba, in Tucuman, and in Bellville.⁹⁵⁴ In 1908 and 1909, Paul Wallich traveled to the South American branches of the Banco Aleman Transatlantico.⁹⁵⁵ The other was the Banco Germanico de la America del Sud, an Argentinean branch of the Deutsch-Südamerikanische Bank.⁹⁵⁶ It was also advertised in both the AT⁹⁵⁷ and the DLPZ,⁹⁵⁸ and the magazine Germania.⁹⁵⁹ In 1911, both of these big private banks contributed financially to the German Protestant church of Buenos Aires, as the yearly report of the church testifies.⁹⁶⁰

In April 1907, the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung featured an article on the role of German capital in South American “progress.”⁹⁶¹ In his 1912 dissertation, Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁵³ G. Lingenfelder, “Banco Alemán Transatlántico,” Germania 1, no. 7 (September 1, 1915).

⁹⁵⁴ “Deutsche Uebersee-Bank,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, September 2, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁵⁵ Paul Wallich, Bericht über eine Reise zu den Filialen des Banco Aleman Transatlantico in Argentinien, Chile, Bolivien, und Peru, 1908-1909, 1909; Paul Wallich, Banco Alemán Transatlántico: eine Reise durch Südamerika, ed. Manfred Pohl (Mainz: Hase & Koehler, 1986).

⁹⁵⁶ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 297.

⁹⁵⁷ “Banco Germánico de la América del Sud,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 2, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁵⁸ “Banco Germanico de la America del Sud,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Banco Germanico de la América del Sud,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁵⁹ E. Hermann, “Banco Germánico de la América del Sud,” Germania 1, no. 7 (September 1, 1915).

⁹⁶⁰ “Jahres-Bericht der Deutschen Evangelischen Gemeinde zu Buenos Aires (Kirchenbericht), 1911” (Buenos Aires: Druckerei der La Plata-Synode, Esmeralda 166, 1911), EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 76.

⁹⁶¹ “Das deutsche Kapital und der Aufschwung Südamerikas,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 5, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Rudolf Staab theorized on the role of banks in the financial expansion of states.⁹⁶² He stated that Holland, France, and England in particular, had preceded Germany in founding banks overseas because they had started colonization activity earlier.⁹⁶³ In the context of European rivalry in South America, the French foreign ministry monitored the activities of the Banco Alemán Transatlántico in 1915.⁹⁶⁴ Otto Kasdorf labeled the economic competition between the European countries an “economic war” over South America in a 1916 publication.⁹⁶⁵ The AT also discussed the economic fight between Germany and the U.S. over South America.⁹⁶⁶ In the 1970s, several scholars studied the influential role and impact of European banks and bankers on Argentina’s economic development.⁹⁶⁷ In 2006, Yovanna Pineda has specifically studied the impact of banks on Argentine industrialization.⁹⁶⁸ ⁹⁶² Staab, Die Unternehmertätigkeit deutscher Banken im Auslande.

⁹⁶³ Ibid., 21.

⁹⁶⁴ La Banque Allemande Transatlantique a Buenos Aires, 1915, 132 PO/2/111, CADN; La Banque Allemande transatlantique à Buenos Aires pendant la Guerre 1915-1919, 1915, 132 PO/2/111, CADN.

⁹⁶⁵ Kasdorf, Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika.

⁹⁶⁶ “Im Kampf um Latein-Amerika. Warum die Nordamerikaner den deutschen Handel nicht verdrängen können,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 27, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁶⁷ Peter Wilhelm Fischer, Der Einfluss des Auslandskapitals auf die wirtschaftliche Entwicklung Argentiniens, 1880-1964 ([Göttingen]: [O. Schwartz], 1970); Charles A. Jones, European Bankers and Argentina, 1880-90, University of Cambridge Centre of Latin American Studies Working Papers. Business Imperialism Series 3 (Cambridge: Centre of Latin American Studies, University of Cambridge, 1970).

⁹⁶⁸ Pineda, “Sources of Finance and Reputation.”

The director of the German Bank (Deutsche Bank) was member of the German Colonial Association (Deutscher Kolonial-Verein) in 1883.⁹⁶⁹ The Deutsch-Südwestafrikanische Bank was a private bank.⁹⁷⁰ In 1916, the American Consul for South Africa was mediator between Germans in the former protectorate and South African authorities on issues including financial ones.⁹⁷¹ The protestant preachers in Namibia were affected by WWI and the collapse of the German protectorate. In 1919, they complained to the Protestant church council (Evangelischer Oberkirchenrat) that they were treated like members of the former German government though while they felt they should not.⁹⁷² Particularly Swiss banks helped remedy the financial situation of the German-speaking missionaries who remained in Namibia immediately after WWI.

5.2.2 Banks Operating Locally

On the local level, the “Provincial Bank of Buenos Aires” was an important institution in Argentina. It was advertised in the German newspaper in 1872⁹⁷³

⁹⁶⁹ “Mitglieder-Verzeichnis des Deutschen Colonial-Vereins,” March 31, 1883, BArch R 8023/253, pag. 24.

⁹⁷⁰ Staab, Die Unternehmertätigkeit deutscher Banken im Auslande, 29.

⁹⁷¹ George H. Murphy, “American Consulate General, Cape Town, South Africa to Secretary for the Protectorate, Windhuk, South West Africa,” September 7, 1916, NAN ADM 117/3.

⁹⁷² Heyse, “[An den Evangelischen Oberkirchenrat,] Karibib, den 25. November 1919,” November 25, 1919, EZA 5/2917.

⁹⁷³ E. V. Zamudio, “Provincial-Bank von Buenos Aires,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, July 3, 1872.

and then also in the AT⁹⁷⁴ and the DLPZ.⁹⁷⁵ In 1882, German-Argentinean Francisco Seeber published a study on the nationalization of this bank.⁹⁷⁶ For 1907, the DLPZ also listed a number of other smaller local banks in the province of Buenos Aires.⁹⁷⁷

5.2.3 Agricultural Banks

The first article on a bank for German South-West Africa was published in the Windhoeker Anzeiger in September 1899.⁹⁷⁸ The project for an agricultural bank (Landwirtschaftsbank) for German South-West Africa was proposed to the German parliament (Reichstag) in May 1913.⁹⁷⁹

In Argentina, the journal La Agricultura published an article on *El Crédito Agrícola*⁹⁸⁰ in March 1893, outlining the importance of agriculture and cattle raising (ganadería) for national wealth. In 1912-13, Emilio Frers proposed a ⁹⁷⁴ B. Gayan, "Provinzial-Bank von Buenos Aires," Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 6, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁷⁵ "Die Provinzial-Hypothekenbank," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 22, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁷⁶ Francisco Seeber, Estudio sobre la nacionalización del banco de la Provincia de Buenos Aires: acompañado de una reseña histórica de la moneda y los bancos (Buenos Aires: Kidd, 1882).

⁹⁷⁷ "Das Bankwesen in der Provinz Buenos Aires," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, July 20, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁷⁸ "Eine Bank für Südwestafrika," Windhoeker Anzeiger, September 14, 1899, NAN.

⁹⁷⁹ "Die Landwirtschaftsbank für Deutsch-Südwestafrika," Keetmanshooper Zeitung, May 29, 1913, SBB - Westhafen.

⁹⁸⁰ "El crédito agrícola," La Agricultura: Organo de los intereses rurales é industriales 1, no. 10 (March 9, 1893).

project for a national “agricultural bank” (banco colonizador, banco agricola)⁹⁸¹ to the Argentinean parliament, which Gustavo Niederlein labeled an “German-Argentinean settlement bank” (deutsch-argentinische Siedelungsbank) in his publication with the German-Argentine Association for Economic Interests (Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen).⁹⁸² A certain “Banco Colonizador Nacional” located in Reconquista Street 161, Buenos Aires, already advertised in the Argentinisches Tageblatt in April 1889.⁹⁸³ On 13 November 1907, an Agricultural Protection Society (Landwirtschaftlicher Schutz-Verband) was founded in order to protect the economic life of the colonists in Argentina.⁹⁸⁴

5.2.4 Insurance Companies

Insurance companies were particularly active in Argentina. Between 1866 and 1916, insurance companies advertised with a particular reference to places in ⁹⁸¹ Emilio Frers, Banco colonizador de la Nación Argentina: Proyecto de ley presentado al congreso nacional (Buenos Aires: Coop. de artes gráficas, 1912); Emilio Frers, El banco agricola. Proyecto de ley presentado á la Camara de disputados de la nación en la sesion de agosto 8 de 1913, 1915.

⁹⁸² Gustavo Niederlein, Eine Deutsch-Argentinische Siedelungsbank als Gegengewicht zur wirtschaftlichen Invasion der Yankees in Südamerika, Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung Wirtschaftlicher Interessen 5 (Berlin: Deutsch-argentinischer Centralverband, 1912).

⁹⁸³ “Banco Colonizador Nacional,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 29, 1889, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁸⁴ “Landwirtschaftlicher Schutz-Verband, Kooperativ-Gesellschaft, Ld.,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 2, 1907, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Germany. In 1866, Heinrich Diekelmann advertised the fire insurance company from Gladbach.⁹⁸⁵ In 1872, Bemberg, Heimendahl & Co. advertised a transatlantic goods insurance company.⁹⁸⁶ They pointed out the fact that they had their own representative already in Buenos Aires, authorized by the provincial government. They were also listed under German merchant houses in the 1873 La Plata Calendar.⁹⁸⁷ Two insurance companies against fire advertising in Argentina situated their origin in Hamburg: Thomas Brückmann advertised the North German Insurance Company in Spanish,⁹⁸⁸ and Mantels and Pfeiffer advertised their transatlantic company.⁹⁸⁹ In 1898, the German Colonial Society for South-West Africa advertised the Hanseatic fire insurance company.⁹⁹⁰ Another location ⁹⁸⁵ Heinrich Diekelmann, "Gladbacher Feuerversicherungs-Gesellschaft," Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, January 2, 1866.

⁹⁸⁶ Bemberg, Heimendahl & Co., "Transatlantische Güter-Versicherungsgesellschaft in Berlin in Verbindung mit der Allgemeinen Versicherungs-Gesellschaft für See-, Fluß- und Landtransport in Dresden nebst einem eigenen Rückversicherungs-Verein; General-Agentur Buenos Aires, autorisirt durch die Provinzial-Regierung am 4. November 1872," Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, December 4, 1872.

⁹⁸⁷ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 210.

⁹⁸⁸ Thomas Brückmann, "Compania Norte Germanica de Seguros contra incendio en Hamburgo," Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, December 4, 1872; Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 211.

⁹⁸⁹ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 215; "Transatlantische Feuer-Versicherungsgesellschaft in Hamburg [...] Mantels und Pfeiffer, General-Agenten für den Rio de la Plata, 19 & 21 Calle Chacabuco," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 2, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Mantels and Pfeiffer, "Transatlantische Feuerversicherungsgesellschaft in Hamburg," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 3, 1877; Mantels and Pfeiffer, "Transatlantische Feuerversicherungsgesellschaft in Hamburg," Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 4, 1878.

⁹⁹⁰ Deutsche Kolonial-Gesellschaft f. Südwestafrika, "Hanseatische Feuer-Versicherungsgesellschaft Hamburg [...] Nähere Auskunft ertheilt die Generalagentur für Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika," Windhoeker Anzeiger, December 22, 1898, NAN.

for the company was in North Germany was Lübeck.⁹⁹¹ In 1898, Julio Hosmann still advertised the Aachen and Munich insurance Company,⁹⁹² but by 1907, he advertised it as his own insurance.⁹⁹³ In 1916, only one insurance company advertising itself as German-Argentinean, and it had advertisements both in the AT⁹⁹⁴ and the DLPZ.⁹⁹⁵ The 1873 La Plata Calendar also listed J. de Boer as a representative of the Buerau Veritas, an insurance company founded in Antwerp in 1828.⁹⁹⁶

5.3 Colonization As Shared Activity of Community Members

There were numerous colonization companies, also at times called societies (Gesellschaft). What was the difference between a company and an association? They were both run privately. Both aimed at acquiring land for agricultural

⁹⁹¹ “Lübecker Feuer-Versicherungs-Gesellschaft,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 16, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; P. C. Wirths, “Lübecker Feuer-Versicherungs-Gesellschaft,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, July 25, 1877, sec. Tages-Chronik.

⁹⁹² Julio Hosmann, “Aachener und Münchener Feuerversicherungs-Gesellschaft,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, July 14, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁹³ “Versicherungs-Bureau Julio Hosmann, Buenos Aires,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 2, 1907, sec. advertisements, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Hosmann & Cia. und G. de Boer & Cia. haben ihre Versicherungsbüros von B. Mitre 441 nach Calle Cangallo 319 verlegt,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 5, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁹⁴ “La Germano-Argentina. Compañía de Seguros,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 3, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁹⁵ Gustav Deurer, “‘La Germano-Argentina’: Compañía de Seguros,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 7, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Gustav Denrer, “La Germano-Argentina: Compañía de Seguros,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

⁹⁹⁶ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 2010.

colonization. Some projects did not work out, like the Schleswig-Holstein project in Argentina. Others were planned in secret, like the Colonization Society in Leipzig in 1882. In 1882, it must have been very risqué to plan colonization projects in South America, or so the letters kept in the German Federal Archives in Berlin indicate. An important part of the German Colonial Congresses in Berlin in 1902, 1905, and 1910 were the companies that aimed at conducting trade with overseas branches or setting them up. In this context, the concept of colonies and colonization resembles the more recent concept of globalization as increasing global economic cooperation and entanglement. In 1907, the entry on “colonial societies” (Kolonialgesellschaften) in Meyer’s Great Encyclopedia distinguished two types: those with the aim to found colonies overseas or to further the trade in overseas colonies; or those aiming to improve knowledge about the colonial project [Kolonialwesen].⁹⁹⁷ This section discusses those societies fitting the first definition, and the following sections discuss those fitting the second: non-profit associations and institutions set up in the South Atlantic (as well as in Germany) to promote German colonies abroad. These provided information for commercial colonization companies.

⁹⁹⁷ “Kolonialgesellschaften,” in Meyers Großes Konversations-Lexikon, vol. 11 (Leipzig, 1907), 285–86.

5.3.1 For-Profit Colonization Companies

Historian Matthew Fitzpatrick has called this type of behavior “private sector imperialism,”⁹⁹⁸ a type of German “informal imperialism” and “imperialism from below.”⁹⁹⁹ For him, the desire for a German Empire was born out of German nationalism and deeply linked to liberalism. Going beyond traditional political histories, he investigated the colonial associations and private enterprises in Africa and South America (as well as Australia) to explain the emergence of the formal empire in the 1880s. While I agree that colonization projects of German-speakers started as private projects in the South Atlantic, I also want to point to the fact that all projects did not automatically become state-run with the establishment of the formal German colonial Empire in 1884; rather, the German nation-state gradually increased its involvement around and beyond 1900. For example, a number of private individuals founded the Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika (German Colonial Society for South-West Africa) on 5 April 1885 in order to purchase lands Adolf Lüderitz had procured and that had been put under the protection of the German Empire.¹⁰⁰⁰ In 1912, Ludwig Sander published a two-volume study of the society where he discussed the transformation from a private sector society into a state-run society and organization.¹⁰⁰¹

⁹⁹⁸ Matthew Fitzpatrick, “Informal Empire and Private Sector Imperialism, 1849-1884,” in Liberal Imperialism in Germany (New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2008), 75–100.

⁹⁹⁹ Ibid.; Fitzpatrick, Liberal Imperialism in Germany.

¹⁰⁰⁰ Gustav Meinecke, ed., “Die Kolonialgesellschaften,” Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mitteilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Achter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1895 8 (1896): 5; Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, ed., “Die Geschichte der deutschen Colonial-Gesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika,” Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 385–88.

In October 1888, private individuals founded the Deutsche Handels- und Colonisations-Gesellschaft (German Trade and Colonization Society) in Berlin with the aim to further promote trade and colonization in Southern Africa, to extract raw materials, and set up plantations in Western Africa.¹⁰⁰² In 1889, the society sent an expedition to South Africa to explore possibilities of selling German goods and set up a German settlement.¹⁰⁰³ By this point a number of German merchants, among them Woermann & Co., were involved.

In 1889, private individuals founded the Mine and Trade Society for Southwest Africa (Minen- und Handels-Gesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika) as Colonial Society according to German law, with seat in Hamburg.¹⁰⁰⁴ The company merged landownership of Herr L. von Lilienthal from Elberfeld and the South-West Africa Company Limited in London. The statutes of the Hanseatischen Land- Minen- und Handels-Gesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Hanseatic Land, Mine and Trade Society for German South-West

¹⁰⁰¹ Ludwig Sander, Geschichte der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika von ihrer Gründung bis zum Jahre 1910, vol. 1, 2 vols. (Berlin: D. Reimer (E. Vohsen), 1912); Ludwig Sander, Geschichte der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika von ihrer Gründung bis zum Jahre 1910, vol. 2, 2 vols. (Berlin: D. Reimer (E. Vohsen), 1912).

¹⁰⁰² “[Prospect] Deutsche Handels- und Colonisations-Gesellschaft, Berlin,” October 1888, BArch R 1001/1559, pag. 4.

¹⁰⁰³ “Die vor kurzem hier gegründete „Handels- und Colonisations-Gesellschaft“, Berlin ...,” Magdeburgische Zeitung, March 29, 1889, BArch R 1001/1559, pag. 9.

¹⁰⁰⁴ “Statut der Minen- und Handels-Gesellschaft für Südwest Afrika,” 1893, BArch R 1001/1608, pag. 100-104.

Africa) date from 1893,¹⁰⁰⁵ as do the statues from the Minen- und Handels-Gesellschaft für Südwest Afrika.¹⁰⁰⁶ The society's seat was in Hamburg, and its aim was to procure land for settlement and resource extraction.¹⁰⁰⁷

In 1892, German-speakers in founded a settlement society (Siedlungsgesellschaft) in order to settle poor farmers in Klein-Windhoek.¹⁰⁰⁸ Two families arrived in August. Hauptmann v. François became the spokesperson (Vertreter) for the society and he was also its initiator.¹⁰⁰⁹ He described the creation of homesteads (Heimstätten) in the valley of Klein-Windhoek.¹⁰¹⁰ Overall, the writer Franz Joseph von Bülow had a very negative assessment of opportunities for poor colonists. He listed the following societies as being active in Namibia: the Kolonialgesellschaft für Südwestafrika (active for six years) with E.F. Herrmann as its representative (Bevollmächtigter) in Gross-Namaland, and the Kharaskoma Syndikat in Gross-Namaland.

¹⁰⁰⁵ “Statut der Hanseatischen Land- Minen- und Handels-Gesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” 1893, BArch R 1001/1608, pag. 109.

¹⁰⁰⁶ “Statut der Minen- und Handels-Gesellschaft für Südwest Afrika.”

¹⁰⁰⁷ Meinecke, “Die Kolonialgesellschaften,” 13.

¹⁰⁰⁸ Franz Joseph von Bülow, Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Drei Jahre im Lande Hendrik Witboois. Schilderungen von Land und Leute (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1896), 227.

¹⁰⁰⁹ Ibid., 228.

¹⁰¹⁰ Ibid., 234.

The South-West Africa Company had its main seat in London and had both English and German members. The company was founded in 1892.¹⁰¹¹ It had to work closely with the German protectorate authorities,¹⁰¹² and was watched by them.¹⁰¹³ The National Archives of Namibia contain a list of the land purchased by the South-West Africa Company.¹⁰¹⁴

In 1894, the Damara- und Namaqua-Handels-Gesellschaft was founded in Hamburg.¹⁰¹⁵ In April 1909, Adolph Woermann with colleagues founded the company Woermann, Brock & Co. that took over the business of the Damara & Namaqua Handels-Gesellschaft m. b. H.¹⁰¹⁶ In 1899, the “Damaraland-Farm-Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung” was registered in Windhoek.¹⁰¹⁷ That ¹⁰¹¹ Richard Andrew Voeltz, German Colonialism and the South West Africa Company, 1884-1914, Monographs in International Studies. Africa Series 50 (Athens, Ohio: Ohio University, Center for International Studies, 1988).

¹⁰¹² “Die ‘Lond. Finanz-Chronik’ veröffentlicht den Wortlaut der zwischen dem deutschen Auswärtigen Amte und der South West Africa Company abgeschlossenen Vereinbarung ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 27, 1898, sec. Local-Nachrichten, NAN.

¹⁰¹³ Rupp, “Bericht über die South West Africa Company Limited,” n.d., NAN BGR 3 L.4.C.L; “South West Africa Company, Limited. Bemerkungen zu dem Referat und Korreferat der Herren Oberlandsgerichtsrat Dr. Rupp und M. Erzberger,” n.d., NAN BGR 3 L.4.C.

¹⁰¹⁴ Landverkäufe Der South West Africa Company Ltd, 1909-1914, 1914 1909, BRG, L.4.C.L, NAN.

¹⁰¹⁵ “Damara- und Namaqua-Handels-Gesellschaft m.B.H.”

¹⁰¹⁶ Woermann et al., “Die Unterzeichneten haben am 1. April d. J. die Firma Woermann, Brock & Co. errichtet ...”

¹⁰¹⁷ Richter, “In das Gesellschaftsregister des Kaiserlichen Gerichtes zu Windhoek ist heute unter Nr. 7 die durch Vertrag vom 13. Mai 1899 unter der Firma ‘Damaraland-Farm-Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung’ errichtete Gesellschaft eingetragen worden ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, August 3, 1899, NAN.

same year, the “Damara- und Namaqua-Handelsgesellschaft m. b. H., Zweigniederlassung Swakopmund” was registered in Swakopmund.¹⁰¹⁸

In 1899, the Windhoeker Anzeiger published an article about the “Hatsamas project,” a project to settle German-speakers in a closed settlement within a certain distance of Windhoek.¹⁰¹⁹ Also in 1899, the Damaraland-Farm-Gesellschaft (Damaraland Farm Society) was included as number seven in the list of societies in Windhoek.¹⁰²⁰

The Siedelungsgesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika (Settlement Society for South-West Africa) was founded in 1895 with seat in Berlin Groß-Lichterfelde.¹⁰²¹ It started with settling families in the Windhoek area. In 1897, Sander published a proposal for the creation for a model farm on the territory of the Settlement Society.¹⁰²² In 1902, Ernst Vohsen published a memorandum about ¹⁰¹⁸ “Bekanntmachung. In das Gesellschaftsregister des Kaiserlichen Gerichts zu Swakopmund ist heute zufolge Anmeldung vom 30. Oktober/14. November 1899 unter No. 9 die in Swakopmund errichtete Zweigniederlassung der Damara- und Namaqua-Handelsgesellschaft m. b. H. unter der Firma ‘Damara- und Namaqua-Handelsgesellschaft m. b. H., Zweigniederlassung Swakopmund’ eingetragen worden ...”

¹⁰¹⁹ “Hatsamas,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 12, 1899, NAN.

¹⁰²⁰ Richter, “In das Gesellschaftsregister des Kaiserlichen Gerichtes zu Windhoek ist heute unter Nr. 7 die durch Vertrag vom 13. Mai 1899 unter der Firma ‘Damaraland-Farm-Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung’ errichtete Gesellschaft eingetragen worden ...”

¹⁰²¹ Meinecke, “Die Kolonialgesellschaften,” 12; “Jahresbericht für 1903 der Neuen Südwestafrikanischen Siedlungs-Gesellschaft m.b.H. Groß-Lichterfelde Berlin.,” 1903, BArch R 1001/1700, pag. 26.

¹⁰²² Sander, “Vorschläge zur Errichtung einer Musterfarm im Gebiete der Siedelungsgesellschaft in Deutsch-Südafrika,” ed. Gustav Meinecke, Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mitteilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Zehnter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1897 10 (1897): 189–213.

the undertaken activities of this society.¹⁰²³ In 1907, Guenter Anton gave a presentation on the society to the State Scientific Society of Jena.¹⁰²⁴

In April 1900, the Swakopmunder Handelsgesellschaft m.b.H. with headquarters in Berlin was founded.¹⁰²⁵ The Neue Südwest-Afrikanische Siedlungs-Gesellschaft was founded in Berlin in September 1902 in order to help the Boers after the Boer war in South Africa.¹⁰²⁶

In 1905, a memorandum of land and mining societies active in the German protectorate of South-West Africa included the following: Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft für Südwestafrika, South West Africa Company Led., Siedlungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika, South African Territories Led., Die Hanseatische Land-, Minen-, und Handelsgesellschaft, Kaoko-Land- und Minengesellschaft, Otavi-Minen- und Eisenbahngesellschaft and the *Gibeon-Schürf- und Handelsgesellschaft m.b.H.*¹⁰²⁷ The Deutsch-Afrikanische Handelsgesellschaft was active in the 1920s.¹⁰²⁸

Gustav Meinecke listed the Südamerikanische Kolonisationsgesellschaft (South American Colonization Company) in his 1896 colonial yearbook under ¹⁰²³ Ernst Vohsen, Denkschrift über die bisherige Thätigkeit der Siedlungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Berlin: Trowitzsch, 1902).

¹⁰²⁴ Guenter Kurt Anton, Die Siedlungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Vortrag, gehalten in der Staatswissenschaftlichen Gesellschaft zu Jena 1907 (Jena: G. Fischer, 1908).

¹⁰²⁵ "Swakopmunder Handelsgesellschaft m.b.H."

¹⁰²⁶ "Neue Südwestafrikanische Siedlungsgesellschaft," November 1902, BArch R 1001/1700, pag. 2-3; "Aufruf!"

¹⁰²⁷ von Bülow, "Denkschrift über die im südwestafrikanischen Schutzgebiete tätigen Land- und Minen-Gesellschaften," February 28, 1905, NAN BGR 3 L.4.C.

¹⁰²⁸ "[Deutsch-Afrikanische Handelsgesellschaft]."

“German Colonization Endeavors in Non-German Countries.”¹⁰²⁹ In July 1882, Ernst Hasse from Leipzig suggested in a letter to Wilhelm Hübbe-Schleiden in Hamburg that a Deutsche Landbank (German Land Bank) be founded in South America in order to privately buy land for German colonization. Hasse asked Hübbe-Schleiden why he dismissed South America as a field for German colonization. Hasse did not think highly of Gustavo Niederlein: he dismissed Niederlein’s suggestions for a German colonization project in Argentina, but he did attribute value to Richard Napp’s opinion.¹⁰³⁰ In a second letter dated a few month later, Hasse further described to Hübbe-Schleiden his plan to found a society under the name Südamerikanische Landbank (“South American Land Bank”), specifically stating that the word “colonization” and reference to a specific location should be avoided in the society name in order to avoid distrust in Germany.¹⁰³¹ He wanted to make Hübbe-Schleiden the director of the society. Hasse did respond to Niederlein’s letter, saying that Niederlein thought it too easy to find financial support in Saxony for colonization projects in the South Atlantic; he also said he needed approval from influential people like Hübbe-Schleiden and Fabri. He did write to Niederlein that Hübbe-Schleiden had granted him his support in the South American landbank project.¹⁰³² Hasse also said that a condition for the society was its seat in Germany, with potential participation of Argentinean and British capital. Hasse specifically asked not to let anyone else – particularly the press – but also including Robert Jannasch. The Federal Archives of Berlin hold a document from Ernst Hasse from October 1882, classified as confidential, where Hasse, as president of the Leipzig branch of the Zweigverein Leipzig für Handelsgeographie und Förderung deutscher Interessen im Auslande (Association for Trade-geography and Promotion of German Interests Abroad) wrote that it was high time to act on the question of coordinating German migration abroad and redirect it to the non-tropical parts South America, just as migration literature had proclaimed for forty years.¹⁰³³ Hasse was referring to Wappäus here. The South American Colonization society then was the officially founded in 1884. It was Friedrich Fabri's son Tim(otheus) who authored the invitation to the constitutional assembly.¹⁰³⁴ According to the statutes, as Hasse had wanted it, its seat was Leipzig and its aim to buy and settle land in South

¹⁰²⁹ Meinecke, “Deutsche Kolonisationsbestrebungen in nichtdeutschen Ländern.”

¹⁰³⁰ Ernst Hasse, “Ernst Hasse in Leipzig to Dr. Hübbe-Schleiden in Hamburg,” July 1, 1882, BArch R 8023/261, pag. 4.

¹⁰³¹ Ernst Hasse, “Ernst Hasse in Leipzig to Dr. Hübbe-Schleiden in Hamburg,” July 6, 1882, BArch R 8023/261, pag. 6-7.

¹⁰³² Ernst Hasse, "Ernst Hasse in Leipzig to G. Niederlein in Berlin," July 6, 1882, BArch R 8023/261, pag. 5.

¹⁰³³ Ernst Hasse, "Vertraulich! Die Südamerikanische Colonisations-Gesellschaft: Ein Beitrag zur praktischen Lösung der deutschen Colonisationsfrage," October 1882, BArch R 8023/261, pag. 18-19.

¹⁰³⁴ Tim Fabri, "Einladung zur constituirenden Generalversammlung der südamerikanischen Colonisations-Gesellschaft," January 1884, BArch R 8023/261, pag. 76.

America, specifically Argentina and Paraguay.¹⁰³⁵ Bernhard Förster followed up on the colonization project in Paraguay. He married Friedrich Nietzsche's sister Elisabeth and in 1883 he moved with her to Paraguay where he wanted to found the perfect German colony.¹⁰³⁶ In May 1884, he gave a lecture on German colonies in the La Plata states.¹⁰³⁷ The Süddeutsche Zeitung published an interview with a photographer who took pictures of colony Nueva Germania today.¹⁰³⁸

In 1883, the Argentinisches Wochenblatt reported repeatedly about colonization projects. On 30 June 1883, the newspaper wrote about German colonization projects in Argentina, mentioned Ernst Hasse and his South American Colonization Society (Südamerikanische Kolonisationsgesellschaft) in Leipzig, Germany.¹⁰³⁹ It also mentioned José Greger in Basel, Switzerland.

¹⁰³⁵ "Satzungen der südamerikanischen Colonisations-Gesellschaft," 1884, BArch R 8023/261, pag.; "Die Südamerikanische Colonisations-Gesellschaft zu Leipzig," 1884, BArch R 8023/261, pag. 81-82.

¹⁰³⁶ Bernhard Förster, "Denkschrift über die Anlegung deutscher Colonien in dem oberen Laplata-Gebiete (Paraguay, Gran Chaco, Misiones Argentinas)," April 1885; Bernhard Förster, Deutsche Colonien in dem oberen Laplata-Gebiete mit besonderer Berücksichtigung von Paraguay: Ergebnisse eingehender Prüfungen, praktischer Arbeiten und Reisen, 1883-1885, Second Edition (Leipzig: Gustav Fock, 1886); Bernhard Förster, Dr. Bernhard Förster's Kolonie Neu-Germania in Paraguay, ed. Eli Förster (Berlin: Commissions-Verl. der Actien-Gesellschaft "Pionier," 1891).

¹⁰³⁷ "Lokales. Die Möglichkeit deutscher Kolonien in den LaPlata-Staaten..." "___" [Post?] [La Plata Post??], May 14, 1885, BArch R 901/30397, pag. 79.

¹⁰³⁸ Florian Zinnecker, "Constanze Flamme fotografiert in Nueva Germania: 'Ich habe gemerkt, wie sehr ich mit dem Begriff "deutsch sein" ringe,'" Süddeutsche Zeitung, May 11, 2016, sec. Magazin, <http://sz-magazin.sueddeutsche.de/texte/anzeigen/44552/Ich-habe-gemerkt-wie-sehr-ich-mit-dem-Begriff-deutsch-sein-ringe>.

¹⁰³⁹ "Deutsche Colonisationsbestrebungen," Argentinisches Wochenblatt, June 30, 1883, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

Newspapers in Germany also wrote about Greger in Basel.¹⁰⁴⁰ A Frankfurt newspaper cited the announcement of a colonization project in Argentina, but it remained very critical of the endeavor.¹⁰⁴¹ On 7 July 1883, the Argentinisches Wochenblatt wrote about the colonization projects in Paraguay.¹⁰⁴² The article also mentioned Mr. Hasse, Mr. Napp and Mr. Lezema. According to an article from the Argentinisches Wochenblatt, republished in the Morgenblatt of the Frankfurter Zeitung, supposedly a “great” colonization project has been submitted to the Argentinean national government:

A society with the merchants Hollmann & Co. solicit the sections 21 of the national territories between Chimp [sic?] and Neuquen, about 60 square leguas. In addition, they want to acquire 200 leguas by the Rio Salado, from Matará to the river mouth into the Parana, to the legal price of 500 dollars m/n. The company has a capital of 4 mill. Dollars m/c (20 Mill. Fr.). It agreed to introduce German immigrants, yearly 500 families during 10 years, with free passage, for which the national government would pay 50 dollars m/c for every family upon arrival. The company would provide the irrigation canals and the possibilities of navigation on the Rio Salado up to Matara. The national government would reserve more land strips for the society and assume the interest guarantee of 6 pct for the capital of 4 mill. Dollars m/n. That all sounds very nice, but it should already fail starting with the interest guarantee.¹⁰⁴³

¹⁰⁴⁰ “In Basel besteht zum Zwecke der Betreibung der Auswanderung nach Argentinien eine Agentur...” Allgemeine Zeitung, July 8, 1884, BArch R 901/30396, pag. 10; “In Basel besteht zum Zwecke der Betreibung der Auswanderung nach Argentinien eine Agentur...” Augsburger Abendzeitung, July 8, 1884, BArch R 901/30396, pag. 11.

¹⁰⁴¹ “Amerika: Nach einer Mittheilung des „Argentinischen „Wochenblattes“ soll ein „großartiges“ Kolonisationsprojekt bei der Nationalregierung von Argentinien eingereicht worden sein...” Morgenblatt der Frankfurter Zeitung, August 31, 1884, BArch R 901/30396, pag. 38.

¹⁰⁴² “Über die Misiones,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, July 7, 1883, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

In August 1884, the merchants Hollmann & Co. supposedly wanted to acquire parts of the national territory in Patagonia.¹⁰⁴⁴ Also in August 1884, C.H.S. Schultz (Stettiner Lloyd) published an article in the DLPZ where he said that he was not fond of Africa and preferred America for German migration; he also aimed at redirecting German migration from North America to South America.¹⁰⁴⁵ By July 1884, there was an agency in Basel, Switzerland for German-speaking emigration to Argentina.¹⁰⁴⁶

In 1884, Baron Mauricio de Hirsch founded the Jewish Colonization Society. He initiated Jewish agricultural colonization in Argentina in the 1890s.¹⁰⁴⁷ It was Gustavo Niederlein who did the research in Argentina to find the appropriate territory for his plans.¹⁰⁴⁸

In 1885, the Schleswig-Holsteinisches Colonialunternehmen (Schleswig-Holstein Colonial Company) received interest in various German newspapers.

¹⁰⁴³ Own translation. "Amerika: Nach einer Mittheilung des „Argentinischen „Wochenblattes“ soll ein „großartiges“ Kolonisationsprojekt bei der Nationalregierung von Argentinien eingereicht worden sein..."

¹⁰⁴⁴ Ibid.

¹⁰⁴⁵ C.H.S. Schultz, "Stettin, 27. August 1884. ... Ich muss gestehen, daß es mich einigermaßen frappte, meine Verhandlungen mit Ihrer Regierung publiziert zu sehen..." Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, October 9, 1884, BArch R 901/30396, pag. 144.

¹⁰⁴⁶ "In Basel besteht zum Zwecke der Betreibung der Auswanderung nach Argentinien eine Agentur..." July 8, 1884; "In Basel besteht zum Zwecke der Betreibung der Auswanderung nach Argentinien eine Agentur..." July 8, 1884.

¹⁰⁴⁷ "El Baron Hirsch."

¹⁰⁴⁸ Niederlein, Gutachten für Herrn Baron von Hirsch über die Colonisationsfähigkeit Paraguay's und der argentinischen Territorien Misiones, Formosa und Chaco Austral.

The Hamburgischer Correspondent in Hamburg announced the acquisition of territory by a German colonial society at the Rio Negro area in Argentina.¹⁰⁴⁹ The Vossische Zeitung in Berlin added the name Christian Petersen and his project of a salt refinery – “a moderate enterprise with only moderate means.”¹⁰⁵⁰ The Kölnische Zeitung in Cologne, however, stated that the media had exaggerated this project.¹⁰⁵¹ In 1889, the colonization company “Colonizadora de Corrientes” owned by Adolfo Hopmann, advertised in the Argentinisches Tageblatt.¹⁰⁵²

Hugo Stroeder’s attempts at colonization in Argentina are first mentioned in 1898 in an advertisement¹⁰⁵³ in the Argentinisches Tageblatt and then in 1904 when he took part in the founding of a colonization society aimed at settling migrant families in the Pampa Central: “According to a report from General Lagos (Argentina) the society is currently acquiring 600 square leguas land at the Western border of the territory. Pertaining to this society, with an estimated capital of 280 000 £ are the Misters [Hugo] Stroeder, Tomkinson, Villanueva and others. In the name of the syndicate, Mr. Arthur von Pöllnitz is already present in ¹⁰⁴⁹ “Schleswig-Holsteinische Colonialgesellschaft,” Hamburgischer Correspondent, June 10, 1885, BArch R 901/30397, pag. 90.

¹⁰⁵⁰ “Seit einiger Zeit gehen durch die Blätter Nachrichten über ein schleswig-holsteinisches Colonialunternehmen in Südamerika ...,” Vossische Zeitung, June 14, 1885, BArch R 901/30397, pag. 98.

¹⁰⁵¹ “Aus Schleswig-Holstein, 16. Juni. Ueber das seit Ende des vorigen Jahres in den Blättern besprochene, teilweise wohl etwas stark aufgebauschte schleswig-holsteinische Colonialunternehmen...,” Kölnische Zeitung, June 20, 1885, BArch R 901/30397, pag. 99.

¹⁰⁵² Adolfo Hopmann, “Colonizadora de Corrientes,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 29, 1889, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁰⁵³ Hugo Stroeder, “Colonizacion Stroeder,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 26, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

the area that is to be settled, which is soon to be traversed by a newly to be constructed railroad line.”¹⁰⁵⁴ In April 1904, the German General Consulate Buenos Aires reported on the company Hugo Stroeder & Co. undertaking agriculture and alfalfa (luzerne) production in the Pampa Central and purchasing further land.¹⁰⁵⁵

By 1905, the Central Information Agency for Emigration (Zentralauskunftsstelle für Auswanderer) wrote to the Foreign Office (Auswärtiges Amt) that it should update its information booklet on Argentina to include Hugo Stroeder’s colonization company.¹⁰⁵⁶ This company was mostly involved in wheat production. The German consul in Argentina wrote to the German chancellor that Stroeder was a millionaire.¹⁰⁵⁷ In 1914, Stroeder advertised in the DLPZ.¹⁰⁵⁸ In 1914, Theodor Alemann from the AT published a travel narrative of his visit to Stroeder’s company and colonies, or “emporio.”¹⁰⁵⁹ Alemann wrote that no other colonizer in Argentina had been more successful

¹⁰⁵⁴ “Eine Kolonisations-Gesellschaft, welche deutsche Einwanderer-Familien in der Pampa Central ansiedeln will, hat sich gebildet...,” January 14, 1904, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 63.

¹⁰⁵⁵ “[Firma Hugo Stroeder & Co.: - Ackerbau und Alfalfa (Luzerne) in der Pampa Central. – Ankauf von Ländereien.] Kaiserlich deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” April 20, 1904, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 91.

¹⁰⁵⁶ “Leiter der Centralauskunftsstelle für Auswanderer gez. Lehmann to Auswärtiges Amt, ‘Erneuerung des Auskunftsheftes über Argentinien,’” April 8, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 54-55.

¹⁰⁵⁷ von Sanden, “Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” August 25, 1905, BArch R 901/30417, pag. 31-32.

¹⁰⁵⁸ “Die erste Ernte in der Kolonie Emporio Stroeder ergibt durchschnittlich 28 Doppelzentner Weizen ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁰⁵⁹ Alemann, Station und Emporio Stroeder.

than Stroeder: he turned one million hectares of land into eighty colonies of settlement (“Kolonien der Besiedlung”) and founded fifteen towns, some of which had already turned into small cities.¹⁰⁶⁰ In 1916, the company “Colonización Stroeder” advertised with the claim to be the oldest colonization society in South America.¹⁰⁶¹ As late as 1928, his company sent a flyer to the General Church Council (Oberkirchenrat) in Berlin.¹⁰⁶² The 1898 AT advertisement features the following image:¹⁰⁶³ a man with his shirt sleeves rolled up holds the company banner in one hand and his hat in the other. He stands amidst farming tools and a bundle of wheat, behind him lies the worked field and afar, a railroad passing by – the symbol of progress and modernity.

In January 1903, José Greger attempted to announce the foundation of a German-South American Association (deutsch-südamerikanischer Verein) in a lecture he gave in Munich, but then the official steps necessary to declare the association with the Munich police were not followed through with.¹⁰⁶⁴ In ¹⁰⁶⁰ Ibid., 3.

¹⁰⁶¹ “Colonización Stroeder,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 3, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Die ‘Colonización Stroeder’, älteste deutsche Kolonisationsgesellschaft ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁰⁶² Hugo Stroeder, “Colonización Stroeder [Flyer sent to Evang. Oberkirchenrat, Berlin-Charlottenburg 2, Alemania from Colonización Stroeder, Hugo Stroeder, Piedras 138, Buenos Aires;,” 1928, EZA 5/2061.

¹⁰⁶³ Stroeder, “Colonizacion Stroeder.”

¹⁰⁶⁴ “[J. Greger] Akten der k. b. Polizeidirektion in München.”

October 1903, Greger was identified as “Emissary of the Argentine government” (Emissär).¹⁰⁶⁵ Greger had both Argentinean and Bavarian citizenship.

In 1904, the Berliner Tageblatt announced that Argentine President Roca had “vivid interest” in the founding of a large Colonial Society (“Kolonialgesellschaft”).¹⁰⁶⁶ In July 1905, the Norddeutsche Lloyd opened its own information bureau in Buenos Aires for arriving third class passengers.¹⁰⁶⁷ It claimed that for getting land from the Argentine government for German-speaking settlement, new arrivals needed official confirmation from the German Foreign office. Also in 1905, the Hanseatische Kolonisationsgesellschaft attempted projects in Argentina. Attacks on it were reported in 1905.¹⁰⁶⁸ The Norddeutsche Lloyd was also active there.¹⁰⁶⁹ It attempted to get Ernesto Tornquist help out within Argentina in order to legitimize its project and not make it seem invasive.¹⁰⁷⁰ Its aim was to settle people of German nationality, German-Russians, German re-migrants, and Swiss-Germans in Patagonia.¹⁰⁷¹ While the Norddeutscher Lloyd would be the actual organizer, the land should be on name

¹⁰⁶⁵ “[J. Greger] K. Regierung von Oberbayern, Kammer des Innern to K. Staatsministerium des Innern,” October 16, 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 47.

¹⁰⁶⁶ “[Präsident Roca zeigt „lebhaftes Interesse“ an der Gründung einer großen Kolonialgesellschaft],” Berliner Tageblatt, September 12, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 22.

¹⁰⁶⁷ “Norddeutscher Lloyd to Kaiserlich Auswärtiges Amt.”

¹⁰⁶⁸ “Aufzeichnung [Über Angriffe gegen die Hanseatische Kolonisationsgesellschaft],” December 9, 1905, BArch R 901/30417, pag. 66-68.

¹⁰⁶⁹ Föhr, “Julius Föhr to Norddeutscher Lloyd Bremen.”

¹⁰⁷⁰ “Direktion des Norddeutschen Lloyd, Bremen to Wirklicher Geheimer Legationsrat im Auswärtigen Amt Herr Goetsch, Berlin.”

¹⁰⁷¹ Hacke, “Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft bei den La Plata Staaten to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow.”

of Kroeller and von Pilis. Herr Föhr and Duckwitz traveled to inspect the land offered by the Argentinean government in the province Buenos Aires to the Norddeutsche Lloyd, but Tornquist was too busy to get involved.

In February 1907, a German-Argentinean Cooperative Colonization Society (Germanisch-argentinische Genossenschaftliche Kolonisationsgesellschaft) was founded in Argentina.¹⁰⁷² In March 1907, the German Consulate in Buenos Aires announced to Chancellor Bülow the creation of the Germanisch-Argentinische Genossenschaftliche Kolonisationsgesellschaft m.b.H. (German-Argentine Cooperative Colonization Company).¹⁰⁷³ In May, Theodor Alemann was its president.¹⁰⁷⁴ The company was advertised in the DLPZ,¹⁰⁷⁵ and the journal Süd-Amerika also published about it.¹⁰⁷⁶ The statutes of ¹⁰⁷² “Germanisch-argentinische Genossenschaftliche Kolonisationsgesellschaft,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 22, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Die Germanisch-Argentinische Genossenschaftliche Kolonisationsgesellschaft m.b.H.,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, May 1, 1907, BArch R 901/30420, pag. 69; “Norddeutscher Lloyd, Bremen to Bülow [Bekanntmachung Gründung der „Genossenschaftlichen Germanisch-Argentinischen Kolonisationsgesellschaft“],” May 6, 1907, BArch R 901/30420, pag. 66.

¹⁰⁷³ “Kaiserlich Deutsches General Konsulat Buenos Aires to Bülow: [Genossenschaft Germanisch-Argentinische Kolonisationsgesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung],” March 23, 1907, BArch R 901/30420, pag. 60.

¹⁰⁷⁴ Theodor Alemann, “Sociedad Germano-Argentina de Colonización,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 25, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁰⁷⁵ Ibid.

¹⁰⁷⁶ “Die Germanisch-Argentinische Genossenschaftliche Kolonisationsgesellschaft m.b.H.”

the Germanisch-Argentinische Kolonisations-Gesellschaft date from 1907:¹⁰⁷⁷ the company's seat was in Buenos Aires and its proclaimed aim was to acquire land for colonization for its members.¹⁰⁷⁸ The Norddeutscher Lloyd was also involved in this project.¹⁰⁷⁹ A letter from Federico Olshausen and E. Brinckmann to the Argentine minister of Agriculture in December 1907 stated that the company's objective was to settle migrants from Germany, Switzerland, Austria-Hungary, Denmark, Finland, Sweden, Norway and South Russia in Patagonia.¹⁰⁸⁰ In February 1908, von Sanden, the German consul in Argentina, wrote to Waldthausen, the German legate in Argentina, about the colonization project of the German-Argentinean Colonization company. He claimed that Germany did not concession the project, and did not have anything at stake with this project, but that nonetheless an official statement would be required.¹⁰⁸¹ In April 1908, the journal Süd-Amerika called it the Deutsch-Argentinische Kolonisations-

¹⁰⁷⁷ "Statuten der Germanisch-Argentinischen Kolonisations-Gesellschaft. Genossenschaft (m. b. H.) (Sociedad Germano-Argentina de Colonización. Cooperativa, Limitada)," 1907, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 100.

¹⁰⁷⁸ "Statuten der Germanisch-Argentinischen Kolonisationsgesellschaft, Genossenschaft (m.b.H.), calle Reconquista 412, Buenos Aires," 1907, BArch R 901/30421, pag. 101-110.

¹⁰⁷⁹ "Norddeutscher Lloyd, Bremen to Bülow [Bekanntmachung Gründung der „Genossenschaftlichen Germanisch-Argentinischen Kolonisationsgesellschaft“]."

¹⁰⁸⁰ Federico Olshausen and E. Brinckmann, "Sociedad German-Argentina de Colonización to A. S.W. el Señor Ministro de Agricultura, Ingeniero Don Pedro Ezcurra," December 6, 1907, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 119-122.

¹⁰⁸¹ von Sanden, "Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Waldthausen," February 12, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 126-131.

Gesellschaft of Buenos Aires (German-Argentine Colonization Company),¹⁰⁸² but it must have used deutsch as interchangeably with germanisch, because a few months later it called it germanisch again.¹⁰⁸³

Numerous smaller projects also existed. All of these illustrate the vivid activities around private colonization projects by German-speakers in Argentina. In 1898, the AT reported from the colonies of the Santa-Fe Land Company.¹⁰⁸⁴ In 1907, the DLPZ advertised individual colonies, as for example of the company Holt, Alba & Cie.¹⁰⁸⁵ In August 1909 an Argentine-German Trade Company was founded in Berlin.¹⁰⁸⁶ Its statutes and a sample contract are available in the Berlin Federal Archives.¹⁰⁸⁷ In June 1910, the Syndikats zur Vorbereitung einer Land-, Industrie- und Bergwerksgesellschaft in Argentinien, with its seat in Berlin, was ¹⁰⁸² “Die Deutsch-Argentinische Kolonisations-Gesellschaft in Buenos Aires,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, April 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 194 The article mentioned that Moritz Alemann had travelled again to Berlin in the previous year to attract German capital for collaboration in this project. The article mentioned that Moritz Alemann had travelled again to Berlin in the previous year to attract German capital for collaboration in this project.

¹⁰⁸³ “Die Germanisch-Argentinische Kolonisations-Gesellschaft in Buenos Aires.”

¹⁰⁸⁴ Stromer, “Aus den Kolonien der Süd-santafesinischen Land-Company,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 12, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁰⁸⁵ Holt, Alba & Cie., “Wichtig für Kolonisten: Kolonie Salvatierra,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 13, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁰⁸⁶ “Statut der Argentinisch-Deutschen Handels-Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung zu Berlin,” August 7, 1909, BArch R 901/30425, pag. 78-81; “Zwischen der Argentinisch-Deutschen Handelsgesellschaft m.b.H. in Berlin [...] und der offenen Handelsgesellschaft in Firma Plaut & Co. in Buenos Aires mit Zweigniederlassung in Berlin ...”

¹⁰⁸⁷ “[Sample contract; Argentinisch-Deutsche Handelsgesellschaft].”

founded.¹⁰⁸⁸ In December 1910, the syndicate turned into the *Deutsch Argentinische Land- und Industrie-Gesellschaft m. b. H.*¹⁰⁸⁹ The Compania Agricola de Rio Negro (Argentine) Societe Anonyme en formation founded in Brussels, was announced in June 1911 in Süd-Amerika.¹⁰⁹⁰ In April 1911, the German Legion Buenos Aires reported to the German chancellor that Artur Krupp planned an Austrian colonization project for Argentina.¹⁰⁹¹ In October 1911, the German shipping company Norddeutscher Lloyd was involved with the Argentine ministry Tierras, Colonias e Inmigracion.¹⁰⁹² In June 1913, Erich Dickudt planned a project with his friend Dr. von Staff, geology professor at Berlin University to built a railroad in Rio Negro.¹⁰⁹³ A contract draft for a project of creating German colonization in the Gran Chaco in 1914 by H. Ranft from Königsberg under the name Gran Chaco Kolonisation is preserved in the Berlin

¹⁰⁸⁸ Georg Schmidt, "Eingabe des Syndikats zur Vorbereitung einer Land-, Industrie- und Bergwerksgesellschaft in Argentinien, Sitz Berlin," June 28, 1910, BArch R 901/30426, pag. 123.

¹⁰⁸⁹ "Deutsch Argentinische Land- und Industrie-Gesellschaft m. b. H. to Seiner Exzellenz Herrn von Koerner Direktor der handelspolitischen Abteilung des Auswärtigen Amtes Berlin," December 22, 1910, BArch R 901/30427, pag. 22-23.

¹⁰⁹⁰ "Eine weitere Ackerbau-Gesellschaft," Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, June 1, 1911, BArch R 901/30427, pag. 135.

¹⁰⁹¹ [Hilmar] Bussche, "Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn von Bethmann Hollweg," April 20, 1911, BArch R 901/30427, pag. 140-141.

¹⁰⁹² [Roque] Sáenz Peña and Eleodoro Lobos, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 13 octubre 1911]," October 13, 1911, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 10000 D del año 1911].

¹⁰⁹³ Erich Dickudt, "'Druckpapier-Verband' to Auswärtiges Amt Berlin," June 11, 1913, BArch R 901/30430, pag. 7-8.

Federal Archives.¹⁰⁹⁴ In 1916, Hoffmann & Agusteni placed an advertisement in the DLPZ entitled “Colonists!”¹⁰⁹⁵ In November 1919, the Bureau zur Förderung des Handels zwischen Deutschland und Argentinien was founded in Hamburg.¹⁰⁹⁶ In 1924, Otto Griese and Otto Thiel planned to found a colonization society for German-speaking colonization and settlement in Mendoza, Argentina.¹⁰⁹⁷ The “Compañía Eldorado, Colonización y Explotación de bosques S.A.” was active in 1926, as Ernesto Alemann mentioned in his travel writing of Misiones: “When Mr. Adolfo J. Schwelm started with the installation of his colony six years ago, that is today united in the large company “Compañía Eldorado, Colonización y Explotación de bosques S.A.” with the Tornquist colonies Monte Carlo, Puerto Rico and San Alberto, he was confronted with the same difficulties as any colonizer in the jungle. [...]”¹⁰⁹⁸ In 1929, A. J. Schwelm himself published a text on the development of the Eldorado colonies.¹⁰⁹⁹ These colonies were entertained ¹⁰⁹⁴ H. Ranft, “Vertrag [contract draft],” February 14, 1914, BArch R 901/30430, pag. 193-197.

¹⁰⁹⁵ Hoffmann & Agusteni, “Kolonisten!,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁰⁹⁶ Taubmann, “Bureau zur Förderung des Handels zwischen Deutschland und Argentinien an das Kaiserlich Deutsche General-Konsulat des Herrn von Sanden, Buenos Aires.”

¹⁰⁹⁷ Gründungsplan für Deutsche Ansiedelungen in der Provinz Mendoza (Argentinien) für das Jahr 1924, n.d.

¹⁰⁹⁸ Ernesto Fernando Alemann, Grünes Gold und rote Erde: Beobachtungen von einer Reise, Sonderabdruck aus dem Argentinischen Tageblatt (Buenos Aires: Buchdruckerei des Argentinischen Tageblattes, 1926), 17.

¹⁰⁹⁹ A. J. Schwelm, “Die Entwicklung der Eldorado-Kolonien, 1919-1929, Argentinien,” 1929, BArch R 8023/551, pag. 33-36.

by the Compañía Eldorado.¹¹⁰⁰ Recently, Argentinean historian María Cecilia Gallero has studied some of these colonies, specifically Puerto Rico, Misiones.¹¹⁰¹ She specifically focused on the German-speakers who joined this part of Northern Argentina via previous migration to Southern Brazil.

As the table below shows, for-profit companies mostly started colony and colonization projects after the 1880s, but both in Namibia and Argentina, they were not derailed by WWI.

Name	Date	Seat
South American Colonization Society (Südamerikanische Kolonisationsgesellschaft)	1884	Leipzig
Jewish Colonization Society	1884/ 1890s	[Argentina]
Schleswig-Holsteinisches Colonialunternehmen (Schleswig-Holstein Colonial Company)	1885	[Germany]
Deutsche Handels- und Colonisations-Gesellschaft (German Trade and Colonization Society)	1888	Berlin
Mine and Trade Society for Southwest Africa (Minen- und Handels-Gesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika)/ Hanseatische Land-, Minen-, und Handelsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika	1889/ 1893?	Hamburg

¹¹⁰⁰ Compañía Eldorado, Leben und Treiben in Eldorado, Misiones-Argentinien (Buenos Aires: Compañía Eldorado, 1931); “An die Compañía „Eldorado“, Buenos Aires, Viamonte 550,” September 28, 1931, BArch R 8023/551, pag. 23.

¹¹⁰¹ María Cecilia Gallero, Con la patria a cuestas: la inmigración alemana-brasileña en la Colonia Puerto Rico, Misiones (Buenos Aires: Araucaria Editora, 2009).

(Hanseatic Land, Mine and Trade Society for German South-West Africa)
Colonizadora de Corrientes	1889	[Argentina]
Settlement society (Siedlungsgesellschaft)	1892	Windhoek
South-West Africa Company	1892	London
Damara- und Namaqua-Handels-Gesellschaft	1894	Hamburg
Siedlungsgesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika (Settlement Society for South-West Africa)	1895	Berlin Groß-Lichterfelde
Colonización Stroeder	1898?	Buenos Aires?
Damaraland-Farm-Gesellschaft (Damaraland Farm Society)	1899	Windhoek
Swakopmunder Handelsgesellschaft m.b.H.	1900	Berlin
Neue Südwest-Afrikanische Siedlungs-Gesellschaft	1902	Berlin
Hanseatische Kolonisationsgesellschaft	1905?	Hamburg?
Germanisch-Argentinische Genossenschaftliche Kolonisationsgesellschaft m.b.H. (German-Argentine Cooperative Colonization Company)	1907
Argentinisch-Deutschen Handels-Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung	1909	Berlin
Syndikat zur Vorbereitung einer Land-, Industrie- und Bergwerksgesellschaft in Argentinien/ Deutsch Argentinische Land- und Industrie-Gesellschaft m. b. H. (German-Argentinean Land and Industry Company)	1910	Berlin
Bureau zur Förderung des Handels zwischen Deutschland und Argentinien	1919	Hamburg
Deutsch-Afrikanische Handelsgesellschaft	[1920s]

Colonization society for German-speaking colonization and settlement in Mendoza	1924
Compañía Eldorado, Colonización y Explotación de bosques S.A.	[1926]	Buenos Aires?

5.3.2 Non-Profit South Atlantic Colonization Associations

Other colonization societies were originally founded with a non-profit intention, an “idealist view.” Their aim was to strengthen and support German agricultural colonization, economic activities, and migrant life abroad. I also include agricultural associations in this section, since colonization was mostly, in practice, an agricultural undertaking. What South Atlantic German-speakers shared was a sense of independent spirit and personal responsibility and activity.

In October 1898, the Agricultural Society for German South-West Africa (Landwirtschaftlicher Verein für Deutsch-Südwestafrika) met in Windhoek.¹¹⁰² Gustav Voigts was among the active founding members. The first agricultural exhibition with state prizes was announced for 1 and 2 June 1899.¹¹⁰³ A few days after the event, the Windhoeker Anzeiger published a detailed report on the ¹¹⁰² “(Landwirtschaftliches). Am 15. d. Mts. Abends 7 1/2 Uhr, findet eine Versammlung des ‘Landwirtschaftlichen Vereins für Deutsch-Südwestafrika’ im Eilers’schen Lokal zu Windhoek statt,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 12, 1898, sec. Aus dem Schutzgebiet, NAN.

¹¹⁰³ Mueller et al., “Bekanntmachung. Erste Landwirtschaftliche Ausstellung zur Vertheilung von Staatsprämien in Windhoek am 1. u. 2. Juni 1899,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, April 27, 1899, NAN.

exhibition.¹¹⁰⁴ The vocabulary regularly used was “agriculture” (Landwirtschaft) and “protectorate” (Schutzgebiet) – versus “colonization” and “colony,” the preferred terms in Argentina. In May 1909, the first South-West African Farmer Day (Erster Deutsch-Südwestafrikanischer Farmertag) took place in Windhoek.¹¹⁰⁵ The report documents how the farmers in Namibia organized themselves locally. While they made it a point that they were cooperating with the local colonial government, they portrayed themselves as a self-organized and proud entity. Carl Schlettwein, Albert Voigts, and Gustav Voigts were members. In May 1913, another Agricultural Exhibition (Landwirtschaftliche Ausstellung) took place in Windhoek.¹¹⁰⁶ The Keetmanshooper Zeitung (Keetmanshoop Newspaper) noted the successes in crop farming (Ackerbau) next to stock farming (Viehzucht) in South-West Africa in July 1913.¹¹⁰⁷ That same year, the Keetmanshoop Newspaper also featured an article on Argentine dry meat.¹¹⁰⁸ The Farming Society for South-West Africa (Farmwirtschafts-Gesellschaft für ¹¹⁰⁴ “Die Ausstellung,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, June 8, 1899, NAN.

¹¹⁰⁵ Bericht über die Verhandlungen des Ersten Deutsch-Südwestafrikanischen Farmertages zu Windhuk am 27. und 28. Mai 1909 ([Windhoek], 1909).

¹¹⁰⁶ “Landwirtschaftl. Ausstellung 1913,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, June 5, 1913, SBB - Westhafen.

¹¹⁰⁷ “Erfolge des Ackerbaus in Südwestafrika,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, July 24, 1913, SBB - Westhafen.

¹¹⁰⁸ “Argentinisches Trockenfleisch,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, October 2, 1913, SBB - Westhafen; “Argentinisches Trockenfleisch,” Keetmanshooper Zeitung, October 9, 1913, SBB - Westhafen.

Südwest-Afrika) was founded on 17 February 1917 in Windhoek.¹¹⁰⁹ Even after the war, this Farming Society continued to monitor stockbreeding in Argentina.¹¹¹⁰

The most important science association founded by German-speakers in Argentina was the Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein in Buenos Aires (German Scientific Society in Buenos Aires).¹¹¹¹ In 1907, the society members met in the neighborhood bar of the Austrian-Hungarian Club at Calle Corrientes 815.¹¹¹² In 1913, Wilhelm Keiper, then its president, published a booklet about the aims and tasks of the society.¹¹¹³ Its main aim was then to be a mediator between intellectual life in Germany and Argentina. The yearly report from 1913, published in the DLPZ, announced that the society planned to establish a reference library and wanted to ask the German ambassador (Kaiserlicher Gesandter) Hilmar von dem Bussche-Haddenhausen if he could contact the large ¹¹⁰⁹ Markus J. Jahnel, Das Bodenrecht in "Neudeutschland über See": Erwerb, Vergabe und Nutzung von Land in der Kolonie Deutsch-Südwestafrika 1884-1915 (Frankfurt am Main: Peter Lang, 2009), 469.

¹¹¹⁰ Otto Haverkamp, "Kann Argentinien auf längere Zeit Vieh ausführen?," Mitteilungen der Farmwirtschafts-Gesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika, May 30, 1919, sec. Wie man Anfang 1913 über Argentinien als Fleischproduzent dachte; F.F. Matenaers, "Argentinien's Viehzucht," Mitteilungen der Farmwirtschafts-Gesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika, May 30, 1919, sec. Wie man Anfang 1913 über Argentinien als Fleischproduzent dachte.

¹¹¹¹ Roberto A. Ferrari, "La Sociedad Científica Alemana en Buenos Aires," in La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, ed. Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda (Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008), 173–91.

¹¹¹² "Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, July 6, 1907, sec. Vereins-Nachrichten, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹¹¹³ Wilhelm Keiper, Ziele und Aufgaben des Deutschen Wissenschaftlichen Vereins in Buenos Aires: im Auftrage des Vorstandes von Prof. Dr. Wilhelm Keiper, Vorsitzenden (Buenos Aires: Mengen, 1913).

publishing houses in Germany and either provide free or discounted books for their new library.¹¹¹⁴ It also announced that it had changed its membership policy: in addition to the ordinary (ordentliche) members exclusively consisting of German-speakers, Argentinean non-German-speakers could join as extraordinary (außerordentliche) members. By 1914, it had acquired a locality in Charcas Street 1650, with a conference room large enough for 90-100 people, a library, a reading room, and an information office.¹¹¹⁵ Dr. Nießen reported on this society in 1915 and how it particularly organized lectures to inform the general Argentinean population on German advances in science.¹¹¹⁶ He said that the German colony of Buenos Aires was a good example of how German colonies abroad should act during the war.¹¹¹⁷ By 1915, the society also edited its own journal.¹¹¹⁸ Even the Protestant church archives in Berlin hold a copy of the first volume of this journal.

In the first volume of the journal of the Deutsch-Südamerikanisches Institut (German-South American Institute), the editor Paul Gast provided reasons ¹¹¹⁴ “Jahresbericht des Deutschen Wissenschaftlichen Vereins in Buenos Aires über das Vereinsjahr 1913,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 3, 1914, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹¹¹⁵ Paul Gast, ed., “Der Deutsche Wissenschaftliche Verein in Buenos Aires,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 2 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914), 295.

¹¹¹⁶ Nießen, “Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein in Buenos Aires,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 3 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915), 173–74.

¹¹¹⁷ Ibid., 173.

¹¹¹⁸ H. Koch and Wilhelm Keiper, eds., “Zeitschrift des Deutschen Wissenschaftlichen Vereins zu Kultur- und Landeskunde Argentinens, 1915, Heft 1, Buenos Aires,” 1915, EZA 5/2061.

for the founding of the institute: increasing trade on the world market had heightened the interest of Europeans in Latin American countries.¹¹¹⁹ He also commented that Wilhelm Keiper's publication on the Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein shared the same viewpoint on the situation: North Americans, the French, the Spanish, and increasingly also Belgians and Italians were practicing cultural propaganda in Argentina, and Germany should take part in the game if it wanted to achieve a position as an equal competitor.¹¹²⁰

In 1915, the German Scientific Association edited a book from Argentine scholar José Ingenieros about the formation of an Argentinean race.¹¹²¹ In 1916, the association launched a book project about "Germanness in Argentina and its Achievements." The pastor Max Dufft, representing the German Protestant La Plata Synod, reported on this project and the participation of the synod in a letter to the Protestant Church Council in Berlin.¹¹²²

In 1904, there were plans for a German Society for Economic Endeavors in Argentina (Deutsche Gesellschaft für wirtschaftliche Unternehmungen in ¹¹¹⁹ Paul Gast, "Warum mußte das Deutsch-Südamerikanische Institut gegründet werden?," in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 3-.

¹¹²⁰ Paul Gast, ed., "Wissenschaftliche und andere Organisationen: Ziele und Aufgaben des Deutschen Wissenschaftlichen Vereins in Buenos Aires," in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 157-61.

¹¹²¹ José Ingenieros, Die Bildung einer argentinischen Rasse (Buenos Aires: Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein, 1915).

¹¹²² Max Dufft, "Betrifft deutsch-argentinische Vereinigung. Erlass vom 31.8.1915, [An den Evangelischen Ober-Kirchenrat, Berlin-Charlottenburg. Buenos Aires, den 12. Januar 1916,]" January 12, 1916, EZA 5/2061, [E.O. IV 1095].

Argentinien) with R. Funke as director.¹¹²³ In 1907, an Agricultural Protection Association (Landwirtschaftlicher Schutz-Verband, Kooperativ-Gesellschaft) was announced in the AT.¹¹²⁴ I have not found any further information about either of these societies.

A German-Argentine Center was founded on 26 March 1907 in Berlin.¹¹²⁵ In September, Argentinean President Figueroa Alcorta, upon the request of Berlin bankers and merchants connected to the Argentine Republic, issued a decree for financial support for the center and named Gustavo Niederlein the person in charge of organizing further cooperation between the German Empire and Argentina.¹¹²⁶ By this decree, Niederlein was put under direct authority of the Argentinean Ministry of Agriculture (Ministerio de Agricultura). The newspaper AT reported that this decision was met with criticism by the Argentinean press, which claimed that such propaganda for Argentina in Germany was not necessary and should not be the role of the Argentinean state; the AT countered that the German-speaking countries differed from the Latin countries and that even in 1907, it was still necessary to educate European German-speakers about the ¹¹²⁶ José Figueroa Alcorta and Ezequiel Ramos Mexia, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 3 septiembre 1907]," September 3, 1907, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 3435 R del año 1907].

¹¹²³ Wilhelm Vallentin, "Wilhelm Vallentin to Vorbereitungs-Kommission zur Gründung einer 'Deutschen Gesellschaft für wirtschaftliche Unternehmungen in Argentinien.' z.H. des Vorsitzenden Herrn R. Funke," December 12, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 122-125.

¹¹²⁴ "Landwirtschaftlicher Schutz-Verband, Kooperativ-Gesellschaft, Ld."

¹¹²⁵ "'Club Germano-Argentino' in Berlin," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, September 7, 1907, BArch R 901/30421, pag. 10-11.

advantages of Argentina for trade, migration, and colonization.¹¹²⁷ In January 1908, news circulated in Germany that a German-Argentinean Club for the Promotion of trade relations between Germany and Argentina was to be founded with the following companies and individuals possibly involved: Staudt & Co., Plant & Co., Hardt & Co., Deutsche Überseeische Bank, Deutsch-Südamerikanische Bank, Konsul a. D. Franz Vogler, and Vice-consul of the Argentinean Republic M. Waetge.¹¹²⁸ By 1913, the center was referred to as Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen (German-Argentinean Central Association for the Promotion of Economic Interests).¹¹²⁹ The association had its own publication and published texts from authors such as the Rudolf Colditz,¹¹³⁰ Rudolf Hauthal,¹¹³¹ Gustavo ¹¹²⁷ “Die Nachricht von der Subsidienbewilligung an den Deutsch-Argentinischen Club in Berlin...,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, September 5, 1907, BAArch R 901/30421, pag. 11.

¹¹²⁸ von Borries, “[Berliner] Polizeipräsident an Minister von Handel und Gewerbe,” January 18, 1908, BAArch R 901/30422, pag. 101.

¹¹²⁹ Paul Gast, ed., “Deutsch-Argentinischer Zentralverband zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 42; Paul Gast, ed., “Deutsch-Argentinischer Zentralverband zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 161–63.

¹¹³⁰ Rudolf F. von Colditz, Die Aussichten für deutsches Grosskapital in Argentinien, Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 3 (Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912); Rudolf F. von Colditz, Aus den hohen Anden Süd-Amerikas: Vortrag gehalten am 5. März 1914 in der Aula der Kgl. Kriegsakademie zu Berlin, Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 10 (Berlin: Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband, 1914).

¹¹³¹ Rudolf Hauthal, Das Minenwesen in Argentinien, Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 6 (Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912).

Niederlein,¹¹³² Wilhelm Keiper¹¹³³ oder Kurt Martin.¹¹³⁴ Ernst Pfannenschmidt also visited the association in October 1913.¹¹³⁵ Between 1910 and 1920, Pfannenschmidt was employed as agricultural specialist in Argentina by the German Empire.¹¹³⁶

In July 1911, José Greger, naturalized Argentinean citizen, successfully requested funding from the Argentine government for his journal Sud América (Süd-Amerika), published in Munich, Germany: the Argentinean authorities considered his journal as providing efficient advertisement for German immigration to Argentina.¹¹³⁷

¹¹³² Gustavo Niederlein, Die argentinische Industrie und ihre Bedeutung für deutschen Export, Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 5 (Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912).

¹¹³³ Wilhelm Keiper, Deutsche Kulturaufgaben in Argentinien: Vortrag, gehalten am 30. Januar 1914 im Preußischen Abgeordnetenhaus, Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 7 (Berlin: Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband, 1914).

¹¹³⁴ Kurt Martin, “Die Aussichten des Auswanderers in Argentinien. Berlin 1919,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Otto Quelle, vol. 7 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1919).

¹¹³⁵ H. Waetge and Fr. du Vinage, “[Lecture announcement Dr. Pfannenschmidt, ‘Die Aussichten für deutsche Einwanderer in den La-Plata-Staaten’],” October 1913, BArch R 901/30430, pag. 47.

¹¹³⁶ Ernst Pfannenschmidt, Die argentinische Landwirtschaft, ed. Fritz Ehrenforth, Der Weltmarkt für agrarische Erzeugnisse: Untersuchungen des Forschungsinstituts für Agrar- und Siedlungswesen zu Berlin 2 (Berlin: Paul Parey, 1926).

¹¹³⁷ Eleodoro Lobos, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Resolución de 26 julio 1911],” July 26, 1911, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 5052 C del año 1911].

Name	Year	Seat
Sociedad Rural Argentina ¹¹³⁸	1866	Buenos Aires
Agricultural Society for GSWA (Landwirtschaftlicher Verein für Deutsch-Südwestafrika)	1898	Windhoek
Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein in Buenos Aires (German Scientific Society in Buenos Aires)	?	Buenos Aires
German Society for Economic Endeavors in Argentina (Deutsche Gesellschaft für wirtschaftliche Unternehmungen in Argentinien)	1904	?
German-Argentine Center/ Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen (German-Argentinean Central Association for the Promotion of Economic Interests)	1907	Berlin
Journal Süd-Amerika	1911	München

5.3.3 Colonial and Colonization Institutions set up in Central Europe

In the 1850s, several associations were founded in Germany with the general aim to promote German colonization, migration, and settlement abroad. However, they did not yet necessarily focus on the South Atlantic as migrant destination. A prominent example was the Texas Adelsverein or Society for the Protection of German Immigrants in Texas, which planned and organized the settlement of German-speakers in the free state of Texas from the 1840s onwards.

¹¹³⁸ The Sociedad Rural Argentina was not founded by German-speakers, but German-speakers like Emilio Frers had important positions in the society and they used the influence to promote their cause.

The National Association for German Emigration and Settlement in Frankfurt am Main (Nationalverein für deutsche Auswanderung und Ansiedelung zu Frankfurt a. M.) was founded in 1848.¹¹³⁹ The association consisted in a variety of regional chapters, e.g. in Hessen, Württemberg, Baden, Hanau, and Nassau. In his report about the founding of the association, Heinrich Künzel announced its aim as being the settlement of “Germans in the national sense” (Ansiedlung von Deutschen im nationalen Sinne).¹¹⁴⁰ “Nation” appears to be used here as a synonym for a cultural group and a German “people,” in opposition to Germans as a political designation. The National Association gave preference to settlement in the United States, but was also generally open to other destinations deemed suitable for German-speakers.

The Berlin Association for the Centralization of German Emigration and Colonization (Berliner Verein zur Centralisation deutscher Auswanderung und Colonisation) was founded in 1849.¹¹⁴¹ It identified economic reasons for ¹¹³⁹ Heinrich Künzel and Wilhelm Stricker, Bericht über die Entstehung und bisherige Wirksamkeit des Nationalvereins für deutsche Auswanderung und Ansiedelung zu Frankfurt a.M. (Darmstadt; Frankfurt am Main: R. v. Auw; C. Krebs-Schmitt, 1849).

¹¹⁴⁰ I assume that “nation” is used here as a synonym for cultural group and German people in opposition to Germans as political designation. Ibid., 3.

¹¹⁴¹ Ernst Wilhelm Johann Gaebler, Deutsche Auswanderung und Kolonisation: Erster Rechenschaftsbericht des Berliner Vereins zur Centralisation Deutscher Auswanderung und

migration as paramount, before religious and political ones.¹¹⁴² The association considered mass migration as an evil for Germany and the German nation, but it also postulated that it wasn't up to the German governments to prevent mass migration, but rather up to private individuals.¹¹⁴³ People like Samuel Gottfried Kerst attempted to promote the River Plate in particular as a migration destination during his presentations at the Berlin Association.¹¹⁴⁴ There were also geographic associations like the one in Frankfurt am Main that promoted knowledge about the River Plate in Germany.¹¹⁴⁵

The Central Association for Trade Geography and the Promotion of German Interests (Centralverein für Handelsgeographie und Förderung deutscher Interessen) was founded in Berlin 1879.¹¹⁴⁶ Its founder, economist and student of Wilhelm Roscher, Robert Jannasch, ardently tried to improve trade relations with regions abroad and to create new markets by redirecting German migration flows to areas where migrants could “remain German.” In 1886, he was Kolonisation, erstattet im Auftrage des Verwaltungsraths (Berlin: F. L. Schneider & Company, 1850).

¹¹⁴² Ibid., 5.

¹¹⁴³ Ibid., 8.

¹¹⁴⁴ Kerst, Die Länder am Uruguay; Kerst, Die Länder im Stromgebiete des La Plata; Samuel Gottfried Kerst, Die Plata-Staaten und die Wichtigkeit der Provinz Otuquis und des Rio Bermejo seit der Annahme des Princips der freien Schifffarth auf den Zuflüssen des Rio de la Plata (Berlin: Veit und Comp., 1854).

¹¹⁴⁵ Friedrich Wilhelm von Reden, Die Staaten im Stromgebiet des La Plata in ihrer Bedeutung für Europa. Grundlage von Vorträgen im Geografischen Verein zu Frankfurt a.M. Anfangs 1852 (Darmstadt: Verlag der Hofbuchhandlung von Gustav Jonghaus, 1852).

¹¹⁴⁶ Ernst Ziel, ed., “Ein Centralverein für Handelsgeographie und Förderung deutscher Interessen,” Die Gartenlaube, no. 15 (1879): 259; Bade, Friedrich Fabri und der Imperialismus in der Bismarckzeit: Revolution - Depression - Expansion, 180.

involved in a trade expedition along the African West coast.¹¹⁴⁷ He advocated Brazil as the alternative to the United States as best migration destination, and the creation of agricultural colonies there.¹¹⁴⁸ During the 1902 German Colonial Congress, he fought with Moritz Alemann about this topic,¹¹⁴⁹ only to change his mind a few years later, at the next Colonial Congress of 1905,¹¹⁵⁰ and in 1907 he was even employed by the Argentine government to travel the Argentine South in order to identify the best settlement locations together with Gustavo Niederlein.¹¹⁵¹

¹¹⁴⁷ Robert Jannasch, Die Deutsche Handelsexpedition 1886 (Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1887).

¹¹⁴⁸ Robert Jannasch, ed., Rathschläge für Auswanderer nach Südbrasilien. Auf Veranlassung des Centralvereins für Handelsgeographie und Förderung deutscher Interessen im Auslande zu Berlin (Berlin: Allgemeine Verlags-Agentur, 1897).

¹¹⁴⁹ Deutscher Kolonialkongress, Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, 839: "Hierzu lag ein Amendement des Herrn Alemann vor, nach dem Worte "Südbrasilien" einzusetzen: "und den La Plata-Ländern.// Alemann, Buenos Aires: Ich habe dieses Amendement gestellt im Interesse der Gleichberechtigung, da die sanitären, landwirtschaftlichen und politischen Verhältnisse in beiden Zonen ungefähr dieselben sind. Ohne die Vorteile von Südbrasilien anzugreifen, muss ich sagen, dass doch die La Plata-Staaten wieder Vorteile anderer Art bieten, wie z.B. Eisenbahnverkehr, welche sie berechtigen, ebenfalls Anspruch darauf zu erheben, als günstig für die deutsche Auswanderung betrachtet zu werden. // Dr. Jannasch, Berlin: Ich bitte die geehrte Versammlung, dieses Amendement des Herrn Alemann abzulehnen. Es ist in der gedruckten Resolution ausdrücklich hervorgehoben, dass die Auswanderung nach den "mit gemässigtem Klima ausgestatteten Ländern von Südamerika" geleitet werden soll, und da sind bestimmte Teile von Argentinien inbegriffen. Wenn aber Herr Alemann "Argentinien" schlechthin sagt, so könnte man an Chubut oder ähnliche Gegenden denken. Das wäre ein sehr schwerer Fehler, und deshalb bitte ich, das Amendement abzulehnen.// Nach der Ablehnung des Amendements Alemann mit überwiegender Stimmenmehrheit wurde die Resolution in der zuerst vorliegenden Form angenommen."

¹¹⁵⁰ Robert Jannasch, "Argentinien als Wirtschafts- und Auswanderungsgebiet," in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906), 753–73.

¹¹⁵¹ José Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 27 noviembre 1907]," November 27, 1907, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 4428 N del año 1907].

The German Colonial Association (Deutscher Kolonial Verein) was founded in Frankfurt am Main in 1882.¹¹⁵² Its statutes declared that its aim was to find a practical solution for the colonial question.¹¹⁵³ More concretely, the immediate stated aim was the setup of trade posts as the basis for larger undertakings. The Society for German Colonization (Gesellschaft für deutsche Kolonisation) was founded in 1884 in Berlin, after Lüderitzbucht in Namibia had been put under protection of the German Empire and the society's statutes declared as its three main aims: "the further founding of German-national colonies, the practical support of existing German colonies, and the redirection of German migration to suitable German colonies."¹¹⁵⁴ These two associations merged in 1887 and became the German Colonial Society (Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft).¹¹⁵⁵ The German Colonial Society cooperated with the Central Information Bureau for Migrants (Central-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer) and issued publications informing potential migrants about potential destinations, including Argentina.¹¹⁵⁶ ¹¹⁵² "Vertraulich! [Gründung des Deutschen Kolonialvereins]," September 10, 1882, BArch R 8023/253, pag. 10.

¹¹⁵³ "Auszug aus den Satzungen des „Deutschen Kolonialvereins“,“ 1882, BArch R 8023/253.

¹¹⁵⁴ "Satzungen der Gesellschaft für deutsche Kolonisation," 1885, BArch R 8023/263, pag. 1.

¹¹⁵⁵ Emanuel Cohn, "Vorgeschichte der Kolonialgesellschaft," 1902, BArch R 8023/256, pag.; Imre Demhardt, Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft 1888-1918: ein Beitrag zur Organisationsgeschichte der deutschen Kolonialbewegung (Wiesbaden: Selbstverlag, 2002).

¹¹⁵⁶ Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft and Central-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer, eds., Argentinien (Berlin: Rudolf Mosse, 1902).

The German-South America Institute (Deutsch-Südamerikanisches Institut) was first founded in 1912 with its headquarters in Bonn and the main office and editorial office in Aachen, under Professor Paul Gast, Professor of geodesy at the Königlich Technische Universität zu Aachen.¹¹⁵⁷ Gast provided an explanation of why the institute was founded: to provide information and education to South Americans about Germans, and vice-versa, in times of increasing competition on the world market.¹¹⁵⁸ Two prominent people involved in the institute were Otto Preusse-Sperber,¹¹⁵⁹ who had extensively travelled and published on Argentina, and Professor Sievers from Göttingen, who was among the founding members.¹¹⁶⁰ In 1918, the headquarters were moved to Köln. Paul Gast published a list of members who lived in Germany at the time.¹¹⁶¹ In 1917, the name of the institute was changed to German-South American and Iberian ¹¹⁵⁷ Paul Gast, ed., Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913); Alexander M. Kalkhoff, Romanische Philologie im 19. und frühen 20. Jahrhundert: institutionengeschichtliche Perspektiven (Tübingen: Narr, 2010), 274; Reinhard Liehr, “Geschichte Lateinamerikas in Berlin,” in Geschichtswissenschaft in Berlin im 19. und 20. Jahrhundert: Persönlichkeiten und Institutionen, ed. Reimer Hansen, Wolfgang Ribbe, and Willi Paul Adams (Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 1992), 644.

¹¹⁵⁸ Gast, “Warum mußte das Deutsch-Südamerikanische Institut gegründet werden?”

¹¹⁵⁹ Otto Preusse-Sperber, “Eisenbahnbauten in Verbindung mit Kolonisation,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 23–30.

¹¹⁶⁰ Paul Gast, ed., “Instituts-Chronik. Organisation. Die Tätigkeit der Geschäftsstelle im 1. Halbjahr 1913,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 1 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913), 68.

¹¹⁶¹ Paul Gast, ed., “Verzeichnis der in Deutschland wohnenden Mitglieder,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 6 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1918), 100–106.

Institute (Deutsch-Südamerikanisches und Iberisches Institut) in Cologne¹¹⁶² and Otto Quelle took over as editor.¹¹⁶³ Simultaneously in 1917, the Ibero-American Institute Hamburg was founded.¹¹⁶⁴ It was only in 1930 that all of these institutes were merged into the Ibero-American Institute (Ibero-Amerikanisches Institut) in Berlin.¹¹⁶⁵

In 1917, the Museum and Institute for the Knowledge of Germanness Abroad and for the Promotion of German Interests Abroad (Museum und Institut zur Kunde des Auslandsdeutschtums und zur Förderung deutscher Interessen im Ausland) was founded in Stuttgart, and renamed German Foreign Institute (Deutsches Ausland-Institut) within the same year.¹¹⁶⁶ Between 1933 and 1945, the institute voluntarily turned into a Nazi propaganda instrument.¹¹⁶⁷ It managed to survive the war and serves as a cultural institute today.

Association	Founding Year	Location
National Association for German Emigration and Settlement	1848	Frankfurt am Main ¹¹⁶² Kalkhoff, Romanische Philologie im 19. und frühen 20. Jahrhundert, 274.

¹¹⁶³ Otto Quelle, ed., Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, vol. 7 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1919).

¹¹⁶⁴ Kalkhoff, Romanische Philologie im 19. und frühen 20. Jahrhundert, 274; Liehr, “Geschichte Lateinamerikas in Berlin,” 644.

¹¹⁶⁵ Liehr, “Geschichte Lateinamerikas in Berlin,” 644; Carreras, “Die Quesada-Bibliothek kommt nach Berlin. Zu den Hintergründen einer Schenkung.”

¹¹⁶⁶ Fred Adlam Helms, “Deutsches Ausland-Institut, 1917-1933: An Administrative History” (Ph.D., University of Delaware, 1976).

¹¹⁶⁷ Andrea Brüstle, Das Deutsche Ausland-Institut und die Deutschen in Argentinien, 1933-1945 (Berlin: wvb, Wissenschaftlicher Verlag, 2006).

(Nationalverein für deutsche Auswanderung und Ansiedelung)
Association for the Centralization of German Emigration and Colonization (Verein zur Centralisation deutscher Auswanderung und Colonisation)	1849 (or 1850?)	Berlin
Geographic Association in Frankfurt am Main (Geografischer Verein)	1836	Frankfurt am Main
Central Association for Trade Geography and the Promotion of German Interests (Centralverein für Handelsgeographie und Förderung deutscher Interessen)	1879	Berlin
German Colonial Association (Deutscher Kolonial Verein)	1882	Frankfurt am Main
Society for German Colonization (Gesellschaft für deutsche Kolonisation)	1884	Berlin
German Colonial Society (Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft)	1887	Berlin
German-South America Institute (Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Institut)	1912	Bonn/Aachen
German-South American and Iberian Institute (Deutsch-Südamerikanisches und Iberisches Institut)	1917	Köln
Ibero-American Institute (Ibero-amerikanisches Institut)	1917	Hamburg
Museum and Institute for the Knowledge of Germanness Abroad and for the Promotion of German Interests Abroad	1917	Stuttgart

(Museum und Institut zur Kunde des Auslandsdeutschtums und zur Förderung deutscher Interessen im Ausland)/ German Foreign Institute (Deutsches Ausland-Institut)
Ibero-American Institute (Ibero-Amerikanisches Institut)	1930	Berlin

5.4 Companies Involved in Large-scale Production of Food Stuffs

Some German-speakers in Argentina were involved in the production and distribution of food items. Food production was closely linked to colonization as it presumed the handling of land, either for the production of crops or of animals destined to human consumption. Food production was thus a central part of agriculture. Many German-speakers in Argentina were involved in the Argentinean wheat and meat industries.

5.4.1 Beer – A Typically “German” Beverage

Early on, South Atlantic German-speakers set up restaurants and bars where they sold beer. Throughout the first half of the nineteenth century, they only sold imported beer. Until German-speakers started producing local beer in the 1860s, beer had been imported mostly from England. The oldest German brewery in Argentina was that of Mister Westermayer, formed in the 1860s, later joined by Johann Schellenschlaeger, Hammer und Co., and Rotenburger and E. Bieckert.¹¹⁶⁸ In 1866, the German newspaper of the River Plate published an article about “past and current” beers.¹¹⁶⁹ While beer was also widely consumed by English-speakers, it turned into a specifically German food item that German-speakers had brought with them. Produced in Argentina, it created local interest in beer and thus a local market. In 1872 already, an article in the German newspaper Buenos Aires was titled “important for brewery owners!”¹¹⁷⁰ Emil Bieckert from Alsace was registered as a beer brewer on the list of German merchant houses in the 1873 La Plata Calendar.¹¹⁷¹ Bühler was also registered as beer brewer.¹¹⁷² In 1888, Otto Bemberg founded the Quilmes Cervecería as a family business. In 1896, the Quilmes beer was also advertised in the Protestant newsletter.¹¹⁷³ The Bemberg brewery is still operating today, even though the brand Quilmes is now owned by a Brazilian company (since 2002). In 1907, the Bieckert company advertised with “Africana” being the best dark beer in Argentina.¹¹⁷⁴

¹¹⁶⁸ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884, 17.

¹¹⁶⁹ G. F. Habich, “Biere von ehemals und heut,” Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, January 4, 1866.

¹¹⁷⁰ “Wichtig für Brauereibesitzer!,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, July 3, 1872.

¹¹⁷¹ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 210.

¹¹⁷² Ibid., 211.

¹¹⁷³ “Cerveza Quilmes,” Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt Für die Deutschredenden am La Plata, December 4, 1896, EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 73.

¹¹⁷⁴ “‘Africana’ ist das beste Schwarz-Bier Argentiniens. Compañía Cervecería Bieckert (1900) Lda.,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 8, 1907, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Pilsen y Africana negra sind wie allbekannt die besten Biere

In Namibia, it was also the German settlers that brought beer and beer brewing with them.¹¹⁷⁵ But here, beer was imported for even a longer time. In 1900, a certain Mr. Jauch opened the Bavaria Brewery in Swakopmund, apparently the first of its kind.¹¹⁷⁶ In 1902, two German-speakers started brewing beer in Windhoek independently – Friedrich Schmidt in Klein-Windhuk and Karl Bauer founded the Felsenkeller brewery – until they merged their businesses in 1912.¹¹⁷⁷ In 1920, the South West Breweries Limited was founded in Windhoek and the Hansa brewery in 1929 in Swakopmund.¹¹⁷⁸ The company was renamed Namibia Limited after Namibian independence in 1990 and it continues to sell the Windhoek Lager until today.¹¹⁷⁹

5.4.2 Wheat, an “Old-world” Crop Transplanted

In 1909, the German Consulate Buenos Aires sent a list of the Wheat and Feed producers in Argentina to the German Foreign Office.¹¹⁸⁰ The list included the Argentiniens,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, March 31, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹¹⁷⁵ “Beer tames the dry country: Beer has become as synonymous with SWA/Namibia as biltong, due to the beer-drinking custom in Germany which new German settlers brought all the way with them to this country,” Die Republikein, June 16, 1988, Deutsch-Südwestafrika / Duis-Suidwes-Afrika edition.

¹¹⁷⁶ Sigrid Kube and Klaus Becker, “Salve Gambrinus! Der Kampf wider den Durst und den tierischen Ernst; Der Bierkrieg,” in Vom Schutzgebiet bis Namibia 2000, ed. Klaus Hess and Klaus Becker (Göttingen; Windhoek: Hess, 2002), 226.

¹¹⁷⁷ Ibid.

¹¹⁷⁸ Ibid., 227.

¹¹⁷⁹ Ibid., 228–30.

¹¹⁸⁰ “Firmen der Getreide und Futtermittelbranche,” March 3, 1909, BArch R 901/30425, pag. 25.

following: E. A. Bunge & J. Born, Luis Dreyfuss & Cia., Weil Hermanos & Cia., Weigal & Ehlert, Brauss, Mahn & Cia., Merian Altgelt & Cia., Huny & Wormser, General Mercantile Comp., H. Fuhrman & Cia., and Th. Bracht & Cia.

The Bunge family was the most powerful family business involved in wheat production. In 1884, “Ernesto Bunge y Jorge Born S.A.” was founded.¹¹⁸¹ In 1905, Bunge y Born was involved in the founding of the Banco Hipotecario Franco-Argentino.¹¹⁸² During WWI, the company was renamed the Compagnie royale Belgo-Argentine.¹¹⁸³ According to Phillip Dehne, the Bunge & Born Company represents an example of how the process of globalization continued during WWI and was not interrupted by it.¹¹⁸⁴ After WWI, the company was also active in Uruguay.¹¹⁸⁵ The Bunge/Born/Hirsch/Oster company became a multinational company in the grain business that is still operating today.¹¹⁸⁶

¹¹⁸¹ Schvarzer, Bunge & Born, 6; Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 183.

¹¹⁸² Ceva, “De la exportacion cerealera a la diversificacion industrial. Las empresas Bunge y Born en Argentina (1884-1940),” 86.

¹¹⁸³ Ibid., 93.

¹¹⁸⁴ Phillip A. Dehne, “The Resilience of Globalization during the First World War: The Case of Bunge & Born in Argentina,” in The Foundations of Worldwide Economic Integration: Power, Institutions, and Global Markets, 1850–1930, ed. Christof Dejung and Niels P. Petersson (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2013), 228–48.

¹¹⁸⁵ Raúl Jacob, “Bunge y Born en Uruguay (1915-1945),” Ciclo en la historia, la economia y la sociedad Año 5, no. 5 (1995): 29–54.

¹¹⁸⁶ María Inés Barbero, “Business Groups in Argentina during the Export-Led Growth Period (1870-1914),” in Entrepreneurship and Growth: An International Historical Perspective, ed. Gabriel Tortella and Gloria Quiroga (Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire; New York, NY: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013), 69–91.

5.4.3 Providing the World with Meat

Next to wheat, the meat industry was most important in Argentina. While in most of Argentina, beef was the preferred meat for consumption, a German butcher in Argentina advertised pork and sausage production in 1907.¹¹⁸⁷ H. Thöle also advertised a sausage factory in Argentina in the same year, but with a Spanish store name.¹¹⁸⁸

In April 1908, the Argentinean Department of Agriculture created an inspector position for the Fábrica de Carnes Conservadas de Colón (E.R.) of the company Liebig's Extract Meat.¹¹⁸⁹ Increasing import and export of animals and meat brought more risk of diseases and stricter controls at the ports with them.

Of particular importance were the development of freezing techniques for meat conservation and transportation. In 1912, J. Ullrich Mueller published on the Argentinean meat freezing industry and its importance for European consumption.¹¹⁹⁰ His text was published as part of the German-Argentine Central ¹¹⁸⁷ L. R. Scheiner, "Deutsche Schweineschlachtereie und Wurstfabrik von F. Herrmann," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹¹⁸⁸ H. Thöle, "El Arca de Noe [...] Grosse Konserven- u. Wurstwarenfabrik - Neujahr," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 1, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹¹⁸⁹ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 28 abril 1908]," April 28, 1908, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 1595 G del año 1908]; According to the Graham-Yool, the company also had branches in Uruguay and Namibia, see Graham-Yool, The Forgotten Colony.

¹¹⁹⁰ J. Ullrich Mueller, Die argentinische Gefrierfleischindustrie und ihre Bedeutung für den europäischen Verbrauch, Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 1 (Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912).

Association for the Support of Economic Interests. In 1922, the German-Argentinean Frozen Food Company was founded in Buenos Aires.¹¹⁹¹

Before frozen meat gained reputation, it was Argentinean dry meat that was talked about abroad: in 1913, the Keetmanshooper Zeitung published an article on Argentine dry meat.¹¹⁹² German-speakers in Namibia watched the raising popularity of Argentinean meat on the world market. It was reported on Argentinean dry meat and people even had some samples they could try of this novelty.

5.5 German-speakers' Participation in Bringing Technological Progress

German-speakers claimed to be innovative and progressive. The German-speaking missionaries in Namibia were at times the first Europeans in contact with the local population, along with merchants. German-speakers were not technologically more advanced than other Europeans throughout most of the nineteenth century; rather, they represented a general European “advancement” in contrast to the lifestyles and living conditions in the South Atlantic, both in Argentina and Namibia. German-speakers nevertheless took part in the increasingly national competition for technological advancement, with Great ¹¹⁹¹ Sociedad anónima Frigorífico argentino-alemán (, Estatutos de La Sociedad Anónima Frigorífico Argentino-Alemán (Deutsch-Argentinischer Gefrieranstalt) (Buenos Aires, 1922).

¹¹⁹² “Argentinisches Trockenfleisch,” October 2, 1913; “Argentinisches Trockenfleisch,” October 9, 1913.

Britain turning from a model into a rival and the United States emerging as a new competitor at the end of the century. Generally, technological advancements occurred in the fields of communication and transportation, and with the broader introduction of electricity in various parts of everyday life.

5.5.1 Improving Means of Communication

In Namibia, the missionaries introduced a postal system and a telegraph system. However, letters still took a very long time to travel between Namibia and German lands. Carl Hugo Hahn wrote in his diaries that letters usually took several months and oftentimes got lost altogether.¹¹⁹³ In 1904, H. Herzog published an article in the German colonial policies and economy journal on the development of the mail and telegraph system in the German colonies as it had developed after 1899.¹¹⁹⁴ This publication was followed up by a scholarly work over one hundred years later when in 2007 Sebastian Mantei published a book with the Namibia Scientific Society on the development of the mail and telegraph system in Namibia between 1884 and 1915.¹¹⁹⁵ It was after the 1980s that scholars started to take more interest in this topic. In 1981, Bernhard Koch wrote a book ¹¹⁹³ Hahn, Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher.

¹¹⁹⁴ H. Herzog, "Entwicklung des Post- und Telegraphenverkehrs der deutschen Kolonien seit 1899," ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 472–82.

¹¹⁹⁵ Sebastian Mantei, Von der "Sandbüchse" zum Post- und Telegraphenland: der Aufbau des Kommunikationsnetzwerks in Deutsch-Südwestafrika (1884 - 1915), 1st ed. (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wiss. Ges., 2007).

on the military mailing service (“field mail”) in the German protectorate between 1904 and 1907.¹¹⁹⁶ In 1994, Ulrich Czimmek studied German maritime mail between Hamburg and West Africa.¹¹⁹⁷

The company Telefunken meanwhile found its way from Germany to Argentina: in 1907, the DLPZ published an article on the latest achievements of Telefunken in Argentina¹¹⁹⁸ and in 1915, it advertised in the Spanish-language magazine Germania.¹¹⁹⁹ In 1917, the German news agency Transocean G.m.b.H. was also operating in Argentina.¹²⁰⁰

5.5.2 Providing for Transportation

In Namibia, German set up European-style roads for their trade routes.¹²⁰¹ And in both Argentina and Namibia, Germans were involved in the construction of railroads. In Namibia, the train connecting Swakopmund at the coast and ¹¹⁹⁶ Bernhard Koch, Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: “Feldpost” auf Seeposten 1904 - 1907 (Hamburg, 1981).

¹¹⁹⁷ Ulrich Czimmek, Deutsche Seepost Hamburg - Westafrika: Fahrpläne und Reisedaten der Woermann-Dampfer 1890-1914 mit einer Bewertung ihrer Seepostbelege, Schriften zur Deutschen Kolonialphilatelie und Kolonialgeschichte 2 (Göttingen: Arbeitsgemeinschaft der Sammler deutsche Kolonialpostwertzeichen, 1994).

¹¹⁹⁸ “Die jüngsten Erfolge des Systems ‘Telefunken’ in Argentinien,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 18, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹¹⁹⁹ “Telefunken,” Germania 1, no. 7 (September 1, 1915).

¹²⁰⁰ C. E. Kloeping, “C. E. Kloeping Buenos Aires to Herrn Direktor Schulte der ‘Transocean G.m.b.H.’ Berlin,” July 3, 1917, BArch R 901/57676, pag. 41-43; C. E. Kloeping, “C. E. Kloeping to Herrn Direktor Schulte der ‘Transocean G.m.b.H.’ Berlin,” June 27, 1917, BArch R 901/57676, pag. 50-56.

¹²⁰¹ Max Fellmer, “Einrichtung eines großen Viehtransportweges durch Südwestafrika,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902).

Windhoek in the interior was built in 1902.¹²⁰² In the same year, goods were transported from the coast by Lüderitzbucht into the interior.¹²⁰³ The Otavi Minen- und Eisenbahn-Gesellschaft (Otavi Mine and Railroad Company) undertook several projects in the northern part of Namibia in the first decades of the twentieth century. Klaus Dierks has described the development and construction of railroads in Namibia as a way of unlocking the last parts of Africa to “civilization.”¹²⁰⁴

An electric railroad from La Plata via Buenos Aires to Tigre was constructed by the German company Otto Franke & Cia. in 1907.¹²⁰⁵ The author of a DLPZ article pointed out that this was the first time German capital was involved in railroad construction in Argentina. In September 1908, the Argentinean Congress passed a law for the construction of a railway line in territory Rio Negro.¹²⁰⁶ German companies were also involved in the construction of the Buenos Aires subway system.

¹²⁰² Gerding, “Die Bahn Swakopmund-Windhoek,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 381–416.

¹²⁰³ Schwabe, “Güterbeförderung mittels Straßenlokomotiven von Lüderitzbucht ins Innere,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 267.

¹²⁰⁴ Klaus Dierks, “Schmalspureisenbahnen erschließen Afrikas letzte Wildnis: Namibias Schienenverkehr zwischen Aufbau und Rückgang,” in Vom Schutzgebiet bis Namibia 2000, ed. Klaus Hess and Klaus Becker (Göttingen; Windhoek: Hess, 2002), 31–49.

¹²⁰⁵ “Die elektrische Schnellbahn nach La Plata und nach Tigre,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, February 27, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹²⁰⁶ [?], “El Senado y Cámara de Diputados de la Nación Argentina reunidos en Congreso etc. sancionan con fuerza de Ley...,” September 11, 1908, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 4757 del año 1908].

Also very important were the German shipping companies: they increased their service to the South Atlantic throughout the second half of the nineteenth century with the aid of technological advancements. The role of Madeira as a changing station should be further investigated; many travel accounts mention this island. In Argentina, the biggest German shipping companies were the following: the Hamburg-Südamerikanische Dampfschiffahrts-Gesellschaft, the Norddeutscher Lloyd, Hansa, Kosmos, and the Hamburg-Amerika Linie. In the Address Calendar of the German Colony of Buenos Aires, Ernst Bachmann mentioned the German shipping lines that were gradually set up: the Hamburger Kosmos Linie started in 1871 to Montevideo and then Buenos Aires from 1873 onwards. The first direct shipping line to Buenos Aires was the Hamburg-Suedamerikanische Dampfschiffahrtsgesellschaft from 1872 onwards, with one ship a month and then later two ships a month.¹²⁰⁷ The Norddeutsche Lloyd started regular trips to Buenos Aires in 1876; the Baltische Lloyd had a few trips to Buenos Aires in the mid-1870s, and the Oesterreichischer Lloyd undertook one trip to Buenos Aires in 1881.¹²⁰⁸

In 1873, Benn & Co. as well as Lüders & Co. were agents of the Hamburg-Südamerikanische Dampfschiffahrts-Gesellschaft in Buenos Aires.¹²⁰⁹

¹²⁰⁷ Bachmann, "Land und Leute in Argentinien," 16.

¹²⁰⁸ Ibid.

¹²⁰⁹ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873, 210, 215.

In 1877, the Norddeutscher Lloyd still mostly advertised as a “mail steamer.”¹²¹⁰ The Norddeutscher Lloyd was also involved in the project of the cooperative German-Argentine Colonization Company.¹²¹¹ In 1907, the DLPZ published an article to honor the fifty-year existence of the company.¹²¹² In 1915, Germania published various articles on the company.¹²¹³ Also in 1907, the Hansa celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary.¹²¹⁴

In May 1899, the Argentine Minister of Agriculture was in charge of considering putting in place a steamer connection between Buenos Aires and the Southern coastline of Argentina.¹²¹⁵

5.5.3 Expanding the Availability of Electricity

In Argentina, German companies were competing with British ones in the market for electricity providers. Electricity also became important for agriculture, as an ¹²¹⁰ Deetjen & Co. and A. Scharffenorth, “Norddeutscher Lloyd v. Bremen: Kaiserlich Deutsche Postdampfer,” Die Heimath: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, December 29, 1877. Deetjen & Co. advertised for the NDL; Deetjen was involved in the founding of the Protestant German Church in 1843.

¹²¹¹ “Norddeutscher Lloyd, Bremen to Bülow [Bekanntmachung Gründung der „Genossenschaftlichen Germanisch-Argentinischen Kolonisationsgesellschaft“].”

¹²¹² Neubaur, Der Norddeutsche Lloyd, 50 Jahre der Entwicklung, 1857-1907.

¹²¹³ “Norddeutscher Lloyd Bremen - Compañía de Navegación Lloyd Norte Alemán,” Germania 1, no. 7 (September 1, 1915); “Lloyd Norte Aleman,” Germania 1, no. 14 (December 16, 1915).

¹²¹⁴ “Das 25. Jubiläum der Deutschen Dampfschiffahrts-Gesellschaft ‘Hansa’ Bremen,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 4, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹²¹⁵ [Julio Argentino] Roca and Emilio Frers, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 24 mayo 1899]” (Buenos Aires, May 24, 1899), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1583 Bis del año 1899].

article from the Argentine journal La Agricultura from 1893 testifies.¹²¹⁶ The German Overseas Electricity Company (Compañía Alemana Transatlántica de Electricidad/Deutsch-Überseeische Eletrizitäts-gesellschaft) started operating in Argentina in 1893.¹²¹⁷ Lütge et al. dedicate a part of their book on Germans in Argentina to the German Overseas Electricity Company in particular: they claim it was the only large German concession company in Argentina to emerge from a project for the Buenos Aires tramway, and that the company brought several hundreds of German engineers, technicians, and commercial employees to Argentina.¹²¹⁸ The company frequently advertised both in the AT and the DLPZ. In 1916, it had an ad for “electricity in the kitchen.”¹²¹⁹

5.6 Conclusion

The companies German-speakers founded in Argentina and Namibia carried out the objective of increasing trade and economy Central European German states. They were active proponents of the idea of German overseas colonies as new German markets. Many of these businesses were “German” by virtue of their ¹²¹⁶ “Electricidad y Agricultura,” La Agricultura: Organo de los intereses rurales é industriales 1, no. 6 (February 9, 1893): 59.

¹²¹⁷ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 297; Forbes, “German Informal Imperialism in South America before 1914,” 394.

¹²¹⁸ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 297–98.

¹²¹⁹ Compañía Alemana Transatlántica de Electricidad, “Elektrizität in der Küche,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 27, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

proprietors' origin. Important elements of these German colonies were banks as financial institutions that managed the capital flows. Some banks managed money transactions between the South Atlantic and Central Europe. In several cases, they were also national institutions, linked to the nation-states where they were registered: Belgium, France, Great Britain, and later also the German Empire. Other banks operated locally and managed the capital for agricultural colonization projects. Agricultural colonization companies and associations played a large part in the activities of German-speakers in the South Atlantic. Colonization companies and associations were at core of this project of expanding a German market. Central-European Germans helped them in their endeavors: the movement started out in Central Europe but even later, many associations and institutions continued to have their seat in Central Europe, even if the main activity and life of the associations took place in the South Atlantic. German-speakers were very active in the project of bringing technological innovations to the South Atlantic. These included advances in communication and transportation, as well as the promotion and extension of the use of electricity in everyday life. As far as food production was concerned, German-speakers were mostly involved in beer, wheat and meat production.

Family businesses were especially important. While membership of the South Atlantic German-speaking communities was in constant flux with people coming and going, travelers and short-term migrants, a number of families made up the more stable elements. These families set up their main residence in the South Atlantic, but even within these families individuals might spend time away; many children would spend a substantial part of their youth in German lands for education. The families formed the core of the German-speaking communities in the South Atlantic, like Redecker and Voigts in Namibia and Bunge and Tornquist in Argentina. As we have seen in this chapter, South Atlantic German-speaking colonies participated in the creation of overseas markets and thus extension of reach of German economic sphere.

Part II Concluding Remarks

In this second part we have studied South Atlantic colonies German-speakers set up over the course of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The colonies functioned as networks where German-speakers cooperated to set up associations with the overall aim to increase trade for German markets while perpetuating “civilization.”

The main arguments discussed in the three chapters include that the networks of German-speakers functioned primarily as privately motivated group projects, that German-speakers worked towards maintaining “civilization” within their own communities as well as raising the level of civilization in their receiving societies, and that their networks served as a way to expand the reach of German markets. German-speakers focused on private entrepreneurship and only occasionally cooperated with state authorities. They believed in the necessity of advancing “German-ness” through economic means. They set up churches and schools with the help of associations in Central Europe. Only around 1900 did the German Empire get involved in the set up of schools in the German protectorate South-West Africa. Leisure and philanthropic associations worked towards the maintenance of a certain level civilization within the German-speaking networks. Companies and banks participated in the advancement of the receiving societies. German-speakers, however, gradually replaced the term “colony” with “community” over the course of the twentieth century, in the aftermath of WWI and WWII.

German-speakers in Argentina had claimed the title “German colony in Buenos Aires” for themselves in 1884.¹²²⁰ Across the South Atlantic colonial enthusiasts proclaimed the existence of the “first German colony in Africa” in South-West Africa that same year.¹²²¹ Historians maintain that specifically in the German-speaking South Atlantic, we should distinguish between three different uses of the term “colony:” (1) the German “colony” in Buenos Aires, (2) the German-speaking agricultural “colonies” in the Argentinean interior on the one side, and (3) the colony or protectorate of German South-West Africa on the other. However, I argue that these three types of “colonies” were all members of the same family and so similar in key aspects that they should be studied together and not as separate and mutually exclusive elements. On both sides of the South Atlantic, in very different contexts, German-speakers created settlements that they referred to as “colonies.”

¹²²⁰ Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884.

¹²²¹ Rohlf, Angra Pequena.

The community of German-speakers in Namibia qualified as a formal settlement colony according to contemporary theorists. The community of German-speakers in Buenos Aires could qualify as an “urban colony” according to contemporary theorists. For this reason, it seems like a plausible explanation that the label “German colony of Buenos Aires” as a self-designation disappeared with the decolonization movement and postcolonialism post-WWII. Agricultural colonies in the Argentinean interior, on the contrary, kept this designation, since colonization in the Argentinean territory was considered as completely separate from European colonialism. These entities continued to be called “agricultural colonies” because of the Argentinean state’s definition of colonization as agricultural colonization independent of colonialism. While the German-speaking colonies in the South Atlantic already functioned de facto as communities, the label of the category of experience “colony” was only widely replaced by “community” due to the decolonization movements in the aftermath of the two World Wars.¹²²² In particular, scholars studying German-speaking groups in the South Atlantic use “community” as their analytical designation.¹²²³

¹²²² In 1919, the community of interest of South-West German-speakers was founded, see Interessengemeinschaft Deutschsprachiger Südwestler, IG., Interessengemeinschaft Deutschsprachiger Südwestler, IG. (Windhoek, 1919); In 1957, the German Health Association published a book about its fiftieth anniversary and spoke of the “German community,” see Oven, 100 Jahre Deutscher Krankenverein.

¹²²³ Hergen Junge, Gerhard Töttemeyer, and Marianne Zappen-Thomson, eds., The Identity and Role of the German-Speaking Community in Namibia (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibisch-Deutsche Stiftung für Kulturelle Zusammenarbeit, 1993); Wentenschuh, Namibia und seine Deutschen; Stefan Rinke, “Export einer politischen Kultur: Auslandsdeutsche in Lateinamerika und die Weimarer Republik,” in Integration und Transformation”: Ethnische Gemeinschaften, Staat und Weltwirtschaft in Lateinamerika seit ca. 1850, ed. Stefan Karlen and A. Wimmer (Stuttgart: Akademischer Verlag, 1996), 353–80; Bryce, “La etnicidad en el Argentinisches Tageblatt, 1905-1918: la discusión de una comunidad germánica y alemana”; David P. Crandall, Hans-Wilhelm Kelling, and Paul E. Kerry, “A Reader’s Introduction,” in Africa: What It Gave Me, What It Took from Me: Remembrances from My Life as a German Settler in South West Africa, by Margarethe von Eckenbrecher, trans. David P. Crandall, Hans-Wilhelm Kelling, and Paul E. Kerry (Bethlehem, PA: Lehigh University Press, 2015), 1–42.

Part III. Territoriality: From “Colonization” to “Agriculture”

This third part of the dissertation further examines the dimensions of German-speaking colonization in the South Atlantic. While I am focusing on the territories of the modern states Argentina and Namibia, I also include the larger areas, that is to say the southern cone of South America with the current states Uruguay, Paraguay, and Brazil, as well as Southern Africa with the current states South Africa and Angola.

I consider “agricultural colonization” as a category of experience, whereas I consider “imperialism” and “colonialism” as categories of analysis used by historians. I work with the premise that “colonization” was a term that nineteenth- and early twentieth-century contemporaries used to describe settlement and agricultural use of land in general. There were, however, further distinctions within this category. Nevertheless, colonization of all types was considered as an activity to be carried out by (white) Europeans and was linked to ideas of civilization and progress.

As we have seen in Part II, individuals, families, and small groups of people were at the center of German-speaking colonies and colonization, rather than the Central European German states and state actors. German colonization was not originated by the German Empire either and thus cannot be considered as having been colonialist or imperialist per se. Individuals, families, and small groups started the process and carried it out for most of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The German Empire was involved only temporarily in the process, in particular after 1900.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century, “agriculture” and “colonization” were synonyms and used interchangeably. Agriculture – the production of crops and animals for human consumption and thus human survival – has always been at the core of human activity. Some nineteenth-century scholars described all known human history as the history of colonization: that is, of making land arable for crop and animal farming.

The decades around 1900 were marked by increased nation-state power and influence. Thus in 1905, German scholar Alfred Zimmermann, who published numerous books on trade policy¹²²⁴ and colonial policy between 1892 and 1916,¹²²⁵ wrote that “for a long time, colonization referred to the settlement of a country by the inhabitants of another. [...] Currently, colonization does not only refer to the settlement but also to the opening up and the cultivation of newly ¹²²⁴ Alfred Zimmermann, Geschichte der preussisch-deutschen Handelspolitik (Oldenburg; Leipzig: Schulze, 1892); Alfred Zimmermann, Die Handelspolitik des Deutschen Reichs vom Frankfurter Frieden bis zur Gegenwart, Second Edition (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1899).

¹²²⁵ Alfred Zimmermann, Kolonialgeschichtliche Studien (Oldenburg: A. Schwartz, 1895); Alfred Zimmermann, Die Kolonialpolitik Grossbritanniens, Die europäischen Kolonien 3 (Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1899); Alfred Zimmermann, Die Kolonialpolitik Frankreichs, Die europäischen Kolonien 4 (Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1901); Alfred Zimmermann, Weltpolitisches: Beiträge und Studien zur neueren Kolonialbewegung, Second Edition (Berlin: Allgemeiner Verein für Deutsche Litteratur, 1901); Alfred Zimmermann, Die Kolonialpolitik der Niederländer, Die europäischen Kolonien 5 (Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1903); Alfred Zimmermann, Kolonialpolitik (Leipzig: C.L. Hirschfeld, 1905); Alfred Zimmermann, Geschichte der deutschen Kolonialpolitik (Berlin: E.S. Mittler und Sohn, 1914); Alfred Zimmermann, Die Kolonialreiche der Grossmächte, 1871-1916 (Berlin: Ullstein, 1916).

acquired territories through another country. Depending on whether these territories are within or outside of the country in question, one distinguishes between internal and external colonization.”¹²²⁶

Historians have mostly looked at colonization practiced by nation-states, and have studied the areas that are marked on the map as areas under official sovereignty. My aim is to decenter this focus on the nation-state and deconstruct the different elements shared between “internal and external colonization,” “private and official colonization,” and synonyms used for colonization, such as migration and agriculture. I conclude that not only nation-states practiced colonization, but a number of individual German-speakers on both sides of the South Atlantic did so as well – and thus should be studied as part of the academic fields of imperialism and colonialism, but in a way that considers exactly these activities of private individuals.

Chapter 6. Conceptualizing Colonization as Convergence of People, Land, and Control

The German protectorate of South-West Africa was advertised as the first German colony in Africa in 1884.¹²²⁷ The mere fact that the German Empire had put overseas territory under German protection had turned the German Empire officially into one colonial power among European colonial powers. Some Germans hoped that this would increase the empire's status on the world stage, and the German Empire did come to rival the British and French Empires. However, actually settling the land and making it useful for agriculture turned out to be a more difficult task. However, German-speakers had started practicing agricultural colonization half a century prior to the proclamation of the German protectorate South-West Africa.

¹²²⁶ Zimmermann, Kolonialpolitik, 1.

¹²²⁷ Rohlf, Angra Pequena.

In the Argentinean case, "colonial" history generally refers to the time prior to the nineteenth century when Argentina was part of the Spanish empire. For example, in 1915, Vicente Gregorio Quesada (*1830 Buenos Aires – 1913 Buenos Aires), the father of Ernesto Quesada, wrote a book about Argentinean Colonial History where he discussed the border dispute between Argentina and Chile in Patagonia.¹²²⁸ Or in 1978, Silvio Arturo Zavala from Mexico used the term "colonization" as synonymous with colonialism under Spain.¹²²⁹ However, Antonio Gomez Langenheim wrote in his 1906 dissertation: "Isn't it for us just as much in our interest to populate Patagonia or the Chaco as it is for the English, French, or Germans to introduce in Africa the highest number of people of the white race in order to render it European? If the great powers make a great effort to direct migration to their colonies, if this matter is of vital importance to them, for us it will be to place our country in the best conditions so that these migration currents change direction, are directed to our shores and come here to settle for the benefit of Argentinean production and wealth.”¹²³⁰ Tellingly, the Argentinean newspaper La Prensa translated German Colonial Congress (Deutscher Kolonialkongress) into “Congreso de la colonización” (Colonization Congress) in 1905.¹²³¹ Around 1900, Argentinean intellectuals attempted to explain potential connections between European colonization and agricultural colonization in Argentina.

¹²²⁸ Vicente Gregorio Quesada, Historia colonial argentina (Buenos Aires: La Cultura argentina, 1915).

¹²²⁹ Silvio Arturo Zavala, Orígenes de la colonización en el Río de la Plata (México, D.F.: Editorial de El Colegio Nacional, 1978).

In this chapter, we first discuss different contemporary colonization concepts. We start with ideas of frontier and “civilization,” which led to wars and cleared the territory for agricultural colonization. We then study international and external colonization as well as state-driven and privately-driven colonization. In a third subsection, we discuss how the terminology around colonization diverged according to two essential component parts of colonization: people and soil.

¹²³⁰ Antonio Gomez Langenheim, Colonización en la República Argentina (Buenos Aires: M. Biedma é hijo, 1906), 2; “¿No es para nosotros tan interesante poblar la Patagonia ó el Chaco como para los ingleses, franceses ó alemanes, introducir en Africa el mayor número posible de individuos de la raza blanca, á fin de europeizarla? // Si las grandes potencias hacen un supremo esfuerzo para dirigir la emigración á sus colonias, si para ellas este es asunto de vital importancia, para nosotros lo es colocar el país en las mejores condiciones para que esa corriente emigratoria cambie de rumbo, se dirija á nuestras playas y venga á radicarse en beneficio de la producción y riqueza argentinas.”

¹²³¹ “Congreso de la colonización. Inmigracion alemana,” La Prensa, October 9, 1905, BArch R 901/30417, pag. 27.

Focus on people led to the emphasis of terms like settlement and migration, whereas focus on soil led to increased use of agriculture in the terminology.

6.1 A Path towards “Civilized People” and “Civilized Land”

The South Atlantic provided a space where German-speaking migrants could “civilize” a distant frontier by introducing conventions they brought from Central Europe in the process of migration and war were closely intertwined with colonization. Conflicts with indigenous peoples arose because of so-called civilization: the need for agricultural cultivation and thus also domination and control of land. In the following subsections, we will discuss the concept of a South Atlantic frontier, so called “civilization,” and different types of armed conflicts in which German-speakers in the South Atlantic got involved.

6.1.1 A South Atlantic Frontier

In Argentina, several contemporaries considered the Argentinean interior as frontier and as empty desert. In particular after the 1880s, the Argentinean white elite started the fight against indigenous people in the south.¹²³² Estanislao Severo Zeballos (*1854 – 1923), a member of the generación del 80, had participated in the creation of the Argentinean Scientific Society (Sociedad Científica Argentina) in 1872,¹²³³ as well as of the Argentinean Geographic Institute (Instituto Geográfico Argentino) in 1879. He was later elected president of the association Sociedad rural Argentina twice: in 1888-1891 and 1892-1894. Zeballos spoke of “la frontera Sud” in 1878 in the context of the “Conquest of the Desert.”¹²³⁴ German-speaker Gustavo Niederlein and French engineer Alfred Ebelot also participated in the “conquest of the desert,” together with General Roca.¹²³⁵ In 1890, Ebelot published a travel account entitled La Pampa: Costumbres argentinas.¹²³⁶ French historian Vincent Condat has studied how Ebelot and Argentineans at the time dealt with “Indians” in the 1870s: they were considered an obstacle to progress and the spreading of “civilization.”¹²³⁷ German-speakers participated in the act of emptying the Argentine frontier, whether through the written word or through depopulation of indigenous peoples.

¹²³² Jean-Pierre Blancpain, Les européens en Argentine: Immigration de masse et destins individuels (1850-1950) (Paris: Editions L’Harmattan, 2011), 16.

German historian Sebastian Conrad recently noted: “The national economist Robert Jannasch demanded that Germans should ‘develop the fast west

¹²³³ Horacio Sanguinetti, El colegio nacional de Buenos Aires y la sociedad científica Argentina (Buenos Aires: Academia Nacional de ciencias morales y políticas, 2006), 8.

¹²³⁴ Estanislao Severo Zeballos, La conquista de quince mil leguas: Estudio sobre la traslacion de la frontera Sud de la república al Rio Negro, dedicado á los gefes y oficiales del ejército expedicionario, Second Edition (Buenos Aires: Establecimiento de Tipografico a Vapor de “La Prensa,” 1878).

¹²³⁵ Pauline Raquillet, Alfred Ebelot: le parcours migratoire d’un français en Argentine au XIXe siècle (Paris: L’Harmattan, 2011).

¹²³⁶ Alfred Ebelot, La Pampa: Costumbres argentinas (Buenos Aires: Joseph Escary, 1890).

¹²³⁷ Vincent Condat, “De la nécessité de la guerre contre l’Indien en Argentine,” in Passion de la guerre et guerre des passions dans les Etats-Unis d’Amérique, ed. Anne Garrait-Bourrier and Ineke Bockting (Clermont-Ferrand: Presses Universitaires Blaise Pascal, 2008), 271–86.

of southern Brazil as the Americans have developed their Far West.”¹²³⁸ This must have been at a time when Jannasch still preferred Brazil as the favored German migration destination; he later transferred these ideas to Argentina, once he had decided to favor Argentina over Brazil. In 1907, the newspaper DLPZ used the term “Far West” as an article heading dealing with land use in Argentina.¹²³⁹ The term in English was clearly borrowed from the North American experience.

Several other historians have used the concept of frontier and frontier societies for Argentina as a whole: Daniel J. Elazar and Peter Medding included several countries from the southern hemisphere, including Argentina, in their comparative study on Jewish frontier communities.¹²⁴⁰ Robert W. Slatta has claimed that the gaucho was the Argentinean version of the North American cowboy.¹²⁴¹ In 1994, Jeremy Adelman published a comparative study of Argentina and Canada as “frontier” societies.¹²⁴² In 2009, Argentinean scholar Yvonna Pineda qualified Argentina as a “Frontier economy” between 1890 and 1930.¹²⁴³ Historian Jürgen Osterhammel classified both Argentina and Southern ¹²³⁸ Conrad, Globalisation and the Nation, 288. Conrad cited Jannasch, “Aufgaben,” p. 590.

¹²³⁹ “Far West,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, June 29, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹²⁴⁰ Elazar and Medding, Jewish Communities in Frontier Societies.

¹²⁴¹ Slatta, Gauchos and the Vanishing Frontier; Slatta, “The Gaucho in Argentina’s Quest for National Identity.”

¹²⁴² Adelman, Frontier Development.

¹²⁴³ Pineda, Industrial Development in a Frontier Economy.

Africa as frontier societies in his history of the nineteenth century.¹²⁴⁴ As for Namibia, Dorian Haarhoff compiled various frontier stories set in Namibia between 1760 and 1988.¹²⁴⁵ Tilman Dederling has studied the frontier in Namibia as it expanded further northwards from the Cape Colony.¹²⁴⁶ In 2010, Dag Henrichsen published his discussion of the land question and disputes between German-speakers and Nama- and Herero-speakers in “South-West Africa” at the beginning of the twentieth century.¹²⁴⁷ German-speakers viewed both of the South Atlantic frontiers of Namibia and Argentina as spaces ripe for economic and cultural development.

6.1.2 “Civilization”

Ultimately, the idea of frontier was that of a culture clash: the civilized meeting the uncivilized. In 1845, Sarmiento published his book Facundo: Civilization and Barbarism.¹²⁴⁸ He presumed that two types of societies co-existed in Argentina at the beginning of the nineteenth century: the city of Buenos Aires with educated ¹²⁴⁴ Osterhammel, “Frontiers: Subjugation of Space and Challenges to Nomadic Life.”

¹²⁴⁵ Haarhoff, The Wild South-West.

¹²⁴⁶ Dederling, Hate the Old and Follow the New.

¹²⁴⁷ Dag Henrichsen, “Pastoral Modernity, Territoriality and Colonial Transformations in Central Namibia, 1860s-1904,” in Grappling With the Beast: Indigenous Southern African Responses to Colonialism, 1840-1930, ed. Peter Limb, Norman A. Etherington, and Peter Midgley (Leiden: BRILL, 2010), 87–114.

¹²⁴⁸ Domingo Faustino Sarmiento, Civilizacion i barbarie: vida de Juan Facundo Quiroga i aspecto fisico, costumbres i habitos de la Republica Argentina (Santiago: Impr. del Progreso, 1845).

descendants from Europeans on the one hand, and the interior with gauchos, the wild descendants of the natives, on the other. Sarmiento was convinced of the inferiority of the indigenous population, and he praised the European lifestyle with schools, civil institutions, and striving towards progress.¹²⁴⁹ Brandon Lanctot has argued that the struggle between these two camps, represented by the dictator Juan Manuel de Rosas (1829-1852) and a dissenting elite of intellectuals, was a modern phenomenon in itself.¹²⁵⁰ Fernando Devoto has written on the topic of “civilizing migrants” in Argentina.¹²⁵¹ Settling the countryside was considered as a national duty and settling the country was considered synonymous with “civilizing” and nationalizing the open spaces. Moreover, Julia Rodríguez discussed the importation of white migrants to Argentina in order to create a white nation as an integral process in expanding the boundaries of the nation into the frontier.¹²⁵² Many Europeans, including German-speakers, arrived in the South Atlantic with the conviction of cultural and racial superiority over the indigenous peoples. Ideas of race proved complicated, however. While those with European roots agreed on their superiority over the local indigenous populations, ¹²⁴⁹ Domingo Faustino Sarmiento, “Domingo Faustino Sarmiento: Frontier Barbarism,” in Where Cultures Meet: Frontiers in Latin American History, ed. David J. Weber and Jane M. Rausch (Wilmington, Del.: SR Books, 1994), 26–27.

¹²⁵⁰ Brendan Lanctot, Beyond Civilization and Barbarism: Culture and Politics in Postrevolutionary Argentina (Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2013).

¹²⁵¹ Devoto, “Poblar, civilizar, nacionalizar.”

¹²⁵² Julia Rodríguez, “‘To Govern Is to Populate’: Importing Whiteness,” in Civilizing Argentina: Science, Medicine, and the Modern State (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 2006), 20–24.

they disagreed over the hierarchies among European cultures. Rhenish missionary Carl Hugo Hahn, for example, likened the Herero to the French people with the typical tropes of racial objectification. In a diary entry from 5 October 1845, Hahn wrote:

The character of the Herero: Of all peoples of Europe, the Herero seem to resemble the most to the French: chatty, trifling, laughing, cantankerous, boastful, filled with anger and rage in one moment and creeping in the next; brave where opposition is lacking and cowardly as soon as they notice persistency and intrepidity. They want to take on everything, learn everything, but they lack perseverance in everything. If the Herero had newspapers, their newspapers probably resembled the French: filled with lies, bragging and false rumors. In sodomy, they are ahead of almost all African peoples, as the French are of all European peoples. In vanity, they search their equal and where does fashion originate in Europe? Is this character cleansed and made holy, then we can see in them what greatness grace may accomplish, as the example of French believers proves.¹²⁵³

In 1898, Carl Dunker published his theory about the difference between Latin and Germanic peoples.¹²⁵⁴ He included French, Spanish, and Portuguese in the Latin group and Germans, British, and the Dutch in the Germanic group. In his book, he also included a discussion of their differences regarding colonization: Dunker claimed that the Latin peoples practiced the incorporation of indigenous peoples, whereas the Germanic practiced the eradication of indigenous peoples.¹²⁵⁵ However, in Argentina, descendants from predominantly Latin origins also practiced the eradication of indigenous people in the so-called Desert Campaign (Campania del Desierto) of the 1880s. In Namibia, more in keeping with Dunker's theory, the Namibian War (formerly known as "Nama-Herero War") was a genocide of the Nama- and Herero-speakers. And still, Bernhard Dernburg claimed in 1906 that German-speakers were more advanced in terms of colonization, as their methods for colonization were not nearly as barbarous as the largest project of this sort from history, as perpetrated by the United States, a project that resulted in the eradication of native populations wholesale. Rather, German-speakers used more sustainable methods of colonization, with the help of missionaries, doctors, railroads, machines and advancements of science rather than solely at the end of the barrel of a gun.¹²⁵⁶

¹²⁵³ Own translation. Carl Hugo Hahn, Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part I: 1837-1845, ed. Brigitte Lau, vol. 1 (Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1984), 243. "Charakter der Ovaherero. Die Ovaherero scheinen mit keinem Volk in Europa mehr Ähnlichkeit zu haben als mit den Franzosen: geschwätzig, tändelnd, lachend, zänkisch, prahlerisch, in einem Augenblick in höchstem Zorn und Wut, im anderen kriechend; tapfer, wo kein Widerstand ist, feige, sobald sie Festigkeit und Unerschrockenheit gewahr werden. Alles wollen sie angreifen, alles lernen, aber zu allem fehlt die Ausdauer. Würden die Ovaherero Zeitungsschreiber haben, dann trugen ihre Zeitungen sicher das Gepräge der französischen, voller Lügen, Grosssprecherei und falscher Gerüchte. In Unzucht tun sie es, meine ich, fast allen afrikanischen Völkern zuvor, wie die Franzosen allen europäischen. In Eitelkeit suchen sie ihresgleichen, und woher kommen doch die Moden über ganz Europa?// Ist dieser Charakter durch die Gnade gereinigt und geheiligt, dann [können] wir [an] ihnen sehen, was Grosses die Gnade vermag, wie das Beispiel gläubiger Franzosen beweist."

¹²⁵⁴ Dunker, Kolonien und Kolonisation.

A second aspect of European colonization was the "civilizing mission," which represents a neologism in the German language between 1885 and

¹²⁵⁵ This theory seems to be similar to the one presented in John Elliott's book, see John Elliott, Empires of the Atlantic World: Britain and Spain in America, 1492-1830 (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006).

¹²⁵⁶ Bernhard Dernburg, Zielpunkte des deutschen Kolonialwesens: Zwei Vorträge (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1907), 9.

1945.¹²⁵⁷ Several scholars have studied cases outside the South Atlantic that contain points of comparison useful for this study. Several historical studies have looked at how states and empires commit to the act of colonization within their own borders. Harald Fischer-Tiné has analyzed the internal civilizing mission of whites in colonial India, which presented a similar situation to the internal civilizing mission in Namibia.¹²⁵⁸ The way Sebastian Conrad described the “self-civilization” of Japan in a “colonial modernity” could also be applied to Argentina in the second half of the nineteenth century.¹²⁵⁹ Dittmar Dahlmann analyzed the Russian colonization of Siberia and its civilizing mission.¹²⁶⁰ Frank Ninkovich and Corinne A. Pernet have studied colonization in the U.S.¹²⁶¹ Christian Koller ¹²⁵⁷ Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, eds., Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6 (Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005), 7f.

¹²⁵⁸ Harald Fischer-Tiné, “Englands interne Zivilisierungsmission. Arbeitshäuser für Europäer im kolonialen Indien (ca. 1860-1914),” in Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, ed. Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6 (Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005).

¹²⁵⁹ Sebastian Conrad, “Die Zivilisierung des ‘Selbst’: Japans koloniale Moderne,” in Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, ed. Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6 (Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005), 245–68.

¹²⁶⁰ Dittmar Dahlmann, “Sibirien: Der Prozess der Eroberung des Subkontinents und die russische Zivilisierungsmission im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert,” in Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, ed. Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6 (Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005), 55–71; Also see Willard Sunderland, Taming the Wild Field: Colonization and Empire on the Russian Steppe (Cornell University Press, 2006).

¹²⁶¹ Frank Ninkovich, “Kontinentale Expansion, Empire und die Zivilisierungsmission im Amerika des 19. Jahrhunderts,” in Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, ed. Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6 (Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005), 285–309; Corinne A. Pernet, “Die Zivilisierungsmissionen der Zivilgesellschaft. Die andere Art der US-Intervention in Lateinamerika von 1910 bis 1945,” in Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit discussed differing opinions among contemporary socialist thinkers on the compatibility between colonization and socialism.¹²⁶² Internal colonization through the process defined as civilization took numerous forms and was practiced by a multiple governing institutions during the period under study here. These were not developments solely confined to the South Atlantic.

A third aspect of “civilization” concerned modernization or modernity, in particular technological and scientific advancement. We have discussed the involvement of German-speakers in the South Atlantic with regards to agricultural tools, railroads, and shipping in Part II. The colonization museum in Esperanza, Province of Santa Fe, Argentina exhibits the tools that the first agriculturalists in the colony Esperanza usedas for example a wheat grinder (Mahlzahn) from 1859, a manual blower to clean seeds, tools for wire fences, and a hand wheat mill from 1878.¹²⁶³ Wilhelm Keiper claimed in 1914 (though the book was only published in 1928 due to WWI) that what made Argentina rich were the fruits of agriculture – both of arable and stock farming (Ackerbau und Viehzucht) – and what Germans contributed were innovations in technology, military, science, and education.¹²⁶⁴ dem 18. Jahrhundert, ed. Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6 (Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005), 311–33.

¹²⁶² Christian Koller, “Eine Zivilisierungsmission der Arbeiterklasse? Die Diskussion über eine ‘sozialistische Kolonialpolitik’ vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg,” in Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, ed. Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6 (Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005), 229–43.

¹²⁶³ Museo de la Colonización, Museo de la Colonización Argentina: Esperanza, primera colonia agrícola (Esperanza, Provincia de Santa Fe, República Argentina: The Museum, 1984), 21ff.

¹²⁶⁴ Keiper, Der deutsche Brunnen in Buenos Aires: Das Werk und der Künstler, 14.

Keiper also wrote that Argentina, like any other nation, was working to contribute to the development of mankind towards perfection and the ideals of man (Menschheitsideale); it was no longer satisfied with mere economic progress but wanted to compete with the older peoples on the intellectual realm.¹²⁶⁵ In 1909, Keiper had praised Argentina as the most promising country, and one that would become a leader among South American countries and that had similar, if not better, prerequisites than its great model, the United States of America.¹²⁶⁶

Contemporary Europeans were convinced of their own modernity and progress. For them, indigenous people were backwards and needed to be educated, missionized, and modernized. However, Dag Henrichsen has argued that Nama- and Otjiherero-speakers in Namibia had increasingly been influenced by Europeans from the 1860s onwards and thus were already “modern” before their time under German protection.¹²⁶⁷ Henrichsen argued that Otjiherero-speakers constructed a new cattle-based and modern society based on mercantile capitalist principals they learned from Europeans having come to Southern Africa.¹²⁶⁸ There is thus a stark contrast between how contemporary German-¹²⁶⁵ Ibid., 15.

¹²⁶⁶ Keiper, Begleitworte zu den Wettbewerbsbedingungen für einen deutschen Brunnen in Buenos Aires, 4.

¹²⁶⁷ Henrichsen, “Pastoral Modernity, Territoriality and Colonial Transformations in Central Namibia, 1860s-1904,” 94f.

¹²⁶⁸ Dag Henrichsen, “Establishing a Precolonial ‘Modern’ Cattle-and-Gun Society: (Re-)Pastoralisation, Mercantile Capitalism and Power amongst Herero in Nineteenth-Century Central Namibia,” in Pastoralism in Africa: Past, Present and Future, ed. Michael Bollig, Michael Schnegg, and Hans-Peter Wotzka (New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2013), 201–29.

speakers perceived locals in the nineteenth century regarding the racial ideas as well as the concepts of modernity and the conclusions scholars have recently come to.

6.1.3 War

Contemporaries considered war as a necessary means for and a side effect of modernity and progress. Through the use of force, the stronger would win and be in the right to dominate the weaker peoples. I distinguish between two types of war: armed conflicts with indigenous peoples to acquire their land, considered necessary for agricultural cultivation and domination, and wars among European powers for world dominance. Both types of war generated migration from Southern Africa to South America: during and after the Namibian War (Herero War), some German-speakers moved to Argentina and Paraguay.¹²⁶⁹ After the Boer wars, some Boers chose to migrate to Chubut, Argentina.¹²⁷⁰ And after WWI, some German-speakers moved from Namibia to Argentina and Brazil. One example are two brothers from Namibia who had a farm near the Fish River

¹²⁶⁹ “Deutsche Ansiedler in Südwestafrika und deren Übersiedlung nach Südamerika,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, October 1, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 48; “Deutsche Offiziere aus Südwestafrika in Paraguay,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, April 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 190.

¹²⁷⁰ Du Toit, Colonia Boer.

Canyon in Namibia until they were expelled from Namibia under South African occupation following WWI; one brother then moved to Argentina.¹²⁷¹

6.1.3.1 Conflicts between Europeans and Indigenous Peoples

Conflicts between Europeans and indigenous peoples in the South Atlantic arose because of the processes of so-called “civilization”: over time, Europeans needed more and more land for their increasingly extensive agricultural cultivation. Central Europeans and South Atlantic indigenous peoples had differing concepts of land ownership. Similar conflicts also took place in Northern America where European settlers gradually spread across the continent.

Expansion frequently brought conflict with indigenous populations who had different ideas about the right to land and civilization. European migrants frequently framed these populations through their own cultural lens. Jesuit missionary Martin Dobrizhoffer described the Abipones of Paraguay as a belligerent people.¹²⁷² In 1876, the DLPZ reported repeated attacks by indigenous people on European settlers, particularly from “Indians of the South.”¹²⁷³ It also ¹²⁷¹ Sven-Eric Kanzler, Expelled From a Beloved Country: The Story of Two Brothers From Germany and Their Farm Karios at the Fish River Canyon in Namibia Against the Background of German Colonial Times and the First World War in South West Africa (Windhoek: Nature Investments Pty Ltd., 2003).

¹²⁷² Dobrizhoffer, Geschichte der Abiponer einer berittenen und kriegerischen Nation in Paraguay, 1783.

¹²⁷³ “Aus dem Süden. 1. Januar 1876,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 5, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Der Indianereinfall,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, reported that the Indians only attacked because the Argentinean government did not keep its promises of delivering food and other materials. Juan Alemann wrote in 1877 that the gradual disappearance of the Indian was just a matter of time.¹²⁷⁴ Johannes Baumgarten wrote in his 1882 publication that the Argentinean government had decided in 1879 to push the border with the Indians (“Indianergrenze”) further south.¹²⁷⁵ Almost casually, Baumgarten wrote of the “eradication of the southern Pampas Indians,” in which Argentina’s President General Roca’s army of 4,500 men eradicated (vernichten) 20,000 Indians. He also documented Gustavo Niederlein’s participation in the project as member of Roca’s scientific commission. Niederlein wrote his own text on the Pampas Indians, originally presented to the Berlin Geographic Society in 1880, which Baumgarten reprinted in his volume.¹²⁷⁶ Niederlein confirmed that they had disappeared after 1879 – either they died or they were integrated into Argentinean society and would profit from culture now, as Niederlein put it. In 1883, the Argentinisches Wochenblatt reported about ongoing war with the Indians

January 7, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Argentinien und seine Indianer,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, December 6, 1876, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹²⁷⁴ Alemann, Bilder aus der Argentinischen Republik, 121.

¹²⁷⁵ Johannes Baumgarten, “Die Pampas-Indianer,” in Amerika: Eine ethnographische Rundreise durch den Kontinent und die Antillen. Charakterbilder, Sittenschilderungen, Scenen aus dem Volksleben. Nach den besten und neuesten, deutschen und ausländischen Quellen (Stuttgart: Rieger’sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1882), 3–12.

¹²⁷⁶ Gustavo Niederlein, “Die Pampas-Indianer vor und nach dem Jahre 1879,” in Amerika: Eine ethnographische Rundreise durch den Kontinent und die Antillen. Charakterbilder, Sittenschilderungen, Scenen aus dem Volksleben. Nach den besten und neuesten, deutschen und ausländischen Quellen, ed. Johannes Baumgarten (Stuttgart: Rieger’sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1882), 9–12. Reprint of “Verhandlungen der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde in Berlin. 1880. Nr. 9.”

alongside the Andes: the area had been “cleaned” (gesäubert) of Indians with 150 of them killed and 1,000 men, women, and children taken as prisoners.¹²⁷⁷ In 1898, an article in the AT spoke of “weak remains of former Indian settlements” (schwache Reste der ehemaligen Indianerniederlassungen).¹²⁷⁸ In the same year, the newspaper published a series of articles on the “Tehuelche Indians – A Dying People.”¹²⁷⁹ A. Matschnig’s contribution was based on the original text from Ramón Lista (1856-1897), an Argentinean explorer who had studied natural sciences in Germany and France between 1875 and 1877, and who had worked with Herman Burmeister (*Stralsund).¹²⁸⁰ In 1907, the DLPZ reported on a murder by Indians near Salta¹²⁸¹ and Argentinean government sent troops to protect missionaries against Indians in the Formosa territory.¹²⁸² In 2008, French historian Vincent Condat documented Alfred Ebelot and how Argentineans dealt with ¹²⁷⁷ “Den Indianern an den Abhängen der Cordilleren, längs den Flüssen Nanquen und Limay, wird seit einigen Monaten schonungslos der Krieg gemacht,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 20, 1883, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹²⁷⁸ “Die südlichen Territorien,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 7, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹²⁷⁹ Ramón Lista and A. Matschnig, “Die Tehuelche-Indianer: Ein sterbendes Volk,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, May 14, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹²⁸⁰ Ramón Lista, Los indios tehuelches: una raza que desaparece (Buenos Aires: Patagonia Sur Ediciones, 1894); H. Aguilar, “Ramón Lista: El explorador sin límites,” Boletín del Museo Argentino de Ciencias Naturales Bernardino Rivadavia 10, no. 99 (2009): 15–16.

¹²⁸¹ “Durch Indianer ermordet ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 29, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹²⁸² “Indianereinfälle befürchten die Missionäre im Formosa-Territorium ...,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 29, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

“Indians” in the 1870s in the discussion of a frontier.¹²⁸³ Similarly, in 2002, scholars reflected in an edited volume on indigenous peoples in the Pampa, Patagonia, and Tierra del Fuego, using the term “ethnocide” to describe their violent disappearance at the hands of expansionists.¹²⁸⁴ However, it appears as if scholars in Argentina remain careful in using the term “genocide.” Rather contrarily, the scant new literature on the topic continues to use the euphamistic term “conquest of the desert” to describe the eradication of native peoples along the Argentine frontier. Osvaldo Bayer is among the few exceptions having produced a scholarly account on the topic. European colonists in Argentina, including German-speakers, settled on land that they systematically cleared of its indigenous inhabitants.

In Namibia, there was much conflict between different indigenous peoples prior to the involvement of German-speakers in the region, but historian Brigitte Lau has criticized Rhenish missionary and historian Heinrich Vedder for having exaggerating the extent of these conflicts.¹²⁸⁵ Early travelers and missionaries attempted to study the indigenous groups and learn their languages and customs.

¹²⁸³ Condat, “De la nécessité de la guerre contre l’Indien en Argentine.”

¹²⁸⁴ Claudia Briones and José Luis Lanata, eds., Contemporary Perspectives on the Native Peoples of Pampa, Patagonia, and Tierra Del Fuego: Living on the Edge (Westport, Conn.: Greenwood Publishing Group, 2002), x.

¹²⁸⁵ Brigitte Lau, “‘Thank God the Germans Came’: Vedder and Namibian Historiography,” in History and Historiography: 4 Essays in Reprint, ed. Annemarie Heywood (Windhoek: Discourse/MSORP, 1995), 1–16.

Peter Kolben had, among other interests, studied the Namas' "art of war."¹²⁸⁶ In 1870, Carl Hugo Hahn participated in the Okahandja Peace Conference between different Namibian indigenous tribes.¹²⁸⁷ In 1873, Rhenish missionary Schröder reported tensions between the leaders Jan Jonker (Nama) and Kamaherero or Samuel Maharero (Herero) in Windhoek.¹²⁸⁸ In 1880, Schröder reported that war had broken out between Nama and Herero.¹²⁸⁹ Then war broke out between German-speakers and the Nama under leader Hendrik Witbooi in 1893.¹²⁹⁰ Witbooi became a symbol for anti-colonial resistance in Namibia.¹²⁹¹ He wrote his own text, Africa to the Africans, during the first decade of German occupation.¹²⁹² In 1898, the Windhoeker Anzeiger reported that two other subgroups of the Nama, the Zwartbooi and the Topnaar people, were completely ¹²⁸⁶ Peter Kolben, The Present State of the Cape of Good Hope: Or, A Particular Account of the Several Nations of the Hottentots: Their Religion, Government, Laws, Customs, Ceremonies, and Opinions; Their Art of War, Professions, Language, Genius, Etc., trans. Mr. Medley (London: W. Innys, 1731).

¹²⁸⁷ "[Friedenskonferenz, Okahandja]," 1870, RMG 2.611, Bl. 66.

¹²⁸⁸ Johann Georg Schröder, "[Afrikaner in Windhoek]," August 1, 1873, RMG 2.591, Bl. 3-6.

¹²⁸⁹ Johann Georg Schröder, "Auszug aus dem Bericht von Missionar J. G. Schröder, z. Zt. Walfischbai," October 18, 1880, RMG 2.591, Bl. 30-40.

¹²⁹⁰ Kurt von François, Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: Geschichte der Kolonisation bis zum Ausbruch des Krieges mit Witbooi, April 1893 (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1899); Karl Dove, Südwest-Afrika: Kriegs und Friedensbilder aus der ersten deutschen Kolonie, Second Edition (Berlin: Allgemeiner Verein für Deutsche Litteratur, 1896).

¹²⁹¹ Werner Hillebrecht, "Hendrik Witbooi: Ikone und Inspiration des anticolonialen Widerstands und des unabhängigen Namibias," in Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, ed. Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig (Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004), 144-53.

¹²⁹² Witbooi, Afrika den Afrikanern!

subdued.¹²⁹³ The colonial government declared Zwartbooi as outlawed: any German could arrest them and use arms if necessary.¹²⁹⁴

The labeling of the war between German-speakers and Nama- and Herero-speakers has changed repeatedly over the past decades. The shift has gone from describing the conflict in simple terms such as a “fight,”¹²⁹⁵ to calling it a “war” (with variations focusing only on Herero-speakers or including Nama-speakers as well),¹²⁹⁶ to calling it a “colonial war,”¹²⁹⁷ or similarly an “uprising.”¹²⁹⁸ More

¹²⁹³ “(Die Zwartboois und Topnaars völlig unterworfen.)” Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 10, 1898, sec. Aus dem Schutzgebiet, NAN.

¹²⁹⁴ “Das Gouvernement macht unter dem 3. Dez. er. bekannt, dass, nachdem von den kriegsgefangenen Swartbooi-Hottentotten ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, December 8, 1898, sec. Local-Nachrichten, NAN.

¹²⁹⁵ Horst Drechsler, Südwestafrika unter deutscher Kolonialherrschaft: der Kampf der Herero und Nama gegen den deutschen Imperialismus (1884-1915), Studien zur Geschichte Asiens, Afrikas und Lateinamerikas (Berlin: Akad.-Verl., 1966).

¹²⁹⁶ Helmut Bley, South-West Africa under German Rule, 1894-1914, English ed. (Evanston: Northwestern University Press, 1971); Brigitte Lau, “Uncertain Certainties - The Herero-German War of 1904,” in History and Historiography: 4 Essays in Reprint, ed. Annemarie Heywood (Windhoek: Discourse/ MSORP, 1995), 39–52; Walter Moritz, Herero-Namakrieg 1863-1870: Erinnerungen an Kriegswirren und Missionarische Friedensarbeit von P.H. Brincker, Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 14 (Werther, Westfalen: W. Moritz, 1997); Susanne Kuß, “Der Herero-Deutsche Krieg und das deutsche Militär: Kriegsursachen und Kriegsverlauf,” in Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, ed. Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig (Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004), 62–77; Böttger, “Günstige Rückwirkung auf das nationale Empfinden in Deutschland.’ Zwei Quellen zur zeitgenössischen Wahrnehmung des ‘Hererokrieges,’” in Kolonialismus, ed. Mihran Dabag, Horst Gründer, and Uwe-Karsten Ketelsen (München: Wilhelm Fink Verlag, 2004), 216–31; Martin Weiser, The Herero War - the First Genocide of the 20th Century? (Norderstedt: GRIN Verlag, 2006).

¹²⁹⁷ Gesine Krüger, Kriegsbewältigung und Geschichtsbewusstsein: Realität, Deutung und Verarbeitung des deutschen Kolonialkriegs in Namibia 1904 bis 1907 (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1999); Joachim Zeller, “Kolonialkrieg und Denkmal: 100 Jahre Politik mit der Erinnerung,” in Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, ed. Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig (Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004), 124–43; Andreas E. Eckl, Georg Hillebrecht, and Franz Epp, “‘S’ist ein übles Land hier’: zur Historiographie eines umstrittenen Kolonialkrieges; Tagebuchaufzeichnungen aus dem Herero-Krieg in Deutsch-Südwestafrika 1904 von Georg Hillebrecht und Franz Ritter von Epp, 22 (Köln: Köppe, 2005); H. R. Schneider-Waterberg, Der Wahrheit eine Gasse: Anmerkungen zum Kolonialkrieg in Deutsch-

recently, however, scholars have made an effort to place the events within Namibian history, by calling it the “Southwest African War”¹²⁹⁹ or “Namibian War.”¹³⁰⁰ It is the latter that we are using in this document. In addition, many scholars have called the conflict a genocide.¹³⁰¹ Südwestafrika 1904, Third Edition (Swakopmund Namibia: Gesellschaft für Wissenschaftliche Entwicklung, 2006); Jürgen Zimmerer, Genocide in German South-West Africa: The Colonial War (1904-1908) in Namibia and Its Aftermath (Monmouth Wales: Merlin Press, 2008); Stefan Hermes, “Fahrten nach Südwest”: die Kolonialkriege gegen die Herero und Nama in der deutschen Literatur (1904-2004), Interkulturelle Moderne 3 (Würzburg: Königshausen & Neumann, 2009); Hanns Lessing, “In der Nähe dieser Wasserstellen sollen Konzentrationslager errichtet werden”: Eine theologische Rekonstruktion der Rolle der Rheinischen Missionsgesellschaft während des Kolonialkrieges in Namibia (1904-1908),” in Deutsche evangelische Kirche im kolonialen südlichen Afrika: die Rolle der Auslandsarbeit von den Anfängen bis in die 1920er Jahre, ed. Hanns Lessing et al. (Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, 2011), 471–96.

¹²⁹⁸ Andreas Heinrich Bühler, Der Namaaufstand gegen die deutsche Kolonialherrschaft in Namibia von 1904-1913 (Frankfurt am Main: IKO, Verlag für Interkulturelle Kommunikation, 2003); Jörg Wassink, “Auf den Spuren des deutschen Völkermordes in Südwestafrika: der Herero-, Nama-Aufstand in der deutschen Kolonialliteratur; eine literaturhistorische Analyse” (M-Press, 2004); Medardus Brehl, “Diskursereignis ‘Herero-Aufstand’: Konstruktion, Strategien der Authentifizierung, Sinnzuschreibung,” in Deutsche Sprache und Kolonialismus: Aspekte der nationalen Kommunikation 1884-1919, ed. Ingo H. Warnke (Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2009), 167–202.

¹²⁹⁹ Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, eds., “Einführung,” in Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte (Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004), 18–22; Henrichsen, “Pastoral Modernity, Territoriality and Colonial Transformations in Central Namibia, 1860s-1904,” 87. Footnote 1: “Commonly, these wars have been referred to as, first, the so-called Bondelswartz Rebellion of 1903 and, following this, the so-called Herero or German-Herero war and the Nama or German-Nama war. Namibian African nationalist historiography tends to refer to this period between 1903/1904 and 1908 as the first anti-colonial war(s) of liberation, followed in 1966 by the second war of liberation waged by the Namibian liberation organisation SWAPO (South West African Peoples Organisation) against South African colonial rule. In order to accentuate the interregional scale of the wars at the beginning of the twentieth century in southwestern Africa, and in order to avoid the narrow and politically instrumentalised ethnic and nationalist paradigms with reference to the war period, I prefer to speak of the Southwest African war.”

¹³⁰⁰ Wallace and Kinahan, A History of Namibia, 155–82.

¹³⁰¹ Helmut Walser Smith, “The Talk of Genocide, the Rhetoric of Miscegenation: Notes on Debates in the German Reichstag Concerning Southwest Africa, 1904-14,” in The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy, ed. Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998), 107–24; Jan-Bart Gewald, “The Herero Genocide: German Unity, Settlers, Soldiers, and Ideas,” in Die (Koloniale)

A long tradition of scholars have attempted to contextualize the factors leading to the conflict. Dag Henrichsen has discussed reasons the Herero started a war against German-speaking settlers:¹³⁰² While historians Helmut Bley and Jan-Bart Gewald had argued that it was the climate of tension between the two groups that led to the war rather than land shortage,¹³⁰³ Henrichsen claimed that the “issue of territoriality”¹³⁰⁴ played a major role in the conflict. Historian Wolfgang Werner has further described the process of how the indigenous population in Namibia were deprived of their land and put onto controlled and supervised reservations.¹³⁰⁵ Just as in Argentina, the European “hunger for land” needed for agricultural colonization in Namibia resulted in the comparable eradication of local peoples.

Begegnung: AfrikanerInnen in Deutschland 1880-1945, Deutsche in Afrika 1880-1918, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Reinhard Klein-Arendt (Frankfurt am Main; New York: Lang, 2003), 109–27; Wassink, “Auf den Spuren des deutschen Völkermordes in Südwestafrika”; Weiser, The Herero War - the First Genocide of the 20th Century?; Zimmerer, Genocide in German South-West Africa; Jeremy Sarkin-Hughes, Germany’s Genocide of the Herero: Kaiser Wilhelm II, His General, His Settlers, His Soldiers (Woodbridge, Suffolk: Currey, 2011); Von Elena Beis, “Deutsche Kolonialgeschichte: Der Verleugnete Völkermord,” Die Tageszeitung, 2011, sec. Deutschland, <http://www.taz.de/Deutsche-Kolonialgeschichte/!79124/>.

¹³⁰² Henrichsen, “Pastoral Modernity, Territoriality and Colonial Transformations in Central Namibia, 1860s-1904,” 89f.

¹³⁰³ Cited by Henrichsen: Bley, South-West Africa under German Rule, 134; Jan-Bart Gewald, Herero Heroes: A Socio-Political History of the Herero of Namibia, 1890-1923 (Athens, Ohio: Ohio State University Press, 1999), 191.

¹³⁰⁴ Henrichsen, “Pastoral Modernity, Territoriality and Colonial Transformations in Central Namibia, 1860s-1904,” 91.

¹³⁰⁵ Wolfgang Werner, “Landenteignung, Reservate und die Debatte zur Landreform in Namibia,” in Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, ed. Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig (Wolfenbüttel: Edition Minerva, 2004), 292–303.

An article published in the journal of the German Colonial Society in 1904 was titled “The Herero War and the Settlement Question in German South-West Africa.”¹³⁰⁶ Most of the contemporary publications called the series of events a “war” (Krieg)¹³⁰⁷ or “uprising” (Aufstand).¹³⁰⁸ In 1904, the Morning Post called it the “Herero Rebellion.”¹³⁰⁹ In most contemporaneous renderings the villain was not the colonizer but the colonized.

It is curious to note in the comparative perspective, how much attention the Namibian war has received over the last few decades, both from scholars as well as the press and descendants from the Herero- and Nama-speakers, who are continuing to fight for justice and reparations from Germany. Meanwhile, the “Conquest of the Desert” and the eradication and genocide of the Indians in ¹³⁰⁶ Gentz, “Der Hererokrieg und die Besiedelungsfrage in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 517–21.

¹³⁰⁷ Engelbrechten, “Der Krieg in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 833–72; Hermann Alverdes, Mein Tagebuch aus Südwest: Erinnerungen aus dem Feldzuge gegen die Hottentotten (Oldenburg: G. Stalling, 1906); Adda von Liliencron, Nach Südwestafrika: Erlebnisse aus dem Hererokrieg nach Briefen von Mitkämpfern, Deutsche Jugend- und Volksbibliothek 208 (Stuttgart: J.F. Steinkopf, 1906); Adda von Liliencron, ed., Reiterbriefe aus Südwest: Briefe und Gedichte aus dem Feldzuge in Südwest-Afrika in den Jahren 1904-1906 (Oldenburg: Stalling, 1907); Maximilian Bayer, Der Krieg in Südwest-Afrika und seine Bedeutung für die Entwicklung der Kolonie: Vortrag (Leipzig: Engelmann, 1907); Max Schmidt, Aus unserem Kriegsleben in Südwestafrika: Erlebnisse und Erfahrungen (Berlin: Runge, 1907); Kurd Schwabe, Der Krieg in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 1904-1906 (C. A. Weller, 1907); Friedrich Lange, Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika, Kriegs- und Friedensbilder (Windhuk: Franz Rohloff, 1907); Maria Karow, Wo sonst der Fuss des Kriegers trat: Farmerleben in Südwest nach dem Kriege (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1909).

¹³⁰⁸ Kolonial-Abteilung des Auswärtigen Amts, ed., “Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Der Herero- und Hottentotten-Aufstand,” Deutsches Kolonialblatt. Amtsblatt für die Schutzgebiete in Afrika und in der Südsee 16, no. 14 (1905): 453–57; Else Sonnenberg, Wie es am Waterberg zugeht: Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Hereroaufstandes (Braunschweig: Wollermann, 1906); Helene Nitze von Falkenhausen, Bei den Hereros: Erzählung a. d. Aufständen Südwestafrikas (Berlin-Tempelhof: Verlag der Adler-Bibliothek, 1914).

¹³⁰⁹ “The Herero Rebellion,” Morning Post, January 20, 1904, BArch R 1001/8456, pag. 70.

Argentina has received rather little attention outside of the accounts painting the process as a necessary byproduct of expansion within the national narrative.

6.1.3.2 Conflicts among Europeans

Conflicts among European nation-states arose in the competition over who was the most civilized. One example of how this European competition was carried out in the South Atlantic is the conflict between Boers and the English in South Africa in 1899-1902, known as the South African War or the Boer War, where individual German-speaking volunteers intervened on behalf of the Boers.¹³¹⁰ Commercial tensions meanwhile manifested in the case of the “German peril” in South American countries, including Argentina and Brazil, where English-speakers fueled fear of German-speaking businesses.

Starting in 1899, the Namibian newspaper Windhoeker Anzeiger frequently reported on the South African War.¹³¹¹ On 16 November 1899, the paper published a special edition about the war in South Africa simply entitled “The War.”¹³¹² From the Namibian perspective, this armed conflict playing out in close proximity had such urgency and significance that contemporaries called it

¹³¹⁰ Dederling, “The Ferreira Raid of 1906.”

¹³¹¹ “Telegramme vom Kriegsschauplatz,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 9, 1899, NAN; “Der Krieg,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 16, 1899, NAN; “Vom Kriege,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, December 21, 1899, NAN; “Vom Kriegsschauplatze,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 4, 1900, NAN; “Vom Kriegsschauplatze,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 17, 1900, NAN.

¹³¹² “Der Krieg.”

succinctly “the war,” just as Europeans popularly referred to WWI, and later, WWII as “the war.” In their coverage of “the war” in South Africa, the Windhoeker Anzeiger reported on events taking place in the Orange Free State¹³¹³ and how the declaration of war came about.¹³¹⁴ At times, news had difficulties travelling from the Boer republics to Windhoek. On 17 January 1900 for example the Windhoeker Anzeiger reported that it had not received any news for four weeks.¹³¹⁵

Even before the conflict erupted, German-speakers in Germany had been interested in the South African Boer Republics since their foundation. In 1888, M. Hans Klössel published a book with the intention to inform Germans in Germany about Boers and their lifestyle, to advocate learning from them how to practice colonization in Africa.¹³¹⁶ In 1896, the Colonial Yearbook included an article about the “Boer question” in Southwest Africa.¹³¹⁷ In 1902, E. Müller von Berneck wrote on the Boers in South West Africa in the Colonial Journal (Koloniale Zeitschrift).¹³¹⁸ The “Boer question” referred to the conflict between the newly dominant British imperial government and the long-established Boer ¹³¹³ “Die Entscheidung des Oranjefreistaates,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 16, 1899, sec. Der Krieg, NAN.

¹³¹⁴ “Die Kriegserklärung,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 16, 1899, sec. Der Krieg, NAN.

¹³¹⁵ “Vom Kriegsschauplatze,” January 17, 1900.

¹³¹⁶ M. Hans Klössel, Die südafrikanischen Republiken. Buren-Freistaaten. Geschichte und Land der Buren für Deutschlands Export und Auswanderung. Nach amtlichen Quellen des Reichsamtes des Innern in Berlin bearbeitet (Leipzig: Verlag von Eduard Heinrich Mayer, 1888), iii f.

¹³¹⁷ Pfeil, “Die Boerenfrage in Südwestafrika.”

¹³¹⁸ E. Müller von Berneck, “[Boers in South West Africa],” Koloniale Zeitschrift: Zeitschrift des Deutsch-Nationalen Kolonialvereins, January 9, 1902.

population. In 1902, the New South-West African Settlement Society (Neue Südwest-Afrikanische Siedlungs-Gesellschaft) was founded in order to facilitate the resettlement in the German protectorate of those Boers who did not want to live under British rule.¹³¹⁹ Historian Tilman Dederling of the University of South Africa has argued that the conflict between England and Germany and the Ferreira Raid of 1906 were precursors to the conflict that erupted between Germans and the British in South Africa during WWI, an extension of a larger conflict that ultimately resulted in the dissolution of the German protectorate in South-West Africa.¹³²⁰

German-speakers and Boers frequently found common ground. An example of an individual who decided to join the Boers was Wilhelm Vallentin. He went to South Africa in 1899 and wrote and published extensively about his experiences there: he wrote about the fight for freedom of the Boers,¹³²¹ his own experiences in the South African War,¹³²² the reasons for this war between England and the Boer republics,¹³²³ English warfare in South Africa,¹³²⁴ and the

¹³¹⁹ “Aufruf!”

¹³²⁰ Dederling, “The Ferreira Raid of 1906.”

¹³²¹ Wilhelm Vallentin and Franz Giesebrecht, Der Freiheitskampf der Buren: die Schlacht am Majuba Hill (Berlin: H. Walther, 1899).

¹³²² Wilhelm Vallentin, Meine Kriegserlebnisse bei den Buren: Erinnerungen und Skizzen aus dem südafrikanischen Kriege 1899/1900 (Berlin: Hermann Walther, 1900).

¹³²³ Wilhelm Vallentin, Die Ursachen des Krieges zwischen England und den Burenrepubliken: die politischen Verwickelungen in der Zeit vom Jameson-Einfall bis zum Ausbruch des Krieges; nach authentischen Quellen... (Berlin: Hermann Walther, 1900).

¹³²⁴ Wilhelm Vallentin, Hunnen in Süd-Afrika! Betrachtungen über englische Politik und Kriegsführung (Berlin: Ernst Hofmann & Co., 1902).

war in general.¹³²⁵ After the South African War, he went to South America and advocated for Argentina as the best colonization site for German-speakers.

In 1915, Otto Preusse-Sperber argued that with the outbreak of WWI, economic competition with the United States in South American countries was growing.¹³²⁶ In the same year – and still towards the beginning of the war – C. Offermann reported on German-Argentinean trade relations and Argentinean progress, and he claimed that the war uncovered the true friendship between Germans and Argentineans.¹³²⁷ In 1916, Otto Kasdorf, a professor in Montevideo, discussed the “German peril”:¹³²⁸ in the midst of WWI, Kasdorf published his assessment of the political situation in South America, describing prejudices against German-speakers as mostly having been fueled through English and French cultural dominance.¹³²⁹ He also gave examples of unfortunate descriptions of German history in history books used in Argentina.¹³³⁰ Kasdorf criticized that Paris was marked as center of Europe on the map while Berlin was hardly on the ¹³²⁵ Wilhelm Vallentin, Der Burenkrieg (Wald-Solingen, Leipzig: Rheinisches Verlagshaus, 1903).

¹³²⁶ Otto Preusse-Sperber, “Zur handelspolitischen Eroberung Lateinamerikas,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 3 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915), 62–67.

¹³²⁷ C. Offermann, “Technik und Wirtschaft in Argentinien,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 3 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915), 139–50.

¹³²⁸ Kasdorf, Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika, 14.

¹³²⁹ Ibid., 6.

¹³³⁰ Ibid., 7.

map at all.¹³³¹ He asked whether this ignorance about Germans and Germany was the result of insufficient “Kulturarbeit” (culture work) and lack of support from the German Empire.¹³³² He assessed Germans’ reputation in South America as follows: while merchants’ success was considered surprising,¹³³³ German scientists were unpopular due to the clash between French and German characteristics: in other words, due to the clash between Latin utilitarianism and Germanic idealism.¹³³⁴ At the same time, he identified England as Germanic.¹³³⁵ Kasdorf criticized a declaration by an Argentine intellectual at the world exhibition in San Francisco in 1915, who proclaimed that while Buenos Aires was not Paris, he was waiting for the day when the status “center of civilization” would be transferred from Paris to Buenos Aires as it had been transferred from Rome to Paris in former times.¹³³⁶ Instead of Germany actually attempting to annex territory in South America, Kasdorf pointed out that England and France had attempted several times to annex territory.¹³³⁷ The three countries that preached the “German peril” – England, France, and the United States – were at the same time those countries that actually posed a threat to South America. He made a reference to English people who, as he claimed, do not assimilate, while

¹³³¹ Ibid.

¹³³² Ibid., 8.

¹³³³ Ibid., 9.

¹³³⁴ Ibid.

¹³³⁵ Ibid., 10.

¹³³⁶ Ibid., 11.

¹³³⁷ Ibid., 21.

he lamented that Germans assimilate too fast and easily.¹³³⁸ Meanwhile he posited that South America provided a wide field for the colonial activity of the excessive European population¹³³⁹ and he defined colonists as agriculturalists and farmers.¹³⁴⁰ Concerning the “German peril” in South America, Kasdorf included a list of German publications used in the flyers warning of German annexation plans:¹³⁴¹ Sievers (1903), Südamerika und die deutschen Interessen; Tannenberg, Groß-Deutschland; Riemer, Ein pangermanisches Deutschland; Funke (1903), "Die Besiedlung des östlichen Südamerikas" in: Angewandte Geographie; Lange, Reines Deutschtum; and von Liebert, Ziele der deutschen Kolonial-und Auswanderungspolitik. This list thus included a variety of authors with different agendas. Sievers was a professor of geography, Tannenberg and Riemer were pangermanists, Funke was a journalist and writer, and von Liebert was a general and military writer. Kasdorf added that the changed citizenship law of 1913 was included in the reasons that Germans were viewed as a threat as the new legislation permitted Germans to maintain their citizenship indefinitely and no longer lose it after ten years or more abroad.¹³⁴² Their citizenship status followed them wherever they traveled.

¹³³⁸ Ibid., 22.

¹³³⁹ Ibid., 34.

¹³⁴⁰ Ibid., 64.

¹³⁴¹ Ibid., 17.

¹³⁴² Ibid., 18.

In 1909 already, the British were making plans to attack the German protectorate South-West Africa in case of a world war.¹³⁴³ On 9 July 1915, General Louis Botha proclaimed that from then on, British martial law was valid in the entirety of the South-West protectorate formerly under German control to guard against German aggression.¹³⁴⁴ In August 1915, the newspaper Berliner Tageblatt wrote that 6,000 Germans were fighting against 80,000 British soldiers in South-West Africa.¹³⁴⁵ Cissy Willich, Hertha Brodersen-Manns and Richard Hennig have published their first hand accounts of WWI in Namibia: Brodersen-Manns went from North Germany to Lüderitzbay to work as a secretary before she was deported to South Africa at the beginning of WWI. Hennig fought as a member of the German colonial troops on the German side and he described the events from the British landing in Lüderitzbay in 1914 to the occupation of Windhoek in July 1915.¹³⁴⁶

There were several occasions prior to 1914 when German-speakers in Argentina thought that a (world) war was close to breaking out. In 1898 already,

¹³⁴³ War Office, Armed Forces, Judge Advocate General, and related bodies, Military Policy Regarding German South West Africa - Proposed Plan of Attack - Defence of Cape Colony in the Event of an Attack from German South West Africa (E2/6) WO 106/47, 1909, WO 106/47, TNA.

¹³⁴⁴ Louis Botha, "Bekanntmachung von The Right Honourable General Louis Botha, Oberbefehlshaber der Unionstruppen von Südafrika im Felde," July 9, 1915, NAN ADM 117/3.

¹³⁴⁵ "Von der ersten Beschießung Swakopmunds bis zur Kapitulation der deutschen Truppen," Berliner Tageblatt, August 30, 1915, EZA 5/2916.

¹³⁴⁶ Cissy Willich, Kriegstage in Südwest: Tagebuchblätter aus den Jahren 1914 und 1915 (Oldenburg: Gerhard Stalling, 1916); Hertha Brodersen-Manns, Wie alles anders kam in Afrika: Südwestener Erinnerungen aus den Jahren 1914-15 (Windhoek Namibia: Kuiseb-Verlag, 1991); Richard Hennig, Deutsch-Südwest im Weltkrieg (Leipzig: Brockhaus, 1925).

the Argentinisches Tageblatt published articles titled “War in Sight” and “The Future European War.”¹³⁴⁷ In 1907, the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung reported on “German Preparedness for War” and “The Fight for the South American Market.”¹³⁴⁸

Like Otto Kasdorf, Wilhelm Bürklin claimed that Great Britain practiced economic warfare against the German Empire in South America.¹³⁴⁹ In 1915, he proclaimed that South America would have particular economic importance for Germany due to its neutrality during the war.¹³⁵⁰ While Brazil entered the war on the Allied side in 1917, Argentina remained officially neutral throughout.¹³⁵¹ German-speakers founded the Spanish-language magazine Germania in 1915 in order to inform the larger Argentinean population about the German perspective in a society they considered too influenced by the French and the British.¹³⁵² On ¹³⁴⁷ “Krieg in Sicht,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, April 2, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Der zukünftige europäische Krieg,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, November 9, 1898, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹³⁴⁸ “Deutsche Kriegsbereitschaft,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, May 19, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Der Kampf um den südamerikanischen Markt,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 18, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹³⁴⁹ Wilhelm Bürklin, Süd- und Mittelamerika unter dem Einfluss des Weltkrieges (Göttingen, Berlin: O. Hapke, 1915), 92–97.

¹³⁵⁰ Ibid., iii.

¹³⁵¹ Stefan Rinke, Im Sog der Katastrophe: Lateinamerika und der Erste Weltkrieg (Frankfurt am Main: Campus Verlag, 2015).

¹³⁵² “La Guerra: Brillante hazaña de dos soldados alemanes; Hacen prisioneros a 31 franceses,” Germania 1, no. 7 (September 1, 1915); “La Guerra,” Germania 1, no. 8 (September 16, 1915); “¿A quien incumbe la responsabilidad de la guerra?,” Germania 1, no. 8 (September 16, 1915); “La Guerra,” Germania 1, no. 9 (October 1, 1915); “Víctimas de la guerra,” Germania 1, no. 9 (October 1, 1915); “La Guerra: Organización de etapas,” Germania 1, no. 13 (December 1, 1915);

27 January 1916, the Kaiser's birthday, German-speakers founded the Deutscher Volksbund (German Ethnic Association).¹³⁵³

While Germania just spoke of “the war,” the other German-language newspapers in Buenos Aires used the designations “European War”¹³⁵⁴ and “Great War.”¹³⁵⁵ The newspaper DLPZ was also particularly interested in the Anglo-German colonial rivalry in Africa.¹³⁵⁶ In 1917, Oscar Albert Marti argued in his dissertation at the University of Southern California that the Anglo-German commercial as well as colonial rivalry was the cause of WWI.¹³⁵⁷ Dr. Franz Kühn in Buenos Aires lamented that during the war any scientific connections between Argentina and Germany were cut off.¹³⁵⁸

“La Guerra,” Germania 1, no. 14 (December 16, 1915); Calixto Oyuela, “El cristianismo y la guerra,” Germania 1, no. 14 (December 16, 1915).

¹³⁵³ “Landsleute! [...] Der Ausschuß zur Begründung des Deutschen Volksbundes,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 27, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹³⁵⁴ “Der europäische Krieg,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 6, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Der europäische Krieg. Der deutsche Außenhandel nach dem Kriege,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, February 11, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Der europäische Krieg. Die deutschen Schiffahrtsgesellschaften,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, March 3, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹³⁵⁵ “Der Grosse Krieg. Abbruch der montenegrinisch-österreichischen Verhandlungen. Wiederaufnahme der Feindseligkeiten. - Ein Theatercoup?,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, January 21, 1916, sec. coverage, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹³⁵⁶ “Der europäische Krieg. Englische Vorstöße gegen die deutsche Kolonialpolitik,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, April 1, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Der europäische Krieg. Die Kolonialfrage in Afrika,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, January 29, 1916, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹³⁵⁷ Oscar Albert Marti, The Anglo-German Commercial and Colonial Rivalry as a Cause of the Great War; A Thesis Presented to the Department of History, University of Southern California, Los Angeles (Boston, Stratford Co., 1917).

¹³⁵⁸ Franz Kühn, “Geographischer Bericht aus Argentinien während der Kriegsjahre 1914 bis 1919,” ed. Walter Behrmann, Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, 1919, 442–62.

South Atlantic German-speakers were involved and concerned by various wars and armed conflicts. Overall, all of these conflicts were about “civilization” and the need to demonstrate superiority. The one-hundredth anniversary of WWI has led to much scholarly interest, in publications and conferences. While the South Atlantic was also involved in the conflict originated in Europe, studying the conflicts carried out in the South Atlantic contributes to a less Euro-centered history writing.

6.2 State-centered Colonization Concepts

In 2009, scholars working on Central Europe lamented that “inner colonization” is “a surprisingly under theorized concept, especially since it has existed (and exists) all over the world.”¹³⁵⁹ In the same year, however, legal scholar Markus J. Jahnel published his dissertation on the land rights in the German protectorate South-West Africa.¹³⁶⁰ He starts by discussing the legal situation of internal colonization in Prussia (Binnenkolonisation) and external overseas colonization (äußere Kolonisation in Übersee). Meanwhile, several scholars have recently analyzed “internal colonization,” particularly in Russia¹³⁶¹ and in Japan.¹³⁶² In her 2014

¹³⁵⁹ Robert L. Nelson, “Colonialism in Europe? The Case Against Salt Water,” in Germans, Poland, and Colonial Expansion to the East: 1850 Through the Present, ed. Robert L. Nelson, Studies in European Culture and History (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009), 3.

¹³⁶⁰ Jahnel, Das Bodenrecht in “Neudeutschland über See.”

¹³⁶¹ Willard Sunderland, “Empire without Imperialism? Ambiguities of Colonization in Tsarist Russia,” Ab Imperio 2 (2003): 101–14; Sunderland, Taming the Wild Field; Alexander Etkind, study of German colonial ideology within the German contemporary journal Kolonie und Heimat (Colony and Homeland), French historian Catherine Repussard has also analyzed the use of the concept of colony.¹³⁶³ She specifically looks at how the colonial journal considered all settlements of German-speakers as colonies.¹³⁶⁴ She differentiates between “internal colonization” and “overseas colonization,” and includes all agricultural settlements in Eastern Europe – including the Eastern German provinces as well as the neighboring countries like (today’s) Romania and Russia – in the category “internal colonization,” whereas she distinguishes between “overseas colonization” in South America and in Africa. Building on this model, in the following subsection I analyze contemporary writings that employed the terminology of “internal” and “external colonization.”

Internal Colonization: Russia’s Imperial Experience (Cambridge UK; Malden, MA: Polity, 2011); Steven Sabol, The Touch of Civilization: Comparing American and Russian Internal Colonization (Boulder, Colorado: University Press of Colorado, 2017).

¹³⁶² Conrad, “Die Zivilisierung des ‘Selbst’”; Christopher L. Hill, National History and the World of Nations: Capital, State, and the Rhetoric of History in Japan, France, and the United States (Duke University Press, 2008).

¹³⁶³ Catherine Repussard, “Colonisation intérieure et germanisation,” in Idéologie coloniale et imaginaire mythique: la revue Kolonie und Heimat de 1909 à 1914, Faustus, études germaniques (Strasbourg: Presses universitaires de Strasbourg, 2014), 133–35.

¹³⁶⁴ Repussard, Idéologie coloniale et imaginaire mythique; in particular in Chapter 2: “La lutte entre le bien et le mal.”

6.2.1 Internal Colonization versus External Colonization

In 1930, Gerhard Uhlemann wrote in his dissertation for the Berlin agricultural university. He claimed that the entirety of settlement processes within a state entity correspond to the term “internal colonization.”¹³⁶⁵ In opposition to internal colonization, he defined “external colonization” as the distribution of soil among foreign occupants, the reclamation (Urbarmachung) of soil, and the founding of permanent settlements that gradually turn into urban or state entities.¹³⁶⁶ The terms “internal” and “external colonization” came about in a time when nation-states already played such an important role that they became the decisive factor on whether the colonization took place within or outside of its state borders.

Prior to Uhlemann, historian Alfred Zimmermann (*1859 Frankenstein, Silesia – ?) had written in 1905 about the distinction between internal and external colonization: external colonization specifically referred to the colonization of a territory (previously) under foreign sovereignty, and internal colonization to that of territory within the boundaries of the same state.¹³⁶⁷ Colonization within state borders remained intimately tied to colonization and migration beyond the reach of the nation-state. Writing about internal colonization in the provinces of Brandenburg and Pomerania between 1891 and 1901, H. Metz claimed in 1902 that “internal colonization” was one of the highest duties of any state.¹³⁶⁸ In 1890, Albert Zweck wrote that “internal colonization” in Central European Germany was not successful enough to provide for Germany; instead, foreign countries that needed agricultural workers and colonists should make agreements with Germany that were mutually beneficial for both countries and have Germans practice agricultural colonization in these foreign territories, thereby boosting German foreign trade numbers and helping both countries, as well as the Germans who needed to migrate, to find a better economic existence for themselves.¹³⁶⁹ In 1862, Johann Jakob Sturz postulated that colonization was inherent to German practice: without colonization, Prussia and Austria would not exist.¹³⁷⁰ Sturz did not expect anything of the German governments of his time, but he did believe in the German nation (that is, the German people) needed to be the driving force behind German colonization overseas.

¹³⁶⁵ Gerhard Uhlemann, “Die neuere ländliche Kolonisation der Welt unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Siedlungsformen” (Ph.D., Landwirtschaftliche Hochschule Berlin, 1930), 11.

¹³⁶⁶ Ibid.

¹³⁶⁷ Zimmermann, Kolonialpolitik, 1; “Zimmermann,” in Meyers Großes Konversations-Lexikon, vol. 20 (Leipzig, 1909), 930–32.

Applying this distinction between internal and external colonization to the South Atlantic, one could conclude that the Argentine state practiced internal colonization whereas the German Empire practiced external colonization in Namibia. However, I argue that the lines between external and internal colonization were blurred on both sides of the South Atlantic in the nineteenth century: both the Argentinean and German governments gradually established their territorial sovereignty over the course of the century, with local German-speakers involved in colonization projects in both Argentina and Namibia.

¹³⁶⁸ Metz, Innere Kolonisation in den Provinzen Brandenburg und Pommern 1891 bis 1901: Erfahrungen und Verfahren der Königlichen Generalkommission zu Frankfurt an der Oder, 1.

¹³⁶⁹ Albert Zweck, “Ackerbaukolonien als Bedürfnis der wirtschaftlichen Entwicklung Deutschlands,” Deutsche Kolonialzeitung. Organ der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft, 1895, 8, Nr. 37 edition, 291–92.

¹³⁷⁰ Sturz, Kann und soll ein Neu-Deutschland geschaffen werden und auf welche Weise?, 13.

Before 1900, the term “internal colonization” had two meanings in Central Europe: in addition to “internal agricultural colonization,” a different concept of “internal colonization” circulated that was similar to or coincided with the concept of “internal mission.” In the first half of the nineteenth century, ideas of colonization in the German lands were intertwined with “civilization,” “morality,” and “social conduct.” “Internal colonization” as synonymous to “internal mission” thus referred to the intention of helping the poor in Germany. Workers’ colonies (Arbeiterkolonien) were houses and institutions for poor and unemployed workers with the aim of making them sedentary after 1900. These were inspired by similar practices in England and Scotland. In the English case, historian Harald Fischer-Tiné has called this phenomenon an “internal civilizing mission.”¹³⁷¹

In the 1840s, German-speaking intellectuals in Europe had two competing visions of how German workers should be civilized. While both of these visions saw the answer in colonization, one assumed that German workers would become civilized through the work in agricultural colonies abroad – thus in “external ¹³⁷¹ Harald Fischer-Tiné, “Global Civil Society and the Forces of Empire: The Salvation Army, British Imperialism, and the ‘Prehistory’ of NGOs (Ca. 1880-1920),” in Competing Visions of World Order Global Moments and Movements, 1880s-1930s, ed. Sebastian Conrad and Dominic Sachsenmaier, The Palgrave Series in Transnational History (New York: Palgrave, 2007), 29–67; Fischer-Tiné, “Englands interne Zivilisierungsmission. Arbeitshäuser für Europäer im kolonialen Indien (ca. 1860-1914).”

(agricultural) colonization,” while the other favored the “inner colonization”: the improvement of worker’s living conditions within the German lands. In 1846, the social reformer Victor Aimé Huber wrote, “The entire world demands and expects a powerful development of German industry, of German world trade, dreams of German sea power and German colonies. All of this is good and well; but all of this should be possible to achieve without a simultaneous development of helotism or, to stay with the common expression, the proletariat? Nobody will claim that seriously.”¹³⁷² Huber argued for a simultaneous colonization and improvement of the workers within Germany. “In our plan, inner mission will in fact go hand in hand with inner colonization. Yes, inner colonization will be really the field of our inner mission in several of its most important branches, and we think of both of them as mutually compulsive postulates (sich gegenseitig zwingende Postulate).”¹³⁷³ Huber even went so far as to say that in this context the words “colony” and “association” were synonyms.¹³⁷⁴ Huber himself was engaged in transferring the idea of housing cooperatives as part of inner colonization from the United Kingdom to German lands.¹³⁷⁵ A similar language and imagery of missionizing to workers within one's own country was used in the United Kingdom in the 1890s.¹³⁷⁶

¹³⁷² Victor Aimé Huber, “Ueber innere Colonisation,” Janus: Jahrbücher deutscher Gesinnung, Bildung und That 7–8 (1846): 196: “Alle Welt verlangt und erwartet eine mächtige Entwicklung der deutschen Industrie, des deutschen Welthandels, träumt von deutscher Seemacht und deutschen Colonien. Das Alles ist gut und schön; aber das Alles sollte zu erlange sein ohne eine Hand in Hand gehende Entwicklung des Helotismus oder um bei dem hergebrachten Ausdruck zu bleiben, des Proletariats? Niemand wird das im Ernst behaupten. [...]” .

¹³⁷³ Ibid., 215–16.

¹³⁷⁴ “Damit haben wir nun schon angedeutet, daß eine solche Gruppe, Association, Colonie oder wie man das nennen will, nicht ohne Vorsteher, Repräsentanten, Geschäftsführer, Beamte irgend einer Art mit andern Worte nicht ohne eine Verfassung denkbar ist.” [...] “Nach diesen und ähnlichen verschiedenen Umständen wird sich dann auch bestimmen lassen: ob und wiefern eine solche Colonie oder Association vom Staat, vom Gesetz als Corporation, als moralische Person anzuerkennen ist.” Ibid., 217.

In his first text from 1848 addressing German colonization, Wilhelm Roscher, who later made himself a name as the first German national economist,¹³⁷⁷ described the evils of overpopulation and urban and moral decay in German lands: "Here, colonization can have the most favorable consequences for the individual migrant. Those with a fit body, who pray and work, will hardly perish in a young agricultural colony. In a wilderness, that must be made reclaimed, most of our proletarian sins must go away of its own volition. There is no occasion for envy and thievery, and little occasion for drinking, gambling, lechery [and] fighting; one has to work hard and hard work has immediate compensation. The unbound opportunity to better one's situation is the best motivation for frugality (Sparsamkeit)."¹³⁷⁸

¹³⁷⁵ Thomas Adam, Intercultural Transfers and the Making of the Modern World, 1800-2000: Sources and Contexts (Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire; New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012), 14 ff.

¹³⁷⁶ Fischer-Tiné, "Englands interne Zivilisierungsmission. Arbeitshäuser für Europäer im kolonialen Indien (ca. 1860-1914)"; Fischer-Tiné, "Global Civil Society and the Forces of Empire: The Salvation Army, British Imperialism, and the 'Prehistory' of NGOs (Ca. 1880-1920)."

¹³⁷⁷ Wilhelm Roscher, Kolonien, Kolonialpolitik und Auswanderung, Second Edition (Leipzig, Heidelberg: C.F. Winter, 1856); Roscher, Geschichte der National-Oekonomik in Deutschland; Wilhelm Roscher, Principles of Political Economy, trans. John J. Lalor, Translation, vol. 1 and 2, The Evolution of Capitalism (New York: Henry Holt & Co. [Arno Press], 1878); Wilhelm Roscher and Robert Jannasch, Kolonien, Kolonialpolitik und Auswanderung (Leipzig: C.F. Winter, 1885).

¹³⁷⁸ [own translation] Roscher, "Nationalökonomische Ansichten über die deutsche Auswanderung," 100.

Ernst Wilhelm Johann Gaebler from the Berlin Association for the Centralization of German Migration and Colonization claimed in 1850 that “internal colonization” (Kolonisation im Inlande) was an important issue to be tackled in order to preserve capital and labor for Germany.¹³⁷⁹ Gaebler defined colonization not as the acquisition of colonies as undertaken by European sea powers, but as “the regulated, communal settlement of Germans in countries where their national development and independence, even if under foreign sovereignty, is possible and assured.”¹³⁸⁰ In 1851, Samuel Gottfried Kerst spoke of “internal colonizations” (Colonisationen im Innern) by which he meant subduing land for agricultural use in Eastern Provinces such as Posen, Pommern, and Prussia.¹³⁸¹ He saw emigration as an evil which “internal colonization” should remedy. This movement of “internal colonization” as the resettlement of the “interior,” the countryside in Germany, endured until WWI. It proved to be an alternative vision to industrial society. In 1887, Max von Koschinsky wrote of the colonization of Prussia and other German lands as the pre-history of German colonization.¹³⁸² In 1893, Max Sering published a study on “internal colonization” in eastern Germany where he discussed workers’ settlements (Arbeiter-Ansiedlungen), ¹³⁷⁹ Gaebler, Deutsche Auswanderung und Kolonisation, 11.

¹³⁸⁰ Ibid., 13.

¹³⁸¹ Kerst, Die Länder am Uruguay, 2.

¹³⁸² Koschitzky, Deutsche Colonialgeschichte.

peasant colonies (Bauernkolonien), and state colonization projects.¹³⁸³ Citing Sering, H. Metz wrote in 1902 that “internal colonization” referred to the settling of agricultural workers (Selbsthaftmachung von Landarbeitern).¹³⁸⁴ In his own words, he spoke of the “formation of a productive agricultural community” (“Bildung einer leistungsfähigen Landgemeinde”).¹³⁸⁵

In 1907, Martin Belgard studied “internal colonization” in Prussia with regards to a settlement bank and state and private colonies.¹³⁸⁶ In addition to his analysis of “internal colonization” in Germany, Alfred Brenning also included a brief comparison with other European countries in 1909.¹³⁸⁷ Franz Jesser also specifically studied “internal colonization” in Sudetenland in 1913.¹³⁸⁸

Contrary to the United States, which also practiced internal colonization but avoided using the term, Argentinean scholars embraced the concept.¹³⁸⁹ Colonization in Argentina was closely linked to ideas of conquest, the frontier, ¹³⁸³ Max Sering, Die innere Kolonisation im östlichen Deutschland (Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1893).

¹³⁸⁴ H. Metz, Innere Kolonisation in den Provinzen Brandenburg und Pommern 1891 bis 1901: Erfahrungen und Verfahren der Königlichen Generalkommission zu Frankfurt an der Oder (Berlin: Verlangsbuchhandlung Paul Parey, 1902), 2.

¹³⁸⁵ Ibid., 6.

¹³⁸⁶ Martin Belgard, Parzellierung und innere Kolonisation in den 6 östlichen Provinzen Preußens, 1875-1906 (Leipzig: Verlag von Duncker & Humblot, 1907).

¹³⁸⁷ Alfred Brenning, Innere Kolonisation, Aus Natur Und Geisteswelt: Sammlung Wissenschaftlich-Gemeinverständlicher Darstellungen 261 (Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1909).

¹³⁸⁸ Franz Jesser, Innere Kolonisation in den Sudetenländern: Mit einem Nachwort (Deutsche soziale Rundschau, 1913).

¹³⁸⁹ Steven Sabol, “Internal Colonization,” in “The Touch of Civilization”: Comparing American and Russian Internal Colonization (Boulder, Colorado: University Press of Colorado, 2017), 171–204.

and the elimination of indigenous people. Numerous Argentinean scholars theorized the role of Argentina among colonial powers, as only civilized nations could become colonial powers. Migration was also tied to colonization: Argentinean elites wanted (Northern) Europeans to cultivate and improve the land and the nation. The Argentinean presidents Rivadavia, Sarmiento, and Roca appealed to German-speakers to come to Argentina and help with this civilizing colonization project. But intellectuals like Gomez Langenheim, Frutos, Molinas, Quesada, and others were also implicated in this project.

In 1895, Antonio Gomez Langenheim defended his dissertation at the Faculty of Law and Social Sciences of the Universidad Nacional of Buenos Aires. In the preface, he wrote, “Doing propaganda in favor of the colonization of the Republic, establishing a system of colonies adapted to the territory, which responds to the physical and social necessities, this is the aim that our legislation concerning colonies should suggest.”¹³⁹⁰ For this reason, he suggested studying colonization, and how various peoples had practiced it, in order to understand its utility for his own country, Argentina.¹³⁹¹ He continued further with definitions: “Colonization is simply the action and the effect of colonizing, that is to say, to form or establish colonies in a country.”¹³⁹² He referred back to Greek and Latin definitions of the term “colony”: “The word colonia comes from Greek [...] which signifies separation of the home, departure of the home country, abandonment of the home, and the Latin noun colonia derived from the verb colere (to cultivate), which signifies plantation, cultivation.”¹³⁹³ Gomez Langenheim then also took a more recent definition from the French new dictionary of political economy: “An establishment founded by citizens of one country outside of the current limits of its fatherland, on a territory not yet appropriated or designated to become their new fatherland in their opinion.”¹³⁹⁴ He then argued that this definition only referred to external colonization (colonización exterior), outside of the territorial limits of the colonizing country, which was a definition that remained incomplete in his opinion as it did not include the colonization carried out by a country within its own boundaries, be it done with indigenous or foreign populations.¹³⁹⁵ Gomez Langenheim thus distinguished between two types of colonization: internal and external ¹³⁹² Ibid., 13; “Colonización es simplemente la acción y efecto de colonizar, es decir, de formar ó establecer colonias en un país.”

¹³⁹⁰ Antonio Gomez Langenheim, Colonización (Buenos Aires: Martín Biedma, 1895), 10; “Hacer propaganda en favor de la colonización de la República, establecer un sistema de colonias adecuado al territorio y que responda á las necesidades físicas y sociales, tal es el fin que debe proponerse nuestra legislación en materias de colonias.”

¹³⁹¹ Ibid., 11; “En vista de estas consideraciones, creo oportuno, al tratar de la colonización, estudiar su origen en los diversos pueblos, para después comprenderla en nuestro país.”

¹³⁹³ Ibid.; “La palabra colonia viene del griego [...] que significa separación de morada, partida del país natal, abandono de la casa, y del sustantivo latino colonia derivado del verbo colere, (cultivar) que significa propiamente plantación, cultivo.”

¹³⁹⁴ Ibid., 13–14; “Le Nouveau dict. d’Econ. polit. define la colonia: un establecimiento fundado por ciudadanos de un país, fuera de los límites actuales de su patria, en un territorio, aun no apropiado, y destinado á llegar á ser en su opinión su nueva patria.”

¹³⁹⁵ Ibid., 14; “Esta definición se refiere á la colonización exterior ó fuera de los límites territoriales del país colonizante, y por tanto no á nuestro sentir complete, por cuanto no comprende la colonización efectuada por un país dentro de sus propios limites, sea con elementos de población indígena ó extranjera.”

colonization, just like scholars writing in Germany did. He wrote specifically that countries with vast territories and small populations practiced internal colonization, as was (supposedly) the case for Argentina.¹³⁹⁶

Gomez Langenheim then went on to discuss colonization as it had been practiced by Phoenicians, Greeks, Romans, in the Middle Ages, and by the Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch, Danes, Swedes, British, and French.¹³⁹⁷ In a manner similar to the German-speaking theorists of internal colonization and internal mission, Gomez Langenheim also wrote that colonization would help Argentina free itself from “pitfalls, the storms that agitated contemporary societies, named strikes, anarchism, etc.”¹³⁹⁸

In 1902, Arturo Frutos defended his dissertation about Argentinean colonization at the National University of Buenos Aires in the faculty of law and social sciences.¹³⁹⁹ While Gomez put emphasis on the fact that colonization had ¹³⁹⁶ Ibid., 16; “[...] distinguiéndonos además dos clases de colonización que podríamos diferenciar así: 1° La que se efectúa dentro de los límites territoriales del país colonizante ó sea interior. 2° La que se efectúa fuera de los límites territoriales del país colonizante, es decir, en un territorio más ó menos distante de la nación que lo hizo suyo y que podríamos llamar exterior. Esta última es propia de los países de escaso territorio y que buscan nuevas tierras donde extender su poderío. La primera, por el contrario, propia más bien de los países que gozan de extenso territorio y de reducida población, es precisamente la que nos interesa y de la que especialmente vamos á tratar.”

¹³⁹⁷ Ibid., 17–58.

¹³⁹⁸ Ibid., 124; “Colonizar un territorio, en general, es hacerlo aumentar de valor, es hacerlo producir y enriquecer, y en tal concepto cuanto más produzca y valga nuestro suelo, tanto más ricos y poderosos seremos, tanto más libres nos veremos de las asechanzas de las naciones limítrofes, y sobre todo, de esas tempestades que agitan el seno de las sociedades, denominadas huelgas, anarquismo, etc.”.

¹³⁹⁹ Arturo R. Frutos, La Colonización Argentina (Buenos Aires: Imprenta de E. S. Arbol y M. Pereyra Acosta, 1902).

been practiced over the entire course of human history, Frutos distinguished between old and modern colonization and linked the latter to science and its advancements. This is something we see in the German case as well: a scientific approach to colonization, purporting to scientifically determine the best locations for colonization and settlement, discussed below. In 1914, E. W. Schmidt spoke of “internal colonization” in Argentina.¹⁴⁰⁰ He described a system of lend-lease: people arrived in Argentina as “immigrants” and then, if they settled the land, they became lease-holding “colonists.”¹⁴⁰¹ Schmidt described the difficult relationship between landowners and leaseholders: the latter reverted to a strike in 1912 in order to obtain a reduction in high lease prices.¹⁴⁰²

There were also prominent Argentineans who opposed looking for colonial inspiration in European models. In 1901 for example, lawyer Bernardo de Irigoyen (*1822 – 1906), then governor of Buenos Aires, wrote that he disagreed with those scholars postulating that Argentina should colonize as European powers had. He argued that the Argentine situation was too distinct in cause, intent, and effect from European colonization and that Argentina should continue developing its own colonization system.¹⁴⁰³

¹⁴⁰⁰ Schmidt, “Entwicklungstendenzen der argentinischen Landwirtschaft,” 242.

¹⁴⁰¹ Ibid., 244.

¹⁴⁰² Ibid., 245.

¹⁴⁰³ Bernardo de Irigoyen, Colonización é Inmigración en la República Argentina: Datos y antecedentes (La Plata: Talleres de Publicaciones del Museo, 1901), 4; “La colonización europea, que algunos estudian sosteniendo que debemos aplicar sus hechos á nuestro país, ha sido antes, y

For Namibia, I have not found any contemporary discussions concerning formal or informal colonization. However, I have found differing perspectives on the legal status of the protectorate. In 1906, Hermann Hesse published an article about the land question and the rightfulness of the concessions in the German protectorate South-West Africa.¹⁴⁰⁴

The 1904 handbook for Germans abroad had still included the protectorate German South-West Africa under “foreign countries.”¹⁴⁰⁵ In 1908, Paul Erich Hinz dealt with the question of whether the protectorate was to be considered domestic (Inland) or foreign (Ausland) in his dissertation at the University of Erlangen.¹⁴⁰⁶ He discussed various authors’ arguments and theories, and concluded that the protectorates had to be considered part of the “homeland.” By 1923, Namibia was listed under foreign territories again, however, it was still defined as a settlement colony.¹⁴⁰⁷ es actualmente, diversa de la sudamericana. Causa, propósitos, efectos, todo es distinto, y nos exponemos á incurrir en errors si tomamos, como bases de nuestro sistema, las que han servido á los gobiernos europeos.”

¹⁴⁰⁴ Hermann Hesse, Die Landfrage und die Frage der Rechtsgültigkeit der Konzessionen in Südwestafrika: ein Beitrag zur wirtschaftlichen und finanziellen Entwicklung des Schutzgebietes (Jena: Hermann Costenoble, 1906).

¹⁴⁰⁵ Wilhelm Dibelius and Gustav Lenz, eds., Handbuch des Deutschtums im Auslande (Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1904), 104–5.

¹⁴⁰⁶ Paul Erich Hinz, Die Rechtsbegriffe “Inland” und “Ausland” in Anwendung auf die deutschen Schutzgebiete (Borna-Leipzig: R. Noske, 1908).

¹⁴⁰⁷ Friedrich Wilhelm Mohr and Walter von Hauff, eds., Deutsche im Ausland; Im Auftrage des Reichswanderungsamtes und in Verbindung mit dem Verein für das Deutschtum im Ausland (Breslau: F. Hirt, 1923), 239–47; “Deutsch-Südwestafrika, die Siedlungskolonie.”

During the missionary era, prior to 1884, German-speakers practiced a form of agricultural colonization, though the status of state sovereignty of the territory remained unclear. While the British attempted to claim the land north of Orange River and east of Walvisbay, the Rhenish missionaries raised a Prussian flag over that territory.¹⁴⁰⁸ During the time of the German protectorate, the legal status of the colony was debated, but one could claim that it practiced a form of “internal colonization” as it was treated as German territory. Then, under South African control, German-speakers participated then in “internal colonization” for South Africa.

6.2.2 State Colonization versus Private Colonization

In the previous section, we looked at internal versus external colonization. While this distinction operates within the framework of nation-states, the actors who carried out colonization did not necessarily have to be state actors. Thus contemporaries distinguished between “state colonization” and “private colonization.” Alternative terms used were also “official” colonization versus “spontaneous” colonization. State colonization did not necessarily mean formally acquiring overseas territory. For many, it just meant state involvement in colonization and migration projects in the form of financial or consular support.

¹⁴⁰⁸ Vedder, Das alte Südwestafrika, 240; “Mit der preussischen, englischen und norwegischen Flagge geschmückt traf hochgemut der Norweger Knudsen 1842 in Bethanien ein.”

In 1849, Alexander von Bülow defined “migration” as the mere movement of people leaving their home country, while he defined “colonization” as organizing migrants at their destination and making them useful for the home country; for him, colonization was thus “conquest through work and intelligence.”¹⁴⁰⁹ While he did not want to migrate himself, he wanted to study and “learn to colonize” (“colonisieren lernen”).¹⁴¹⁰ He chose as his example Belgium, since Belgium did not have its own sovereign territories abroad in 1849, but witnessed large migration flows leaving from Antwerp.¹⁴¹¹ In the history of colonization, Bülow distinguished between (1) old, (2) medieval, or new, and (3) the newest waves of colonization.¹⁴¹²

In 1850, Ernst Wilhelm Johann Gaebler published the first report of the Berlin Association for the Centralization of German Emigration and Colonization in Berlin in 1850, which had been founded in 1849 with Alexander von Bülow as its first president.¹⁴¹³ Gaebler also spoke of “new colonization”: earlier colonization systems considered maintaining sovereignty as the main aim; it was a system of conquest and exploitation. He claimed that this system was now outdated as it had founded in what he called “the insufficient national-economic ¹⁴⁰⁹ Alexander von Bülow, Auswanderung und Colonisation im Interesse des deutschen Handels (E.S. Mittler & Sohn, 1849), viii.

¹⁴¹⁰ Ibid.

¹⁴¹¹ Ibid., ix.

¹⁴¹² Ibid., 97.

¹⁴¹³ Gaebler, Deutsche Auswanderung und Kolonisation.

formation (Bildung) of the past century, which has now proved to be completely false.”¹⁴¹⁴ He claimed that even England had now recognized the costliness of this system and was working towards giving its colonial possessions independence. Gaebler identified South America as the best location for German settlement.¹⁴¹⁵ He stated that regulated and (German) state-aided colonization projects in foreign territories were what Germans should aim for. He cited North America as the best example on how to subject uninhabited areas to civilization, and he claimed that the state-run model could easily be transferred to a colonization-society-run (Kolonisations-Gesellschaft) model. Migrants who left Germany and stayed together in the new land would then become colonists and would create a new market for German goods. He claimed that England was already practicing this “new type of colonization”: colonization through the creation of new markets abroad instead of territorial acquisitions.¹⁴¹⁶ Gaebler added that instead of claiming sovereignty over German colonies abroad, Germany – or Prussia – should set up protection and defense treaties with the states in which these German colonies were located, and he pointed here particularly to the South American countries trying to escape British and North American influence. In 1862, Johann Jakob Sturz highlighted the importance of state involvement in ¹⁴¹⁴ Ibid., 14.

¹⁴¹⁵ Ibid., 21.

¹⁴¹⁶ Ibid., 35–37.

overseas colonization projects in order to protect German migrants from abuse, as for example in Brazil after the end of slavery¹⁴¹⁷ or during the U.S. Civil War.¹⁴¹⁸

While in Argentina, colonization started out as a state project that turned more and more into private initiatives over the course of the nineteenth century, the opposite occurred in Namibia, where settling the land was carried out as private endeavor at first, which was then taken over more and more by the state, especially with Dernburg after 1907. In Argentina, agricultural colonization was mainly state-organized and controlled throughout the nineteenth century. The fourth part of Antonio Gomez Langenheim's 1895 dissertation was dedicated to the Argentinean Republic.¹⁴¹⁹ In his study of colonization in Argentina, he distinguished between two types: land under control of the provinces and land under control of the federal (national) government.¹⁴²⁰ He provided an in-depth illustration of the history of state action concerning colonization in Argentina

¹⁴¹⁷ Johann Jakob Sturz, Die Krisis der Deutschen Auswanderung und ihre Benützung für Jetzt und Immer: Ein Hebel für deutsche Schifffahrt, deutschen Handel, deutsche Rhederei und Gewerbe, zur deutschen Flotte, und eine Gewährleistung für deutsche Einigung, Kräftigung und Selbstachtung diesseits und jenseits des Weltmeers (Berlin: Hicketier, 1862), 4 f.

¹⁴¹⁸ Sturz, Kann und soll ein Neu-Deutschland geschaffen werden und auf welche Weise?, 3 ff.

¹⁴¹⁹ Gomez Langenheim, Colonización, 69.

¹⁴²⁰ Ibid., 72; "El estudio de la colonización en la República Argentina, puede dividirse en dos partes: la colonización de tierras de propiedad provincial, es decir, situada dentro de los límites territoriales de las provincias que componen la Confederación, y por la cual deben velar especialmente los gobiernos de provincia; segundo: la colonización de tierras de propiedad nacional, que comprende los nueve grandes territorios nacionales anexos á la Confederación, la cual es más importante aún por cuanto abarca extensas regiones casi inhabitadas y linderas en su mayor parte con las naciones vecinas."

starting in 1813.¹⁴²¹ About the relation between the role of the state and of individuals he wrote that while the state was a powerful agent that could manifest itself directly and indirectly, private or individual action from entities such as companies or missionaries also played an important role in (agricultural) colonization.¹⁴²² He claimed that while private action from individuals or colonization companies was important, it should always act in accordance with, and with the help of, the Argentinean state.¹⁴²³ In 1901, by contrast, Bernardo de Irigoyen claimed that the Argentinean federal government had to administer colonization, and thus practice “official colonization” because private colonization companies could not be counted on.¹⁴²⁴

Just as some contemporary scholars distinguished between official colonies and spontaneous colonies,¹⁴²⁵ Arturo Frutos distinguished between “official migration” (inmigración oficial) and “spontaneous migration”

¹⁴²¹ Ibid., 130–51.

¹⁴²² Ibid., 129; “Por otra parte, sabemos que entre los medios de cumplir la gran obra de la colonización, la acción del Estado es un agente poderoso que puede manifestarse por diversos medios directos é indirectos. // Debemos advertir, sin embargo, que además de la acción del Estado, existen otras fuerzas importantes que cooperan al desarrollo de la colonización, adquiriendo en determinadas circunstancias un rol primordial; entre estas fuerzas se cuenta la acción privada ó individual – la de las grandes compañías, la de los misioneros religiosos, etc.”

¹⁴²³ Ibid., 151.

¹⁴²⁴ Irigoyen, Colonización é Inmigración en la República Argentina: Datos y antecedentes, 5–6; “Después de veinticinco años, persist en esa opinion: la colonización debe llevarse [...] oficialmente, porque no debemos esperar, al presente, que empresas particulares se lancen á esas especulaciones. No existen, entre nosotros, capitals dispuestos para ellas, y si algún sindicato ó empresa extranjera las propone, sera pidiendo centenares de leguas que no debemos conceder por diversas consideraciones. Esos negocios, esas empresas, en la forma que se proponen, solo darán dificultades y cuestiones ingratas.”

¹⁴²⁵ Henri Hauser used the term “imperial colonies” and “spontaneous colonies,” see Hauser, Colonies allemandes impériales et spontanées.

(inmigración espontánea) in 1902.¹⁴²⁶ Official migration was thus state-regulated and -sponsored, whereas spontaneous migration occurred without any state intervention. He also discussed the role of the Argentinean state in migration and colonization. He started his discussion of state involvement in the “epoca colonial,” when the territory was part of the Spanish Empire.¹⁴²⁷ Frutos complicated the issue of “state sovereignty” even further by introducing the state and federal levels of control. He was concerned with land distribution (distribución de tierras) and the question of who had actual sovereignty over the land: the states (las provincias) or the federal government (el gobierno nacional).¹⁴²⁸ He dedicated one section of his dissertation to “the Colonies of the Argentinean Republic: their past – their present and their future.”¹⁴²⁹ Santa Fe was the first province with colonization and Entre Rios the second.¹⁴³⁰ Colonization was practiced in Patagonia since 1865 by Welsh families and the Conquista de la Pampa Central took place in 1879.¹⁴³¹ According to Frutos, Federal State involvement meant official colonization (colonización oficial) or state colonization and an example of an “official colony” (colonia oficial) was the ¹⁴²⁶ Frutos, La Colonización Argentina, 24.

¹⁴²⁷ Ibid., 31.

¹⁴²⁸ Ibid., 38.

¹⁴²⁹ Ibid., 39ff.; “Las colonias de la República Argentina: su pasado – su presente y su porvenir.”

¹⁴³⁰ Ibid., 65.

¹⁴³¹ Ibid., 66–68.

colonia General Roca in Rio Negro.¹⁴³² The choice of terminology of “official colony” is very interesting here, especially in the context of European colonialism, where only overseas colonies under sovereignty of a European state were called that. Another curious part of his work was the section on “nationalizing the colonies”: he argued that the colonies had to be nationalized in order to apply Argentinean legislation so that within Argentinean borders, the newly established colonies would not be English, German, Italian, Russian, etc. but preeminently Argentinean.¹⁴³³

In 1912, Georg Hiller discussed in detail Argentinean state colonization policies.¹⁴³⁴ He dated the beginning of Argentinean migration policies (Einwanderungspolitik) only to the end of Rosas’s reign in 1852. However in the 1820s, President Rivadavia had already laid out the first attempts at attracting more immigrants for colonization. Citing “gobernar es poblar” (“to govern is to populate,” Gustav Paul Bener claimed in 1936 that it was the Argentinean federal ¹⁴³² Ibid., 69–70.

¹⁴³³ Ibid., 107; “Nacionalizar las colonias: he ahí la obra que desde ya reclamamos á nuestras leyes; que en adelante y donde quiera que se forme dentro de las fronteras de nuestra patria, la nueva colonia, no sea ni inglesa, ni alemana, ni italiana, ni rusa, sino que, ab initis, sea genuina y eminentemente argentina!”

¹⁴³⁴ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien. This author is treated more in detail in chapter 9 on state involvement.

state who considered it its main objective to organize and regulate colonization.¹⁴³⁵

As far as private colonization projects in Argentina were concerned, German-speakers were quite involved in these endeavors, but many of them remained unfinished ventures. For example, the German shipping company Norddeutscher Lloyd wanted to buy land from Ernesto Tornquist in 1905.¹⁴³⁶ It could not buy the land itself, but planned to found a colonization society that would buy and administer the land for German-speaking settlers in 1905; the Argentinean firm from Tornquist would instead buy land from the Argentinean government and even the German consul Waldthausen was informed about this project.¹⁴³⁷ The Norddeutscher Lloyd asked for permission and support from the German foreign office for this private German-speaking colonization project in Argentina in 1905.¹⁴³⁸

Hugo Stroeder's colonization company was another example of private colonization carried out in Argentina.¹⁴³⁹ In 1908, Luis D. Rodriguez also ¹⁴³⁵ Bener attributed the quote to Sarmiento, but it was the philosopher Juan Bautista Alberdi who coined that phrase. Gustav Paul Bener, Landwirtschaftliche Kolonisation in Süd-Amerika (Chur, Switzerland: Bischofsberger & Co., 1936), 9.

¹⁴³⁶ "Direktion des Norddeutschen Lloyd, Bremen to Wirklicher Geheimer Legationsrat im Auswärtigen Amt Herr Goetsch, Berlin."

¹⁴³⁷ Föhr, "Julius Föhr to Norddeutscher Lloyd Bremen."

¹⁴³⁸ "Norddeutscher Lloyd to Kaiserlich Auswärtiges Amt."

¹⁴³⁹ Alemann, Station und Emporio Stroeder. Stroeder has been further treated in Part II.

mentioned a Sociedad Germano-Argentina de Colonización.¹⁴⁴⁰ Otto Kasdorf favored the private initiative of German trade and German industry in South America.¹⁴⁴¹ As late as 1931, the Eldorado company was active in practicing private colonization in northern Argentina.¹⁴⁴²

In Namibia, the missionary colonies under Carl Hugo Hahn in the 1860s were private projects carried out with the help of the Rhenish missionary society and a company set up specifically for this purpose.¹⁴⁴³ Heinrich Vedder labeled Hahn's activities "colonization" in his 1934 publication, although according to Guenter Kurt Anton, colonization in the German South-West Africa protectorate only started in 1892.¹⁴⁴⁴ The journal Windhoeker Anzeiger mentioned agricultural colonies in German South-West Africa in October 1899.¹⁴⁴⁵ In 1900, French historian and economist Henri Hauser distinguished between large-scale (grande) and small-scale (petite) colonization in the German protectorate South-West Africa.¹⁴⁴⁶ Large-scale colonization was operated by concession companies (that we discussed in part II), whereas small-scale colonization was carried out by ¹⁴⁴⁰ Luis D. Rodriguez, "La Argentina": Descripción de la Capital Federal, Provincias y Territorios Nacionales. Estadística comercial. Productos. Industrias en explotación. Valor de terrenos de cultivos y destinados a la ganadería en la República, basado en las últimas ventas (Buenos Aires: M. Rodriguez Giles, 1908).

¹⁴⁴¹ Kasdorf, Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika, 78.

¹⁴⁴² Compañía Eldorado, Leben und Treiben in Eldorado, Misiones-Argentinien.

¹⁴⁴³ Vedder, Das alte Südwestafrika, 493–95.

¹⁴⁴⁴ Anton, Die Siedlungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 3.

¹⁴⁴⁵ "Hatsamas."

¹⁴⁴⁶ Hauser, Colonies allemandes impériales et spontanées, 51 ff.

individuals disposing of capital between ten and fifteen thousand marks, according to Hauser.

In his travel account from 1887, published in 1898, August Boshart claimed that due to the desert-like conditions in Namibia, affluent Germans would not settle there and the poorer people interested in migrating there would need financial support in the beginning, either from the German state or from well-off companies.¹⁴⁴⁷ Boshart also advocated for encouraging Germans-speakers to choose Namibia over other destinations by paying their passage and facilitating their initial settlement.¹⁴⁴⁸ Much has been written about the financial help the German government started to provide to German women in order to maintain the “whiteness” and “German-ness” of settlers.¹⁴⁴⁹

The Resolution IX of the 1902 German Colonial Congress called for the strengthening of German settlement efforts in the German protectorate South-West Africa through settlement associations and companies, but it particularly called for more imperial government aid.¹⁴⁵⁰ More settlers came after the ¹⁴⁴⁷ August Boshart, Zehn Jahre afrikanischen Lebens (Leipzig: Wigand, 1898), 180.

¹⁴⁴⁸ Ibid., 187.

¹⁴⁴⁹ See Wildenthal, German Women for Empire.

¹⁴⁵⁰ See Resolution IX., in Deutscher Kolonialkongress, Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, 844–849. “Resolution IX. // [...] Der Deutsche Kolonialkongress 1902 hält die planmässige Besiedelung von Deutsch-Südwestafrika für eine unserer wichtigsten und dringlichsten Kolonialaufgaben. // Er ist der Ansicht, dass die Kräfte und Mittel der Siedelungsgesellschaften und die sonstige private Siedelungstätigkeit für die Lösung dieser Aufgabe unzureichend sind, und er hält es für dringend notwendig, dass das Reich für die Beförderung der Besiedelung von Deutsch-Südwestafrika erheblich grössere Mittel aufwende als bisher. // Soweit das Land zur Zeit für die Besiedelung geeignet ist, ist dieselbe, namentlich zum

Namibian War (1904-1907). A 1905 questionnaire from the German Colonial Office on settler conditions in the protectorate South-West Africa included a subsection on “colonization,” most likely meaning agricultural colonization.¹⁴⁵¹

While contemporary scholar Alfred Zimmermann studied colonial policies – particularly of the British Empire – and observed a change in the British system towards trade relations,¹⁴⁵² Paul Dehn was a contemporary critic of Zimmermann’s position.¹⁴⁵³ He was in favor of “official colonies.” Dehn argued that Germany needed its own colonies, because England only concluded reliable trade agreements with its former colonies and the United States of America was working on a Pan-American Union with special privileges to control South American markets.¹⁴⁵⁴ Dehn claimed that trade agreements were not strong or reliable enough for Germany and that it should follow France’s example and expand a formal colonial empire. He also argued that German South-West Africa

Zwecke der Grossviehzucht, durch Gewährung von Begünstigungen, welche die Unternehmungen zu fördern geeignet sind zu beschleunigen. // Um es weiterhin für die Aufnahme einer grösseren Zahl von neuen Ansiedlern genügend vorzubereiten, ist die Schaffung zahlreicher Brunnen und kleinerer Staudämme und an geeigneten Punkten die Anlage grösserer Stauwerke sofort in die Wege zu leiten. // Die Regierung möge, damit die einmal im Gange befindliche Besiedlung nicht an einer Steigerung der Bodenpreise zum Stocken komme, Bedacht nehmen, bei Gelegenheit das Verfügungsrecht über kulturfähiges, von den Landgesellschaften nicht in Kultur genommenes Land sich zu verschaffen.”

¹⁴⁵¹ “[Fragebogen] VIII. Kolonisation,” 1905, BArch R 1001/6237, pag. 17-18.

¹⁴⁵² Zimmermann, Kolonialgeschichtliche Studien; Zimmermann, Die Kolonialpolitik Grossbritanniens; Zimmermann, Die Handelspolitik des Deutschen Reichs vom Frankfurter Frieden bis zur Gegenwart; Zimmermann, Weltpolitisches: Beiträge und Studien zur neueren Kolonialbewegung; Zimmermann, Kolonialpolitik.

¹⁴⁵³ Paul Dehn, Von deutscher Kolonial- und Weltpolitik, Second Edition (Berlin: Allgemeiner Verein für Deutsche Litteratur, 1907), 27.

¹⁴⁵⁴ Ibid., 29.

was important to limit British control in Southern Africa.¹⁴⁵⁵ He further supported the idea that sheep farming should be expanded in order to dispose of wool imports from Argentina and Australia.¹⁴⁵⁶

There were proponents for both camps, those in favor of state colonization and those in favor of private colonization. While in theory, they seemed as two different approaches, in practice they were often mixed and intertwined.

6.3 The Component Parts of Colonization

In 1902, Argentinean intellectual Dr. Arturo Frutos identified migration and soil (inmigración y tierra) as the two determining factors, or prerequisites, for colonization.¹⁴⁵⁷ Two elements were thus essential for colonization: the people and the land. In other words, these were the two elements that other views on colonization focused on. The vocabulary that contemporaries used, however, varied according to changing circumstances.

6.3.1 Focus on Migration and Settlement

In this section, we will focus on migration and settlement used as synonyms for colonization. Other terms that put emphasis on the people were the terms ¹⁴⁵⁵ Ibid., 116.

¹⁴⁵⁶ Ibid., 124.

¹⁴⁵⁷ Frutos, La Colonización Argentina, 22–23.

“settler,” “colonist,” and “worker.” Many publications used the terms migration and colonization together (Auswanderung und Kolonisation; migración y colonización). Among the German texts dealing with the situation from a Central European perspective, I would like to highlight the following: one published and edited by Wappäus in 1846, one written by Alexander von Bülow in 1849, one from Ernst Gaebler, one from Wilhelm Hübbe-Schleiden in 1881, and one from Liesenberg from 1883.¹⁴⁵⁸ What all of these German texts share is the fact that they were published prior to the existence of any official German protectorates.

While most Argentinean publications combining migration and colonization started around the date of the ratification of the 1876 migration and colonization law, Bartolomé Mitre had already written on the connection between migration and colonization in an 1870 publication.¹⁴⁵⁹ And in 1873, Guillermo Wilcken wrote about agricultural colonies in a report presented to the Argentinean migration commission.¹⁴⁶⁰ Overall, these early publications focused more on migration than colonization. The same is true of the Argentinean writers Francisco Seeber (1881), Emilio Gouchón (1889), Antonio Cafferata (1898), and Bernadino de Irigoyen (1901).¹⁴⁶¹ Moritz Alemann spoke of German settlement in his presentation at the German Colonial Congress of 1902, but he also used the term “Germanic colonization” (Germanische Kolonisation).¹⁴⁶² In 1912, Georg Hiller announced a series of books on migration and colonization in Argentina, but he only completed the first volume on migration and not the one on colonization.¹⁴⁶³

¹⁴⁵⁸ anonymous, Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonisation, ed. Johann Eduard Wappäus (Leipzig: J.C. Hinrichs, 1846); Bülow, Auswanderung und Colonisation im Interesse des deutschen Handels; Gaebler, Deutsche Auswanderung und Kolonisation; Wilhelm Hübbe-Schleiden, Deutsche Colonisation: Eine Replik auf das Referat des Friedrich Kapp über Colonisation und Auswanderung (Hamburg: Friederichsen, 1881); C Liesenberg, Die deutsche Auswanderung, ihre Organisation und ihre colonisatorischen Ziele (Berlin: Burmeister & Stempel, 1883).

¹⁴⁵⁹ Ley de inmigración y colonización de la República Argentina, sancionada por el Congreso nacional de 1876. Publicación oficial (Buenos Aires: Imprenta del Departamento Nacional de Agricultura, 1882); Bartolomé Mitre, La inmigración espontánea en la República Argentina (Buenos Aires: Imp. de la sociedad anónima “La Nación,” 1870).

¹⁴⁶⁰ Guillermo Wilcken, Las Colonias. Informe sobre el estado actual de las colonias agrícolas de la República Argentina presentado a la Comisión Central de Inmigración, 1872 (Buenos Aires: Sociedad anónima, 1873).

Occasionally, German-speakers writing about Argentina also used the term “settlement” to refer to German-speakers moving to Argentina.¹⁴⁶⁴ Many of these publications are from the time after the world wars, though, when the relation to the terminology of colony started to change. More recently, French

¹⁴⁶¹ Francisco Seeber, Ensayo sobre inmigración y colonización en la Provincia de Buenos Aires (Buenos Aires: La Nación, 1881); Emilio Gouchón, Apuntes sobre inmigración y colonización, Dissertation, Universidad nacional de Buenos Aires (Buenos Aires: Imprenta “La Nación,” 1889); Antonio F. Cafferata, Apuntes sobre inmigración y colonización (Universidad Nacional de Buenos Aires, Facultad de Derecho y Ciencias Sociales, 1898); Irigoyen, Colonización é Inmigración en la República Argentina: Datos y antecedentes.

¹⁴⁶² Alemann, “Argentinien als Siedlungsgebiet für deutsche Auswanderung.”

¹⁴⁶³ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien.

¹⁴⁶⁴ Moritz Alemann, Die Kolonie Tornquist im Distrikt Bahia Blanca (im Süden der Provinz Buenos Aires) als Ansiedlungspunkt für schweizerische und deutsche Ackerbau-Familien (Bern: Bei Orell Füssli & Cie., 1886); Alfred Funke, Die Besiedlung des östlichen Südamerika, mit besonderer Berücksichtigung des Deutschtums, vol. 10, Angewandte Geographie. Hefte zur Verbreitung geographischer Kenntnisse in ihrer Beziehung zum Kultur- und Wirtschaftsleben 1 (Halle a. S.: Gebauer-Schwetschke Druckerei und Verlag, 1903); “Germanische Ansiedlung ‘Friedland’ am Rio Pico (Chubut) (Dr. W. Vallentin),” Argentinisches Tageblatt, October 6, 1905, BArch R 901/30417, pag. 18; v. Hauff, “Der augenblickliche Stand der Ansiedlungsfrage für Deutsche in Argentinien,” Tägliche Rundschau, January 7, 1928, No. 261 edition, EZA 5/2061; Oscar Schmieder and Herbert Wilhelmy, Deutsche Ackerbausiedlungen im südamerikanischen Grasland, Pampa und Gran Chaco (Leipzig: Hirt, 1938).

historian Anne Saint Sauveur-Henn has classified “agricultural colonization” as a special subtype of “migration” in the Argentinean case.¹⁴⁶⁵ She thereby highlights the people involved. However, as a historian, classifying “colonization” in South America only as part of migration studies has obscured the relation it had with (European) colonialism.

In Namibia, in turn, the term “settlement” (Besiedlung) was the preferred one and only sometimes was “(agricultural) colonization” used. “Colony” and “colonization” were used on the Namibian side for “settlement” and “agricultural activities” until the land became a German protectorate, and the term “colony” was then used as synonymous with “protectorate.” In 1885, one year after the Adolf Lüderitz had achieved protectorate status for the piece of land he had bought, Rhenish missionary Karl Gotthilf Büttner attempted to answer the question “whether the new German acquisitions in South-West Africa could be used for agricultural colonies.”¹⁴⁶⁶ It is noteworthy here that he used the plural, which indicates that he was using the word colony for settlements rather than as a synonym for the protectorate. In his 1891 travel account, Rudolf Ludloff described Otjimbingwe as a colony (Kolonie) within German South-West Africa, ¹⁴⁶⁵ Saint Sauveur-Henn, Un siècle d’émigration allemande vers l’Argentine, 342–491.

¹⁴⁶⁶ Karl Gotthilf Büttner, Ackerbau und Viehzucht in Süd-West-Afrika: (Damara- und Gr. Namaqualand), Die Deutschen Colonialgebiete 3 (Leipzig: Schloemp, 1885), 3; “Da die Frage, ob die neuen deutschen Erwerbungen in S.-W.-Afrika für Ackerbaucolonien nutzbar zu machen wären...”

thus within the German protectorate.¹⁴⁶⁷ In this case as well, colony must have been synonymous with “settlement” and not specifically in reference to territory under German control. In the 1890s, the term “settlement” (Siedlung, Besiedlung) was much more common than “colonization” in Namibia.¹⁴⁶⁸ At the 1902 German Colonial Congress, Dr. Hindorf advocated for German South-West Africa as Germany’s most important colony for settlement (Siedlungskolonie).¹⁴⁶⁹ The company helping with agricultural colonization in Namibia was even called Settlement Society for German South-West Africa.¹⁴⁷⁰ In 1903, M. R. Gerstenhauer used the term settlement (Besiedlung) in a journal article about the history of populating the German protectorate.¹⁴⁷¹ Especially during and after the Namibian War, German-speakers were dealing with the question of how to settle more German-speakers in the German protectorate.¹⁴⁷² In 1907, Dr. V. Fuchs made a suggestion for the settlement of the German protectorate inspired by the ¹⁴⁶⁷ Ludloff, Nach Deutsch-Namaland, 46.

¹⁴⁶⁸ “Südwestafrikanische Siedlung,” 1892, BArch R 1001/1685, pag. 21; “Aus Kunst, Wissenschaft und Leben,” Tägliche Rundschau, May 21, 1892, BArch R 1001/1685, pag. 30.

¹⁴⁶⁹ Direktor Dr. Hindorf, “Die weisse Einwanderung nach Südwestafrika,” in Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, ed. Deutscher Kolonialkongress (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903), 627–39.

¹⁴⁷⁰ Vohsen, Denkschrift über die bisherige Thätigkeit der Siedlungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika.

¹⁴⁷¹ M. R. Gerstenhauer, “Zur Geschichte der Besiedlung von Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 5 (1903): 203-224-288-308.

¹⁴⁷² Gentz, “Der Hererokrieg und die Besiedlungsfrage in Deutsch-Südwestafrika.”

“self supporting principle” the British had used in Australia.¹⁴⁷³ However, he also equated the “settlement question” with the “land question.” The Official Guide for Migrants to German South-West Africa of 1910 included a chapter on settlement (Ansiedlung), with a subsection on farming (Farmwirtschaft) and one on livestock (Viehzucht).¹⁴⁷⁴ In 1911, Rudolf Wagner equated colonization work (Kolonisationsarbeit) with settlement.¹⁴⁷⁵

Similar language can be found in historical scholarship. A 1976 dissertation from the University of Minnesota argued that the protectorate German South-West Africa was a “settlement colony.”¹⁴⁷⁶ In 1986, Guido Weigend published a book on German settlement structures in Namibia, and a 2002 article by Robert Gordon deals with “unsettled settlers” in Namibia, thus taking up the same terminology of settlers and settlements that had been popular in Namibia.¹⁴⁷⁷ ¹⁴⁷³ V. Fuchs, Ein Siedlungsvorschlag für Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1907).

¹⁴⁷⁴ Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Amtlicher Ratgeber für Auswanderer (Berlin: Reimer, 1910).

¹⁴⁷⁵ Rudolf Wagner, Eine Reise durch die deutschen Kolonien: Deutsch Südwest-Afrika, Kolonie und Heimat 4 (Berlin: Verlag Kolonialpolitischer Zeitschriften, 1911).

¹⁴⁷⁶ Alvin Kienetz, “Nineteenth-Century South West Africa as a German Settlement Colony” (Ph.D., University of Minnesota, 1976).

¹⁴⁷⁷ Guido G. Weigend, Deutsche Siedlungsstrukturen in Namibia (Düsseldorf: Deutsche SWA/Namibia Vereinigung e. V., 1986); Robert J. Gordon, “Unsettled Settlers: Internal Pacification and Vagrancy in Namibia,” in Ethnography in Unstable Places: Everyday Lives in Contexts of Dramatic Political Change, ed. Carol J. Greenhouse, Elizabeth Mertz, and Kay B. Warren (Durham, London: Duke University Press, 2002), 61–84.

6.3.2 Focus on Agriculture

In Argentinean historiography, colonization so far has been studied completely disconnected from (European) colonialism. Scholars have considered the coincidence in terminology to be accidental and without any deeper meaning.¹⁴⁷⁸ I argue that (agricultural) colonization in Argentina has to be studied in the context of expansionism and colonization that originated in Europe. Much of the contemporary literature on colonization focused on agricultural colonization, and thus on land cultivation and animal rearing. Argentinean legislation and government, especially, linked colonization with agriculture, as we will see in Part 9.2 when examining the role of the state in colonization projects.¹⁴⁷⁹

¹⁴⁷⁸ See, for example, Julio Djenderedjian, “Un aire de familia? Producción ganadera y sociedad en perspectiva comparada: las fronteras rioplatenses a inicios del siglo XIX,” Jahrbuch für Geschichte Lateinamerikas 41 (2004): 247–73; Julio Djenderedjian, “Expansion agrícola y colonización en Entre Ríos, 1850-1890,” Desarrollo económico 47 (2008): 577–606; Julio Djenderedjian, Gringos en las pampas: inmigrantes y colonos en el campo argentino, Nudos de la historia argentina (Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 2008); Julio Djenderedjian, La agricultura pampeana en la primera mitad del siglo XIX, Historia del capitalismo agrario pampeano 4 (Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Editores Argentina, 2008); Julio Djenderedjian, “La colonización agrícola en Argentina, 1850-1900: problemas y desafíos de un complejo proceso de cambio productivo en Santa Fe y Entre Ríos,” América Latina en la historia económica 15 (2008): 127–57; Julio Djenderedjian, “Modernización e innovación. Reconsiderando el papel y las particularidades de los fenómenos de cambio técnico en la agricultura pampeana entre 1840 y 1900,” Encuentros Latinoamericanos 4, no. 10/11 (2010).

¹⁴⁷⁹ Emilio Frers, Heriberto Gibson, and Enrique Lynch Arribálzaga, Plan de Organización de la Dirección General de Tierras y Agricultura: Proyecto de Presupuesto: Memoria (Buenos Aires: Imprenta, Litografía y Encuadernación, Mariano Moreno, 1893); D. G. de la Fuente, ed., Tierras, colonias y agricultura: recopilación de leyes, decretos y otras disposiciones nacionales (Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1898).

The term colony became a contested notion. In January 1885, the Argentinisches Tageblatt published a definition of “colonies” in Argentina.¹⁴⁸⁰ According to this definition, colonies were settlements for agricultural purposes in the Argentinean interior. German-speakers in Argentina started to feel the need to distinguish their use of the term colony in Argentina from the one that started to prevail in continental German-speaking Europe – the synonym for protectorate and thus an official state or imperial colony. In 1901, Karl Kaerger, who was employed as an agricultural expert for the Argentinean government, published a comprehensive study on agriculture and colonization in the La Plata states in German for a German-speaking audience.¹⁴⁸¹ Colonization was a particular term for specific practice.

In 1906, Alfred Arent published an article about Patagonia being a territory for German colonization.¹⁴⁸² He described the climate, soil, and the different plants and animals that could be best grown there. The 1906 handbook for Germanic migrants to Argentina claimed that “colonization means the settlement of farmers (Ackerbauern) on a piece of land, which had merely been used for stock-breeding.”¹⁴⁸³ This reflected the contemporary view that crop farming was superior to animal farming. In 1913, Otto Preusse-Sperber advocated for “colonization” with German-speakers in Argentina.¹⁴⁸⁴ He called for the simultaneous advancement of railroad construction and the systematic and regulated founding of agricultural colonies. In 1915, Ernst Pfannenschmidt, agricultural expert for the German Embassy Buenos Aires, used “colonization” in Argentina interchangeably with “partitioning the land.”¹⁴⁸⁵ In 1916, Otto Kasdorf defined colonists in South America as agriculturalists, as farmers when he wrote “Kolonisten (Landwirte).”¹⁴⁸⁶ After WWI, Pfannenschmidt still worked in Argentina and in one section of a 1926 publication, he treated colonization and land policy (Kolonisation und Bodenpolitik) in a subsection.¹⁴⁸⁷

¹⁴⁸⁰ “Die Colonien werden definiert wie folgt...,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, January 3, 1885, BArch R 901/30397, pag. 17.

¹⁴⁸¹ Kaerger, Landwirtschaft und Kolonisation im Spanischen Amerika. Erster Band. Die La Plata-Staaten.

¹⁴⁸² Arent, “Patagonien, ein deutsches Kolonisationsgebiet.”

As for Namibia, several contemporary authors wrote about colonization and the “land question,” which again, potentially interfered with the role of the state. In 1895, Karl von Stengel problematized the issue of unowned land in the

¹⁴⁸³ Argentinien als Ziel für germanische Auswanderung – Handbuch nebst einem Stadtplan und der neusten Eisenbahnkarte (Buenos Aires: H. Herpig, 1906), 49; “Unter Kolonisieren versteht man die Ansiedlung von Ackerbauern auf einem Stück Land, welches bisher allein der Viehzucht diente.”

¹⁴⁸⁴ Preusse-Sperber, “Eisenbahnbauten in Verbindung mit Kolonisation,” 26.

¹⁴⁸⁵ Ernst Pfannenschmidt, Landwirtschaft und Kolonisation in Patagonien (Berlin: Verlagsbuchhandlung P. Parey, 1915), 12.

¹⁴⁸⁶ Kasdorf, Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika, 64.

¹⁴⁸⁷ Pfannenschmidt, Die argentinische Landwirtschaft, 59–60.

German protectorates.¹⁴⁸⁸ In 1896, Franz Joseph von Bülow discussed animal rearing and plant cultivation in Windhoek and labeled it “colonization.”¹⁴⁸⁹ In 1899 already, Kurt von François used the term “colonization” (Kolonisation) for all activities in the protectorate in the name of sovereignty of the German Empire.¹⁴⁹⁰ In 1905, M. R. Gerstenhauer, who worked for the land commission of the German Colonial Society, published two articles about the land question and land policies in the German protectorate with the Journal of the German Colonial Society.¹⁴⁹¹ In 1906, Hermann Hesse published a detailed analysis on the land question.¹⁴⁹² He distinguished between indigenous land (Eingeborenenland), society-owned land (Gesellschaftsland), and government land (Regierungsland). In 1913, however, Bernhard Voigt expanded interest to land outside of German control when he included a chapter on agriculture in the Hereroland in his collection of texts on land and people in Namibia.¹⁴⁹³ In 1914 the farmer ¹⁴⁸⁸ Karl v Stengel, “Herrenloses Land in den deutschen Schutzgebieten,” ed. Gustav Meinecke, Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Siebter Jahrgang 7 (1895): 10–37.

¹⁴⁸⁹ Franz Joseph von Bülow, “Politik und Kolonisation in Windhoek,” in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Drei Jahre im Lande Hendrik Witboois. Schilderungen von Land und Leute (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1896), 220–36.

¹⁴⁹⁰ François, Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika.

¹⁴⁹¹ M. R. Gerstenhauer, “Landkonzessionen und Landpolitik in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Anhang,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905); M. R. Gerstenhauer, “Gutachten über die Landfrage in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, erstattet für die Landkommission der ‘Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft,’” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 549–607.

¹⁴⁹² Hesse, Die Landfrage und die Frage der Rechtsgültigkeit der Konzessionen in Südwestafrika.

¹⁴⁹³ Bernhard Voigt, “Ackerbau im Hererolande,” in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, ed. Bernhard Voigt (Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913), 36–38.

Schlettwein used the term agriculture (Landwirtschaft) and explicitly included both livestock and plants in this definition.¹⁴⁹⁴ In 1993 then, Brigitte Lau and Peter Rainer published a history of one hundred years of agriculture in colonial Namibia.¹⁴⁹⁵ They criticize that previous scholarship included broad references between agricultural development and colonialism. Instead they proposed three phases: the German colonial period, 1892-1915, the Union/Commonwealth period, 1915-1961 and the RSA period, 1962-1990. On both sides of the South Atlantic then, agriculture thus became the preferred term to replace colonization with regards to making use of the land and cultivating it.

6.4 Conclusion

In this chapter, we have studied different contemporary conceptualizations of “colonization.” While internal and external colonization presumed the existence of a state to whose territory colonization was internal or external to. The main argument of this chapter is that the necessary component parts of colonization were 1) people or colonists, 2) soil or land, and 3) the presence or absence of state control of land and people. I argue that the actions of private individuals were ¹⁴⁹⁴ Carl Schlettwein, Der Farmer in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Eine Darstellung sämtlicher für den afrikanischen Farmer in Betracht kommenden Erwerbszweige und Ein Leitfaden für Anfänger, Second and Improved Edition (Wismar: Hinstorff'sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1914), 1.

¹⁴⁹⁵ Brigitte Lau and Peter Reiner, 100 Years of Agricultural Development in Colonial Namibia: A Historical Overview of Visions and Experiments (Windhoek: National Archives of Namibia, 1993).

crucial for colonization. German-speakers in the South Atlantic mainly acted as these private individuals who worked land. The nation-states intervened in differing degrees with the tendency to increase their involvement over time.

On both sides of the South Atlantic, colonization projects were motivated by ideas of white European superiority, and it was those white Europeans who took land control out of the hands of the indigenous population. German-speakers were active agents in this process of land appropriation in the South Atlantic. But Europeans also engaged in the competition amongst each other for the status of most civilized. This ensued various armed conflicts including the First World War, which was also carried out in the South Atlantic societies. From the perspective of Central Europe, South Atlantic societies were located at the ends of the world and were considered frontier areas that remained largely unknown to the general public.

Chapter 7. German-speaking Travel Writing as Colonization Propaganda

This chapter discusses the literature that German-speakers produced about colonization in the South Atlantic in order to inform and educate Central European Germans about this part of the world that perpetually remained unknown to large parts of Euro-German society. It analyzes how their writings shaped the knowledge and imagination of German-speakers about the South Atlantic, both in Europe and in the South Atlantic itself. I distinguish between what I call “first-hand” and “second-hand” travel writing. The authors of first-hand accounts were those German-speakers who actually went to the South Atlantic themselves and stayed there for a few years, or longer, sometimes even permanently. Second-hand accounts were by those who did not travel to the South Atlantic themselves but who held an important position in German-speaking culture and society and who thus served as mouthpieces for the others by relying on information from first-hand accounts. My main argument in this section is that ultimately, the objective of all published (travel) writings was propaganda for German-speaking colonization: to familiarize German-speakers in Europe with the South Atlantic in order to attract more migrants and increase business connections.

In 1995, Marília dos Santos Lopes published a book on travel writing in the South Atlantic.¹⁴⁹⁶ She compared travel accounts from the earliest available until the eighteenth century in a spatial unit reaching from South-West Africa to Brazil. She particularly highlighted the importance of taking into account the double function of travel accounts: capturing unfamiliar and exciting experiences in a “new world” for European audiences, while providing deep insight in the belief system of the person authoring those accounts. Mary Louise Pratt coined the phrase “imperial eyes” to describe European travel writing in Africa and ¹⁴⁹⁶ Lopes, Fremdwahrnehmung und Selbsteinschätzung.

South America.¹⁴⁹⁷ The topic was first taken up by scholars working on South America, and more recently by historians working on German-speakers in Africa.¹⁴⁹⁸

The travel writings German-speakers produced fit on a scale of different literary categories ranging from educational texts on one end of the spectrum to entertainment on the other. Within this spectrum, I include “scientific writings” and “popularizations” under the rubric of “educational,” and “memoirs” and “fiction” under the rubric of “entertainment.” In many cases, the boundaries between these categories are fluid, and some writings could be situated along the entire spectrum between these seemingly opposing ends. An example would be the overlap between pure propaganda writings and scientific writings, especially once the belief had developed that only accurate and thus “scientific information” could really serve as a means to convince people to choose to migrate.

The authors of travel writing created cultural landscapes. The first German-speaking travellers in the South Atlantic documented what they saw, experienced, and interpreted. They produced descriptions of lands and people previously unknown to them and their fellow countrymen. Some of the publications categorized as “popularizations” are blatant propaganda promoting settlement and colonization. Many of these texts were written as handbooks for colonists. Scientific texts developed further, in part also as a reaction to subjective propaganda. These scientific writings were attempts to produce scholarly and objective knowledge about the South Atlantic. Fictional accounts created shared knowledge about the South Atlantic in a more creative way and provided a mental source for those German-speakers who could not travel to South Atlantic themselves but were dreaming about it. This literature shaped the perception of the South Atlantic in the popular mind of German-speakers in Europe.

¹⁴⁹⁷ Pratt, Imperial Eyes, 1992; Pratt, Imperial Eyes, 2006.

¹⁴⁹⁸ Magnus Mörner, European Travelogues as Sources to Latin American History from the Late Eighteenth Century until 1870 (Stockholm: Institute of Latin American Studies, 1981); Walther L. Bernecker, Gertrud Krömer, and Kristina Birn, eds., Die Wiederentdeckung Lateinamerikas: die Erfahrung des Subkontinents in Reiseberichten des 19. Jahrhunderts (Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1997); Jens Kruse, Reiseberichte aus den deutschen Kolonien: Das Bild vom “Eingeborenen” in Reiseberichten der deutschen Kolonialzeit, 1884-1918 (München: GRIN Verlag GmbH, 2007); Werner Tabel, Autoren Südwestafrikas: Biographien, Rezensionen und Hintergrundinformationen (Göttingen; Windhoek: Klaus Hess Verlag, 2007); Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst, “Selbstzeugnisse reisender Frauen in Afrika,” in Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner (Berlin: Links, 2009).

7.1 Publications with Educational Purpose

Throughout the nineteenth century, the development of “science” was linked to advancement, progress, civilization, and modernity. While scientific writing’s seemingly primary aim was to provide an “objective” description, its authors were also proponents of colonization. Their scientific work ultimately also served the purpose of colonization promotion. While science and “objectivity” or “truth” was what the authors were striving for, there were also those who thought that this information needed to be made accessible to a wider audience that was not academic but still needed “true” and factual information. Thus they practiced a popularization of the scientific information. The nineteenth century was also the time when many new academic disciplines like anthropology, ethnology, and ethnography were created, and German-speakers in the South Atlantic took an active part in this development.

7.1.1 Scientific Writing Produced in an Academic Setting

In the nineteenth century, people were concerned with analyzing the conditions of the places they considered for colonization. In this regard, two aspects were most important and linked to settlement and agriculture: would German-speakers be able to live in the locations they studied? And secondly, would animals and plants they were used to cultivating survive and thrive in these conditions? People believed that humans from certain climatic areas could only survive in those regions that were similar to the ones they came from. With regards to animal and plant production, they were more flexible in adapting their habitual preferences to the local varieties. In this section we look at literature that aimed to and pretended to be scientific by providing “neutral” and factual descriptions of areas in the South Atlantic, more specifically Argentina and Namibia.

Historian Carsten Gräbel has studied the role of German geographers between 1884 and 1919, focusing exclusively on those working in the official

German colonies.¹⁴⁹⁹ I argue that it is important to further consider the role of geographers and scholars of related fields in relation to colonization rather than colonialism and thus study their role both in places like Argentina and Namibia. Some scholars of South America have started to address this issue: For the case of Brazil, Cerue K. Diggs has introduced the notion of “colonial gaze” of German-speakers in the nineteenth century and thus put the analysis closer to (German) colonialism in South America.¹⁵⁰⁰ Similarly, Uta Raina has used the designation “intellectual imperialism” to describe German anthropologists and archaeologists in Peru at the turn of the twentieth century.¹⁵⁰¹ This work is inspired by these approaches as well.

With regards to South Atlantic, two scientific travelers who had not only a profound impact on German-speakers but on all of humanity were the English-speakers and half-cousins Francis Galton and Charles Darwin. Darwin is known for his theory of evolution, also called Darwinism. He travelled in Southern Argentina between 1832 and 1837, and published his travel account, which was repeatedly also translated into German.¹⁵⁰² German-Argentinean writer and ¹⁴⁹⁹ Carsten Gräbel, Die Erforschung der Kolonien: Expeditionen und koloniale Wissenskultur deutscher Geographen, 1884-1919 (transcript Verlag, 2015).

¹⁵⁰⁰ Cerue K. Diggs, “Brazil After Humboldt: Triangular Perceptions and the Colonial Gaze in Nineteenth-Century German Travel Narratives” (Ph.D., University of Maryland, 2008).

¹⁵⁰¹ Uta Raina, “Intellectual Imperialism in the Andes: German Anthropologists and Archaeologists in Peru, 1870-1930” (Temple University, 2007).

¹⁵⁰² Dame Gillian Beer, “Darwin in South America: Geology, Imagination and Encounter,” in Science and the Creative Imagination in Latin America, ed. Evelyn Fishburn and Eduardo L. Ortiz (London: Institute for the Study of the Americas, 2005), 13–23; Friedrich Heinzelmann, ed., “III.

botanist Eduardo L. Holmberg, for one, was strongly influenced by Darwin.¹⁵⁰³ Over the long term, Darwin was at the origin of the foundation of evolutionary thought in Argentina, whereas Galton founded the field of eugenics.¹⁵⁰⁴ Galton travelled in Southern Africa, today Namibia, where he met German-speaking missionaries like Carl Hugo Hahn and his family.

One of the few contemporary German-speaking scholars who worked on both sides of the South Atlantic during his lifetime was Reinhard Maack (*1892 Herford, Westfalen – 1969 Brazil).¹⁵⁰⁵ He first travelled to Namibia in 1911 and worked as a land surveyer (Landesvermessung) in Windhoek. After WWI, he worked for the British South Africa Survey Service for South-West Africa before crossing the Atlantic to Brazil in 1923, where he worked as mining engineer for the Companhia de Mineração e Colonização Paranense (Parana Mining and Colonization Company). He received a Ph.D. for his research on the Gondwana connection between Africa and South America at the Friedrich-Wilhelms-Reisen in Brasilien und den La Plata-Ländern. Nach Gardner, Prinz Maximilian von Neuwied, Darwin u. A.,” in Reisen in Südamerika und Westindien, Die Weltkunde in einer planmässig geordneten Rundschau der wichtigsten neueren Land- und Seereisen 8 (Leipzig: F. Fleischer, 1851), 211–305; Charles Darwin, Reise eines Naturforschers um die Welt, trans. J. Victor Carus (Stuttgart: E. Schweizerbart'sche Verlagshandlung (E. Koch), 1875).

¹⁵⁰³ Eduardo L. Ortiz, “On the Transition from Realism to the Fantastic in the Argentina of the 1870s: Holmberg and the Córdoba Six,” in Science and the Creative Imagination in Latin America, ed. Evelyn Fishburn and Eduardo L. Ortiz (London: Institute for the Study of the Americas, 2005).

¹⁵⁰⁴ Adriana Novoa and Alex Levine, From Man to Ape: Darwinism in Argentina, 1870-1920 (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2010); Adriana Novoa and Alex Levine, !Darwinistas!: The Construction of Evolutionary Thought in Nineteenth Century Argentina (Leiden; Boston: Brill, 2012); Nicholas Wright Gillham, A Life of Sir Francis Galton: From African Exploration to the Birth of Eugenics (Oxford, New York: Oxford University Press, 2001).

¹⁵⁰⁵ Ursula M. Kurowski, “Lebenslauf von Reinhard Maack,” Boletín Paranense de Geografía 10–15, no. Festschrift zum siebzigsten Geburtstag von Reinhard Maack (1964).

Universität Bonn, Germany in 1946.¹⁵⁰⁶ His work is significant because he actually worked on the physical and geographical connection of the South Atlantic continents, studying the time when they consisted in one single continent.

Many authors were involved in the transfer of knowledge. In many cases, the authors were linked to academic institutions such as universities or geographical associations. The obligation they felt to the nation-state and national economy varied between individuals. How outspoken they were about their agendas also varied. There was much conflict between those labeled “theorists” and those considering themselves “practitioners.” Several “second degree” agents of transfer wrote both about South America and Southern Africa in the nineteenth century. For example, in the 1850s, Friedrich Heintelmann edited various books on the “unknown” areas of the earth. His books were published in German but the contents were entirely based on travel accounts originally written in other languages. His edited volume Travels in Africa included Portuguese South-West Africa, the Cape Colony, and the region in between, today’s Namibia.¹⁵⁰⁷ His volume Travels in South America included descriptions of the “La Plata States.”¹⁵⁰⁸ Geographer Karl Andree (*1808 Braunschweig – 1875 Bad

¹⁵⁰⁶ Reinhard Maack, Die Entwicklung der Gondwana-Schichten Südbrasilens und ihre Beziehungen zur Karru Formation Südafrikas, Symposium sur les séries de Gondwana, 19. Congrès Géologique International (Alger: Comptes Rend., 1952); Reinhard Maack, Kontinentaldrift und Geologie des südantlantischen Ozeans (Berlin: W. de Gruyter, 1969).

¹⁵⁰⁷ Friedrich Heintelmann, ed., Reisen in Afrika durch die Länder der Nordküste und die Sahara, Senegambien, den Sudan, beide Guinea’s und das Gebiet des Südens (Leipzig: F. Fleischer, 1852).

¹⁵⁰⁸ Heintelmann, “Reisen in Brasilien und den La Plata-Ländern.”

Wildungen) studied history with Leopold von Ranke, philosophy with Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel, and geography with Carl Ritter and Alexander von Humboldt in Berlin in 1827.¹⁵⁰⁹ He edited a volume on Buenos Aires and the Argentinean provinces based on the most recent sources in 1856, as well as one on South Africa and Madagascar, based on expedition accounts.¹⁵¹⁰ Later on, he focused his interests on the geography of world trade.¹⁵¹¹ Wilhelm Sievers (*1860 Hamburg – 1921), a geology and geography university professor in Giessen, who travelled to Venezuela and Columbia, was also a “second degree” agent of transfer: by being an intellectual authority, he could transmit information through the channels - the academic realm – available to him. He published a book on the geography of Africa in 1891 and then one on South and Central America in 1903.¹⁵¹²

Literary scholar Mary Louise Pratt asserts that by the end of the seventeenth century, travel writing already had a scientific orientation and ¹⁵⁰⁹ Viktor Hantzsch, “Andree, Carl,” in Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie, vol. 46 (München/Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1902), 12–15.

¹⁵¹⁰ Andree, Buenos Ayres und die argentinischen Provinzen; Karl Andree, Südafrika und Madagaskar geschildert durch die neuesten Entdeckungsreisenden, namentlich Livingstone und Ellis (Leipzig, 1859).

¹⁵¹¹ Karl Andree, Geographie des Welthandels. Mit geschichtlichen Erläuterungen, ed. Richard Andree, Second Edition, vol. 1 (Berlin: Verlag für Sprach- und Handelswissenschaft (Dr. P. Langenscheidt), 1877).

¹⁵¹² Wilhelm Sievers, Afrika: Eine allgemeine Landeskunde (Leipzig, Wien: Bibliographisches Institut, 1891); Wilhelm Sievers, Süd- und Mittelamerika, second edition, Allgemeine Länderkunde (Leipzig, Wien: Bibliographisches institut, 1903).

claim.¹⁵¹³ She also writes of a “planetary consciousness” that had awoken among Europeans: they became aware of the globe and wanted to explore as well as subdue and civilize it.¹⁵¹⁴ The very first travel account available to us from a German-speaker in Argentina comes from explorer Ulrich Schmidl, who traveled to the Río de la Plata with Pedro de Mendoza in the 1530s and became one of the co-founders of Buenos Aires in 1535.¹⁵¹⁵ Schmidl was also considered the first historian of Buenos Aires.¹⁵¹⁶ The first German-speakers to document their travels to Southern Africa were Balthasar Springer (who travelled to the Cape of Good Hope in 1509),¹⁵¹⁷ and Peter Kolb (*1675 Dörflas near Redwitz – 1726 Neustadt a. d. Aisch) in 1704.¹⁵¹⁸ Pratt writes that Kolb could be considered an early ethnologist who described Nama-speaking populations rather than the landscapes

¹⁵¹³ See Part I: Science and Sentiment, 1750-1800, in Pratt, Imperial Eyes, 2006.

¹⁵¹⁴ Ibid., 29.

¹⁵¹⁵ Ulrich Schmidel, Eine wunderbare Reise in die Neue Welt nach Brasilien und zum Rio de la Plata: erlebt von Ulrich Schmidl aus Straubing in den Jahren 1534 bis 1554 und nach seiner Rückkehr niedergeschrieben, ed. Heinrich Fromm (Bremerhaven: Dt. Schiffahrtsmuseum, 2010); Richard John Ascárate, “Schmidel (Schmidl, Schmidt), Ulrich,” in Germany and the Americas: Culture, Politics, and History, ed. Thomas Adam (Santa Barbara California: ABC-CLIO, 2005), 945–47.

¹⁵¹⁶ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 26.

¹⁵¹⁷ Balthasar Springer, Die Merfart vn[d] erfahrung nüwer Schiffung vnd Wege zu viln onerkanten Jnseln vnd Künigreichen von dem großmechtigen Portugalische[n] Kunig Emanuel Erforscht funden bestritten vnnd Ingenomen ([Oppenheim], 1509); Balthasar Springer and Franz Schulze, Balthasar Springers Indienfahrt 1505/06: wissenschaftliche Würdigung der Reiseberichte Springers zur Einführung in den Neudruck seiner “Meerfahrt” von Jahre 1509 (Strassburg: J.H.E. Heitz (Heitz & Mündel), 1902); Beate Borowka-Clausberg, Balthasar Sprenger und der frühneuzeitliche Reisebericht (München: Iudicium, 1999).

¹⁵¹⁸ Kolben, The Present State of the Cape of Good Hope; Friedrich Ratzel, “Kolb, Peter,” in Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie, vol. 16 (München/Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1882), 460–61.

he was supposed to study on his voyage sponsored by a Prussian patron.¹⁵¹⁹ Patricia Arenas has published a book specifically on German-speakers' scientific contribution to the foundation and development of anthropology as a discipline in Argentina.¹⁵²⁰ Expansion and emerging expertise in sciences went hand in hand.

In the case of both the South America and Africa, knowledge about these continents was still rather scarce in Europe at the end of the eighteenth century. Prussian scientific circles had been heavily influenced by the negative image French naturalist Comte de Buffon had developed of South America and its inhabitants, which Dutch scholar Cornelius de Pauw had spread in Berlin.¹⁵²¹ Alexander von Humboldt's voyage to Spanish America and Brazil between 1799 and 1804 changed this outlook.¹⁵²²

While not as widely-known and accessible to their contemporaries as to us today, it was eighteenth-century Jesuit missionaries who produced the first travel accounts of the southern cone, including today's Argentina, and who already practiced natural history, cartography, medical botany, and astronomy.¹⁵²³ Among these missionaries were several German-speaking Jesuits. On 6 April 1691, the ¹⁵¹⁹ Pratt, Imperial Eyes, 2006, 40ff.

¹⁵²⁰ Arenas, Antropologia en la Argentina.

¹⁵²¹ Ulrike Schmieder, "Das Bild Lateinamerikas in der preußischen und deutschen Publizistik vom Ende des 18. Jahrhunderts bis zur Mitte des 19. Jahrhunderts," in Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, ed. Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold (Münster: Lit, 2004), 62.

¹⁵²² Ibid., 60. "Bis zu Humboldts Amerika-Reise 1799-1804 wusste man in Preußen wie im Rest Europas sehr wenig über Spanisch-Amerika und Brasilien."

¹⁵²³ Miguel de Asúa, Science in the Vanished Arcadia: Knowledge of Nature in the Jesuit Missions of Paraguay and Río de La Plata (Leiden; Boston: Brill, 2014).

Jesuit Anton Sepp and Anton Böhm arrived in Buenos Aires by ship.¹⁵²⁴ They described Buenos Aires being as not very large – just a market area (“nicht größer als ein Marktflecken”) – situated by the Rio de la Plata. They stated that the water of this river was very healthy and helpful for digestion.¹⁵²⁵ They described the types of trees present in the area of Buenos Aires, very different from the ones he was accustomed of from German woods: instead of oaks, spruces, birches, beeches, alders, there were peach, almonds, fig, apricot trees.¹⁵²⁶ Sepp and Böhm admired the abundance and quality of cow meat but they were appalled by the custom of leaving the remains of slaughtered cows in the fields for birds of prey and wild dogs.¹⁵²⁷ They also provided a detailed description of the local custom of preparing asado (barbecue).¹⁵²⁸ In 1740, Petro Probst published in Vienna a collection of Jesuit letters and travel accounts and it included a German translation of a French translation of a text originally written in Spanish by Hieronymus Herran about the province Paraquaria.¹⁵²⁹ The Austrian Martin

¹⁵²⁴ Anton Sepp and Anton Böhm, Reißbeschreibung: Wie dieselbe aus Hispanien in Paraquariam kommen (Nürnberg: Johan Hoffinanns, 1698), 7.

¹⁵²⁵ Ibid., 8–15.

¹⁵²⁶ Ibid.

¹⁵²⁷ Ibid., 16f.

¹⁵²⁸ Ibid., 18ff.

¹⁵²⁹ Hieronymus Herran, Brieffe aus Paraquarien. Num.551. Gegenwärtiger Zustand der Provinz Paraquarien laut der aus Brieffen von Buenes Aeres vom 20ten Hornung 1733 erhaltenen Nachricht erstlich aus dem Spanischen ins Französische anjetzo aus diesem ins Deutsche übersezet, ed. Petro Probst, Allerhand so Lehr- als Geist-reiche Brieffe, Schrifften und Reise-Beschreibungen, welche von denen Missionariis der Gesellschaft Jesu aus Beyden Indien, und anderen über Meer gelegenen Ländern, meistens von A. 1730 bis 1740 in Europa angelangt

Dobrizhoffer was simultaneously cartographer, ethnographer, and missionary.¹⁵³⁰ He also travelled the region then called Paraquaria (which included today's countries of Argentina, Paraguay, and Uruguay). Dobrizhoffer provided a detailed account of the Abipones, an indigenous people that no longer exists as such. An English translation of the original Latin version from Vienna in 1784 was published in London in 1822.¹⁵³¹ After the expulsion of Jesuits from South America, Dobrizhoffer returned to Vienna.

On the other side of the Atlantic, missionaries arrived much later than in Southern America. At the beginning of the twentieth century, Eduard Moritz (*1864 – 1940), a high school teacher in Namibia,¹⁵³² edited and published in 1915 and 1916 what he called “the oldest travel accounts on German-South West Africa.”¹⁵³³ These include twenty-five reports from a variety of authors from 1760 to 1842 – including the missionaries Heinrich Schmelen (LMS) and Franz seynd. Aus Hand-schriftlichen Urkunden, und anderen bewehrten Nachrichten zusammengetragen 28 (Wien: Leopold Johann Kaliwoba, 1740).

¹⁵³⁰ Kitzmantel, “Die Jesuitenmissionare Martin Dobrizhoffer und Florian Paucke.”

¹⁵³¹ Martin Dobrizhoffer, An Account of the Abipones, An Equestrian People of Paraguay, Translation, vol. 2, 3 vols. (London: J. Murray, 1822).

¹⁵³² <http://plants.jstor.org/stable/10.5555/al.ap.person.bm000041169>

¹⁵³³ Eduard Moritz, “Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” Mitteilungen aus den deutschen Schutzgebieten, 1915, 162–268; Eduard Moritz, “Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Fortsetzung: die Berichte der Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846□: mit 1 Kt., Nr. 4,” Mitteilungen aus den deutschen Schutzgebieten, 1916, 135–253; They were published again by the Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft in 1999: Moritz and Fisch, Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842; Eduard Moritz and Helmut Bistri, eds., Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil II: Die Berichte der Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2000).

Heinrich Kleinschmidt (RMG) –, as well as reports from other Rhenish missionaries between 1842 and 1846. Moritz wrote that A. Albrecht, his brother Christian, and Johann Seidenfaden were the first German-speaking missionaries on the territory of today's Namibia. He included Albrecht's observations of Great-Namaland in his edited volume of oldest travel accounts.¹⁵³⁴

Also included in Moritz's edited volume were texts by the following missionaries: Heinrich Schmelen and Hans Christian Knudsen who travelled in Namaland,¹⁵³⁵ Carl Hugo Hahn and Johannes Rath who travelled in Namaland Hereroland,¹⁵³⁶ Franz Heinrich Kleinschmidt in both Nama- and Hereroland,¹⁵³⁷

¹⁵³⁴ Eduard Moritz and Maria Fisch, eds., "Beobachtungen im Groß-Namalande. Von Missionar A. Albrecht, 1806," in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 1999), 95–102.

¹⁵³⁵ Eduard Moritz and Maria Fisch, eds., "Reise zur Erforschung der Oranje-Mündung, des Groß-Nama- und Damaralandes. Von Missionar J. H. Schmelen. 1814," in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 1999), 103–16; Eduard Moritz and Maria Fisch, eds., "H. Schmelen's Brief über seine Reise im Groß-Namalande, Klipfontein, den 29. Juli 1814," in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 1999), 117–20; Eduard Moritz and Maria Fisch, eds., "Kurzer Bericht Schmelen's über seine Reise nach der Walfischbai. 1824 bis 1825," in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 1999), 145–46; Eduard Moritz and Helmut Bistri, eds., "Die Reisen Knudsen's," in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil II: Die Berichte der Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2000), 11–60.

¹⁵³⁶ Eduard Moritz and Helmut Bistri, eds., "Die Reisen C. Hugo Hahns," in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil II: Die Berichte der Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2000), 61–154; Eduard Moritz and Helmut Bistri, eds., "Aus dem Tagebuch Raths," in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil II: Die Berichte der Rheinischen and Heinrich Scheppmann in Damaraland.¹⁵³⁸ These writings, which include descriptions of landscapes, animals, and peoples, were among the earliest to establish systematic knowledge about Namibia.

Dr. Julius Fröbel (*1805 Griesheim, Thuringia - 1893 Zurich, Switzerland) was the nephew of Friedrich Fröbel, the founder of the Kindergarten.¹⁵³⁹ He published a “Geographical and statistical Description of the Argentine Republic or the Free-states of the Rio de la Plata, the Free-state of Uruguay and the State Paraguay” with the publisher of the Geographical Institute in Weimar in 1832.¹⁵⁴⁰ He relied mostly on English travel accounts (e.g. John Mawe, H. M. Brackenridge, Alex Caldcleugh, John Miers, Thomas Falkner), some French and Spanish accounts (Félix de Azara, a publication from the Reposido hydrographico

Mission bis zum Jahre 1846 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2000), 171–86.

¹⁵³⁷ Eduard Moritz and Maria Fisch, eds., “Aus dem Tagebuche des Missionars Kleinschmidt über seine Reise nach Bethanien und Eikhams. 1842,” in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 1999), 201–24; Eduard Moritz and Helmut Bistri, eds., “Kleinschmidts Aufzeichnungen über Kl. Windhuk und die Damaras. 1843,” in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil II: Die Berichte der Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2000), 155–70.

¹⁵³⁸ Eduard Moritz and Helmut Bistri, eds., “Die Reisen Scheppmanns,” in Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil II: Die Berichte der Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846 (Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2000), 187–202.

¹⁵³⁹ Ferdinand Sander, “Fröbel, Julius,” in Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie, vol. 49 (München/Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1904), 163–72; “Fröbel,” in Meyers Großes Konversations-Lexikon, vol. 7 (Leipzig, 1907), 161–62.

¹⁵⁴⁰ Julius, Geographisch-statistische Beschreibung der argentinischen Republik, oder die Freistaaten vom Rio de la Plata, des Freistaats vom Uruguay und des Staats Paraguay, vol. 4, Vollständiges Handbuch der neuesten Erdbeschreibung 20 (Weimar: Verlag des Geographischen Instituts, 1832).

de Madrid), and some German (Alexander von Humboldt, Dobrizhoffer in a translation from Latin to German by A. Kreil in 1783). The account by Ignacio Nuñez was published in 1825 both in a Spanish and an English version (An account, historical, political and statistical, of the United Provinces of Rio de la Plata etc.). Fröbel particularly wrote on the origins of the inhabitants (Indians, Hispano-Argentineans, Africans) and provided detailed lists and descriptions of the various indigenous tribes, Argentinean housing styles – he claimed the construction of the houses in Buenos Aires was rather European, and Buenos Aires seemed similar to a European trade city –, as well as of activities like agriculture practiced in the cultivation of wheat, Paraguay tea (Ilex maté), as well as European vegetables and fruit, and the breeding of livestock, in particular cattle and horses. He remarked that for trade purposes, ox-wagons were used for transportation in the interior and many products were exported. While he never travelled to Argentina himself, Fröbel later on did travel to North America.¹⁵⁴¹ In 1858, he also published a text about German emigration and its “culture-historical significance.”¹⁵⁴²

In 1839, August Diezmann published a German translation of the travel accounts that French naturalist and anthropologist Alcide Dessalines d’Orbigny ¹⁵⁴¹ Julius Fröbel, Aus Amerika: Erfahrungen, Reisen und Studien, vol. 1, 2 vols. (Leipzig: J. J. Weber, 1857); Julius Fröbel, Aus Amerika: Erfahrungen, Reisen und Studien, vol. 2, 2 vols. (Leipzig: J. J. Weber, 1858); Julius Fröbel, Seven Years’ Travel in Central America, Northern Mexico, and the Far West of the United States (London: Richard Bentley, 1859).

¹⁵⁴² Julius Fröbel, Die deutsche Auswanderung und ihre culturhistorische Bedeutung. Fünfzehn Briefe an den Herausgeber der Allgemeinen Auswanderungs-zeitung (Leipzig: F. Wagner, 1858).

(*1802 – 1857) had edited in 1836.¹⁵⁴³ D’Orbigny, a contemporary of Alexander von Humboldt, dedicated five of his fifty-four chapters to Argentina. He praised Buenos Aires as one of two South American “Parises” from which “civilization would spread across the continent,” the other being Lima.¹⁵⁴⁴

Over the course of the nineteenth century, geography and statistics university professor in Göttingen, Dr. Johann Eduard Wappäus (*1812 Hamburg – 1879), established himself as the leading scholar on South America in German-speaking Europe. In 1843, he published a book entitled The Republics of South America – Geography and Statistics.¹⁵⁴⁵ He included the German geographer Carl Ritter in the list of dedications, whose student he was in Berlin. In the introduction, Wappäus stated his intention to publish a comprehensive scholarly work in order to increase knowledge on the South American continent in Germany due to the commercial importance of the region for Germany.¹⁵⁴⁶ He explained where his sources came from, as he did not travel to South America for ¹⁵⁴³ Alcide Dessalines d’Orbigny, ed., Malerische Reise in Süd-und Nordamerika: eine geordnete Zusammenstellung des Wissenswürdigsten von den Entdeckungsreisen ..., trans. August Diezmann (Leipzig: Baumgärtner’s Buchhandlung, 1839); Alcide Dessalines d’Orbigny, Voyage pittoresque dans les deux Amériques (Paris: L. Tenré; Henri Dupuy, 1836); Françoise Legré-Zaidline, Alcide Dessalines d’Orbigny (1802-1857) (Paris; Budapest; Torino: l’Harmattan, 2002).

¹⁵⁴⁴ Orbigny, Voyage pittoresque dans les deux Amériques, 254.

¹⁵⁴⁵ Wappäus, Die Republiken von Südamerika geographisch-statistisch.

¹⁵⁴⁶ “Wie ungenügend die Hülfsmittel sind, welche unsere Literatur zur Erkenntnis der gegenwärtigen Zustände des ehemaligen spanischen Südamerika’s darbietet, das wird ein Jeder erfahren haben, der irgendwie Veranlassung gehabt hat, sich in Büchern und Zeitschriften umzusehen nach genaueren Nachrichten über die statistischen Verhältnisse jener unermesslichen, reichen Länder, welche in mehrfacher Hinsicht für Europa täglich von grösserer Bedeutung werden, und in dieser Beziehung darf ich wohl die Herausgabe einer Arbeit, welche eine vorzugsweise statistische Darstellung der gegenwärtigen Republiken von Südamerika zum Zweck hat, als ein zeitgemässes Unternehmen zu betrachten wagen.” Ibid., v.

this study: private messages, political papers of the various South American states, consular reports, official memoranda, and scientific works – information he had received from merchants who had been to South America but preferred to remain anonymous because “these men still ha[d] too much aversion against the press.”¹⁵⁴⁷ This publication was just the beginning of a larger project, which culminated in the 1870 handbook.¹⁵⁴⁸ Wappäus wrote that instead of imposing on the reader a fixed image forged according to subjective opinions, he wanted to provide him with as many facts as possible in order to allow him to make his own judgment.¹⁵⁴⁹ He stated his main aim was that an honorable merchant would find his work useful.¹⁵⁵⁰ In 1846, Wappäus published a book on German Emigration and Colonization (Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonization) in Germany.

¹⁵⁴⁷ “In wiefern jedoch es mir gelungen sein mag, aus der mir gesammelten Masse des Materials (Privatnachrichten, politische Blättern der verschiedenen südamerikanischen Staaten, Konsularberichten, officiellen Denkschriften, wissenschaftlichen Werken) das Wesentlichste auszuwählen und passend zusammen zu stellen, das zu beurtheilen überlasse ich dem sachkundigen Leser, der darüber eine Vergleichung mit den hierher gehörigen Leistungen unserer geographisch-statistischen Literatur anzustellen sich die Mühe gegeben mag, und dem es nicht unbekannt ist, welch ein in Anforderungen und Anschauungsweise verschiedenartiges Publikum der geographische Schriftsteller sich heut zu Tage denken muss, wenn er auf einen grösseren Leserkreis rechnen will.” Ibid., vi.

¹⁵⁴⁸ Johann Eduard Wappäus, Handbuch der Geographie und Statistik des ehemaligen spanischen Mittel- und Süd-Amerika: nebst den europäischen Besitzungen (Leipzig: Verlag der J.C. Hinrichs'schen Buchhandlung, 1870).

¹⁵⁴⁹ “Deshalb habe ich es auch vorgezogen, statt durch Vorführung eines fertig gemachten, nach subjektiven Ansichten gestalteten Bildes dem Leser einen bestimmten Totaleindruck aufzuzwingen, ihm vielmehr die Thatsachen so viel wie möglich in der Art vorzuführen, dass er selbst sich ein Urtheil und eine Anschauung daraus bilden kann, und zu dem Zwecke habe ich auch gewissenhaft immer die Quellen, aus welchen ich schöpfte, angegeben, obwohl mir nicht unbekannt war, dass dies Verfahren gegenwärtig von den soi-disant Praktikern nur noch als eine Gelehrtenpedanterie angesehen wird.” Wappäus, Die Republiken von Südamerika geographisch-statistisch, vii–viii.

Having heard about Wappäus' efforts to promote German migration and colonization in South America, Argentinean intellectual Domingo Faustino Sarmiento contacted Wappäus in 1846, and Wappäus included a letter from Sarmiento in his publication on "German Emigration and Colonization" that same year.¹⁵⁵¹ They met during Sarmiento's voyage to Europe in 1847.¹⁵⁵² Sarmiento provided him with more specific information on the conditions in southern South America, in particular the La Plata states. He stated that Wappäus had the intention of redirecting German migration from North America towards the South American states.¹⁵⁵³ Sarmiento and Wappäus collaborated on the project to ¹⁵⁵⁰ "Dass aber jenen Männern, das "Einem Ehrbaren Kaufmanne" mein Buch den Beweis fleissiger und vorurtheilsfreier Benutzung der mir so freundlich dargebotenen Hülfsmittel liefern möchte, das ist nicht der geringste der Wünsche gewesen, die mir bei Ausarbeitung dieses Werkes vorgeschwebt haben." Ibid., viii.

¹⁵⁵¹ Johann Eduard Wappäus, "Anmerkungen des Herausgebers," in Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonisation, ed. Johann Eduard Wappäus (Leipzig: J.C. Hinrichs, 1846), 104–6.

¹⁵⁵² Domingo Faustino Sarmiento, Viajes en Europa, África i América, Second Edition, vol. 2 (Santiago: Imp. de Julio Belin y Cía, 1851), 32.

¹⁵⁵³ "Estos trabajos, de los cuales ya ha aparecido uno, "Emigracion i colonizacion alemana," tienen por objeto desviar la corriente de emigracion que se precipita ciegameente sobre las costas de Norte-América, no obstante las dificultades del clima, i el pauperismo que aparece ya alarmante en las costas, a causa de la falta de direccion i de injerencia del Estado, en un asunto como el de la aglomeracion de masas de hombres en las que la vida i el porvenir de millares de seres humanos se ligan estrechamente con la hijiene i el órden público. Los escritores alemanes, reconociendo como un heco inevitablemente fatal la emigracion de sus compatriotas, se proponen, a mas de ilustras las masas sobre las ventajas que esto o el otro pais pueden ofrecerles, inducir a los gobiernos alemanes a dirigir convenientemente este movimiento, poniéndose para ello de acuerdo con los de los paises que reciben los emigrados a fin de que la prevision i el órden ahorren una parte de las desgracias i contrariedades a que esta mercadería humana está sujeta." Ibid.

produce information to attract more German-speakers to South America.¹⁵⁵⁴ Two publications came out of this 1847 meeting: Wappäus published a second version of his book on German Migration and Colonization (Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonisation. Erste Fortsetzung: Deutsche Auswanderung nach Süd-Amerika (Rio de la Plata)) in 1848, and this time, he put emphasis on explaining the conditions in the River Plate region for German migrants.¹⁵⁵⁵ He devoted part of a chapter to the political conditions in Argentina.

Upon his return to Chile (where he was in political exile) in 1851, Sarmiento published his own book on German migration to the River Plate (Emigración Alemana al Rio de la Plata) with an additional text by Dr. “Vappaüs” [sic!] as acknowledged on the cover page.¹⁵⁵⁶ At this point, Sarmiento addressed mainly a Chilean public. He stated that such publications (aimed at attracting more immigrants) were a powerful weapon.¹⁵⁵⁷ He said that Wappäus was responsible for a large number of German-speakers migrating to Chile.¹⁵⁵⁸ Sarmiento was much more moderate with regards to Argentina – he hated dictator ¹⁵⁵⁴ Ibid., 2:34.

¹⁵⁵⁵ Johann Eduard Wappäus, Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonisation. Erste Fortsetzung: Deutsche Auswanderung nach Süd-Amerika (Rio de la Plata) (Leipzig: Hinrichs Buchhandlung, 1848).

¹⁵⁵⁶ Domingo Faustino Sarmiento and Johann Eduard Wappäus, Emigracion alemana al Rio de la Plata, memoria escrita en Alemania (Santiago, Chile: Imprenta de Julio Belin, 1851).

¹⁵⁵⁷ Ibid., II.

¹⁵⁵⁸ “Durante nuestra residencia en Alemania no descuidamos ponernos en contact con aquellos promoters celosos de la emigration a la América del Sur, subministrándoles dates que sirviesesn de aliciente a los emigrants para venire a Chile, ronde el Congreso acababa de autroizar al ejective para disponer de terrenos baldíos en benefice de la emigration europea.” Ibid., IV.

Manuel Rosas too much.¹⁵⁵⁹ Only decades later, from 1868 to 1875, did he become President of Argentina, and he, as well as his successors, remained committed to attracting German-speaking migrants to Argentina.

In 1848, Wappäus also wrote a chapter on “the Germans in Buenos Aires” in Wilhelm Stricker’s book “Germania: Archives for the Knowledge of the German Elements in all countries of the earth.”¹⁵⁶⁰ Stricker’s first book on the Dissemination of the German People across the Earth was the summary of lectures given at the Geographic Association in Frankfurt am Main in the winter of 1844-45.¹⁵⁶¹ Stricker was also active with the Frankfurt National Association for Emigration and Settlement in 1849.¹⁵⁶²

Wappäus never travelled to Argentina himself. Instead, he met with South Atlantic people like Sarmiento, collected information, and cited scientists like Herman Burmeister and migrants like Carlos and Lina Beck Bernard. In 1870, Wappäus finished and published his most comprehensive work on the statistics and geography of South America.¹⁵⁶³ In this handbook, he wrote that the climate in Argentina was among the healthiest in all of South America. “Concerning the ¹⁵⁵⁹ Ibid., V.

¹⁵⁶⁰ Johann Eduard Wappäus, “Die Deutschen in Buenos-Ayres,” in Germania: Archiv zur Kenntniss des deutschen Elements in allen Ländern der Erde, ed. Wilhelm Stricker, vol. 2 (Frankfurt am Main: Heinrich Ludwig Brönnner, 1848), 441–44.

¹⁵⁶¹ Stricker, Die Verbreitung des deutschen Volkes über die Erde.

¹⁵⁶² Künzel and Stricker, Bericht über die Entstehung.

¹⁵⁶³ Wappäus, Handbuch der Geographie und Statistik des ehemaligen spanischen Mittel- und Süd-Amerika.

salubrity of the climate, the Argentinean territory belongs to the most favored ones of America. The descendants of Europeans have [...] become a strong race and the mestizos make up a handsome race (Menschenschlag).”¹⁵⁶⁴ In 1871, he published his last book, on Patagonia.¹⁵⁶⁵

The statistician Dr. Freiherr von Reden (*1804 Lippe-Detmold – 1857 Vienna) was another example of those scholars who never travelled to the South Atlantic themselves, but instead worked in Germany and relied on works from South Atlantic travelers, and used their academic authority to “promote the knowledge.”¹⁵⁶⁶ He published his Foundation for Speeches to the Frankfurt Geographical Society in 1852.¹⁵⁶⁷ He drew on published works available to him, such as those by Wappäus and Orbigny, among others. He provided an extensive discussion of the complicated political situation within “Argentina” in the 1850s.

Another example of established intellectuals in Germany disseminating knowledge (like Wappäus and Sarmiento) is that of Dr. Johannes Baumgarten and Gustavo Niederlein. Baumgarten himself remained in Germany, but he brought together works by different authors – including Niederlein – and made them accessible to a German readership in his book America: An Ethnographic ¹⁵⁶⁴ Ibid., 966.

¹⁵⁶⁵ Johann Eduard Wappäus, Patagonien, die Argentinische Republik, Uruguay und Paraguay: geographisch und statistisch dargestellt (Leipzig: Hinrichs, 1871).

¹⁵⁶⁶ Karl Wippermann, “Reden, Friedrich Wilhelm Otto Ludwig Freiherr von,” in Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie, vol. 27, 1888, 513–15.

¹⁵⁶⁷ Reden, Die Staaten im Stromgebiet des La Plata in ihrer Bedeutung für Europa.

*Excursion on the Continent and the Antilles: Character Illustrations, Custom Descriptions, Scenes from Popular Life. According to the Best and Newest, German and Foreign Sources.*¹⁵⁶⁸

Then there were the publications of those scholars who actually worked in Argentina, like botanist Dr. Hermann Burmeister (*1807 Stralsund, Sweden – 1892, Buenos Aires).¹⁵⁶⁹ Burmeister was the most influential and famous of German-speaking scholars in Argentina. While many of his contemporaries found him difficult, they nonetheless held him in high esteem. He first traveled to Brazil and Argentina in 1850, upon recommendation of Alexander von Humboldt, and then moved to Argentina in 1861, where he became director of the natural museum in La Plata.¹⁵⁷⁰ In 1870, Burmeister was charged with founding the faculty of natural science at the newly created university of Cordoba.¹⁵⁷¹ However, as a result of a conflict between Burmeister and the German-speakers he had made come to Argentina, six of the scientists returned to Germany already

¹⁵⁶⁸ Baumgarten, “Die Pampas-Indianer.”

¹⁵⁶⁹ “Burmeister,” in Brockhaus’ Kleines Konversations-Lexikon, Fifth edition, vol. 1 (Leipzig, 1911), 292.

¹⁵⁷⁰ Friedrich Ratzel, “Burmeister, Hermann,” in Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie, vol. 53 (München/Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1903), 394–396.

¹⁵⁷¹ Ibid.

in 1874.¹⁵⁷² Burmeister published several travel accounts in the 1860s and 1870s.¹⁵⁷³

Dr. Alfred Stelzner (*1840 Dresden – 1895 Wiesbaden) was a mineralogist and geologist who worked with Dr. Hermann Burmeister in Cordoba in the 1870s before he returned to Germany (Freiburg) in 1874, after three years in Argentina. He published his work on geology in Argentina in 1885 under the order of the Argentine national government in Germany.¹⁵⁷⁴ Other German scholars called to the University of Córdoba, founded by Sarmiento and Nicolas Avellaneda, included: the botanist Dr. P.G. Lorentz from Munich (arrived in 1870), the chemist Dr. M. Siewert from Halle (arrived in 1870), the zoologist Dr. H. Weyenbergh from Harlem (arrived in 1872), the physicist Dr. Schultz-Sellack from Berlin (arrived in 1872) and the mathematician Dr. C.H. Vogler from München (arrived in 1873). The professors should use the time they were not ¹⁵⁷² Ortiz, “On the Transition from Realism to the Fantastic in the Argentina of the 1870s: Holmberg and the Córdoba Six,” 59.

¹⁵⁷³ Hermann Burmeister, Reise durch die La Plata-Staaten, mit besonderer Rücksicht auf die physische Beschaffenheit und den Culturzustand der Argentinischen Republik: ausgeführt in den Jahren 1857, 1858, 1859 und 1860, vol. 1, 2 vols. (Halle: H. W. Schmidt, 1861); Hermann Burmeister, Reise durch die La Plata-Staaten, mit besonderer Rücksicht auf die physische Beschaffenheit und den Culturzustand der Argentinischen Republik. Ausgeführt in den Jahren 1857, 1858, 1859 und 1860, vol. 2, 2 vols. (Halle: H. W. Schmidt, 1861); Hermann Burmeister, Über das Klima der Argentinischen Republik. Nach dreijährigen Beobachtungen während einer Reise durch die La Plata-Staaten geschildert und mit numerischen Angaben der gefundenen Werthe belegt (Halle: H. W. Schmidt, 1861); Hermann Burmeister, Physikalische Beschreibung der argentinischen Republik nach eigenen und den vorhandenen fremden Beobachtungen, vol. 1 (Halle: Anton, 1875).

¹⁵⁷⁴ Alfred Stelzner, Geologischer Theil. Beiträge zur Geologie der Argentinischen Republik und des angrenzenden, zwischen der 32. und 33. S. Br. gelgenen Theiles der Chilenischen Cordillere, Beiträge zur Geologie und Palaeontologie der Argentinischen Republik 1 (Cassel und Berlin: Theodor Fischer, 1885).

lecturing for research travel in Argentina.¹⁵⁷⁵ These German-speaking scholars came to Argentina to share their knowledge and contribute to further develop scientific research in South America.

Dr. Rudolf Hauthal (*1854 Hamburg – 1928 Hildesheim) was also a German geologist, who traveled to Argentina in 1890 where he first worked as a private tutor, then as the director of the La Plata Museum, and later as an Argentinean state geologist in Patagonia, before being appointed professor at the University of La Plata.¹⁵⁷⁶ In 1904, Hauthal wrote his dissertation about the geology in the province of Buenos Aires.¹⁵⁷⁷ In 1912, he published an article about mining in Argentina with the German-Argentinean Society for the promotion of economic interests in Berlin.¹⁵⁷⁸ Dr. Rudolf Lütgens (*1881 Hamburg – 1972 Hamburg) was economic geographer who worked at the Colonial Institute in Hamburg between 1910 and 1924 as a specialist for South America.¹⁵⁷⁹ In 1912, he published his travel account from a trip to the Argentinean Chaco and the Paraná River with the German-Argentinean Central ¹⁵⁷⁵ Ibid., ix.

¹⁵⁷⁶ Heinz Peter Brogiato, “Hauthal, Rudolf Johannes Friedrich,” in Germany and the Americas: Culture, Politics, and History, ed. Thomas Adam (Santa Barbara California: ABC-CLIO, 2005), 488.

¹⁵⁷⁷ Rudolf Johann Friedrich Hauthal, Beiträge zur Geologie der argentinischen Provinz Buenos Aires, Inaugural-Dissertation (Gotha: J. Perthes, 1904).

¹⁵⁷⁸ Hauthal, Das Minenwesen in Argentinien.

¹⁵⁷⁹ Gerhard Sander, “Lütgens, Rudolf,” in Neue Deutsche Biographie, vol. 15, 1987, 478.

Association for the Promotion of Economic Interests in Berlin.¹⁵⁸⁰ Professor at Würzburg University, Dr. Fritz Regel had been asked to publish a book on applied geography in Argentina in 1914 where he extensively discussed the position of Germans in Argentinean society and life of German-Argentineans.¹⁵⁸¹ All of these scholars spent some time in Argentina and contributed to the “advancement of science” for both Germany and Argentina.

The geographer Dr. Franz Kühn temporarily worked at the Instituto Nacional del Profesorado Secundario in Buenos Aires.¹⁵⁸² In 1914, he published an article on the development of the city of Buenos Aires in the journal of the German South American Institute.¹⁵⁸³ He criticized the many descriptions of the city made by people who had visited Buenos Aires only briefly. He claimed that in 1914, Buenos Aires was in the process of transforming into a modern metropole and leaving behind its characteristics of a (Spanish) colonial city. As main elements of this change, Kühn identified: 1) the replacement of old characteristic one- and two-story houses with modern highrises with more than five stories used for commercial and housing purposes; 2) the opening of the ¹⁵⁸⁰ Rudolf Lütgens, Geographische Bilder aus dem argentinischen Chaco und vom oberen Paraná, Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 4 (Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912).

¹⁵⁸¹ Fritz Regel, Argentinien, Angewandte Geographie. Hefte zur Verbreitung geographischer Kenntnisse in ihrer Beziehung zum Kultur- und Wirtschaftsleben, IV. 10. (Frankfurt am Main: Heinrich Keller, 1914).

¹⁵⁸² Newton, German Buenos Aires, 1900-1933.

¹⁵⁸³ Franz Kühn, “Buenos Aires. Eine siedelungskundliche Studie,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 2 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914), 267–87.

subway; 3) the creation of two diagonal avenues in the downtown area.¹⁵⁸⁴ Kühn described Buenos Aires as a cosmopolitan city.¹⁵⁸⁵ He claimed that Buenos Aires was not typically Argentinean because more than half of its inhabitants were foreign by 1914: “Who only visited Buenos Aires, really has not been to Argentina.”¹⁵⁸⁶ In 1919, he published a report on developments in the field of geography during the war years with the Journal of the Geographical Society in Berlin.¹⁵⁸⁷ In 1927, he published a handbook on physical geography of Argentina.¹⁵⁸⁸

The geographer Otto Quelle (*1879 – 1959) directed the journal of the German-South American institute during WWI.¹⁵⁸⁹ He was involved in the project of providing the German public in Central Europe with accurate, current, and scientific information on South America. He published several articles about Argentina, both about past and present.¹⁵⁹⁰ Ilse von Rentzell was among the few ¹⁵⁸⁴ Ibid., 268.

¹⁵⁸⁵ Ibid., 283.

¹⁵⁸⁶ Ibid.

¹⁵⁸⁷ Kühn, “Geographischer Bericht aus Argentinien während der Kriegsjahre 1914 bis 1919.”

¹⁵⁸⁸ Franz Kühn, Argentinien: Handbuch zur physischen Landeskunde, vol. 1 (Breslau: F. Hirt, 1927); Franz Kühn, Argentinien: Handbuch zur physischen Landeskunde, vol. 2 (Breslau: Hirt, 1927).

¹⁵⁸⁹ “Quelle, Otto Friedrich Julius Rudolf,” in Deutsche Biographie, n.d.

¹⁵⁹⁰ Otto Quelle, “Beiträge zur wissenschaftlichen Orientierung über das lateinische Amerika,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 3 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915), 185–87; Otto Quelle, “Die Heimstättengesetze von Argentinien und Paraguay,” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Otto Quelle, vol. 7 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1919), 2–9; Quelle, “Zur Geschichte der rheinischen Handelsbeziehungen mit Lateinamerika”; Otto Quelle, “Die Ergebnisse der dritten argentinischen Volkszählung vom 1. Juni 1914 (Besprechung und

German-speaking woman scientists working in Argentina. In 1935, she published a book on indigenous plants.¹⁵⁹¹ She also cooperated with Cristobal M. Hicken and published an overview of his works in 1937.¹⁵⁹²

In Namibia, production of expert knowledge on the region took off after the first protection treaties were concluded after 1883. Karl Dove examined the climate, Swiss-German botanist Hans Schinz the flora, Ernst Stromer von Reichenbach and Paul Range the geology, J.C. Watermeyer, Hanemann, Paul Rohrbach and Theodor Rehbock the economic conditions. But scientific knowledge was produced and disseminated long before that. After the early travellers, the it was British travellers that were involved in scientific writing and exploration after 1800 in Namibia, like English-speaking merchants were “paving the way” for German-speakers in the South Atlantic. While the Scottish traveller James Edward Alexander was not a German-speaker, he was among the few Europeans in the region in the first half of the nineteenth century and his published accounts became a point of reference for German-speakers coming to the region after him. He published his travel accounts from 1835 to 1846 with the Anregungen),” in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Otto Quelle, vol. 9 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1921), 81-.

¹⁵⁹¹ Ilse von Rentzell, Maravillas de nuestras plantas indígenas y algunas exóticas (Buenos Aires: Editores Ilse von Rentzell, 1935).

¹⁵⁹² Ilse von Rentzell, “Las publicaciones científicas del Doctor Cristóbal M. Hicken,” Darwiniana 2, no. 4 (1937): 97–104.

British Royal Geographical Society.¹⁵⁹³ Similarly, Anglo-Swedish traveler Karl Johan Anderson¹⁵⁹⁴ and British scholar Francis Galton,¹⁵⁹⁵ who later became known for his contributions to eugenics, travelled together in Namibia in the 1850s and each published their travel accounts. Anderson's travel account was even translated into German by Hermann Lotze already in 1858.¹⁵⁹⁶ Galton also visited the Rhenish missionary Carl Hugo Hahn in Otjimbingwe.¹⁵⁹⁷ In the 1860s and 1870s, Hahn's son Josaphat Hahn published several articles about Herero-speakers with two reputable institutions in Germany: Justus Perthes and the Geography Society in Berlin.¹⁵⁹⁸ Theophilus Hahn was not related to Carl Hugo ¹⁵⁹³ James Edward Alexander, Entdeckungsreise in das innere Südwestafrikas: Bericht über eine Reise von Kapstadt nach Walvishbay durch das Gross-Namaland in den Jahren 1835 und 1846, trans. Klaus Becker (Windhoek: Wolfgang Tuschmann Verlag Schreibstube Probeer, 2005).

¹⁵⁹⁴ Karl Johan Anderson, Notes of Travel in South-Western Africa (New York: G.P. Putnam's sons, 1875).

¹⁵⁹⁵ Galton, Narrative of an Explorer in Tropical South Africa.

¹⁵⁹⁶ Andersson, Reisen in Südwest-Afrika 1; Charles John Andersson, Reisen in Südwest-Afrika bis zum See Ngami in den Jahren 1850 bis 1854, trans. Hermann Lotze, vol. 2 (Leipzig: Costenoble, 1858).

¹⁵⁹⁷ Galton, Narrative of an Explorer in Tropical South Africa.

¹⁵⁹⁸ Josaphat Hahn, "Hereró-Land," in Mittheilungen aus Justus Perthes' geographischer Anstalt über wichtige neue Erforschungen auf dem Gesamtgebiete der Geographie, ed. A. Petermann (Gotha: Justus Perthes, 1867), 274–275; Josaphat Hahn, "Das Land der Ovahereró," in Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, ed. Wilhelm David Koner, vol. 3 (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1868), 193–224–507; Josaphat Hahn, "Die Ovahereró. (Zweite Abtheilung)," in Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, ed. Wilhelm David Koner, vol. 4 (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1868), 226–58; Josaphat Hahn, "Gegenwärtiges Verhältniß der Namaqua zu den Hereró," in Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, ed. Wilhelm David Koner, vol. 5 (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1870), 468–469.

Hahn; he was a missionary colonist, who also published an article on the Herero-speakers with the Geography Society in Berlin in 1870.¹⁵⁹⁹

There are two examples of “second degree agents of transfer” for the case of Southern Africa: In 1859, Karl Andree published a translated and edited version of the travel writings of Galton, Andersson, and David Livingstone.¹⁶⁰⁰ Professor Dr. Friedrich Körner published a book based on the travel writings of various German- and English-speaking travelers.¹⁶⁰¹ In the introduction, he explained that Germany was now a world power and its people needed to be educated and informed about the developments and discoveries in other parts of the world, like Africa. Körner just mentioned the sources he used in the introduction and then presented the body of his text as one coherent narrative, without citing the sources in detail.

Then there were several German-speaking scholars who actually travelled in Namibia and published works based on their primary observations: The Swiss-German botanist Hans Schinz (*1858 Zurich – 1941 Zurich) participated in the Lüderitz’s expedition to South-Western Africa between 1884 and 1886.¹⁶⁰² He ¹⁵⁹⁹ Theophilus Hahn, “Der hottentotische Tsü-ï-lgoa-b und der griechische Ζεῦς,” in Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, ed. Wilhelm David Koner, vol. 5 (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1870), 452–456; Theophilus Hahn, “[Colonist Letter 30] Theoph. Hahn to Gustav van Zyl in Ghanze,” September 17, 1875, RMG 2.573, Bl. 93.

¹⁶⁰⁰ Andree, Südafrika und Madagaskar.

¹⁶⁰¹ Friedrich Körner, Süd-Afrika: Natur- und Kulturbilder mit einer historischen Einleitung und einer ausführlichen Uebersicht der neueren Reisen (Breslau, Leipzig: Ferdinand Hirt, 1873).

¹⁶⁰² Erwin Neuenschwander, “Schinz, Hans,” in Historisches Lexikon der Schweiz / Dictionnaire historique de la Suisse, 2011, <http://www.hls-dhs-dss.ch/textes/d/D28933.php>.

published various books on his exploring expeditions in Namibia both in German and French between 1891 and 1911.¹⁶⁰³ He published an article in the Swiss Geographic Society in 1890, with the self-proclaimed aim of rectifying the available information about the German protectorate South-West Africa.¹⁶⁰⁴ He expressed his hope that a scientific description of the protectorate would deliver it from the negative propaganda of the colonial opponents and as well as from the false exaggerations of the colonial enthusiasts.¹⁶⁰⁵

The geologist Georg Gürich (*1859 – 1938), who later on worked at Colonial Institute in Hamburg, travelled throughout Namibia in 1888 and 1889.¹⁶⁰⁶ He discussed the different names of the parts of the German South-West African protectorate: Lüderitzland, Damaraland and Namaqualand, the Kaokoveld, and the land of the Ovambo. Lüderitzland only referred to the area around the harbor Angra Pequena in the Southern half of the entire territory.¹⁶⁰⁷

Damaraland and Namaqualand: Namaland was the land of the Nama; with only ¹⁶⁰³ Hans Schinz, Exploration dans le sud-ouest de l'Afrique (Genève: Schuchardt, 1887); Hans Schinz, "Die deutsche Interessensphäre in Südwest-Afrika," Fernschau: Jahrbuch der Mittelschweizerischen Geographischen-Commerciellen Gesellschaft in Aarau 4 (1890): 132–73; Hans Schinz, Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: Forschungsreisen durch die deutschen Schutzgebiete Gross-Nama- und Hereroland, nach dem Kunene, dem Ngami-See und der Kalaxari, 1884-1887 (Oldenburg: Schulzesche Hof-Buchhandlung und Hof-Buchdruckerei, 1891); Hans Schinz, "Die Vegetation des deutschen Schutzgebietes in Südwest-Afrika," ed. Gustav Meinecke, Koloniales Jahrbuch. Sechster Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1893 6 (1894): 60–76; Hans Schinz, Die Pflanzenwelt Deutsch-Südwest-Afrikas: (mit Einschluss der westlichen Kalachari) (Genève: Romet, 1896); Hans Schinz, Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: (mit Einschluss der Grenzgebiete in botanischer Beziehung) (Zürich: Zürcher & Furrer, 1911).

¹⁶⁰⁴ Schinz, "Die deutsche Interessensphäre in Südwest-Afrika," 132 f.

¹⁶⁰⁵ Ibid., 173.

¹⁶⁰⁶ Gürich, Deutsch Südwest-Afrika.

¹⁶⁰⁷ Ibid., 1.

Great Namaqualand overlapping with the German protectorate, whereas Small Namaqualand was located south of the Orange river within the territory claimed by the English Cape Colony. Damaraland lay in the middle part of the territory, where majority of the Herero lived.¹⁶⁰⁸ The Kaokoveld was inhabited by Herero, and the land of the Ovambo (Ambo) was located in the North. Naming the land was a clear indicator of appropriating land. It is interesting to note, however, that in many instances, German-speakers in Namibia respected the local names and incorporated them into their system.

The geographer Dr. Karl Dove (*1863 Tübingen – 1922 Jena) worked for the German Colonial Society in the German protectorate South-West Africa between 1892 and 1894, and was Professor of Geography in Jena from 1899 to 1907.¹⁶⁰⁹ His dissertation from 1888 was on the climate of non-tropical South Africa, prior to his travels to Africa.¹⁶¹⁰ After his time in Namibia, he published several books and articles, including a scientific travel account about the Damaraland, meteorological observations about the German protectorates, and two publications about the German protectorate South-West Africa.¹⁶¹¹ His books

¹⁶⁰⁸ Ibid., 2.

¹⁶⁰⁹ Otto Maull, “Dove, Karl,” in Neue Deutsche Biographie, vol. 4, 1959, 93.

¹⁶¹⁰ Karl Dove, Das Klima des aussertropischen Südafrika: mit Berücksichtigung der geographischen und wirtschaftlichen Beziehungen nach klimatischen Provinzen dargestellt (Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht’s Verlag, 1888).

¹⁶¹¹ Karl Dove, Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Ergebnisse einer wissenschaftlichen Reise im südlichen Damaralande, Petermanns Mitteilungen. Ergänzungsband XXVI (Gotha: J. Perthes, 1896); Karl Dove, “Meteorologische Beobachtungen aus den deutschen Schutzgebieten,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 23–32;

about Namibia mostly followed the same structure of content: a description of the countryside, the climate, the animals, the plants, the indigenous population, and the white population. Dove was also editor of the series “Applied Geography,” which published Alfred Funke’s book on the settlement of eastern South America in 1903.¹⁶¹²

The paleontologist Dr. Ernst Stromer von Reichenbach (*1871 – 1952) also never travelled to Africa; he collected previously published information from travel accounts, discussing the different areas of the German protectorate: Namaland, Hereroland, Kaokoland, and the Kalahari.¹⁶¹³ The geographer Dr. Georg Hartmann (*1865 Dresden – 1946 Grammersdorf) travelled in Namibia between 1893 and 1901 as employee for the South West Africa Company and the Otavi Society.¹⁶¹⁴ His travels in Namibia were at times interrupted by short stays in Germany and he also published scientific accounts during that time: he published an article about the Kaokoveld in 1897, two presentations about the German protectorate in 1899 and 1900, a book and article about both a second trip

Karl Dove, Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika (Berlin: W. Süsserott, 1903); Karl Dove, Südwestafrika, Die Deutschen Kolonien 4 (Berlin, Leipzig: G. J. Göschen, 1913).

¹⁶¹² Funke, Die Besiedlung des östlichen Südamerika, mit besonderer Berücksichtigung des Deutschtums.

¹⁶¹³ Ernst Stromer von Reichenbach, Die Geologie der deutschen Schutzgebiete in Afrika (München: R. Oldenbourg, 1896), 111–56; Ernst Probst, Der rätselhafte Spinosaurus: Leben und Werk des Forschers Ernst Stromer von Reichenbach (München: GRIN Verlag, 2015).

¹⁶¹⁴ “Hartmann,” in Meyers Großes Konversations-Lexikon, vol. 8 (Leipzig, 1907), 842–45.

to the Kaokoveld as well as Amboland, a book about German South-West Africa's future as well as a map about the northern part of the protectorate.¹⁶¹⁵

Dr. Siegfried Passarge (*1866 Königsberg (East Prussia) – 1958 Bremen) was geography lecturer in Berlin in 1904-05, professor for Geography in Breslau from 1905 to 1908 and Professor for geography at the Hamburg Colonial Institute from 1908 to 1936.¹⁶¹⁶ Between 1896 and 1899, he travelled to southern Africa as geologist for the British West Charterland Society and examined the Kalahari for gold and diamond extraction. In 1904, he published a book on the geographic presentation of the Kalahari Desert and in 1907 about the indigenous people inhabiting it.¹⁶¹⁷ Dr. Leonhard Schultze (*1872 Jena – 1955 Marburg/Lahn) was zoologist, geographer, ethnographer, and linguist, who travelled to Namibia between 1903 and 1905.¹⁶¹⁸ He published two books about his journey in

¹⁶¹⁵ Georg Hartmann, "Das Kaoko-Gebiet in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika auf Grund eigener Reisen und Beobachtungen (Sonderabdruck)," Verhandlungen der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin 2 (1897): 115–41; Georg Hartmann, Deutsch-Südwestafrika im Zusammenhang mit Süd-Afrika: Vortrag (Berlin: J. Belling, 1899); Georg Hartmann, Der Krieg in Süd-Afrika und seine Lehren für Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: Nach einem Vortrag gehalten in der Abtheilung Bremen der Deutschen Kolonial-Gesellschaft (Berlin: Mittler, 1900); Georg Hartmann, Meine Expedition 1900 ins nördliche Kaokofeld und 1901 durch das Amboland. Mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Zukunftsaufgaben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Berlin: Süsserott, 1903); ibid.; Georg Hartmann, Die Zukunft Deutsch-Südwestafrikas. Beitrag zur Besiedlungs- und Eingeborenenfrage (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1904); Georg Hartmann and Max Groll, "Karte des nördlichen Teiles von Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika" (Hamburg: Friedrichsen, 1904).

¹⁶¹⁶ Heinrich Schnee, "Passarge, Siegfried," in Deutsches Kolonial-Lexikon, vol. 3, 1920, 25; Viola Imhof, "Passarge, Otto Karl Siegfried," in Neue Deutsche Biographie, vol. 20, 2001, 88 f.

¹⁶¹⁷ Siegfried Passarge, Die Kalahari: Versuch einer physisch-geographischen Darstellung der Sandfelder des südafrikanischen Beckens (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1904); Siegfried Passarge, Die Buschmänner der Kalahari (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1907).

¹⁶¹⁸ Berthold Riese, "Schultze Jena, Leonhard," in Neue Deutsche Biographie, vol. 23, 2007, 704–5.

Namaland and the Kalahari desert.¹⁶¹⁹ The geologist Dr. Paul Theodor Range (*1879 Lübeck – 1952 Lübeck) was one of the few scholars in Namibia having been employed by the colonial government; he worked there between 1906 and 1914.¹⁶²⁰ He published several books on the Namaland.¹⁶²¹ The geologist Dr. Hans Cloos (*1885 Magdeburg – 1951 Bonn) travelled to the German protectorate immediately after his dissertation defense in 1909. In 1911, he published on the geology of the Hereroland.¹⁶²²

7.1.2 Translating Science for the General Public

The authors of the writings that I include in this section under the label “popular propaganda” were evaluating and praising the suitability of the countryside for agricultural colonization. They produced literature that was addressed specifically to a non-scientific and thus “popular” audience, to the common people. In French, ¹⁶¹⁹ Leonhard Schultze, Aus Namaland und Kalahari: Bericht an die Kgl. Preuss. Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin über eine Forschungsreise im westlichen und zentralen Südafrika, ausgeführt in den Jahren 1903-1905 (Jena: Gustav Fischer, 1907); Leonhard Schultze, Zoologische und anthropologische Ergebnisse einer Forschungsreise im westlichen und zentralen Südafrika ausgeführt in den Jahren 1903 - 1905 mit Unterstützung der Kgl. Preußischen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin (Jena: G. Fischer, 1908).

¹⁶²⁰ Rudolf Vierhaus, ed., “Range, Paul,” in Deutsche biographische Enzyklopedie, Second edition, vol. 8 (München: K. G. Saur, 2007), 173.

¹⁶²¹ Paul Theodor Range, Reisestudien in Gross-Namaland (Berlin: [s.n.], 1908); Paul Theodor Range, Geologie des deutschen Namalandes (Berlin: Geol. Landesanst., 1912); Paul Theodor Range, Beiträge und Ergänzungen zur Landeskunde des deutschen Namalandes (Hamburg: L. Friederichsen & Co., 1914).

¹⁶²² Hans Cloos, Geologie des Erongo im Hererolande (Geologische Beobachtungen in Südafrika, Teil II.), Beiträge zur geologischen Erforschung der Deutschen Schutzgebiete (Berlin: Geol. Landesanst., 1911).

the term “vulgarization” is used for this process, a term which doesn’t have the same negative connotation in that language as in English. Most South Atlantic German-language popular propaganda aimed at attracting further immigration was produced between the 1880s and 1920. Many of these publications constituted “migrant manuals.” While in Argentina mostly private people like Karl Friedrich, Wilhelm Vallentin, the brothers Moritz and Theodor Alemann, Gustavo Niederlein, José Greger, Alfred Arent, and Otto Preusse-Sperber were active in promoting it as the perfect colonization destination, in Namibia many government officials working for the Information Bureau for Migrants got involved. Most of these writings were published in Namibia after the 1880s, when there was more interest in the region and the suitability for European settlement, and thus colonization. But there were also some writings produced in the first half of the nineteenth century.

Between the 1820s and the 1880s, the few German-speakers that settled in southwestern Africa had done so without any interference or assistance from Germany, or rather any German state governments, since the German Empire as such only came into existence in 1871. Namibia was gradually put under protection of the German Empire starting in 1884 and turned into the protectorate (Schutzgebiet) German South-West Africa. However, even under the status of protectorate, German Imperial authorities undertook little effort to settle the land in the first decades. Still in 1902, most land was in the hands of (private) concession companies, and some people called for the German colonial government to take control of the land distribution.¹⁶²³ German-speakers as well as other Europeans never heavily settled the region. Most settlers came after the Namibian War, between 1904 and 1914 (and then, again, after WWI). On the other side of the Atlantic, German-Argentines were active in promoting German interest in Argentina. They were concerned with further German immigration, increased settlement (colonies), and trade relations. The Argentine government owned land and promoted settlement with European “colonists,” according to the 1876 ley de inmigración y colonización (immigration and colonization law),¹⁶²⁴ and settlers were not separated according to national origins.¹⁶²⁵ The Swiss-German brothers Moritz and Theodor Alemann for example, were naturalized Argentines and considered it to be their patriotic duty towards Argentina to help increase migration of German-speakers to their chosen home. Between 1886 and 1914, both brothers travelled to the Argentinean interior and published their travel accounts to attract attention of German-speakers from Central Europe.

German-speakers like Ernst Hasse considered Dr. Johann Eduard Wappäus, whom we discussed in the previous section, as an originator of informing German-speakers about South America as a valid migration destination ¹⁶²³ BArch R 1001/1151, pag.77 (“Bevölkerungspolitik in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” Deutsche Zeitung, 7 Januar 1902), BArch R 1001/1152, pag. 32 (“Deutschnationale Politik in Südwestafrika,” Deutsche Zeitung, 11. September 1902).

¹⁶²⁴ Ley de inmigración y colonización de la República Argentina.

¹⁶²⁵ BArch R 901/30430, pag. 174 (Verein zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderer, 1913).

starting in the 1840s, and as a strong advocate for redirecting German-speakers to the River Plate in particular. Samuel Gottfried Kerst was also an early advocate for German-speaking colonization in South America. He first worked for the Brazilian military and participated in the Uruguayan independence war in 1826.¹⁶²⁶ Upon his return to Germany in 1851, he gave a presentation to the Berlin Association for the Centralization of German Emigration and Colonization on 8 October 1851.¹⁶²⁷ He stated that Germany could not acquire its own colonies like other sea powers because the earth was already divided and Germany was coming too late. He discussed German emigration in depth and considered it a sign of an unhealthy German nation. For him, it was about limiting the degree to which German capital and force was exploited by making German emigration useful for German trade policy (Deutsche Handelspolitik). Kerst lamented the fact that the national assembly of 1848 had planned on treating emigration as a “national cause,” and with its dissolution this idea also disappeared. He wished that it would be picked up by the customs union (Zollverein).¹⁶²⁸ He wrote that almost all South American states tried to attract German emigrants: “after the abolition or restriction of the slave trade, Germany seems to them as a second Africa, where thousands of industrious workers can be acquired even cheaper.”¹⁶²⁹ In the context of a changing (second) Atlantic economy, with the transition from slave labor to wage labor, Kerst addressed the fear that Germans could be turned into the new slaves to replace African ones.¹⁶³⁰ He argued in favor of German colonization of what he called the Uruguay River region:

¹⁶²⁶ Hilda Agnes Hübner Flores, Alemães na Guerra dos Farrapos (Porto Alegre: EDIPUCRS, 1995), 23.

¹⁶²⁷ Kerst, Die Länder am Uruguay.

¹⁶²⁸ Ibid., 3.

A numerous German population at the [river] Uruguay, in close relation with the mother country, a German staple market at the mouth of the Rio Negro, and we will be able to assert our trade-political independence in the future as well. Because the paths from this staple market to India, China, Australia, Africa and the west coast of South America would not be longer, rather in some cases even shorter than from New York, over or through the strait in Central America, to those regions, and not European sea-power has and finds in the Atlantic Ocean a base from which their fleets could in the long-run dominate the mouth of the La Plata; against conquest however are protecting the fresh and self-confident inhabitants, primeval forests, mountains, in short the nature of the entire country and its coast.¹⁶³¹

Kerst gave another presentation to the Berlin Association for the Centralization of German Emigration and Colonization on May 12, 1852.¹⁶³² He compared the rivers Uruguay and Parana in the River Plate to the Rhine and others to the Elbe, Oder and Weser. He dreamed of a large German population in the River plate maintaining an intimate relationship with the “mother country” (Mutterland) in order for Germany to maintain its “trade-political” (handelspolitisch)

¹⁶²⁹ Ibid., 3; See also Samuel Gottfried Kerst, Über brasilianische Zustände der Gegenwart, mit Bezug auf die deutsche Auswanderung nach Brasilien und das System der brasilianischen Pflanze, den Mangel an afrikanischen Sklaven durch deutsche Proletarier zu ersetzen (Berlin: Beit und Comp, 1853).

¹⁶³⁰ Kerst, Ueber brasilianische Zustände der Gegenwart.

¹⁶³¹ Kerst, Die Länder am Uruguay, 14.

¹⁶³² Kerst, Die Länder im Stromgebiete des La Plata.

independence in the future. This German population should operate under the protection of the German Zollverein in order to compete with the British, the French, and the North Americans, but would also require a strong German navy. Kerst claimed in 1852 in his second presentation to the Berlin association that people had finally agreed that only America was suitable for German settlements.¹⁶³³ Also in 1852, L. Bahre edited a book on the present and future of the River plate states.¹⁶³⁴ He claimed that only South America - and the La Plata States in particular – provided a great future for German colonies and trade.¹⁶³⁵ Bahre cited Wappäus among others, and Kerst wrote a preface for his book.

Carlos Beck Bernard (*1819 – 1900) and his wife Lina (*1824, Bitschwyler, Alsatia – 1888) were originally from German-speaking Switzerland. Like other Swiss-Germans, they knew both German and French and published in both languages. Lina Beck Bernard had gone to Santa Fe, Argentina in 1857 with her husband, who worked to promote agricultural colonization in Argentina. They lived in Argentina for five years.¹⁶³⁶ In 1865, Carlos published his first book on ¹⁶³³ Ibid., 11.

¹⁶³⁴ L. Bahre, ed., Gegenwart und Zukunft der Plata-Länder für deutschen Handel und Colonisation, Mittheilungen über die Verhältnisse in den Ländern am Plata namentlich mit Rücksicht auf die bestehenden Interessen Deutschen Handels- und Colonisationswesens in Buenos Aires 1 (Hamburg: Hoffman & Campe, 1852).

¹⁶³⁵ Ibid., xi.

¹⁶³⁶ Lina Beck Bernard, Le Rio Parana: Cinq années de séjour dans la République Argentine (Paris: Gressart, 1864); Lina Beck Bernard, El río Paraná: cinco años en la Confederación Argentina, 1857-1862, Memoria argentina; Variation: Memoria argentina. (Buenos Aires, Argentina: Emecé, 2001).

the Argentine Republic in Lausanne, Switzerland, written in French.¹⁶³⁷ His wife actually published before him. His second publication was in German in 1868, which he started with the description of the Argentine countryside. He claimed that while the national religion [Landesreligion] was Roman Catholic, there was religious freedom in Argentina. Almost all of the agricultural colonies [Ackerbaukolonien] were composed primarily of Protestants and had their own Protestant churches, priests and parishes, which were in contact with the Protestant churches in Buenos Aires.¹⁶³⁸ He dedicated an entire chapter to agricultural colonies.¹⁶³⁹ Beck Bernard published two of his books in German with the printing press of J. Allemann in Bern, Switzerland,¹⁶⁴⁰ and his book about Argentina was reprinted as a pocket edition for migrants in Leipzig, Germany in 1883.¹⁶⁴¹

According to the encyclopedia of General German Biography from 1897, Johann Jakob Sturz (*1800 Frankfurt am Main - 1877 Friedenau near Berlin) was ¹⁶³⁷ Carlos Beck Bernard, La République Argentine ... ancien Directeur de la colonie de San Carlos, près de Santa Fé (Amérique du Sud) (Lausanne: Delafontaine et Rouge, 1865).

¹⁶³⁸ Beck Bernard, Die Argentinische Republik als Auswanderungsziel, 13.

¹⁶³⁹ Ibid., 23 ff.

¹⁶⁴⁰ Beck Bernard, Die Argentinische Republik als Auswanderungsziel; Carlos Beck Bernard, Die Argentinische Republik: ein Handbuch für Auswanderer und Kolonisten (Bern: J. Allemann, 1872); Carlos Beck Bernard, La République argentine: Manuel de l'émigrant et du cultivateur (Berne: Imprimerie J. Allemann, 1872).

¹⁶⁴¹ Carlos Beck Bernard, Argentinien, Über's Meer: Taschenbibliothek für deutsche Auswanderer 5 (Leipzig: Weltpost, 1883).

a colonial politician and philanthropist.¹⁶⁴² Like Kerst, he warned against the migration of German-speakers to Brazil because of the practice of replacing the former African slaves with a cheap workforce consisting of poor German migrants, which Sturz denounced as “white slavery.”¹⁶⁴³ Sturz also noted that in 1862, the United States had become a less favorable migration destination for German-speakers due to the ongoing America Civil War.¹⁶⁴⁴ In his 1862 publication Can and Should a New-Germany be Founded and How?, Sturz discussed the “political criteria” for such a proposition: it had to be an area where Germans could hope to maintain influence, it had to be scarcely populated and it should not become a rival in the near future; in addition, it should neither be a slave nor a tropical country.¹⁶⁴⁵ Sturz then concluded, that the best continent was Spanish America, and the best region within it, the La Plata area (La Plata-Gebiet), as German-speakers were mostly aiming for land suitable for crop and animal cultivation (Ackerbau und Viehzucht). He thereby concluded that the La Plata area should become New Germany.¹⁶⁴⁶

¹⁶⁴² Hugo Schramm-Macdonald, “Sturz, Johann Jakob,” in Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie, vol. 37 (München/Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1894), 61–68.

¹⁶⁴³ Sturz, Die Krisis der Deutschen Auswanderung und ihre Benützung für Jetzt und Immer: Ein Hebel für deutsche Schifffahrt, deutschen Handel, deutsche Rhederei und Gewerbe, zur deutschen Flotte, und eine Gewährleistung für deutsche Einigung, Kräftigung und Selbstachtung diesseits und jenseits des Weltmeers, 4; Johann Jakob Sturz, Neue Beiträge über Brasilien und die La Plata-Länder (Berlin: Im Selbstverlage des Verfassers, 1865), 1.

¹⁶⁴⁴ Sturz, Kann und soll ein Neu-Deutschland geschaffen werden und auf welche Weise?, 4.

¹⁶⁴⁵ Ibid., 21.

¹⁶⁴⁶ Ibid., 24.

Swiss-German Friedrich Jäggi-Gyger was a member of the Swiss Migration Association when he published his book on conditions in Argentina in 1875.¹⁶⁴⁷ It claimed to be an impartial judgment of these conditions and in the introduction, he pledged to tell nothing but the truth. He had spent several years living in Argentina, and it was Johann Alemann, who later moved to Argentina himself and founded the newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt, who was the president of the Swiss Migration Association at the time and sent Jäggi-Gyger to Argentina for exploration purposes.¹⁶⁴⁸ In his book, he dedicated a chapter to every (agricultural) colony Swiss-Germans were living in: Esperanza, San Carlos, San Geronimo, Grütli and Humboldt, Helvetia, Emilia, San Justo, Sunchales, Bernstadt, and Baradero. The rest of the chapters treated topics like the policy in the provinces and cities, the Indians, the postal system, Italian migration, finances, education and general socio-political observations. In 1876, Friedrich Segesser published a critical assessment of Argentina's suitability for German-speaking migration.¹⁶⁴⁹ He wanted to provide a more objective account about the actual conditions.

The Swiss-German Alemann family was deeply involved in attracting more German-speakers to Argentina. While Johann Alemann (*1826, Bern – ¹⁶⁴⁷ Jäggi-Gyger, Argentinische Zustände.

¹⁶⁴⁸ Ibid., 1:iv.

¹⁶⁴⁹ Friedrich Segesser, Argentinien, seine Kolonien und die deutsche Einwanderung, Scheitlin & Zollikofer (St. Gallen, 1876).

1893, Buenos Aires) with his two sons Theodor (*1862, Bern – 1925, Buenos Aires) and Moritz (*1858, Bern – 1908, Bern) first arrived in Argentina in 1874 to set up a newspaper in the Argentine interior, he later on moved to Buenos Aires and set up his printing office there, and his sons later took over the newspaper. In his travel account from 1877, Johann described the original cultural disparities between people from Hamburg and Switzerland, and he admitted to having had difficulties understanding the Hamburg accent on the ship to Buenos Aires.¹⁶⁵⁰ Once in Argentina, he and then his sons later associated with all other German-speakers, disregarding political alliances. In particular his sons looked to the German Empire for further support – financially and with people. Theodor Alemann’s son Ernesto went to study in Germany and wrote his dissertation about Hamburg’s navy and trade with the La Plata states.¹⁶⁵¹ In 1877, Johann Alemann was still critical of the conditions for colonization in Argentina: “The general impression that the author has gotten of Argentina, can be summarized as follows: This country doesn’t provide the eminent advantages that numerous publications of all kinds have claimed, but it also doesn’t have the disadvantages that some opponents charge it with.”¹⁶⁵²

In the 1880s and 1890s, the brothers Moritz and Theodor undertook several journeys in the Argentinean interior to inspect the advancement of German-¹⁶⁵⁰ Alemann, Bilder aus der Argentinischen Republik, 3.

¹⁶⁵¹ Alemann, Hamburgs Schifffahrt und Handel nach dem La Plata.

¹⁶⁵² Alemann, Bilder aus der Argentinischen Republik, vii.

speaking colonization projects. In several cases, they first published their accounts in shorter segments in their weekly and daily newspapers Argentinisches Wochenblatt and Argentinisches Tageblatt over the course of several weeks, and then later on as books. They printed their books with Buenos Aires publishing houses, either the Swiss publishing house Helvetia or their own press. In 1883, Moritz published a travel account of a two-week trip to colonies along the Argentinean central railway.¹⁶⁵³ In 1886, Moritz Alemann published a book on the (agricultural) colony Tornquist in the southern part of the Buenos Aires province.¹⁶⁵⁴ Moritz and Theodor, taken together, covered the entire Argentinean territory: the wheat region in the center, southern colonization regions, as well as the south-west, and Patagonia.¹⁶⁵⁵ Theodor described the success of Stroeder's colonization emporio.¹⁶⁵⁶ Theodor's son Ernesto undertook a trip to the northeastern regions.¹⁶⁵⁷ In 1902, Moritz Alemann also participated in the German

¹⁶⁵³ [Moritz] [Alemann], “[1] Ausflug nach den Colonien der Argentinischen Centralbahn,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, March 3, 1883, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; until: [Moritz] [Alemann], “[6] Ausflug nach den Colonien der Argentinischen Centralbahn (Schluss),” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, April 7, 1883, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

¹⁶⁵⁴ Alemann, Die Kolonie Tornquist im Distrikt Bahia Blanca (im Süden der Provinz Buenos Aires) als Ansiedlungspunkt für schweizerische und deutsche Ackerbau-Familien.

¹⁶⁵⁵ Theodor Alemann, Kolonisationsgebiete im Zentrum der argentinischen Weizenregion (Buenos Aires: Buchdruckerei “Helvetia,” 1892); Theodor Alemann, “Ein Ausflug nach dem Chubut-Territorium,” in Kolonisationsgebiete im Süden der Argentinischen Republik (Buenos Aires: Selbstverlag, 1898); Moritz Alemann, “Die grosse Neuquen-Bahn und der Rio Negro,” in Kolonisationsgebiete im Süden der Argentinischen Republik (Buenos Aires: Selbstverlag, 1898); Theodor Alemann, Aus dem Südwesten der argentinischen Klee-Region: das National-Territorium Pampa Central von einem alten Grenzer (Buenos Aires, 1904); Alemann, Am Rio Negro.

¹⁶⁵⁶ Alemann, Station und Emporio Stroeder.

¹⁶⁵⁷ Alemann, Grünes Gold und rote Erde: Beobachtungen von einer Reise.

Colonial Congress in Berlin where he presented on “Argentina as Settlement Area for German migration.”¹⁶⁵⁸ Moritz, acting as the representative of the German colony of Buenos Aires, called on the German public to support and direct German migration to Argentina.¹⁶⁵⁹

7.2 Literature with Entertainment Qualities

I distinguish between two types of entertainment literature: first, personal memoirs from people who travelled to the South Atlantic, either as settlers, missionaries, soldiers, or for business purposes. Second, fictional accounts based on either direct or secondary experiences. Entertainment literature provided a potent means to shape Central European German-speakers’ imagination of the South Atlantic. Ultimately, it also had the effect of advertising South Atlantic colonization. There is much more published entertainment literature available from German-speakers in Namibia than in Argentina.

7.2.1 Remembering Lived Experiences (Erinnerungsliteratur)

Personal memoirs, otherwise called “memory literature” (Erinnerungsliteratur), put the individual view and group experience in the center of the narrative. It was a personal attempt at understanding and justifying the individual experience in the South Atlantic. The personal justification of behavior was mostly directed towards an audience in Germany. The majority of this literature was produced by publishing houses located in Central European German lands.

¹⁶⁵⁸ Alemann, “Argentinien als Siedlungsgebiet für deutsche Auswanderung.”

¹⁶⁵⁹ Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873; Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1884; Bachmann, Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires, 1886.

In 1839, Swiss traveller Heinrich Trachsler published his account of his travels through various South American countries.¹⁶⁶⁰ He mainly travelled through Brazil, but also briefly visited Buenos Aires. He designated himself a cosmopolitan traveller, and referenced the two German authors that are now known as “classical German writers”: Johann Wolfgang Goethe and Friedrich Schiller. Trachsler stated his intentions of publishing a humoristic account and not a melancholic one like that of Goethe’s Werther.¹⁶⁶¹ Schiller’s works contributed to awakening his wanderlust.¹⁶⁶² In his Travels, Fates and Tragic-comic Adventures of a Swiss During his Stay in Various Provinces of South America, Trachsler described his trajectory from Switzerland to Hamburg, Germany, then to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil in 1827. There he had a very affectionate non-marital relationship with a “Native woman” from Brazil of the name Louise da Cruz.¹⁶⁶³ Moving on to Buenos Aires, Trachsler described Argentinians as being intelligent, ¹⁶⁶⁰ Trachsler, Reisen, Schicksale und tragikomische Abendteuer eines Schweizers während seines Aufenthaltes in den verschiedenen Provinzen Südamerikas, Rio de Janeiro, Ilha Santa Catharina, Armação, São Pedro do Sul, Rio Grande, Corrientes, Montevideo, Buenos-Aires etc. in den Jahren 1828 bis 1835.

¹⁶⁶¹ Ibid., x.

¹⁶⁶² Ibid., 2 and ix.

¹⁶⁶³ Ibid., 378–97.

very vivid, and of fervent imagination, replacing European erudition. He estimated that overall, Argentinians held an advantage over Europeans due to their healthy climate, their independent lifestyle, and their idleness, which spared them of feeling life's burdens as much as Europeans. This description seems to simultaneously admire and disparage Argentinians.¹⁶⁶⁴

Friedrich Gerstäcker may be the most famous German-speaking travel writer in the Americas – besides Alexander von Humboldt. Unlike his colleague, Gerstäcker went further to the south and also visited Argentina. Nonetheless, his publications on his travels in the Americas have mostly been analyzed by historians with regards to his visits to the northern parts.¹⁶⁶⁵ His travel writings – like those of most nineteenth-century German travel writers – are situated between “truth and reality,” according to Annette Bühler-Dietrich, because he blurred the lines between mere travel description and adventure novel.¹⁶⁶⁶ Gerstäcker travelled to South America twice, once in the 1840s and the second time in the 1860s, and he published travel accounts both times. The first appeared in 1853,¹⁶⁶⁷ which was immediately translated and published in English in 1854.¹⁶⁶⁸ He described the “state of development” of Buenos Aires and noted that “everything is still at its beginning”: that hardly any of the manufactured goods were produced in Argentina, that even the gaucho was dependent on foreign imports for his basic necessities such as the poncho – woven in Europe –, the spurs – cast in Europe –, likewise all of their clothes, except the boots.¹⁶⁶⁹ Gerstäcker described the clothing style of the inhabitants of Buenos Aires as a curious mix of French, Spanish, and Indian, with the educated classes wearing French costumes [Tracht] with Argentinian patriotic add-ons such as a red waistcoat or vest and a red hatband.¹⁶⁷⁰ He described the climate as being particularly healthy – as the name of the city of Buenos Aires (meaning “good air” or “good winds”) already promised – but curiously, the arched church towers, together with the sun-tanned portenõs, provoked in him the impression of Buenos Aires resembling an oriental Muslim city.¹⁶⁷¹

¹⁶⁶⁴ “Die Argentinier besitzen viele Geistesfähigkeiten, sind sehr lebhaft und ihre feurige Einbildungskraft ersetzt ihnen alle europäische Gelehrsamkeit und gewährt ihnen viele Vorzüge vor den Europäern, die sie aber nur ihrem gesunden Klima, ihrer unabhängigen Lebensart, ihrer Unthätigkeit, wodurch sie die Lasten des Lebens nicht, wie wir, fühlen u.s.w., zu verdanken haben.” Ibid., 702f.

¹⁶⁶⁵ Friedrich Gerstäcker, Aus zwei Welttheilen: Gesammelte Erzählungen, vol. 1 (Leipzig: Arnold, 1854); Friedrich Gerstäcker, Aus zwei Welttheilen: Gesammelte Erzählungen, vol. 2 (Leipzig: Arnold, 1854); Friedrich Gerstäcker, Aus Nord- und Südamerika: Erzählungen (Prag; Leipzig: Kath. Gerzabek; Heinrich Hübner, 1855).

¹⁶⁶⁶ Annette Bühler-Dietrich, “Zwischen Glaubwürdigkeit und make believe: Karl May im Kontext der deutschamerikanischen Literatur des 19. Jahrhunderts,” in Karl May: Brückenbauer zwischen den Kulturen, ed. Wolfram Pyta (Berlin: LIT Verlag, 2010), 169.

¹⁶⁶⁷ Friedrich Gerstäcker, Reisen: Südamerika (Stuttgart, Tübingen: J.G. Cotta'scher Verlag, 1853).

¹⁶⁶⁸ Gerstäcker, Gerstäcker's Travels.

¹⁶⁶⁹ Gerstäcker, Reisen, 79.

¹⁶⁷⁰ “Die Tracht der Einwohner ist eine wunderliche Mischung von Französisch, Spanisch und Indianisch - die gebildete Klasse wie die Fremden tragen die französische Tracht - Frack, Oberrock, lange Beinkleider und schwarzen Hut, die Argentinier nur eben mit dem patriotischen Zusatz der rothen Weste und den rothen Hutband, dennoch aber, und besonders beim Reiten, auch dem des Poncho.” Ibid., 86.

¹⁶⁷¹ “Die Kirchen, von denen es eine große Anzahl zu geben scheint, verleihen mit ihren gewölbten Kuppel der Residenz ein fast morgenländisches Ansehen, dem die sonngebräunten Gestalten der Bewohner auch keineswegs widersprechen, aber die raschen lebendigen Bewegungen dieses centaurenartigen Volkes passen nicht zu dem Bild das wir uns gewöhnlich

During his time in Argentina, Gerstäcker visited the immediate surroundings of Buenos Aires and met a German-speaking farmer. He stated that this farmer had become “a real American farmer and could easily compete with his North American brothers.”¹⁶⁷² While he also reported the bitterness of the farmer towards fellow German-speakers and his refusal to employ any more of them on his farm due to their laziness, greediness, and unwillingness to work, Gerstäcker mentioned that he had no means to examine the truthfulness of his assertion but estimated it to be an exaggeration. Gerstäcker followed up this account with that of a German-speaker who praised Rosas’ treatment of the German-speakers who had arrived a few years prior, as they were provided food “three times as good as in Germany” and a salary “four times as much as we could have earned in Germany,” all while not having to work. But Gerstäcker added that these German-speakers had arrived in a time of political turmoil when there was no immediate work for them.¹⁶⁷³ When Gerstäcker returned to Buenos von den stillen ernstesten Söhnen Muhameds machen, und die Kreuze der Kirchen predigen den ”rechten Glauben.“ Ibid., 81f.

¹⁶⁷² “Der Mann war aber auch in anderer Hinsicht ein ächter amerikanischer Farmer geworden, und hätte sich seinen Brüdern in Nordamerika ohne weiters anreihen können, - er schimpfte aus Leibeskräften auf die Deutschen und meinte, diese sollten nur um Gottes Willen nicht auswandern oder nach Südamerika kommen, denn arbeiten wollten sie doch nicht, und zum zugucken brauchten sie Niemanden mehr, da hätten sie gerade genug. Er beschäftigte auch eine Anzahl von Spaniern auf seinem Grundstück [...] Nirgends beschäftigte er aber Deutsche und versicherte uns, wenn er auch einmal einen deutschen Arbeiter kriegte, so verdienten sie gewöhnlich das Brod nicht, denn erstens wollten sie nicht arbeiten, und dann forderten sie den drei-doppelten Lohn von dem, was er dem fleißigsten Spanier gäbe.” Ibid., 94ff.

¹⁶⁷³ “Diese deutschen Arbeiter sollten nämlich gerade in einer Periode eingetroffen seyn, wo sie der Gouverneur, mitten in der politischen Aufregung, unmöglich gleich unterbringen und verwenden konnte; er hatte nicht einmal Arbeit für sie, wie trefflich er sich aber damals gegen die

Aires twelve years later, he barely recognized the city: there were electric lights everywhere and railroads, connecting the city with the neighboring towns and estancias. Wooden houses had turned into grand villas, resembling English manors surrounded by parks with iron fences.¹⁶⁷⁴

While the Jesuit Sepp had noted that Argentineans eat a lot of meat, Gerstäcker provided a far more detailed description of the impact of carnivores on the landscape and on, he claimed, the human character: “meat is the only food: South Americans really eat ‘meat with meat’.”¹⁶⁷⁵ He lamented that the Argentinean countryside did not share the cozy, homelike, and safe character of European agriculture: inhabitants that live merely on vegetables are entirely missing and everywhere death and decay dominate the craft of the stockbreeder. “Anywhere the eye is gazing, in particular near the houses, there are traces of slaughtered or fallen pieces of stock; there are skins, skulls, intestines, horns, hoofs, bones, blood traces; thousands and thousands of vultures, birds of prey and Deutschen benommen hätte, konnte der alte Bursche nicht genug rühmen. Ihnen wurde nicht allein das alte Kloster zum Aufenthaltsort angewiesen mit den nöthigen Provisionen für Frau und Kind, nein die Männer bekamen auch noch ihren trefflichen Tagelohn ausbezahlt, ohne daß sie auch nur zu irgend einer Arbeit aufgefordert gewesen wären. (96) // ”Das waren Zeiten“ rief mein alter Deutscher, und hielt sein Pferd an, sich beim Reiten [...] ”das waren Zeiten, alle Tage unser gutes Essen, dreimal so gut wie wir’s in Deutschland gehabt, und unser Tagelohn, viermal so viel wie wir hätten dort verdienen können und “gar nicht” dabei zu thun - und das dauerte viele Monate - da haben wir uns von der Seereise recht erholen können." Ibid., 96 f.

¹⁶⁷⁴ August Carl, Friedrich Gerstäcker der Weitgereiste: Ein Lebensbild, der deutschen Jugend vorgeführt (Gera: Issleib und Rietzschel, 1873), 158f.

¹⁶⁷⁵ Gerstäcker, Reisen, 107ff.

gulls are swarming these locations, and one's nose really first has to adjust to this obnoxious fresh and foul smell of flesh and blood."¹⁶⁷⁶

Gerstäcker talked about the "naturalization" of a German-speaker. He specifically pointed out that this man was a Saxon, like himself. His wife was local and the children were Argentinean as well: "It was most interesting to me to find in the estancia, a German who managed it, and who was himself the owner of another not very far off. He happened to be a Saxon, like myself, and he confirmed the truth of many things which I had heard in my former visit to the country; besides giving me much useful and excellent information. His name was Papsdorf; he was perfectly naturalized, had married a native; and his sons, dressed in cheripa and poncho, were, like true gauchos, hanging to their horses, as expert in throwing the lasso as any other of the wild children of the steppes."¹⁶⁷⁷

Gerstäcker highlighted the advantages of Argentina as a migration destination for German-speakers: "This country, indeed, offers to the German emigrant every advantage to be looked for in any part of the world. The climate leaves nothing to be desired. Maladies certainly occur; but they are said to be by no means of a virulent nature. The soil, unlike most of the North American prairies, is excellent almost everywhere in the pampas, and yields capital crops, even with the very ¹⁶⁷⁶ "Wohin das Auge, besonders in der Nähe der Häuser, blickt, sind Spuren von geschlachteten oder gefallenen Stücken Vieh zu sehen; überall liegen Häute, Schädel, Eingeweide, Hörner, Hufe, Knochen, Blutspuren; tausende und tausende von Aasgeiern, Raubvögeln und Möven umschwärmen diese Plätze, und die Nase muß sich erst wirklich an den im Anfang widerlichen frischen und faulen Fleisch- und Blutgeruch gewöhnen." Ibid.

¹⁶⁷⁷ Gerstäcker, Gerstäcker's Travels, 50.

primitive manner of cultivation here in use.”¹⁶⁷⁸ He specifically addressed the question of land prices for long-term migrants and the good reputation German-speakers enjoyed with the Argentine government – already in the 1850s: “The government, although having very little inclination to favour the English and French, is very well inclined towards German emigration.”¹⁶⁷⁹ Gerstäcker pointed out his motivations for collecting the information: “I was particularly charged by the Ministry of Commerce of the German Empire, to report, to the best of my ability, concerning the countries which I should find suited for emigration; and also to notice the position and the prospects of the Germans who were already settled in the new country.”¹⁶⁸⁰

I include here the publication of Lina Beck Bernard, wife of Carlos Beck Bernard, here despite of the book being written in French. While her husband focused more on writing popularized scientific texts, Lina documented their trip from Switzerland to Argentina.¹⁶⁸¹ Once arrived in Buenos Aires, the family attended the church service at the German Protestant church.¹⁶⁸² Pastor “Mister S.” was most likely Pastor Ludwig Siegel, the first pastor of the church in Esmeralda Street. Lina described Buenos Aires as a city of abundance, luxury, ¹⁶⁷⁸ Ibid., 50f.

¹⁶⁷⁹ Ibid., 52.

¹⁶⁸⁰ Ibid., 53.

¹⁶⁸¹ Beck Bernard, Le Rio Parana: Cinq années de séjour dans la République Argentine; Her account has been translated to Spanish in 2001, see Beck Bernard, El río Paraná.

¹⁶⁸² Beck Bernard, Le Rio Parana: Cinq années de séjour dans la République Argentine, 77.

and civilization, which she then had to leave to go to the desert.¹⁶⁸³ From Buenos Aires, they continued on a small boat up the Parana River and the family took up residence in Santa Fe. Unlike her husband who focused on colonization and agricultural colonies in the countryside, Lina mostly described living conditions in (northern) Argentina, Indians, and gauchos, and she praised religious freedom and the work of German Protestants sent by the Gustav Adolph society.

Like the Beck Bernards, Johann Jakob Alemann also had a Swiss German background. His travel account, published in 1877 in Buenos Aires, was both entertainment and explicitly addressed to those German-speakers interested in migrating, to whom it provided practical advice.¹⁶⁸⁴ Alemann was recruited to found a newspaper in the Argentinean interior, but moved to Buenos Aires after moderate success in the countryside. While Johann Alemann was originally oriented towards his home, Switzerland, and described the disparities in culture between people from Hamburg and from Switzerland in his travel account: “We Swiss people had difficulties to understand the German dialect from Hamburg (Hamburger-deutsch) and were thus mostly self-dependent.”¹⁶⁸⁵ Once in Argentina, he and then later his sons, associated with the other German-speakers present, disregarding any political or state allegiances. In particular, his sons looked to the German Empire for further support when they requested either finances and or recruited people. Theodor Alemann's son Ernesto went to study in Germany. In 1877, Johann Alemann was still very critical of the conditions for colonization in Argentina: "The general impression I have of Argentina can be summarized as follows: This land does in no way offer the eminent advantages that repeatedly various publications have pled, but then again, it doesn't have the disadvantages either that some opponents accuse it of."¹⁶⁸⁶ Johann Alemann continued to point out the differences between North Germans and other German-speakers in Argentina: "The Germans from the North are unevenly more present than those from the South. Throughout South America, Hamburg is by far the most famous city of Germany. People imagine that Hamburg has the same role in Germany as Paris does in France."¹⁶⁸⁷ He remarked that French people mistook Swiss-Germans as Prussians.¹⁶⁸⁸ Then again, he described the development of a cosmopolitan mindset within himself: "It is fair and good to get together with such diverse elements. The horizon gets broadened, one gets rid of many prejudices and at the same time adopts the experiences of others, whereupon cosmopolitan attitudes get transplanted, one doesn't know how. One learns how to assess humans according to their actual worth and not according to their origin and descent. Naturally, material interests play the main part in all of this; everyone takes care of themselves and leaves it up to God to keep everything together. Patriotism is an alien and absurd word.”¹⁶⁸⁹ Johann Alemann described the different travel habits of Southern and Northern Germans: “The Swiss and South Germans usually travel via Havre and Marseille, the North Germans via Hamburg and Bremen.”¹⁶⁹⁰ He claimed that German ships were more orderly than French ships, but the German kitchen was less good.¹⁶⁹¹ He provided advice to future German-speaking travelers and recommended that German-speakers only speaking German should only travel with German ships, in particular with the Norddeutscher Lloyd from Bremen (“Hohenzollern,” “Salier,” “Habsburg,” etc.).¹⁶⁹² Nonetheless, Johann Alemann identified Argentina as the best location for German migration: “I am convinced that the Swiss will be able to make a living in Argentina just as well as in North America, Brazil or Australia, and this is not a theory, but rather my opinion is based in more than twenty years of studies and observations.”¹⁶⁹³

¹⁶⁸³ Ibid., 107.

¹⁶⁸⁴ Alemann, Bilder aus der Argentinischen Republik.

¹⁶⁸⁵ Ibid., 3.

¹⁶⁸⁶ Ibid., VII.

¹⁶⁸⁷ Ibid., 92.

¹⁶⁸⁸ Ibid., 119.

Albert Amerlan (*1840 Angermünde, Germany – after 1901) was a merchant who lived in Argentina between 1884 and 1894.¹⁶⁹⁴ In 1884, Amerlan published his first book on the Argentinean Frontier.¹⁶⁹⁵ He published another

¹⁶⁸⁹ Ibid., 93.

¹⁶⁹⁰ Ibid., 118.

¹⁶⁹¹ Ibid., 119.

¹⁶⁹² Ibid.

¹⁶⁹³ Ibid., 146.

¹⁶⁹⁴ Jürgen Israel and Peter Walther, eds., Musen und Grazien in der Mark: Ein historisches Schriftstellerlexikon (Berlin: Lukas Verlag, 2002), 23.

¹⁶⁹⁵ Albert Amerlan, An der Frontera (Leipzig: Mutze, 1884).

book, on the War of the Triple Alliance, in Buenos Aires with Hermann Tjarks, the owner of the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung in 1890.¹⁶⁹⁶ Amerlan was fascinated by the frontier conditions, in particular in northern Argentina. The math professor from Berlin, Jean Habel (*1845 – 1902), spent two consecutive southern summers, 1893-94 and 1894/95, hiking in Argentina. The aim of his travel account was to provide an accurate description of the countryside. He included maps and photographs in his publication. From Buenos Aires, he first travelled to the Gran Chaco in the North, he provided a detailed description of climate and vegetation along his trip.

Rudolf Freiherr von Colditz (*1861 – 1927) had been a major in the Argentinean army and military teacher at the war academy in Buenos Aires, after having been a captain in the Prussian army.¹⁶⁹⁷ He spent some time travelling in Argentina and upon a visit in Germany in 1914, and gave a presentation for the German-Argentinean Central Association for the Promotion of Economic Interests.¹⁶⁹⁸ In 1925 and 1928, he published two novels about his experiences in ¹⁶⁹⁶ Albert Amerlan, Nächte am Rio Paraguay: Kriegsbilder und Charakter-skizzen (Buenos Aires: H. Tjarks, 1890); An English translation was also published by H. Tjarks in Buenos Aires a few years later, see Albert Amerlan, Nights on the Rio Paraguay: Scenes of War and Charactersketches, trans. Henry F. Suksdorf (Buenos Aires: Hermann Tjarks & Company, 1902).

¹⁶⁹⁷ Colditz, Die Aussichten für deutsches Grosskapital in Argentinien.

¹⁶⁹⁸ Colditz, Aus den hohen Anden Süd-Amerikas.

Argentina: In Condor's Empire and Among Gauchos and Settlers in Argentina.¹⁶⁹⁹ Both of his travel accounts were published in Berlin.

In 1925, Otto Preusse-Sperber (*1871 -) published a book with a similar title: Among Gauchos, Settlers and Indians.¹⁷⁰⁰ When he wrote this book, Preusse-Sperber had already spent twenty years living in Argentina as colonist and colonizer, journalist, explorer, and trade expert. Both von Colditz and Preusse-Sperber wrote a kind of adventure story in the form of personal accounts to entertain a German-speaking audience, while playing with the tropes of “Wild West stories” in the manner of Karl May. A primary source collection from 1984, edited by Hans Wulschner, included extracts from Hermann Burmeister’s “In der Banda oriental,” Ludwig Brackebusch’s “Reise in den Kordilleren,” Adolf N. Schuster’s “In Buenos Aires,” Erwin von Hase’s “Bei den Gauchos der Pampa,” M. Alemann’s “Dampferfahrt auf dem Rio Negro,” and Hans Steffen’s “In Patagonien.”¹⁷⁰¹ In 2006, Maria Bamberg (*1915) published her memoirs about the moving of her family from Germany to Patagonia at the beginning of the 1920s and her return to Germany in 1963.¹⁷⁰²

¹⁶⁹⁹ Rudolf F. von Colditz, Im Reich des Kondor: Streifzüge durch die Wildnisse Südamerikas (Berlin: P. Parey, 1925); Rudolf F. von Colditz, Unter Gauchos und Siedlern in Argentinien (Berlin: Safari-verlag, 1928).

¹⁷⁰⁰ Otto Preusse-Sperber, Unter Ansiedlern, Gauchos und Indianern: Erlebtes und Erlauschtes eines deutschen Auswanderers in Südamerika (Leipzig: Dieterich, 1925).

¹⁷⁰¹ Hans Wulschner, ed., Vom Rio Grande zum La Plata: Deutsche Reiseberichte des 19. Jahrhunderts aus dem südlichen Amerika, Second Edition (Stuttgart: Horst Erdmann Verlag, 1984).

The surgeon Georg Tams travelled in South-western Africa before it was under German protection and published his travel account in 1845.¹⁷⁰³ Already, he noticed that Europeans were increasingly interested in the African continent. Former soldier Rudolf Ludloff travelled to Namibia in 1890 and published his travel account, which was merely addressed to his friends, as he specifically noted on the first page.¹⁷⁰⁴ When he had made the decision to travel to “New Germany” (Neudeutschland), the Woermann shipping line did not yet offer stops to the “South-West African protectorates Nama- and Damaraland”¹⁷⁰⁵ and he thus turned to the English shipping company “Union-Line.” He had to take a steamer to Cape Town first and then take a smaller boat up to Angra Pequena (Lüderitzbucht). During the trip, he met several German-speakers who were living in Transvaal and the Orange Free State in South Africa. Ludloff highlighted the fact that all German-speakers on board the British ship united and discussed (the rather recent) German unification and hoped for a stronger future of German ¹⁷⁰² Maria Bamberg, Zwischen Argentinien und Deutschland: Erinnerungen in zwei Welten (Berlin: Ed. Tranvía, Frey, 2004).

¹⁷⁰³ Georg Tams, Die Portugiesischen Besitzungen in Süd-West-Afrika: Ein Reisebericht (Hamburg: Robert Kittler, 1845).

¹⁷⁰⁴ Ludloff, Nach Deutsch-Namaland.

¹⁷⁰⁵ Ibid., 1.

imperial overseas involvement.¹⁷⁰⁶ He repeatedly lamented the absence of a German steamer connection to South Africa and South-West Africa, and stated that this connection would surely benefit the large German-speaking population in the Boer states.¹⁷⁰⁷ When he arrived in Angra Pequena (Lüderitzbucht), the Lüderitz's buildings were abandoned and only a handful of people lived on the spot.¹⁷⁰⁸ He said living conditions were rough and he did not want to paint anything in a better light than it was. He also visited Walvis Bay, Otjimbingwe and spoke of the German colony Otjimbingwe, where he celebrated Kaiser's birthday on 27 January 1891.¹⁷⁰⁹ Otjimbingwe was then the capital of the German protectorate with missionaries, a school, government buildings, German and English merchants, and indigenous peoples.¹⁷¹⁰

Dr. August Schreiber (*1839 Bielefeld – 1903 Barmen) was a missionary and inspector for the Rhenish Missionary Society who travelled through Namibia for five months in 1894.¹⁷¹¹ He landed in Cape Town and then travelled north with ox carts, crossing into Namibia over the Orange River, visiting Warmbad, Keetmanshoop, Rehoboth, Windhoek, Okahandja, and Otjimbingwe, before taking a ship back to Cape Town from Walvis Bay. He credited German ¹⁷⁰⁶ Ibid., 17.

¹⁷⁰⁷ Ibid., 23.

¹⁷⁰⁸ Ibid., 26.

¹⁷⁰⁹ Ibid., 54.

¹⁷¹⁰ Ibid., 56.

¹⁷¹¹ A. Schreiber, Fünf Monate in Südafrika (Barmen: Verlag des Missionshauses, 1894).

industriousness for the number of stately houses and a small fort had been built in Windhoek with pretty gardens and lanes, as well as a small hospital, and noted that numerous German settlers had established themselves in Klein-Windhoek, the location of the former Rhenish missionary station.¹⁷¹² As for Otjimbingwe, the oldest Rhenish missionary station at the time, he described as extended with a number of houses of Europeans and a German-Dutch church community in addition to the Baster, Herero, and Bergdamara church communities.¹⁷¹³

Erich von Salzmänn was enrolled at the war academy in Berlin when the “war with the Herero” broke out in 1904 and he immediately signed up as a volunteer. He published his memoirs about this experience upon his return to Germany in 1905.¹⁷¹⁴ Salzmänn, along with other volunteers from his war academy, travelled to Namibia in the ship Entre Rios from the Hamburg-Südamerikanische Dampfschiffahrtsgesellschaft.¹⁷¹⁵ The ship was named after a state in northeastern Argentina. The German South American shipping cooperated with the German government in this emergency situation in the German colony across the South Atlantic. The captain taking the ship from Hamburg to Swakopmund was employed by the Woermann Line.¹⁷¹⁶

¹⁷¹² Ibid., 89.

¹⁷¹³ Ibid., 102.

¹⁷¹⁴ Erich von Salzmänn, Im Kampfe gegen die Herero (Berlin: D. Reimer (E. Vohsen), 1905).

¹⁷¹⁵ Erich von Salzmänn, Im Kampfe gegen die Herero (Berlin: D. Reimer (E. Vohsen), 1905), 7.

¹⁷¹⁶ Ibid., 25.

Orla Holm was the pseudonym of Dorrit Zürn (*1882 Graz -), a writer who published colonial fiction as well as a travel account.¹⁷¹⁷ In her book From South-West Africa: Pages from the Diary of a German Woman, 1902-1904, she described her travel by boat from Germany via London and Cape Town to Walvis Bay and Swakopmund.¹⁷¹⁸ From Swakopmund to Karibib she continued by train, and then by ox cart to Okahandja and Windhoek. Her description of Windhoek was very positive: small villas surrounded by small gardens and a main street with stores.¹⁷¹⁹ She also claimed that most indigenous people were dressed nicely, and many spoke German and seemed to be “part of a more elevated level of civilization.”¹⁷²⁰ She also described the celebration of carnival in Windhoek.¹⁷²¹ August Schaepe went to Namibia as a member of the colonial troops (Schutztruppe), where he arrived on 22 August 1893, and by the publication of his article in the Journal for Colonial Policy, Colonial Law and Colonial Economy in 1905, his profession was listed as farmer.¹⁷²² He was thus one of many men who went to Namibia with the military and then decided to stay and turn his professional activities to agriculture.

¹⁷¹⁷ Gerhard Peter Knapp, Autoren damals und heute: literaturgeschichtliche Beispiele veränderter Wirkungshorizonte (Rodopi, 1991), 781.

¹⁷¹⁸ Orla Holm, Aus Südwest-Afrika: Blätter aus dem Tagebuche einer deutschen Frau, 1902-1904 (Leipzig: Veit, 1905).

¹⁷¹⁹ Ibid., 28–30.

¹⁷²⁰ Ibid., 30.

¹⁷²¹ Ibid., 32–33.

¹⁷²² August Schaepe, “Meine Erlebnisse von 1893-1904 in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 233–40.

Themistokles II. von Eckenbrecher (*1876 – 1935) married Margarete Hopfer in 1902.¹⁷²³ He was also a member of the colonial troops between 1895 and 1900 and then earned ownership of a farm as a consequence. In 1905, a lecture he had given in Berlin about his settler life in Namibia was published as an article in the Journal for Colonial Policy, Colonial Law and Colonial Economy.¹⁷²⁴ He described how the German protectorate had changed during his time there, between 1895 and 1905, a course of ten years. His wife Margarethe became a famous writer under her married name Margarethe von Eckenbrecher (*1875 Bernburg – ?).¹⁷²⁵ While her first text was published in 1907 in an edited volume, she was mainly known for her memoir, which she first published in 1908 and then in an edited and expanded version in 1937.¹⁷²⁶ The couple got divorced in 1913 and Margarethe decided to return to Namibia after WWI with their two sons, where she worked as a secondary school teacher. Johannes Semler (*1858 Hamburg – 1914 Hamburg) traveled to Namibia, published his observations in ¹⁷²³ Margarethe von Eckenbrecher, Africa: What It Gave Me, What It Took from Me: Remembrances from My Life as a German Settler in South West Africa, trans. David P. Crandall, Hans-Wilhelm Kelling, and Paul E. Kerry (Bethlehem, PA: Lehigh University Press, 2015), 5.

¹⁷²⁴ Themistokles II. von Eckenbrecher, “Aus dem Ansiedlerleben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,” ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 335–45.

¹⁷²⁵ Rosa Schneider, “Margarethe von Eckenbrecher, Ominous Weather; Namibia 1907, German,” in Women Writing Africa: The Southern Region, ed. Margaret J. Daymond et al. (New York: Feminist Press at CUNY, 2003), 147–48.

¹⁷²⁶ Eckenbrecher, “Padleben in Südwestafrika”; Margarethe von Eckenbrecher, Was Afrika mir gab und nahm: Erlebnisse einer deutschen Ansiedlerfrau in Südwestafrika (Berlin: Mittler, 1908); Margarethe von Eckenbrecher, Was Afrika mir gab und nahm: Erlebnisse einer deutschen Frau in Südwestafrika 1902-1936, Seventh and Expanded (Berlin: E.S. Mittler & Sohn, 1937).

1906.¹⁷²⁷ Hermann Alverdes's publication was a widely read memoir of the Namibian War.¹⁷²⁸

Helene von Falkenhausen, née Nitze, was a farmer, teacher, and author. She moved to the German protectorate together with her parents in 1893.¹⁷²⁹ In January 1899, she married baron Friedrich von Falkenhausen in Windhoek, as the Windhoeker Anzeiger announced.¹⁷³⁰ Upon her husband's death during the Herero War in 1904, Helene returned to Germany and published her memoirs about her first eleven years in Namibia.¹⁷³¹ She later returned to the German protectorate and published a chapter in Bernhard Voigt's edited volume on Land and People in the German protectorate.¹⁷³² In 1914, she also published a report of the Herero War.¹⁷³³

Max Rudolf Uth travelled for business purposes in the protectorate.¹⁷³⁴ He wrote very enthusiastically about his experiences in Namibia. He explicitly encouraged Germans to move to the German protectorate in the preface: "Every ¹⁷²⁷ Johannes Semler, Meine Beobachtungen in Süd-West-Afrika: Tagebuchnotizen und Schlussfolgerungen (Hamburg: Verlag und Druck von Hermann's Erben, 1906).

¹⁷²⁸ George Steinmetz, The Devil's Handwriting: Precoloniality and the German Colonial State in Qingdao, Samoa, and Southwest Africa (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2007), 178.

¹⁷²⁹ Helene Nitze von Falkenhausen, Ansiedlerschicksale: Elf Jahre in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 1893-1904, Third Edition (Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906).

¹⁷³⁰ Duft, "Aufgebot," Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 5, 1899, NAN.

¹⁷³¹ Falkenhausen, Ansiedlerschicksale.

¹⁷³² Helene Nitze von Falkenhausen, "Ein Tag auf der Farm. Aus dem Brief einer Farmersfrau," in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, ed. Bernhard Voigt (Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913), 33–34.

¹⁷³³ Falkenhausen, Bei den Hereros: Erzählung a. d. Aufständen Südwestafrikas.

¹⁷³⁴ Max Rudolf Uth, Im Sattel und Ochsenwagen: Erlebnisse und Beobachtungen in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika (Fulda: J. L. Uth Buchdruckerei, 1907).

free, young German, whose circumstances allow for it and who feels a calling, should unhindered by all prejudice, try his luck over there.”¹⁷³⁵ Historian Birthe Kundrus interprets passages of his travel account as coding nature as a virgin female that needed to be conquered.¹⁷³⁶ Maria Karow (*1879 Siedkow, Pommern – 1949) lived in the German protectorate between 1905 and 1909. She published her memoirs about her farmer life in Namibia upon her return to Germany in 1909.¹⁷³⁷ Her editor Rudolf Wagner praised her contribution to the literature on everyday farmer life in the German protectorate.¹⁷³⁸

Maximilian Bayer also participated in the Namibian War as a member of the colonial troops. He published his personal account of the war in 1909.¹⁷³⁹ In the introduction he explained that his focus was not on the official sequence of events, but rather to share his personal experience and other events that took place in the context of the war. Ernst Freimut published his travel memoirs in 1909.¹⁷⁴⁰ In 1911, Rudolf Wagner published his travel account.¹⁷⁴¹ In 1912, Otto Steiger, jr.

¹⁷³⁵ Ibid., 4.

¹⁷³⁶ Kundrus, Moderne Imperialisten, 154.

¹⁷³⁷ Karow, Wo sonst der Fuss des Kriegers trat: Farmerleben in Südwest nach dem Kriege.

¹⁷³⁸ Rudolf Wagner, “Geleitwort,” in Wo sonst der Fuss des Kriegers trat: Farmerleben in Südwest nach dem Kriege, by Maria Karow (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1909), v–vii.

¹⁷³⁹ Maximilian Bayer, Mit dem Hauptquartier in Südwestafrika, Second Edition (Leipzig: Otto Spamer, 1909).

¹⁷⁴⁰ Ernst Freimut, Gedanken am Wege: Reiseplaudereien aus Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Berlin: Deutscher Kolonial-Verl., 1909).

¹⁷⁴¹ Wagner, Eine Reise durch die deutschen Kolonien: Deutsch Südwest-Afrika.

published his travel account about Namibia.¹⁷⁴² Clara Brockmann published some of her letters in 1912 with the aim – as she wrote in the introduction – to provide readers in Germany with more insight into the everyday life in the German protectorate.¹⁷⁴³ Emil Eisinger published his memoirs about his time in Namibia in 1913.¹⁷⁴⁴ He provided detailed descriptions of how he experiences Christmas celebrations in the protectorate. Elise Bake published a book about her experiences in Namibia in 1913.¹⁷⁴⁵

Hans Grimm, who was mostly known for his fictional writings, also published some personal accounts from his time in South Africa and travels in Namibia. He travelled from Hamburg to Cape Town via Swakopmund and Lüderitzbucht.¹⁷⁴⁶ In 1928, he published thirteen letters from the German protectorate he wrote with his mother.¹⁷⁴⁷ ¹⁷⁴² Otto Steiger jr., Meine Reise Durch Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Leipzig: Jehne, 1912).

¹⁷⁴³ Clara Brockmann, Die Deutsche Frau in Südwestafrika: Ein Beitrag Zur Frauenfrage in Unseren Kolonien (Berlin: Mittler, 1910); Clara Brockmann, Briefe eines deutschen Mädchens aus Südwest (Berlin: E.S. Mittler und Sohn, 1912).

¹⁷⁴⁴ Emil Eisinger, Im Damaraland und Kaokofeld: Erinnerungen an Südwest-Afrika (Konkordia, 1913).

¹⁷⁴⁵ Elise Bake, Schwere Zeiten: Schicksale eines deutschen Mädchens in Südwestafrika (München: Gmelin, 1913).

¹⁷⁴⁶ Hans Grimm, Afrikafahrt West: Von Hamburg, Antwerpen, Boulogne und Southampton nach Madeira und den Kanarien und über Madeira-Kanarien nach Swakopmund, Lüderitzbucht und Kapstadt. Ein Reisebuch und Einführungsbuch (Frankfurt am Main: M. Henschel, 1913).

¹⁷⁴⁷ Hans Grimm, Die dreizehn Briefe aus Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika (München: A. Langen, 1928).

Else Büchner published notes from her life as a farmer's wife in the German protectorate with the Colonial Calendar in 1914.¹⁷⁴⁸ Hertha Brodersen-Manns was a young single girl when she went to the German protectorate in 1914 as a secretary and published her memoirs about this time in 1991.¹⁷⁴⁹ She spent some time as a war prisoner in Pietermaritzburg in South Africa. Hedwig Irle was married to missionary Jakob Irle and she published a book about her experience as a missionary in 1925.¹⁷⁵⁰ Lydia Höpker published her memoirs about her life as a farmer in Namibia in 1927; they were republished under a different title for the second edition in 1936.¹⁷⁵¹ Margareta Oldevig was Swedish woman, married to a Germans-speaker, who published her memoirs in German in 1946.¹⁷⁵²

In this section we have looked at the way lived experiences have been remembered. While many of the accounts were very personal, the authors chose to publish them and thus make them accessible to a larger audience of German-speakers. In this way, their accounts also contributed to colonization propaganda.

¹⁷⁴⁸ Else Büchner, "Skizzen aus dem Leben einer Farmerfrau in Deutsch-Südwestafrika," in Süsserott's Illustrierter Kolonialkalender 1914 (Berlin: W. Süsserott, 1914), 75–81.

¹⁷⁴⁹ Brodersen-Manns, Wie alles anders kam in Afrika.

¹⁷⁵⁰ Irle, In Gottes Schule.

¹⁷⁵¹ Lydia Höpker, Um Scholle und Leben: Schicksale einer deutschen Farmerin in Südwest-Afrika (Minden: Köhler, 1927); Lydia Höpker, Als Farmerin in Deutsch-Südwest: Was ich in Afrika erlebte, Second edition of "Um Scholle und Leben" (Minden in Westf.: W. Köhler, 1936).

¹⁷⁵² Margareta Oldevig, Im Sonnenland: Als Farmersfrau in Südwestafrika, ed. Ernst Alker, 1.-3.Taus. (Rüschlikon-Zürich: Müller, 1946).

7.2.2 Imagining Contingencies in Fiction – Kolonialliteratur

A number of German-speakers wrote fictional literature about colonization – and thus about agriculture for the sake of improving and cultivating the land – in the South Atlantic. Most wrote in German, some in Spanish, and a few were even translated into English by contemporaries. The timeframe of these fictional accounts spans from about the 1880s to the 1930s. Many of the novels were written by men and women who never travelled themselves to the South Atlantic. Instead, the authors were intrigued and inspired by publications and accounts from travellers and migrants available in Central Europe. These fictional accounts and colonial literature contributed to the mindset of colonization. Women were particularly active as fiction writers, and scholar Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst has written that it was Frieda von Bülow (*1857 – 1909) who invented the colonial novel (Kolonialroman) and thus fictional colonial literature (Kolonialliteratur).¹⁷⁵³ Von Bülow was friends with Carl Peters, and she travelled to East Africa in 1887-88 where she worked as a nurse and helped set up hospital stations. The novels she wrote reflected her own involvement in East Africa, focusing on Germans colonizing East Africa.

Some of the colonial novels that German-speakers produced specifically targeted children or adolescents. Many of these authors were trying to indoctrinate a new generation of pioneers by lionizing colonization. Fictional accounts made the topic of colonization more interesting, exciting, and approachable for so-called laypeople, non-specialists, and young readers. Historian and literary scholar Medardus Brehl even claims that the German public began dealing with the Namibian War through books for adolescents.¹⁷⁵⁴ In 1912, Emil W. Sembritzki published a critical guide for German colonial literature.¹⁷⁵⁵ He criticized the phenomenon of youth and the fixation with Indian novels and asked parents and librarians to guide adolescents towards more books about the German official colonies. He also warned of false information. Between 1884 and 1908, former captain Maximilian Brose edited special edition on colonial literature for the Journal of Colonial Policy, Colonial Law and Colonial Economy.¹⁷⁵⁶

¹⁷⁵³ Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst, “Die Kolonialschriftstellerin Frieda von Bülow,” in Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, ed. Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner (Berlin: Links, 2009), 66–69.

Adda von Liliencron (*1844 Sproitz, Silesia – 1913) was an aristocratic housewife and writer.¹⁷⁵⁷ She published two colonial novels, basing her books on accounts from the German protectorate South-West Africa, and both novels dealt with the Namibian War (1904-8). The first five of ten chapters of her 1906 publication took place in Germany, before the main character is sent to Namibia, ¹⁷⁵⁴ Brehl, “Diskursereignis ‘Herero-Aufstand’: Konstruktion, Strategien der Authentifizierung, Sinnzuschreibung,” 175.

¹⁷⁵⁵ Emil Wagner Sembritzki, ed., Der Kolonialfreund: Kritischer Führer durch die volkstümliche deutsche Kolonial-literatur (Berlin: “Kolonie und Heimat” Verlagsgesellschaft m.b.h., 1912).

¹⁷⁵⁶ Maximilian Brose, ed., Die deutsche Kolonialliteratur im Jahre (1884-1908) (Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1908).

¹⁷⁵⁷ Sophie Pataky, ed., “Adda Freiin von Liliencron,” in Lexikon deutscher Frauen der Feder (Berlin, 1898).

where he first lands in Swakopmund.¹⁷⁵⁸ Liliencron was just the editor of the second publication, where she had collected letters and poems from soldiers fighting in the Namibian war.¹⁷⁵⁹ She was a member of the German Colonial Women's association and particularly active in promoting the migration of women to Namibia in order to strengthen the colonial project.¹⁷⁶⁰ In 1914, the foundation set up in her name named two buildings in Namibia after her: a women's house in Keetmanshoop and a youth house in Lüderitz Bay.¹⁷⁶¹ The colony was not simply an administrative district or site of colonial violence, but had also entered the popular imagination of German-speaking readership.

Auto-biographical sketches catered to this increased interest in the South Atlantic. Lieutenant and publicist Richard Carow published adventurous short-stories based on his own experiences in Namibia in the 1890.¹⁷⁶² Orla Holm (alias Dorrit Zürn) published two colonial novels in 1906 and 1909. *Pioneers*¹⁷⁶³ and Ovita: An Episode in Hereroland.¹⁷⁶⁴ Historian John Kenneth Noyes has included

¹⁷⁵⁸ Liliencron, Nach Südwestafrika.

¹⁷⁵⁹ Liliencron, Reiterbriefe aus Südwest.

¹⁷⁶⁰ Adda von Liliencron, "Frauenbund der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft," 1907, BArch R 8023/153, pag. 12-13.

¹⁷⁶¹ Boetticher, Das Heimathaus in Keetmanshoop und das Jugendheim in Lüderitzbucht, die 'Adda v. Liliencron-Stiftung!

¹⁷⁶² Richard Carow, Deutsch-Süd-West-Afrika: Plaudereien nach eigenen Erfahrungen (Oranienbaum: Buchdr. Oranienbaum, 1899); Kundrus, Moderne Imperialisten, 178.

¹⁷⁶³ Orla Holm, Pioniere: Ein Kolonialroman aus Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika (Berlin: F. Fontane & Co., 1906).

¹⁷⁶⁴ Orla Holm, Ovita: Episode aus dem Hereroland (Dresden: Reißner, 1909).

the novel Ovita in his study about the development of masochism and discussed the novel in detail in this regard.¹⁷⁶⁵

Possibly the most successful German colonial novelist was Gustav Frenssen (*1863 Barlt, Holstein – 1945 Barlt, Holstein)¹⁷⁶⁶ who achieved fame with his novel Peter Moor.¹⁷⁶⁷ The Protestant congregation of the La Plata Synod in Buenos Aires reprinted this novel in their church journal in 1907, and it was translated to English two years after its first publication.¹⁷⁶⁸ Frenssen did not travel to Namibia himself, but based his knowledge on interviews with soldiers returning to Germany from the war.¹⁷⁶⁹ His novel told the story of Peter Moor, a soldier who participated in the Namibian War. John K. Noyes has argued that while taking place in Namibia, the novel was really about creating German national identity and linking it to individual subjectivity and regionalism.¹⁷⁷⁰ Historian Jeff Bowersock, by contrast, has discussed the popularity of the novel ¹⁷⁶⁵ John K. Noyes, The Mastery of Submission: Inventions of Masochism (Ithaca; London: Cornell University Press, 1997), 119–22.

¹⁷⁶⁶ Elizabeth Boa, “Some Versions of Heimat: Goethe and Hölderlin around 1800, Frenssen and Mann around 1900,” in “Heimat”: At the Intersection of Memory and Space, ed. Friederike Eigler and Jens Kugele (Göttingen: Walter de Gruyter, 2012), 34–52.

¹⁷⁶⁷ Gustav Frenssen, Peter Moors Fahrt nach Südwest, ein Feldzugsbericht (Berlin: G. Grote’sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1906).

¹⁷⁶⁸ Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt für die La Plata-Staaten, vol. 13 (Buenos Aires: Druckerei der La Plata Synode, 1907); Gustav Frenssen, Peter Moor’s Journey to Southwest Africa: A Narrative of the German Campaign, trans. Margaret Ward Ward (London; Boston; New York: Archibald Constable & Co.; Houghton Mifflin, 1908).

¹⁷⁶⁹ John K. Noyes, “National Identity, Nomadism, and Narration in Gustav Frenssen’s Peter Moor’s Journey to Southwest Africa,” in The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy, ed. Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998), 89.

¹⁷⁷⁰ Ibid., 90ff.

with the contemporary German youth and noted its importance in promoting the colonies.¹⁷⁷¹

Maximilian Bayer (*1872 Karlsruhe – 1917 Lorraine) personally participated in the Namibian War as a German colonial troops. He is most known for his role in founding the Scouts movement in Germany.¹⁷⁷² But he also wrote non-fictional and fictional accounts of his experiences: in 1907, he gave a presentation on the importance of the Namibian War for the development of the German colony;¹⁷⁷³ he also published an autobiographical account¹⁷⁷⁴ and two novels.¹⁷⁷⁵ Both novels were very popular and frequently republished until the 1940s. The Heroes of the Naukluft (Mountains) was an adventure novel with colonial troop soldiers encountering the indigenous population.¹⁷⁷⁶

Käthe von Beeker (*1863 – 1917) wrote just one novel that took place in Namibia and was specifically addressed to girls.¹⁷⁷⁷ Valerie Hodann (*1866 – after 1939) wrote one book illustrating the fate of a farmer's girl in the German ¹⁷⁷¹ Jeff Bowersox, Raising Germans in the Age of Empire: Youth and Colonial Culture, 1871-1914 (Corby: Oxford University Press, 2013), 130.

¹⁷⁷² Ibid., 196.

¹⁷⁷³ Bayer, Der Krieg in Südwest-Afrika und seine Bedeutung für die Entwicklung der Kolonie: Vortrag.

¹⁷⁷⁴ Bayer, Mit dem Hauptquartier in Südwestafrika.

¹⁷⁷⁵ Maximilian Bayer, Okowi - ein Hererospion? Eine Geschichte aus dem südwestafrikanischen Kriege (Berlin: Wilhelm Weicher, Marine- und Kolonialverlag, 1910); Maximilian Bayer, Die Helden der Naukluft (Leipzig: Otto Spamer, 1912).

¹⁷⁷⁶ Maximilian Bayer, Die Helden der Naukluft: Eine Erzählung aus Deutsch-Südwest, Ninth Edition (Potsdam: Voggenreiter, 1942).

¹⁷⁷⁷ Käthe van Beeker, Heddas Lehrzeit in Süd-West: Erzählung für Mädchen (Stuttgart: Loewes Verlag Ferdinand Carl, 1909).

protectorate South-West Africa.¹⁷⁷⁸ The story reflected the possibilities of everyday life in the German colony. Elise Bake (*1851 – 1928)¹⁷⁷⁹ authored the novel Fate of a German Girl in South-West Africa.¹⁷⁸⁰ The book has a striking image on the very first page. The illustration depicts a white woman in a white dress with her back turned to the viewer and a handgun, with which she shoots at a shirtless black man who has his hands up in the air and head thrown back, a spear falling from his hand, still in the air.¹⁷⁸¹ Bake's work was most likely a work of fiction based on the travel accounts of others.¹⁷⁸² It makes obvious the tensions between colonist and colonized.

The colonial soldier Bernhard Voigt (*1878 – 1945) came to Namibia as a teacher in 1908 and stayed for thirteen years. He was not related to the merchant Voigts family of Wecke & Voigts. Upon his return to Germany, he wrote several novels about Namibia, mostly out of nostalgic longing for his past life there, calling it the “land of the sun” (Sonnenland).¹⁷⁸³ Nevertheless, the novel My Home German South-West starts out in the desert, and he confronts the protagonist with a sergeant telling him “you must be disappointed, expected palm ¹⁷⁷⁸ Valerie Hodann, Auf rauhen Pfaden: Schicksale einer deutschen Farmerstochter in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika (Dresden: Dietrich, 1910).

¹⁷⁷⁹ Elisabeth Friedrichs, “Bake, Elise,” in Die deutschsprachigen Schriftstellerinnen des 18. und 19. Jahrhunderts: ein Lexikon (Stuttgart: Metzler, 1981), 13.

¹⁷⁸⁰ Bake, Schwere Zeiten.

¹⁷⁸¹ Ibid.

¹⁷⁸² Friedrichs, “Bake, Elise.”

¹⁷⁸³ Bernhard Voigt, Du meine Heimat Deutschsüdwest. Ein afrikanisches Farmerleben (Berlin: Safari-Verlag, 1925).

trees and apes. Courage! In a few years you will love the country like I do.”¹⁷⁸⁴ In On a Thorny Path, Voigt described the early years of the German protectorate, the founding of Windhoek as the German capital, life in Otijmbingwe, the former German capital, and life on farms.¹⁷⁸⁵ It was later republished under the title Heart of the Wilderness.¹⁷⁸⁶ Another of his novels was set in the German boarding school in Windhoek.¹⁷⁸⁷ He also published a short story in a collection on experiences by colonial pioneers.¹⁷⁸⁸

Hans Grimm (*1875 – 1959) is most known for his novel People without Space (Volk ohne Raum) from 1926, and the book’s popularity during the Third Reich due to its congruity with Nazi ideology.¹⁷⁸⁹ The novel’s protagonist is Cornelius Friebott, who performed “almost every conceivable colonial task during his lifetime, combining various phases of German colonialism in his curriculum vitae: he work[ed] as a farmer, join[ed] the marines, he f[ought] for the colonial military forces, and he help[ed] draw the first map of the Kalahari Desert,” and, according to Oliver Simons, he was “less a literary character than a figure of projection” who represented “colonial ideologies that existed in Germany around ¹⁷⁸⁴ Ibid., 9.

¹⁷⁸⁵ Voigt, Auf dorniger Pad. Aus Deutsch-Südwestafrikas alten Tagen.

¹⁷⁸⁶ Bernhard Voigt, Das Herz der Wildnis, ein Roman aus Deutsch-Südwest-Afrikas ersten Tagen, New Edition of Auf dorniger Pad (Berlin: Safari-Verlag, 1940).

¹⁷⁸⁷ Bernhard Voigt, Im Schülerheim zu Windhuk: Abenteuer in Busch und Steppe (Berlin: Weiss, 1928).

¹⁷⁸⁸ Bernhard Voigt, “Die Geschichte des langen Tom,” in Afrika spricht zu Dir: Selbsterlebnisse deutscher Kolonialpioniere, ed. Paul Ritter (Mühlhausen, Thüringen: Bergwald-Verlag Walter Paul, 1938), 259–79.

¹⁷⁸⁹ Grimm, Volk ohne Raum.

1926.”¹⁷⁹⁰ Grimm himself lived and worked in South Africa between 1896 and 1910, four years as an employee and ten years as a merchant.¹⁷⁹¹ But while he only travelled through German South-West Africa, most of his novels take place there, and were written after it had ceased to be a German protectorate following WWI. Other publications of his taking place in Namibia include two collections of seven short stories and a saga.¹⁷⁹² Other scholars have studied Grimm’s oeuvre: Thomas Nolden has studied Grimm’s publications with regards to colonial spaces and bodies, Nadja D. Krämer has analyzed Grimm’s colonial project between 1913 and 1926, Annette Gumbel has analyzed his relation to national-conservatism and Nazi ideology, and Alexander Honold has studied the geographic aspect of Grimm’s novel Volk ohne Raum with regards to colonial geography.¹⁷⁹³

¹⁷⁹⁰ Oliver Simons, “Persuasive Maps and a Suggestive Novel: Hans Grimm’s ‘Volk Ohne Raum’ and German Cartography in Southwest Africa,” in German Colonialism, Visual Culture, and Modern Memory, ed. Volker Langbehn (London, New York: Routledge, 2010), 165–81.

¹⁷⁹¹ Grimm, Die dreizehn Briefe aus Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika, 5.

¹⁷⁹² Hans Grimm, Südafrikanische Novellen (München: A. Langen, G. Müller, 1913); Hans Grimm, Die Olewagen-Saga (München: A. Langen, 1918); Hans Grimm, Lüderitzland. Sieben Begebenheiten (München: A. Langen, G. Müller, 1934).

¹⁷⁹³ Nolden, “On Colonial Spaces and Bodies: Hans Grimm’s Geschichten Aus Südwestafrika”; Krämer, “Auf, Freudige Germanen...!”; Gumbel, Volk ohne Raum; Alexander Honold, “Raum ohne Volk. Zur Imaginationsgeschichte der kolonialen Geographie,” in Kolonialismus, ed. Mihran Dabag, Horst Gründer, and Uwe-Karsten Ketelsen (München: Wilhelm Fink Verlag, 2004), 95–110.

Adolf Gerstmann (*1873 – 1940) published two short stories in 1915 that took place in Namibia.¹⁷⁹⁴ Henny Koch (*1854 – 1925) published one novel addressed to girls in 1916.¹⁷⁹⁵ Margarete Jähne (*1883 – 1939) published under the pseudonym Christine Holstein. She wrote fictional accounts about women's struggles of farm life in the protectorate German South-West Africa.¹⁷⁹⁶ Hermann Freyberg (*1898 – 1962) wrote several novels that took place but only one that took place in Namibia, titled Treason in the Desert, first published in 1941.¹⁷⁹⁷ All of these authors attempted to reach an audience interested in colonization.

On the other side of the South Atlantic, the number of fictional stories published by German-speakers was much smaller than in the Namibian case. Karl May is probably the most widely known author of adventure stories written in German. As the author of the stories Winnetou and Old Shatterhand in the Wild West, or more specifically in West Texas, he has influenced the imagination of generations of German-speakers concerning North America.¹⁷⁹⁸ While he is well known for novels taking place in North America as well as the Near East, it is less ¹⁷⁹⁴ Adolf Gerstmann, Der Südwestler und Der Knopf: Zwei Schwarzwaldgeschichten (Reutlingen: Enßlin und Laiblin, 1915).

¹⁷⁹⁵ Henny Koch, Die Vollrads in Südwest: eine Erzählung für junge Mädchen (Stuttgart, Berlin, Leipzig: Union, 1916).

¹⁷⁹⁶ Christine (Margarete Jähne) Holstein, Deutsche Frau in Südwest: den Erlebnissen einer Farmersfrau im heutigen Afrika nacherzählt (Leipzig: Koehler & Amelang, 1937).

¹⁷⁹⁷ Hermann Freyberg, Verrat in Der Wüste: Ein Erlebnis Aus Deutsch-Südwestafrika, ed. Karl Mühlmeister, 112 (Gütersloh: Bertelsmann, 1943).

¹⁷⁹⁸ Jeffrey L. Sammons, Ideology, Mimesis, Fantasy: Charles Sealsfield, Friedrich Gerstäcker, Karl May, and Other German Novelists of America (University of North Carolina Press, 1998); Bühler-Dietrich, "Zwischen Glaubwürdigkeit und make believe."

well-known that he also let his main character – Old Shatterhand – travel to the River Plate, and more specifically to Uruguay and northern Argentina, in At the River Plate and In the Cordilleras.¹⁷⁹⁹ While May’s novels set in North America and the “Orient” have received much recent attention by scholars, the South American ones are still often overlooked.¹⁸⁰⁰ Both books tell the story of Old Shatterhand, this time travelling from Montevideo further north to the Andes. Like in other May novels, Old Shatterhand is a German travelling abroad who outsmarts everyone he encounters; the descendants of Spanish and other European migrants are portrayed as dumb whereas the Indians are mostly friendly.

Gabriele Reuter (*1859 – 1941) never travelled to Argentina herself but she published a novel called Colonist People (Kolonistenvolk) in 1897 about German colonization in Argentina.¹⁸⁰¹ She portrayed the conflict between “German civilization” and “Argentinean barbarism,” writing about the Argentinean gauchos encountering German settlers.¹⁸⁰² Similar to Karl May, her novels set in North America have received more attention,¹⁸⁰³ but David Tingey ¹⁷⁹⁹ Karl May, Am Rio de la Plata (Freiburg im Breisgau: Friedrich Ernst Fehsenfeld, 1894); Karl May, In den Cordilleren (Freiburg im Breisgau: Friedrich Ernst Fehsenfeld, 1894).

¹⁸⁰⁰ Wolfram Pyta, “Einleitung: Kulturwissenschaftliche Zugriffe auf Karl May,” in Karl May: Brückenbauer zwischen den Kulturen, ed. Wolfram Pyta (Berlin: LIT Verlag, 2010), 9–46.

¹⁸⁰¹ Gabriele Reuter, Kolonistenvolk: Roman aus Argentinien (Berlin: S. Fischer, 1897).

¹⁸⁰² David Tingey, “Seductive and Destructive: Argentina in Gabriele Reuter’s Kolonistenvolk (1889),” in Sophie Discovers Amerika: German-Speaking Women Write the New World, ed. Rob McFarland and Michelle Stott James (Rochester, NY: Boydell & Brewer, 2014), 102–10.

¹⁸⁰³ Christiane Arndt, “‘Der Verfluchte Yankee!’ Gabriele Reuter’s Episode Hopkins (1889) and Der Amerikaner (1907),” in Sophie Discovers Amerika: German-Speaking Women Write the New

for example has published his analysis of Reuter's Kolonistenvolk.¹⁸⁰⁴ I have also found a newspaper article in the New York Times from February 1932 authored by Reuter entitled "Germany and Her Lost Colonies," where she discussed Germany's supposed need for space for overseas colonization.¹⁸⁰⁵

There were various other German-speaking authors publishing stories about Argentina that are still rather unknown to a larger audience. Rudolf Johannes Schmied (*1878, Buenos Aires – 1935, Paraguay) was born and grew up in Buenos Aires.¹⁸⁰⁶ His sister Inès was Heinrich Mann's partner when he visited Munich in the first decade of the twentieth century. Schmied became famous with his children's book series Carlos and Nicolás: part one was published in 1906 and part two in 1909.¹⁸⁰⁷ Adolf Niclaus Schuster (*1875 Uetendorf, Switzerland – 1933 Aregna, Paraguay) was a Swiss-German doctor, a self-taught ethnologist and a writer. In 1913, he edited a collection of songs from the River Plate.¹⁸⁰⁸ Otto Schreiber wrote a novel taking place in Patagonia, World, ed. Rob McFarland and Michelle Stott James (Rochester, NY: Boydell & Brewer, 2014), 138–49.

¹⁸⁰⁴ Tingey, "Seductive and Destructive: Argentina in Gabriele Reuter's Kolonistenvolk (1889)."

¹⁸⁰⁵ Gabriele Reuter, "Germany and Her Lost Colonies," The New York Times, February 14, 1932.

¹⁸⁰⁶ Hans Wysling, Letters of Heinrich and Thomas Mann, 1900-1949 (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1998), 324.

¹⁸⁰⁷ Rudolf Johannes Schmied, Carlos und Nicolás. Kinderjahre in Argentinien (Munich: Pieper, 1906); Rudolf Johannes Schmied, Carlos und Nikolas auf dem Meere (Berlin-Westend: E. Reiss, 1909).

¹⁸⁰⁸ Adolf Niclaus Schuster, ed., Heimatfern: Lieder vom Silberstrom (Aarau: A. Trüb & Cie., 1913).

published in Berlin in 1928.¹⁸⁰⁹ Austrian ethnographer Karl Ilg mentioned him in his study on German-speakers in Argentina and Chile in 1982.¹⁸¹⁰ In 1929, Ilse von Rentzell published her book In the Argentinean Chaco.¹⁸¹¹ In 1942, Bert Amerlen published his novel about Malon, the scare of the pampas.¹⁸¹² Livia Neumann was a Jewish exile in Argentina¹⁸¹³ and novelist who wrote about experiences similar to her own in two of her novels.¹⁸¹⁴ Argentinean historian Claudia Carnica de Bertona has studied Neumann's work with regards to integration into Argentinean society.¹⁸¹⁵

Eleonora Epp de Hary (*1909 Meran, South Tyrol – ?) married the estanciero of French origin Ernesto Carlos Hary and moved to Argentina with him in 1931.¹⁸¹⁶ She published her novels under the pseudonym “Jovita Epp.” Her novels, published between 1944 and 1978, reflect her own experiences moving to and living in the Argentinean pampa. Two of her books are named after the ¹⁸⁰⁹ Otto Schreiber, Im Schatten des Calafate: Patagonisches, allzupatagonisches (Berlin: Brunnen-Verlag, K. Winckler, 1928).

¹⁸¹⁰ Ilg, Das Deutschtum in Chile und Argentinien, 68.

¹⁸¹¹ Ilse von Rentzell, Im argentinischen Chaco (Stuttgart: Strecker und Schröder, 1929).

¹⁸¹² Bert Amerlen, “Malon”: Der Schrecken der Pampas! Ein Roman nach wahren Begebenheiten (Buenos Aires: Libreria “Goethe,” 1942).

¹⁸¹³ Olga Elaine Rojer, Exile in Argentina, 1933-1945: A Historical and Literary Introduction (New York: P. Lang, 1989), 89; Walter Laqueur, Generation Exodus: The Fate of Young Jewish Refugees from Nazi Germany (London, New York: I.B.Tauris, 2004), 323.

¹⁸¹⁴ Livia Neumann, Hab Mut zum Glück! (Buenos Aires: Editorial Cosmopolita, 1942); Livia Neumann, Puerto nuevo, neuer Hafen, Roman (Buenos Aires: Editorial Cosmopolita, 1943).

¹⁸¹⁵ Claudia Carnica de Bertona, “Integración o exclusión: los inmigrantes alemanes a través de las novelas de Livia Neumann y Heinrich Eberhardt,” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 195–204.

¹⁸¹⁶ “Epp, Jovita,” Munzinger Biographie, 2016, <https://www.munzinger.de/search/portrait/Jovita+Epp/0/9330.html>.

Pampa and Buenos Aires.¹⁸¹⁷ Two of her books dealt with marriage of an Argentinean and resemble her own life choices.¹⁸¹⁸ Ivana R. Klammer has argued that Epp's Amado mio from 1975 was written in the tradition of colonial novels.¹⁸¹⁹

Roberto Schopflocher (*1923 Fürth, Germany – 2016 Buenos Aires, Argentina) was a German-Argentinean writer of Jewish descent who migrated to Argentina with his parents in 1937.¹⁸²⁰ He attended the Pestalozzi school in Buenos Aires and his first job was as an administrator of the Baron Hirsch colonies in the interior.¹⁸²¹ He started a career as a writer at a later age, first in Spanish than in German. His novel from 2009 is entitled The Caudillo and his 2010 book dealt with his life between three worlds.¹⁸²² While the great majority of these novelists discussed in this section were only known to a smaller audience, ¹⁸¹⁷ Jovita Epp, Im Banne der Pampa (Buenos Aires: Goethe Buchhandlung, 1944); Jovita Epp, Auf den Boulevards der Pampa; Roman (München: Biederstein Verlag, 1970); Jovita Epp, Santa Maria der guten Lüfte: Roman (München: R. Piper, 1978).

¹⁸¹⁸ Jovita Epp, Die Frau des Fremden, Novelle (Buenos Aires: Südamerika-Verlag, 1951); Jovita Epp, Die argentinische Heirat: Roman (München: Biederstein Verl., 1960).

¹⁸¹⁹ Ivana R. Klammer, "Reinventing the Colonial Fantasy in the Post-WWII Era: Jovita Epp's Amado Mio" (M.A., Brigham Young University, 2010); Jovita Epp, Amado mio: Roman (Stuttgart: Gebühr, 1975).

¹⁸²⁰ Marko Martin, "Der Schriftsteller Robert Schopflocher: Vom Shtetl in der Pampa," Neue Zürcher Zeitung, June 30, 2013, <https://www.nzz.ch/vom-shtetl-in-der-pampa-1.18108384>.

¹⁸²¹ Reinhard Andress, "'Tercer espacio' e 'hibridación': el caso del escritor argentino-alemán Robert(o) Schopflocher," Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 251–68.

¹⁸²² Roberto Schopflocher, Der caudillo: Erzählung (Buenos Aires: El Zahir Editora, 2009); Roberto Schopflocher, Weit von wo: Mein Leben zwischen drei Welten (München: LangenMüller, 2010).

they nonetheless testify to the larger colonization attempts and the ambiance among German-speakers both in the South Atlantic and Central Europe.

7.3 Conclusion

German-speaking authors used different literary types in order to get their message of spreading knowledge about the South Atlantic to German-speakers in Central Europe. The different types of texts German-speakers published on the South Atlantic served as a means to discursively appropriate the territory, the land, the soil, both in the minds of the German-speakers who were already in the South Atlantic, but also those who were not there yet and whose attention should be attracted. Much of the literature was published in Central Europe and the audience mainly targeted with these publications consisted in German-speakers in Central Europe. Scientific writing legitimized discursive appropriation of territories previously unknown to Europeans having come to the South Atlantic. The academic publications were also made accessible to the common people in propaganda texts. Individuals published their personal travel accounts and migration experiences, which provided other German-speakers with first-hand accounts of colonization and gave them a basis for imitation. Lastly, fictional accounts allowed for imagining potential colonization in texts aimed at entertaining German-speakers and encouraging their own imagination in order to go practice colonization in the South Atlantic themselves.

Chapter 8. Implementing Agricultural Colonization and Exploiting the Land

German-speakers practiced agricultural colonization on both sides of the South Atlantic. Wappäus had written already in 1846 that the German colonies abroad should be agricultural colonies (Ackerbau-Colonien).¹⁸²³ Throughout the South Atlantic, settlements in the “countryside” specifically for agriculture and stockbreeding (Ackerbau und Viehzucht) began in the 1840s.

In Argentina, early German-speaking settlers in the interior settled in the northern regions, which were part of the frontier and contested areas in the border regions with Brazil. German-speakers in the 1850s were allowed to settle in “closed groups,” with a large percentage of Swiss-Germans among them. Gradually, the Argentine state took more formal control of agricultural projects.

It is important to note here that German-speaking individuals were actually practicing agricultural colonization and not just theorizing about it. They imported plants and animals from Europe, and they adapted their cultivation practices to the conditions of the South Atlantic. Agricultural colonization remained an activity carried out by individuals. Even if the states had a hand in the set-up, it always came down to individual private people doing the actual work on the ground.

¹⁸²³ “So verschieden die hierher gehörigen Pläne auch sein mögen, so stimmen sie doch meist in der Voraussetzung überein, daß die anzulegenden deutschen Colonien Ackerbau-Colonien sein müssen [...]” Johann Eduard Wappäus, “Gelegentliche Gedanken über die neueren deutschen Emigrations- und Colonisations-Projekte,” Janus: Jahrbücher deutscher Gesinnung, Bildung und That 20–22 (1846): 707.

8.1 Examining Exemplary Terms

We will discuss two contemporary terms here that were important for agricultural colonization and that were at the core of the experience of agricultural colonization for German-speakers in the South Atlantic. The term “practitioners” was used in opposition to “theorists.” Theorists were those academics and daydreamers, the colonial enthusiasts who never set foot on overseas soil but did not hesitate to conjure plans and claims that remained unachievable.

The term “farmer” expressed some kind of activism and individuality, and probably existed in opposition to “peasant” (Bauer). Was this choice related to the size of the territory they worked and thus a question of scale? Or was this a matter of expressing class? Was the German term too closely linked to the lower classes in Germany that members of the middle class and bourgeoisie could not accept to be called peasant?

8.1.1 “Colonial Practitioner” (Praktiker)

Practitioner (Praktiker) is a reoccurring term in the sources on colonization. Even at the time, German-speakers continuously used it in opposition to theorists: academics and colonial enthusiasts who were only theorizing and dreaming, but not “living colonization.” Wappäus wrote in his 1843 publication on South America about “soi-disant Praktiker” (so-called practitioners), who criticized his own “Gelehrtenpedanterie” (scholarly pedantry).¹⁸²⁴ A few years later, he specifically published a book based on the accounts of practitioners.¹⁸²⁵ People in Namibia meanwhile got nervous when Germans from Germany wanted to interfere and “help”: they were the ones living in Namibia – the practitioners of colonialism – and only they knew the conditions, not those living in Europe.¹⁸²⁶

In 1882, Ernst Hasse claimed in a confidential document preserved in the Berlin Federal Archives that the founding of the South American Colonization Company was a contribution to practical solution of the German colonization question.¹⁸²⁷ Likewise, the statutes of the German Colonial Association claimed to contribute to the practical solution of the colonial question.¹⁸²⁸ And the 1885

¹⁸²⁴ Wappäus, Die Republiken von Südamerika geographisch-statistisch, viii.

¹⁸²⁵ anonymous, Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonisation.

¹⁸²⁶ [Wilhelm] Anz, Deutschlands Pflichten in Südwestafrika (Stuttgart: Druck und Verlag der Chr. Belser'schen Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1908).

¹⁸²⁷ Hasse, “Vertraulich! Die Südamerikanische Colonisations-Gesellschaft: Ein Beitrag zur praktischen Lösung der deutschen Colonisationsfrage.”

¹⁸²⁸ “Auszug aus den Satzungen des „Deutschen Colonialvereins“.”

statutes of the Society for German Colonisation aimed at the continuation of practical results for the German colonial movement.¹⁸²⁹

In 1904, farmer Karl Schlettwein determined that the people working in the German colonial office were almost exclusively people who had only heard about the German colonies, and they lacked real experience in the matter. He complained, “instead of contacting the practitioners in the colonies, they considered only scholars and government officials as qualified to have and voice healthy opinions.”¹⁸³⁰ Otto Preusse-Sperber portrayed himself as a practitioner in Argentina in his 1905 publication, which was also used by the German Central Information Office for Migrants.¹⁸³¹ He highlighted the fact that he was a man with much experience, a self-taught and brave man.

8.1.2 “Farmer”

““Farmer” (Farmer) was the preferred term in Namibia for agriculturalists, instead of peasant (Bauer), which was used in Central Europe, whereas in Argentina, the term Landwirt was used, which also translates into English as “farmer.” In 1898, for example, the newspaper Windhoeker Anzeiger repeatedly

¹⁸²⁹ “Satzungen der Gesellschaft für deutsche Kolonisation.”

¹⁸³⁰ Karl Schlettwein, Deutschlands bisherige Kolonialpolitik und die augenblicklichen Zustände in Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Berlin: Koloniale Zeitschrift, 1904), 4f.; “Anstatt mit den Praktikern in den Kolonien Föhlung zu nehmen, hielt man nur Gelehrte und Regierungsbeamte für qualifiziert, gesunde Ansichten zu haben und zu äußern.”

¹⁸³¹ Otto Preusse-Sperber, Wegweiser für Argentinien zur Orientierung der Auswanderer und Kapitalisten, Second Edition (Flöha, Sachsen: Peitz & Sohn, 1905).

used the word “farmer.”¹⁸³² Men identified as farmers,¹⁸³³ and women as women farmers, farmer’s wives, or farmer’s daughters.¹⁸³⁴ Some sources claimed the term came from the English word.¹⁸³⁵

In Argentina, many people used Landwirt,¹⁸³⁶ or the related word Ackerbauer.¹⁸³⁷ Friedrich Gerstäcker mentioned in his travel account that he had met a farmer in Argentina who had become “a real American farmer and could ¹⁸³² “In diesem Jahr ist eine erhebliche Menge von Bäumen, namentlich Obstbäumen in Gross- und Klein-Windhoek und in benachbarten Farmen eingepflanzt worden,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 12, 1898, sec. Aus dem Schutzgebiet, NAN; Wecke & Voigts, “Wecke & Voigts [...] Import - Export: 100 Pferde, dreijährig, stehen zum Verkauf auf Farm Voigtland”; “30 Hennen zu verkaufen à 2.50 Mark auf Farm Frauenstein,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 10, 1898, NAN; “Am 12. d. Mts. sind auf der Siedelungsfarm VI. in unmittelbarer Nähe von Windhoek ...,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, December 22, 1898, sec. Local-Nachrichten, NAN.

¹⁸³³ Carl Schlettwein, Der Farmer in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Eine Darstellung sämtlicher für den afrikanischen Farmer in Betracht kommenden Erwerbszweige und Ein Leitfaden für Anfänger, First Edition (Wismar: Hinstorff, 1907); Ada Cramer, Weiss oder Schwarz: Lehr- und Leidensjahre eines Farmers in Südwest im Lichte des Rassenhasses (Berlin: Deutscher Kolonial-Verlag, 1913); Voigt, Du meine Heimat Deutschsüdwest. Ein afrikanisches Farmerleben; Ludwig Conradt, Erinnerungen aus zwanzigjährigem Händler- und Farmerleben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, ed. Thomas Keil (Göttingen: Klaus Hess, 2006).

¹⁸³⁴ Hodann, Auf rauhen Pfaden; Falkenhausen, “Ein Tag auf der Farm. Aus dem Brief einer Farmersfrau”; Büchner, “Skizzen aus dem Leben einer Farmerfrau in Deutsch-Südwestafrika”; Höpker, Um Scholle und Leben; Höpker, Als Farmerin in Deutsch-Südwest: Was ich in Afrika erlebte; Holstein, Deutsche Frau in Südwest; Oldevig, Im Sonnenland.

¹⁸³⁵ Mohr and Hauff, Deutsche im Ausland; Im Auftrage des Reichswanderungsamtes und in Verbindung mit dem Verein für das Deutschtum im Ausland, 246.

¹⁸³⁶ “Aussichten für Landwirte in Argentinien [Reichsstelle für das Auswanderungswesen, Berlin: Merkblatt Nr. 7, (4. Auflage)],” 1925 1922, EZA 5/2061.

¹⁸³⁷ Juan Hugles and Carlos Dunzelmann, “Für Ackerbauer verkaufen wir im Partido Nueve de Julio ...,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, May 2, 1885, sec. coverpage, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; “Am 22. langte der bekannte große Ackerbauer in Mashonaland, Tapsell, von Captown kommend in London an...,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, May 24, 1898, sec. Kabel-Nachrichten, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Ernst Pfannenschmidt, “Neue Projekte zur Besserung der wirtschaftlichen Lage der Ackerbauer,” August 26, 1912, BArch R 1001/7939, pag. 197.

easily compete with his North American brothers.”¹⁸³⁸ In 1916, Otto Kasdorf, professor in Montevideo, posited that South America provided a wide field for the colonial activity of the excessive European migrant population,¹⁸³⁹ whereas he defined colonists as farmers.¹⁸⁴⁰

8.2 Case Studies

In 1883, the Association for the Protection of German Migrants¹⁸⁴¹ in Buenos Aires began its work to support German migrants and colonists establishing themselves in Argentina. Among those active in promoting the River Plate as the ideal destination for German migration were many German-speakers who actually travelled to the region, like Carlos Beck Bernard, Samuel Kerst, and Friedrich Wilhelm Reden.¹⁸⁴² Like Wappäus and Gaebler, they were promoting a “modern” version of colonization, where Germany would not assume sovereignty over these ¹⁸³⁸ “Der Mann war aber auch in anderer Hinsicht ein ächter amerikanischer Farmer geworden, und hätte sich seinen Brüdern in Nordamerika ohne weiters anreihen können, - er schimpfte aus Leibeskräften auf die Deutschen und meinte, diese sollten nur um Gottes Willen nicht auswandern oder nach Südamerika kommen, denn arbeiten wollten sie doch nicht, und zum zuzucken brauchten sie Niemanden mehr, da hätten sie gerade genug. Er beschäftigte uch eine Anzahl von Spaniern auf seinem Grundstück [...] Nirgends beschäftigte er aber Deutsche und versicherte uns, wenn er auch einmal einen deutschen Arbeiter kriegte, so verdientes sie gewöhnlich das Brod nicht, denn erstens wollten sie nicht arbeiten, und dann forderten sie den drei-doppelten Lohn von dem, was er dem fleißigsten Spanier gäbe.” Gerstäcker, Reisen, 94ff.

¹⁸³⁹ Kasdorf, Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika, 34.

¹⁸⁴⁰ Ibid., 64.

¹⁸⁴¹ “Der hiesige Verein zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderung hat nun schon seit längerer Zeit in Aussicht genommen ständige Auskunfts- und Nachweisungs-Bureau nunmehr eröffnet.”

¹⁸⁴² Beck Bernard, Die Argentinische Republik als Auswanderungsziel; Kerst, Die Länder im Stromgebiete des La Plata; Bahre, Gegenwart und Zukunft der Plata-Länder; Reden, Die Staaten im Stromgebiet des La Plata in ihrer Bedeutung für Europa.

overseas territories. While colonization companies and the Argentinean government would administer these colonization projects, proponents of them argued that the main aim was the improvement of the German economy through the creation of new markets; simultaneously, these proponents wanted support from German merchants and state institutions.

Charles John Andersson labeled people having settled at the missionary station Schmelen's Hope colonists.¹⁸⁴³ Andersson and Francis Galton travelled to Scheppmansdorf, a missionary station founded by Rhenish missionary Scheppman in 1846, located by the Kuisip river, surrounded by sand.¹⁸⁴⁴ They also visited Barmen and Carl Hugo Hahn.¹⁸⁴⁵

The teacher brought from Germany for the Protestant church, Germán Frers, founded the colony Baradero in 1857 in the province Buenos Aires with mostly Swiss-German and German families as a model colony (Musterkolonie).¹⁸⁴⁶ In Argentina, such examples of agricultural colonies founded by German-speakers are numerous. The following section examines just a few exemplary case studies: Esperanza (Santa Fe) in the Argentinean pampa, the Rio ¹⁸⁴³ Andersson, Reisen in Südwest-Afrika 1, 1:135.

¹⁸⁴⁴ Ibid., 1:28.

¹⁸⁴⁵ Ibid., 1:106.

¹⁸⁴⁶ "Die Colonie Baradero in der Provinz Buenos Aires," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, December 3, 1876, 204–5, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Hugo Kunz, "[1] Die Colonie Baradero," Argentinisches Wochenblatt, April 14, 1883, sec. cover page, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina; Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 204–5.

Pico colony in Patagonia, as well as Otjimbingwe and Windhoek/ Klein-Windhoek in Namibia.

8.2.1 Esperanza – The First Agricultural Colony in Argentina

More recently, the historians Julio Djenderedjian and Valentin Kramer have treated the colony Esperanza in their studies as it is the first colony in the Argentinean interior where many German-speakers, in particular Swiss-Germans settled.¹⁸⁴⁷ Esperanza was founded in 1846 with the help of the empresario Aaron Castellanos.¹⁸⁴⁸ The Protestant pastor Ernst Wilhelm Schweinitz visited Esperanza from Buenos Aires in 1857.¹⁸⁴⁹ The first own Protestant church in the colony Esperanza was constructed in 1865.¹⁸⁵⁰ In 1872, the Protestants organized ¹⁸⁴⁷ Julio Djenderedjian and Juan Luis Martirén, “La distribución de la riqueza rural entre tradición y modernidad. Los casos de la colonia Esperanza y el distrito de Paraná durante la década de 1860,” Población & Sociedad 19, no. 2 (2012): 125–54; Valentin Kramer, “Deutsch, deutsch-argentinisch, argentinisch. Kulturelle Aushandlungsprozesse in deutschen Einwanderervereinen in Argentinien, 1856-1930,” in Migration – Religion – Identität. Aspekte transkultureller Prozesse: Migration – Religion – Identity. Aspects of Transcultural Processes, ed. Kerstin Kazzazi, Angela Treiber, and Tim Wätzold (Wiesbaden: Springer Fachmedien, 2016), 95–107; Kramer, Zwischen den Heimaten.

¹⁸⁴⁸ H. Borchard, Verzeichnis der deutschen evangelischen Diaspora-Gemeinden und -Geistlichen in Südamerika, Australien, Orient, Rumänien, Serbien, Italien, Schweiz, Frankreich und England, zusammengestellt im Auftrage der Diaspora-Conferenz (Leipzig: Verlag von M. L. Matthies, 1883); Frutos, La Colonización Argentina, 57; Manuel M. Cervera, Colonización Argentina y Fundación de Esperanza (Esperanza, Provincia de Santa Fe, República Argentina: Municipalidad de Esperanza, 1906); Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 209; Museo de la Colonización, Museo de la Colonización Argentina.

¹⁸⁴⁹ Ernst Wilhelm Schweinitz, “Reisebericht des Pastors E. Schweinitz in Buenos Aires über den Besuch in den Städten Rosario, Parana, Santa Fé und in den Kolonien Los Conohas und La Esperanza.,” October 16, 1857, EZA 5/2061.

¹⁸⁵⁰ “Evangelische Gemeinde Esperanza,” Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt Für die Deutschredenden am La Plata, December 4, 1896, EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 73.

a traveling pastor (Reiseprediger) for the colonies in the interior they considered important, and they included Esperanza.¹⁸⁵¹ The German Protestant German parish San Carlos was founded in 1872.¹⁸⁵² In the same year, the German newspaper Deutsche Zeitung already had an agent placed in the colony.¹⁸⁵³ A year later, in 1873, the colony published its own newspaper, Der Argentinische Bote.¹⁸⁵⁴ Members of the 1885 and 1888 Diaspora conferences in Germany came from Esperanza.¹⁸⁵⁵ In 1889, the Argentinean company Banco Colonizador Nacional sold lots in the colony Esperanza and advertised in the newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt.¹⁸⁵⁶ In 1891, a new Protestant church building was constructed.¹⁸⁵⁷ In 1907, the fifth Protestant synod of the La Plata states convened in Esperanza.¹⁸⁵⁸ In 1984, the Argentinean colonization museum featured Esperanza as the first Argentinean agricultural colony.¹⁸⁵⁹

¹⁸⁵¹ “Unterstützung, Auszüge [...] Buenos Ayres,” 1872, EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 61.

¹⁸⁵² Borchard, Verzeichnis der deutschen evangelischen Diaspora-Gemeinden und -Geistlichen in Südamerika, Australien, Orient, Rumänien, Serbien, Italien, Schweiz, Frankreich und England, zusammengestellt im Auftrage der Diaspora-Conferenz.

¹⁸⁵³ “Agenten der Deutschen Zeitung,” Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, July 3, 1872.

¹⁸⁵⁴ C. Kleiber-Gietz, “Verfassung der Argentinischen Nation,” Der Argentinische Bote, May 27, 1876, Volume 3, No.43 edition, EZA 5/2061, p. 141.

¹⁸⁵⁵ “Verzeichnis der Mitglieder der Diaspora-Conferenz; Eisenach, den 8. September 1885.” September 8, 1885, EZA 200/1/93, pg. 64-67; “Verzeichnis der Mitglieder der Diaspora-Conferenz; Hannover, den 1. Dezember 1888,” December 1, 1888, EZA 200/1/93, pg. 247.

¹⁸⁵⁶ “Banco Colonizador Nacional.”

¹⁸⁵⁷ “Evangelische Gemeinde Esperanza.”

¹⁸⁵⁸ “Bericht über die fünfte ordentliche Synode der Deutschen Evangelischen Gemeinden in den La Plata Staaten; gehalten in Esperanza (St. Fé) am 11. November 1907,” 1907, EZA 200/1/4240, pg. 32b.

¹⁸⁵⁹ Museo de la Colonización, Museo de la Colonización Argentina.

8.2.2 Rio Pico – A German Colony in Patagonia?

The Rio Pico colonial experiment was part of the project to colonize Patagonia after the “Conquest of the Desert.” In 1904, the creation of an agrarian-pastoral colony by the Rio Pico was declared by decree.¹⁸⁶⁰ Wilhelm Vallentin attempted to set up a German settlement at the Rio Pico in Chubut the following year.¹⁸⁶¹ Alfred Arent wrote: “Captain Dr. Vallentin recently received a concession of 90 square leguas (225,000 ha) in the Chubut territory from the government ‘for colonization with German migrants’ and he hopes to trigger off German migration to Patagonia.”¹⁸⁶²

In January 1905, José Greger’s journal Süd-Amerika labeled Vallentin as colonizer (Kolonisator) in Argentina.¹⁸⁶³ The article was very critical of Vallentin and his colonization project, calling him a theorist with no practical experience. The article also made reference to the failed experience of Germans in the Hansa colony in South Brazil. But Vallentin had support from the newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt, which repeatedly published favorable articles about his ¹⁸⁶⁰ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 8 octubre 1904],” October 8, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 2728 D del año 1904].

¹⁸⁶¹ “Germanische Ansiedlung ‘Friedland’ am Rio Pico (Chubut) (Dr. W. Vallentin).”

¹⁸⁶² Arent, “Patagonien, ein deutsches Kolonisationsgebiet,” 730; “Herr Kapitän Dr. Vallentin hat kürzlich von der Regierung eine Konzession von 90 Quadratleguas (225 000 Hektar) im Chubut-Territorium ‘zur Kolonisierung mit germanischen Einwanderern’ erhalten und damit hoffentlich den Anstoss zu einer deutschen Einwanderung nach Patagonien gegeben.”

¹⁸⁶³ “Dr. W. Vallentin als Colonisator in Argentinien,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, January 1, 1905, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 112.

project in 1905.¹⁸⁶⁴ And he continued to promote his project in his own publications.¹⁸⁶⁵

By October 1907, the Südamerikanische Rundschau reported the termination of the land concession for W. Vallentin.¹⁸⁶⁶ In 1908, J. Wolff from the Information Center of the German Colonial Office in Berlin confirmed that the Rio Pico project had been terminated by the Argentine government.¹⁸⁶⁷ In 1915, Ernst Pfannenschmidt made negative comments about the failure of the Rio Pico colonization project.¹⁸⁶⁸ However, in 2001, Argentinean scholar Ernesto Maggiori had published a book about the German colony “Friedland” and the history of the Rio Pico.¹⁸⁶⁹

8.2.3 Otjimbingwe – A Missionary Colony in Namibia

Otjimbingwe started out as a Rhenish missionary station in 1843. The Augustineum, a school for missionary assistants, was first founded in Okahandja

¹⁸⁶⁴ “Ein deutsches Kolonisationsunternehmen in Patagonien,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, July 28, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 110; “Germanische Ansiedlung ‘Friedland’ am Rio Pico (Chubut) (Dr. W. Vallentin).”

¹⁸⁶⁵ Wilhelm Vallentin, Chubut: Im Sattel durch Kordillere und Pampa Mittel-Patagoniens, Argentinien (Berlin: Hermann Paetel, 1906); Vallentin, Argentinien und seine wirtschaftliche Bedeutung für Deutschland: Vortrag gehalten am 23. Jan. 1907 im Deutsch-Brasilianischen Verein zu Berlin.

¹⁸⁶⁶ “Deutsche Kolonisation in Chubut,” Südamerikanische Rundschau, October 1, 1907, BArch R 901/30422, pag. 34.

¹⁸⁶⁷ J. Wolff, “J. Wolff to Michael Lux, Monteur [Abraten von Auswanderung nach Patagonien, statt dessen Verweis auf Namibia (DSWA)],” January 17, 1907, BArch R 901/30422, pag. 45-51.

¹⁸⁶⁸ Pfannenschmidt, Landwirtschaft und Kolonisation in Patagonien, 53.

¹⁸⁶⁹ Ernesto Maggiori, Colonias Alemanas en Patagonia Argentina: una descripción de sus comienzos y fracasos, Ediciones Patagónicas; 10 (Comodoro Rivadavia: Vela al Viento, 2009).

in 1845 before it later moved to Otjimbingwe.¹⁸⁷⁰ Charles John Andersson lived in Otjimbingwe for some years after his travels with Francis Galton and practiced trade with the indigenous population.¹⁸⁷¹ When he moved to Walvis Bay, Carl Hugo Hahn bought his property and buildings: a large home, a blacksmith's shop, a wainwright (Wagenmacher), a warehouse, a butchershop, and several small houses.¹⁸⁷²

As part of Hahn's plan to set up a missionary colony, several colonists from Germany arrived in Namibia in the 1860s and 1870s.¹⁸⁷³ Eduard Hälbich joined Carl Hugo Hahn in Otjimbingwe in 1864.¹⁸⁷⁴ He built a blacksmith's shop from wood and stone, but was involved in ongoing conflicts with the Afrikaners who had attacked Andersson's cattle and Rehoboth. He had a "Damra" boy help him, since the boy offered to work for him, and he married after his arrival in Namibia on 1 March 1864. His wife, Amalie, helped Emma Hahn, Carl Hugo's wife, with household work. Hälbich's job was making rifles – he made fourty guns in three months. He also employed another blacksmith and a wainwright (Wagenmacher). They also made gardens and "wheatlands" (Kornländer) with a harvest of 54 Berlin Scheffels (= 3000 liter), and they harvested kampunen (??), ¹⁸⁷⁰ Augustineum in Otjimbingue und Okahandja: Gehilfenseminar, 1845-1931 (Band 1), 1931 1845, RMG 2.648, Bl.

¹⁸⁷¹ Vedder, Das alte Südwestafrika, 333ff.

¹⁸⁷² Ibid., 493–94.

¹⁸⁷³ Kolonisten (Briefe und Berichte), 1864-1885, 1885, RMG 2.573, Bl. 2-101.

¹⁸⁷⁴ Eduard Hälbich, "[Colonist Letter 2] Eduard Hälbich to Inspektor Friedrich Fabri," November 27, 1864, RMG 2.573, Bl. 5-10.

watermelons, menlis (??), tobacco, and straw to cover the houses. They used donkeys to transport stones for house construction. In five months, Hälbich earned 250 gr. Thaler, 27 cattle, 144 sheep, and goats; he repaired over 100 guns/rifles. He had locals in training to become blacksmiths as well. He asked Inspektor Fabri for another wainwright or blacksmith to be sent from Germany. He had daily contact with locals; they paid for rifle parts with sheep. He learned quite a bit of Dutch, but only some “Damra” and English. He signed his letter with “Colonist Eduard Hälbich.” Colonial frontier life was one of agriculture and of violence, both of which were attempts to tame the land.

Over the years, Rhenish missionaries continued to hold missionary conferences in Otjimbingwe, as for example in August 1882.¹⁸⁷⁵ Rudolf Ludloff described the German colony Otjimbingwe in his travel account from 1891.¹⁸⁷⁶ So did Rhenish missionar inspector A. Schreiber in his 1894 publication; he described Otjimbingwe as the oldest missionary station in Namibia with numerous houses from Europeans as well as buildings owned by the Rhenish mission.¹⁸⁷⁷ At the time of his visit, missionary colonists Hälbich and Redecker were still living there.

In 1896, Franz Joseph von Bülow published his travel writing from a trip to German South-West Africa begun in 1891. He described how in 1893, white ¹⁸⁷⁵ Brinker, “Conferenz gehalten in Otjimbingwe, 13.-20.08.1882,” n.d., RMG 2.612, Bl.

¹⁸⁷⁶ Ludloff, Nach Deutsch-Namaland, 54.

¹⁸⁷⁷ Schreiber, Fünf Monate in Südafrika, 102.

and indigenous inhabitants planted wheat and small gardens with corn, pumpkin and sweet potatoes in the riverbed by Otjimbingwe.¹⁸⁷⁸ He had special praise for the Hälbich family, their kind hearts and great hospitality, as well as their “German spirit,” cleanliness, order, and coziness, which he attributed to the “German housewife.”¹⁸⁷⁹ By 1899, other settlers were announcing their weddings in the newspaper Windhoeker Anzeiger.¹⁸⁸⁰ In 1989, Gunter von Schumann published a book about the main settlement locations in Namibia, including Otjimbingwe.¹⁸⁸¹

8.2.4 Klein-Windhoek – Colonization or Gardening?

During the time of the German protectorate, Windhoek replaced Otjimbingwe as administrative capital and became the main settlement for German-speakers.¹⁸⁸² Today, Klein-Windhoek is a part of Windhoek. The travel descriptions of Germans discuss whether German settlers practiced colonization or whether their activities should rather be called gardening in reference to the scale (many of these settlers in Klein-Windhoek planted a variety of vegetables for mostly ¹⁸⁷⁸ Bülow, Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 102.

¹⁸⁷⁹ Ibid., 104ff.

¹⁸⁸⁰ “Maria Hoffmann, Gustav Rösemann. Verlobte. Otjimbingue,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, January 5, 1899, NAN; “Wilhelmine Litfinski, Albert Steinhauer. Verlobte, Otjimbingue,” Windhoeker Anzeiger, March 30, 1899, NAN.

¹⁸⁸¹ Gunter von Schumann, “Hauptorte in Südwestafrika in ihrer historisch-geographischen Entwicklung - Otjimbingue - Omaruru - Windhoek,” Frankfurter Wirtschafts- und Sozialgeographische Schriften 53 (1989): 141–80.

¹⁸⁸² Ibid.

personal consumption). In the sources, German-speakers did not always distinguish between Windhoek, Gross-Windhoek and Klein-Windhoek. It was in Klein-Windhoek that the Rhenish Missionary Society had set up a missionary station under C.H. Hahn and Kleinschmidt in the 1840s, which they abandoned after a conflict with the Wesleyan Missionary Society.¹⁸⁸³ The Settlement Society for German South-West Africa was active in the settlement of Klein-Windhoek in 1892.¹⁸⁸⁴ Homestead land in Klein-Windhoek was announced in 1892.¹⁸⁸⁵ As mentioned previously, in 1894 August Schreiber wrote in his travel memoirs that the former Rhenish missionary station had been in Klein-Windhoek, and that now numerous German settlers were living there. They had built a number of nice gardens.¹⁸⁸⁶ In 1896, Franz Joseph von Bülow described Windhoek as a place with ten houses.¹⁸⁸⁷ In 1898, government workers and private people planted a lot of fruit trees in both Gross- and Klein-Windhoek: 50 apple, 50 pear, 36 apricot, 15 quince, 60 plum, 30 cherry, 42 peach, 23 almond, 20 orange, 12 lemon and various other trees.¹⁸⁸⁸ In particular in Klein-Windhoek, people planted

¹⁸⁸³ Moritz and Bistri, "Kleinschmidts Aufzeichnungen über Kl. Windhuk und die Damaras. 1843."

¹⁸⁸⁴ "Südwestafrikanische Siedlung."

¹⁸⁸⁵ "[Heimstättenland] [Klein-Windhoek]," 1892, BArch R 1001/1685, pag. 93.

¹⁸⁸⁶ Schreiber, Fünf Monate in Südafrika, 88 f.

¹⁸⁸⁷ Bülow, Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 129.

¹⁸⁸⁸ "In diesem Jahr ist eine erhebliche Menge von Bäumen, namentlich Obstbäumen in Gross- und Klein-Windhoek und in benachbarten Farmen eingepflanzt worden."

vineyards.¹⁸⁸⁹ According to Guenter K. Anton, the actual colonization of the German protectorate South-West Africa started in August 1892 with the settlement of migrants in Klein-Windhoek.¹⁸⁹⁰

8.3 Agricultural Produce

In this section, we will have a look at the agricultural goods German-speakers produced in the South Atlantic. They cultivated plants and animals, which many of them they brought with them from Central Europe. While the early settlers, including missionaries, in Namibia experimented with gardens and small-scale agriculture, projects for large-scale farming only became relevant later on. Rhenish missionary Carl Hugo Hahn and his wife Emma Hone were critical of the Herero-speakers' eating habits: they were eating too much meat for the couple's taste. On 6 November 1849, Carl Hugo Hahn noted the first wheat harvest of 54 litres in his diary,¹⁸⁹¹ and on 1 August 1850, he proudly reported on his beautiful garden growing several types of cabbage, beets, carrots, and onions.¹⁸⁹² In 1891, Ludloff wrote that there was no real Ackerbau (farming), but rather Gartenbau (gardening): the missionaries had introduced wheat cultivation in the dry riverbed ¹⁸⁸⁹ "In Klein-Windhoek wird die Bestellung der Gärten eifrig betrieben," Windhoeker Anzeiger, October 12, 1898, sec. Local-Nachrichten, NAN.

¹⁸⁹⁰ Anton, Die Siedlungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 3.

¹⁸⁹¹ Carl Hugo Hahn, Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part II: 1846-1851, ed. Brigitte Lau, vol. 2 (Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1984), 436.

¹⁸⁹² Ibid., 2:464.

near Otjimbingwe and in 1890, Germans had harvested about 150 Zentner of wheat.¹⁸⁹³ In 1898, D. Seidel described garden plants that grow in Namibia.¹⁸⁹⁴ German-speakers in the German protectorate South-West Africa started to monitor crop and animal farming with regards to competition on the world market. In 1899, farmer Carl Schlettwein reported on potential competition with Argentina in wheat production.¹⁸⁹⁵ Across the Atlantic, the companies run by Bunge and other German-speakers had contributed to turn Argentina into an important wheat producer and exporter.¹⁸⁹⁶ In 1907, the chronicle of the North-German Lloyd shipping company also included a description of the soil in Argentina as well as a brief history of German colonization including wheat production in Argentina.¹⁸⁹⁷ With regards to animal cultivation, German-speakers were particularly involved in breeding cattle, horses, and sheep.

¹⁸⁹³ Ludloff, Nach Deutsch-Namaland, 58.

¹⁸⁹⁴ D. Seidel, Deutschlands erste Kolonie: Gesammelte Erfahrungen und Erlebnisse während eines Aufenthaltes von neun Jahren in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika (Hamburg: O. W. C. Busch, 1898), 22.

¹⁸⁹⁵ Carl Schlettwein, "Zur Landwirtschaft," Windhoeker Anzeiger, November 9, 1899, NAN.

¹⁸⁹⁶ Jeremy Adelman, "Labour on the Pampas," in Frontier Development: Land, Labour, and Capital on the Wheatlands of Argentina and Canada, 1890-1914, Oxford Historical Monographs (Oxford; New York: Clarendon Press; Oxford University Press, 1994), 104–46; Julio Djenderedjian, Sílcora Bearzotti, and Juan Luis Martirén, Expansión agrícola y colonización en la segunda mitad del siglo XIX, vol. 1, 2 vols., Historia del capitalismo agrario pampeano 6 (Buenos Aires: Teseo; Editorial Universidad de Belgrano, 2010).

¹⁸⁹⁷ Norddeutscher Lloyd, 70 años LLoyd Norte Alemán Bremen: 1857 - 1927 (Berlin: Atlantic-Verlag, 1927), 181.

8.4 Conclusion

The mere fact that German-speakers were practicing colonization in the South stands in stark contrast to what most historians studying German colonialism have written: they continue to claim that German colonialism remained a vision, a dream, a theoretical project. Focusing on colonization and specifically agriculture has allowed me to show a different series of events and developments.

However, South Atlantic German-speakers actually practiced productive soil extraction by raising different plants and animals. Some projects were successful over the long-term, others only lasted a short while. The success of individual examples does not prove the feasibility of the entire project nor does it question the intentions of German-speakers in practicing agricultural colonization in the South Atlantic. Plant cultivation was considered as more sophisticated and more evolved than animal raising. The increasing evolution of tools used for agriculture and the industrialization of agriculture enabled German-speakers to contribute to the process called agribusiness. Today, the Bunge Company is still actively involved in agribusiness.¹⁸⁹⁸ While they started out as a family business with wheat cultivation and processing, they are currently involved in soy production and they have extended their reach to become a global player.

¹⁸⁹⁸ “Our History,” Bunge, accessed March 23, 2017, <http://www.bunge.com/who-we-are/our-history>.

Colonization did not only turn into agriculture; one could also argue that colonization turned into (economic) globalization.

Chapter 9. Agricultural Colonization as Field of Increasing State Regulation

With the growing influence and importance of nation-states after the French Revolution, contemporaries discussed the role the state should take up in colonization. As we saw in Chapter 7, German-speakers in Central Europe as well as in the South Atlantic were active participants in this ongoing discussion. In this chapter, we will have a closer look at the actual development of increasing state influence on German-speaking colonization in the South Atlantic, as well as in the Euro-German states.

In Argentina, early German-speaking settlers in the interior settled in the northern regions, which were part of the frontier and contested areas in the border regions with Brazil. German-speakers in the 1850s were allowed to settle in “closed groups” with a large percentage of Swiss-Germans. Gradually, the Argentine state, with the growing nation state, took more formal control of agricultural projects.

In Namibia, German Imperial authorities and later Colonial authorities attempted to stay out of colonization matters as much for as long as possible. They provided information about migration conditions to interested people through the information bureau, but they also informed them that they were on their own in organizing the move and their new life in the protectorate. Only with colonial secretary Bernhard Dernburg after 1905 did German imperial authorities get more involved in organizing and regulating life in the protectorate. However, by this time, settlers in the protectorate had already started to develop their own identity and worked towards increasing self-government.

9.1 Namibia

Namibia was a German protectorate, or in other words a formal colony, between 1884 and 1915. German protectorates were in a complicated situation: they were neither completely domestic nor completely foreign territory, but rather, depending on the time as well as the specific area, their status differed and was also subject to change. Historian Helmut Bley distinguished between pre- and post-1904 periods, based on the decisive influence of the Namibian War.¹⁸⁹⁹ Concerning German state involvement, however, I would say that the activities of German Colonial Office State Secretary Bernhard Dernburg (*1865 Darmstadt – 1937 Berlin) were more decisive.¹⁹⁰⁰ Dernburg travelled in British South Africa in 1908, where he also visited German-speakers, but it was in particular his ¹⁸⁹⁹ Bley, South-West Africa under German Rule.

¹⁹⁰⁰ Bernhard Dernburg, Koloniale Erziehung: Vortrag (München: Knorr & Hirth, 1907); Bernhard Dernburg, Koloniale Finanzprobleme: Vortrag (Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1907); Bernhard Dernburg, Koloniale Lehrjahre: Vortrag gehalten in Stuttgart am 23. Januar 1907 (Stuttgart, Berlin, Leipzig: Union Deutsche Verlagsgesellschaft, 1907); Dernburg, Zielpunkte des deutschen Kolonialwesens; Werner Schiefel, Bernhard Dernburg, 1865-1937: Kolonialpolitiker und Bankier im wilhelminischen Deutschland, Beiträge zur Kolonial- und Überseegegeschichte 11 (Zürich; Freiburg im Breisgau: Atlantis Verlag, 1974); Hartmut Bartmuß, Bernhard Dernburg Kolonialpolitiker der Kaiserzeit, Jüdische Miniaturen 148 (Berlin: Hentrich, 2014).

perception of British attitudes towards colonization that played an important role in his subsequent plans for the German case.¹⁹⁰¹

9.1.1 Legal and Political Position of Namibia with Regards to Statehood

Was Namibia thus considered part of the German Empire between 1884 and 1915? The British had incorporated Walvis Bay into the Cape Colony in 1878, and between 1884 and 1907, German-speakers gradually consolidated their control over the territory that is today Namibia.¹⁹⁰² Historian and cartographer Imre Demhardt has portrayed the gradual development of the borders of the German protectorate South-West Africa.¹⁹⁰³ Among contemporaries, it were Heinrich Bülow and Hermann Hesse who wrote about the territorial claims in South-West Africa, which turned into the German protectorate that corresponds to current Namibia.¹⁹⁰⁴ What started out with the small land acquisition of Lüderitz, put under protection from the German Empire in 1884, gradually increased in ¹⁹⁰¹ Bernhard Dernburg, Südwestafrikanische Eindrücke. Industrielle Fortschritte in den Kolonien. Zwei Vorträge (Berlin: Mittler, 1909); Bongard, Staatssekretär Dernburg, 23.

¹⁹⁰² Sippel, "Fremde oder Heimat? - Zur Funktion der kolonialen Rechtsordnung in Deutsch-Südwestafrika."

¹⁹⁰³ Demhardt, "Von der Schutzgewalt zur Kolonialgewalt: Die Schutzverträge und die rechtliche Entstehung des kolonialen Staatsraums"; Demhardt, Deutsche Kolonialgrenzen in Afrika.

¹⁹⁰⁴ Heinrich August Ernst Bülow, Deutsch-Südwestafrika seit der Besitzergreifung, die Züge und Kriege gegen die Eingeborenen (Berlin: Süsserott, 1904); Hermann Hesse, "Die Schutzverträge in Südwestafrika," ed. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 899-; Hesse, Die Landfrage und die Frage der Rechtsgültigkeit der Konzessionen in Südwestafrika.

size. Borders in the south and east were fixed with the British and those in the north with the Portuguese.

A questionnaire from the German Colonial Office from 1905 was supposed to find out about the conditions for settlers in the German protectorate.¹⁹⁰⁵ In the subsection “colonization” it included many questions on “state or crown land,” colonial societies, and so forth. Many of the colonization companies active in the protectorate were private. The German colonial government did take an active role in administering the legislation of the soil.¹⁹⁰⁶ The colony’s first newspaper, the Windhoeker Anzeiger, operated as a mouthpiece for the colonial administration. Some of the explorers and scientist researching in the protectorate did so on behalf of the colonial government. In 1913, Joachim Heinrich Lücke discussed the residence law (Aufenthaltsrecht) in the German protectorates in Africa and the South Seas: the laws valid in Germany were only gradually also applied to the overseas territories.¹⁹⁰⁷

Even in the decades after the German imperial government had granted protection over territory in today’s Namibia, it still tried to keep state involvement and responsibility at a bare minimum. Only after 1907, with Bernhard Dernburg, did German state involvement in the protectorate South-West Africa increase.

¹⁹⁰⁵ “[Fragebogen] VIII. Kolonisation.”

¹⁹⁰⁶ Jahnel, Das Bodenrecht in “Neudeutschland über See.”

¹⁹⁰⁷ Lücke, Bevölkerung und Aufenthaltsrecht in den Deutschen Schutzgebieten Afrikas.

Simultaneously though, German-speakers settled in the protectorate worked towards its increasing emancipation.

9.1.2 Gradual Emancipation of Namibia

After the turn of the twentieth century, there was a move towards colonial self-government for the German protectorate. On 28 January 1909, the German chancellor issued a decree that radically reorganized the participation of the local population in the administration of the protectorate: local self-administration (Gemeindeselbstverwaltung) had been linked to the specific local conditions.¹⁹⁰⁸

In his 1911 travel account from Namibia, Rudolf Wagner testified that the German protectorate was on the way to more autonomy and self-reliance.¹⁹⁰⁹

There was no legal distinction between urban and rural in Namibia under self-rule, as characteristics of both of these categories according to German law were present in the protectorate.¹⁹¹⁰ A way of governing the land distinct from Central European German lands was thus further developed in Namibia.

In 1915 then, during WWI, Great Britain took over control and administration of the then former German protectorate South-West Africa and put ¹⁹⁰⁸ Otto Rheinen, Die Selbstverwaltung der Gemeinden in Deutsch-Südwestafrika (Berlin: Buchdr. Gutenberg, 1913), 11.

¹⁹⁰⁹ Wagner, Eine Reise durch die deutschen Kolonien: Deutsch Südwest-Afrika.

¹⁹¹⁰ Hansjörg Michael Huber, Koloniale Selbstverwaltung in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Entstehung, Kodifizierung und Umsetzung, Rechtshistorische Reihe 213 (Frankfurt am Main; New York: P. Lang, 2000).

a temporary end to Namibian emancipation process.¹⁹¹¹ Namibia only became an independent country in 1990.¹⁹¹²

9.2 Argentina

Beginning in the 1880s, with the “generación del 80” (generation of the 1880s), the Argentinean Republic became a stronger nation-state. General Julio Argentino Roca, then War Minister, led the campana del desierto (“desert campaign”) against the indigenous population.¹⁹¹³ German-speakers also called it the conquest of Patagonia.¹⁹¹⁴ The 1876 law on migration and colonization heightened the process of federal government involvement in agricultural colonization in Argentina.¹⁹¹⁵ First President Rivadavia, followed by President Sarmiento and then President Roca, strongly encouraged migration and colonization by ¹⁹¹¹ Hans Siebold, In Südwest unter englischer Herrschaft (Potsdam: Stiftungsverlag, 1916); I. Goldblatt, History of South-West Africa, from the Beginning of the Nineteenth Century (Cape Town: Juta, 1971); Patricia Hayes and Jeremy Silvester, eds., Namibia Under South African Rule: Mobility & Containment, 1915-46 (Oxford [Eng.]; Athens, Ohio: James Currey; Ohio University Press, 1998).

¹⁹¹² Wallace and Kinahan, A History of Namibia.

¹⁹¹³ Informe oficial de la Comision Científica agragada al Estado Mayor General de la Expedicion al Rio Negro (Patagonia) Realizada en los meses de Abril, Mayo y Junio de 1879, bajo las órdenes del General D. Julio A. Roca / Entrega I. Zoología (Buenos Aires: Imprenta de Ostwald y Martinez, 1881); Informe oficial de la Comision Científica agragada al Estado Mayor General de la Expedicion al Rio Negro (Patagonia) Realizada en los meses de Abril, Mayo y Junio de 1879, bajo las órdenes del General D. Julio A. Roca / III. Geología (Buenos Aires: Imprenta “Ostwald,” 1882); Manuel Prado, La ocupación del Rio Negro: Expedicion realizada por el ministro de la Guerra General Julio A. Roca, 25 de Mayo de 1879 (Buenos Aires: Establecimiento Tipográfico - Esmeralda 370, 1900).

¹⁹¹⁴ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 255.

¹⁹¹⁵ Ley de inmigración y colonización de la República Argentina.

Europeans, and in particular Northern Europeans. Through the development of the wheat industry, where German-speakers, such as the Bunge family, played an important part, Argentina became a serious competitor to the European nations on the world market.

The Argentinean government was involved in colonization in various ways. The law of 19 August 1822 regulated the founding of settlements (Siedlungen and Städte in the German translation and pueblos and ciudades in the Spanish original) and the recruitment of migrants from Europe, which was implemented between 1824 and 1930.¹⁹¹⁶ While colonization was de facto practiced, the terminology used only later changed to explicit expressions reflecting this fact. In his 1912 publication, Georg Hiller mentioned “gobernar es poblar” (to govern is to populate) in the context of Argentine President Rivadavia, but he mentioned that the term might have come from Argentine political theorist Juan Bautista Alberdi.¹⁹¹⁷ In 1825, Karl Heine de Maguncia concluded a contract to bring one thousand workers and artisans to Argentina, which became the colony Chacarita de los Colegias.¹⁹¹⁸ No migration policy was ¹⁹¹⁶ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 17–23; see Registro oficial, Vol.2, p.20 No. 1620, Art. III, 2.

¹⁹¹⁷ Ibid., 23; This is now consensus, see Moya, Cousins and Strangers: Spanish Immigrants in Buenos Aires, 1850-1930, 49.

¹⁹¹⁸ Wilhelm Schulz, Die erste deutsche Siedlung in Argentinien: die deutsche Kolonie auf dem Gelände des heutigen Chacarita-Friedhofes ([Buenos Aires]: [Der Weg], 1950); Flachs, Emigraciones transoceánicas, 84.

issued during General Rosa's dictatorship between 1829 and 1852.¹⁹¹⁹ Hiller claimed that Rosas was not against incoming migrants; he just did nothing to promote migration. In 1852, then, Aaron Castellanos founded the agricultural colony Esperanza mainly with Germans and Swiss-Germans.¹⁹²⁰ The Argentinean Constitution of 1 May 1853 included the phrase "the federal government must increase European immigration."¹⁹²¹ In 1854, the Province of Buenos Aires founded the Comisión de Inmigración (Immigration Commission) with fifteen honorary (ehrenamtlich) members of different nationalities, with German-speakers among its members.¹⁹²² In 1857, the Asociación Filantrópica de Inmigración, auxiliada y bajo la protección del Superior Gobierno del Estado de Buenos Aires was created as a private institution with the authorization of government, and included a number of important German members.¹⁹²³ In their 1955 publication, Lütge et al. claimed that the German participation in settling Argentina and making it an (im)migration country was very important. According to them, the Asociación Filantrópica de Inmigración (Philanthropic immigration Association) founded in 1857, had a number of important German members: Eduardo Freyer, Enrique Lorenz, Germán Burmeister, Germán Roosen, E.

¹⁹¹⁹ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 24.

¹⁹²⁰ Ibid., 36; Flachs, Emigraciones transoceánicas, 86.

¹⁹²¹ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 33.

¹⁹²² See Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien.

¹⁹²³ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 38.

Schröder, R. Katzenstein and others.¹⁹²⁴ Sarmiento then replaced this private society in 1869 with the state-run Central Immigration Commission, followed by president Nicolás Avellaneda issuing the migration and colonization law of 19 October 1876.¹⁹²⁵

According to the law of 11 October 1862, every immigrant family with the intention of practicing agriculture would receive free 25 cuadras (42,185 hectare) of land from the Argentinean government.¹⁹²⁶ In 1862, W. Werner & Co. concluded a contract for colonization with the Santa Fe government. The company represented the Sociedad Protectora de los Inmigrantes de Frankfurt am Main to bring ten thousand farmers in ten years.¹⁹²⁷ On 10 August 1869, President Sarmiento created a Comisión Central de Inmigración with former member of the Filantrópica from 1857 and employed agents in Europe and the Swiss-German Carlos Beck Bernard was responsible for Germany and Switzerland.¹⁹²⁸ After the issuance of the 1876 migration and colonization law, the Departamento General de Inmigración started working in 1877 and the Oficina Central de Tierras y Colonias was part of it until becoming independent in November 1880.¹⁹²⁹

¹⁹²⁴ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 223–24.

¹⁹²⁵ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 48ff.

¹⁹²⁶ Ibid., 42.

¹⁹²⁷ Flachs, Emigraciones transoceánicas, 87.

¹⁹²⁸ Hiller, Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien, 43; 45.

¹⁹²⁹ Ibid., 72.

A “law to foster immigration and colonization” (ley para el fomento de la inmigración y colonización) was introduced in 1876,¹⁹³⁰ and the “Central Office of Soils and Colonies” (Oficina Central de Tierras y Colonias) was created that same year.¹⁹³¹ On March 21, 1892, the Argentine President, Carlos Pellegrini, mandated the creation of the “Department of Soils, Immigration and Agriculture” (Dirección General de Tierras, Inmigración y Agricultura).¹⁹³² The state paid for settlers’ accommodation upon arrival in Buenos Aires and transportation to the interior. The aim was to create ever more “agricultural colonies” in the interior in order to cultivate the land and increase Argentina’s economic productivity. In 1894, “Tierras y Colonias” was a subpart of the Ministerio de Justicia, Culto é Instrucción Pública. On May 2, 1894, the Argentine President of the time, Luis Saenz-Peña, declared that until further notice, this ministry would be in charge of putting into practice the law from 6 October 1876 concerning colonization and the management of land.¹⁹³³

¹⁹³⁰ Fuente, Tierras, colonias y agricultura, 46.

¹⁹³¹ Ibid., 52.

¹⁹³² Ibid., 324.

¹⁹³³ [Luis] Saenz-Peña, “Ministerio de Justicia, Culto é Instrucción Pública de la Nación Argentina [Decreto del 2 mayo 1894]” (Buenos Aires, May 2, 1894), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 696 D del año 1897].

9.2.1 State Colonies

What I call “state colonies” here, contemporary government officials in Argentina called “national colonies.” Both of these terms refer to agricultural settlements that were administered and organized by the Argentine government, either at the provincial or the federal level.

In 1899, the Argentine government turned existing (private) colonies into “national colonies” (colonial nacional), as for example the colonies “El Dorado”¹⁹³⁴ and “Santa Maria”¹⁹³⁵ in the province of Córdoba. In 1900, the Argentine government had land inspected with regards to use for agricultural colonization; in the territory Santa Cruz, land was identified as suitable for such.¹⁹³⁶ “National colonies” were also mentioned in 1902,¹⁹³⁷ and the Argentine Department of Agriculture specifically issued a decree to further immigration for settling the Argentine countryside and to explore areas suitable for agricultural colonization.¹⁹³⁸

¹⁹³⁴ [Julio Argentino] Roca and Emilio Frers, “[República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura] [Decreto de [?] 1899]” 1899, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 1365 del año 1899].

¹⁹³⁵ [Julio Argentino] Roca and Emilio Frers, “[República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura] [Decreto de [?] 1899]” 1899, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 1366 del año 1899].

¹⁹³⁶ [Julio Argentino] Roca and M[artin] García Mérou, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 18 julio 1900]” July 18, 1900, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 2005 D del año 1900].

¹⁹³⁷ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 21 julio 1902 (1)],” July 21, 1902, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 2035 D del año 1902].

¹⁹³⁸ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 21 julio 1902 (2)],” July 21, 1902, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 2047 D del año 1902].

Wenceslao Escalante was minister of agriculture between 1901 and 1904 under Roca, and German-speaking media closely followed his actions. In 1902, the Colonial Newspaper (Koloniale Zeitschrift) wrote about “senseless projects in Argentina.”¹⁹³⁹ In August 1903, the German journal Südamerikanische Rundschau wrote about Escalante’s project to settle Belgian people in Argentina.¹⁹⁴⁰ And the German newspaper Nationalzeitung wrote in September 1903 about a colonization project that W. Escalante presented to the Argentine congress with President Roca’s approval.¹⁹⁴¹ The article was very critical and questioned the feasibility of his plan.

In 1904, the creation of an agrarian-pastoral colony by the Rio Pico was declared by decree.¹⁹⁴² Escalante wrote in another 1904 decree that it was the government’s duty to form a center of selected colonists to attract further migration to Argentina.¹⁹⁴³ In 1914, Walter von Hauff argued that German ¹⁹³⁹ “Unsinnige Projekte in Argentinien,” Koloniale Zeitschrift: Zeitschrift des Deutsch-Nationalen Kolonialvereins, 1902, 361.

¹⁹⁴⁰ “Vor einiger Zeit konferierte der belgische Gesandte mit dem Landwirtschaftsminister Argentinens wegen der Kolonisierung einer größeren Landstrecke mit belgischen Einwanderern...,” Südamerikanische Rundschau, August 1, 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 9.

¹⁹⁴¹ “Ein Kolonisationsprojekt der argentinischen Regierung,” Nationalzeitung, September 26, 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 16.

¹⁹⁴² Roca and Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 8 octubre 1904].”

¹⁹⁴³ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 18 agosto 1904],” August 18, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 2766 D del año 1904]; “Considerando que el deber del Gobierno en lo que se refiere al fomento de la inmigración consiste muy especialmente en la formación de núcleos de colonos seleccionados que sirvan de centro de atracción para establecer una corriente inmigratoria considerable ...”

agricultural colonies should be put in place in Argentina with the support of both the Argentinean and the German governments.¹⁹⁴⁴

9.2.2 German-speakers Working for the Argentinean Government

Numerous German-speakers in Argentina worked towards strengthening agricultural colonization in general, and German colonization in particular, in Argentina by being involved in the Argentinian government or closely cooperating with it. Among the individuals involved with the German community who worked for the Argentine government or other Argentine institutions were Johann Eduard Wappäus, Carlos Beck Bernard, Ernst Bachmann, Francisco Seeber, Emilio Frers, José Greger, and Gustavo Niederlein.

In June 1893, Emilio Frers, a second generation German-Argentinean, became the director of the Department of Land, Colonies and Agriculture (Departamento de tierras, colonias y agricultura)¹⁹⁴⁵ under President Luis Saenz-Peña. According to the journal Agricultura, he only stayed in office for about a month.¹⁹⁴⁶ Then, in October 1898, under President Julio Argentino Roca, Frers ¹⁹⁴⁴ Walter von Hauff, "Der Wert deutscher Ackerbaukolonien in Argentinien für Deutschland und Argentinien," in Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, ed. Paul Gast, vol. 2 (Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914), 145.

¹⁹⁴⁵ "Doctor Emilio Frers," La Agricultura: Organo de los intereses rurales é industriales 1, no. 23 (June 8, 1893): 276.

¹⁹⁴⁶ "Doctor Emilio Frers," La Agricultura: Organo de los intereses rurales é industriales 1, no. 27 (July 6, 1893): 332.

became minister of agriculture.¹⁹⁴⁷ In 1903, Frers renounced his membership in the committee preparing Argentine participation in the 1904 St. Luis Exhibition.¹⁹⁴⁸ He later proposed the creation of a German-Argentine Settlement Bank (Siedelungsbank) to the Argentine Parliament in 1913.¹⁹⁴⁹ Gustavo Niederlein, who served as Argentinean consul in Europe, was also heavily involved in the German-Argentine Settlement Bank project.¹⁹⁵⁰

In May 1899, Jorge Born was named as one of three members of the Examining Commission (Comisión Examinadora) for export wheat and corn, along with Faustino Alsina and José Etcheverry.¹⁹⁵¹ Born was co-founder of the company Bunge & Born, together with his brother-in-law.¹⁹⁵² In January 1904, Cárlos Altgelt¹⁹⁵³ and Hermann Bottrich¹⁹⁵⁴ were named judges for a fruit

¹⁹⁴⁷ [Julio Argentino] Roca and Emilio Frers, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura” (Buenos Aires, October 26, 1898), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1617 del año 1898].

¹⁹⁴⁸ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 27 noviembre 1903],” November 27, 1903, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 3869 F del año 1903].

¹⁹⁴⁹ Frers, El banco agrícola. Proyecto de ley presentado á la Camara de disputados de la nación en la sesion de agosto 8 de 1913.

¹⁹⁵⁰ Niederlein, Eine Deutsch-Argentinische Siedelungsbank als Gegengewicht zur wirtschaftlichen Invasion der Yankees in Südamerika.

¹⁹⁵¹ [Julio Argentino] Roca and Emilio Frers, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 17 mayo 1899]” (Buenos Aires, May 17, 1899), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1583 D del año 1899].

¹⁹⁵² Ceva, “De la exportacion cerealera a la diversificacion industrial. Las empresas Bunge y Born en Argentina (1884-1940).”

¹⁹⁵³ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 9 enero 1904],” January 9, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 33 A del año 1904].

¹⁹⁵⁴ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 28 enero 1904],” January 28, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 81 A del año 1904].

exhibition. Cárlos Altgelt again in April 1904.¹⁹⁵⁵ Otto Asp was a chemist who worked for the Argentinean government in the department of agriculture. In 1905, he published a report on an expedition to Pilcomayo.¹⁹⁵⁶ In February 1906, Julio Krausse was named head of hydrology of the Division of Mines, Geology, and Hydrology of the Department of Agriculture.¹⁹⁵⁷ In February 1906, Cárlos Herschel was employed in the Chemistry Laboratory of the Division of Agriculture.¹⁹⁵⁸

In May 1899, Argentinean President Roca declared Eduardo A. Holmberg “naturalista viajero en la 3a Division.”¹⁹⁵⁹ In January 1900, Holmberg was sent to the territory of Los Andes.¹⁹⁶⁰ In December 1900, the Roca declared Holmberg “Naturalista viajero de la division de agronomía”.¹⁹⁶¹ In January 1902, President Roca, with W. Escalante as minister of agriculture, declared that Holmberg, then ¹⁹⁵⁵ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 19 abril 1904],” April 20, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 886 A del año 1904].

¹⁹⁵⁶ Otto Asp, Expedición al Pilcomayo 27 de marzo-6 de octubre de 1903 (Buenos Aires: Tall. Publicaciones de la Oficina Meteorológica Argentina, 1905).

¹⁹⁵⁷ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and D[amián] M[anue] Torino, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 15 febrero 1906],” February 15, 1906, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 174 M del año 1906].

¹⁹⁵⁸ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and D[amián] M[anue] Torino, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 15 febrero 1906],” February 15, 1906, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 601 R del año 1906].

¹⁹⁵⁹ [Julio Argentino] Roca and Emilio Frers, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 8 mayo 1899]” (Buenos Aires, May 8, 1899), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 677 D del año 1899].

¹⁹⁶⁰ M[artin] García Mérou, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura” (Buenos Aires, January 30, 1900), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 202 del año 1900].

¹⁹⁶¹ [Julio Argentino] Roca, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 29 diciembre 1900]” December 29, 1900, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 30 D del año 1901].

“Naturalista viajero de la Dirección de Agricultura,” be sent and paid by the ministry of agriculture to explore Tierra del Fuego.¹⁹⁶² In August 1901, the “Naturalista viajero” Carlos Burmeister worked for the Argentine Ministry of Agriculture,¹⁹⁶³ and in January 1902, Eduardo A. Holmberg (the son) and Carlos Burmeister, as well as Federico Burmeister.¹⁹⁶⁴ Carlos Burmeister¹⁹⁶⁵ was a son of Hermann Burmeister.¹⁹⁶⁶ Hermann Burmeister had moved to Buenos Aires in 1861.¹⁹⁶⁷ He was responsible for bringing a number of other German intellectuals to Cordoba, Argentina in the 1870s.¹⁹⁶⁸ Eduardo A. Holmberg was the son of Eduardo L. Holmberg, an Argentina-born natural historian, son of the Austrian aristocrat Eduard Lailitz Freiherr von Holmberg.¹⁹⁶⁹ Eduardo A. Holmberg participated in the military operations to obtain the Pampa, Patagonia, and Chaco ¹⁹⁶² [Julio Argentino] Roca and [Wenceslao] Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 2 enero 1902]” (Buenos Aires, January 2, 1902), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 7 D del año 1902]; [Julio Argentino] Roca and [Wenceslao] Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 20 enero 1902]” (Buenos Aires, January 20, 1902), AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 167 D del año 1902].

¹⁹⁶³ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 25 agosto 1901],” August 25, 1901, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 2405 A del año 1901].

¹⁹⁶⁴ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 31 enero 1902],” January 31, 1902, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 404 D del año 1902].

¹⁹⁶⁵ Novoa and Levine, From Man to Ape, 99.

¹⁹⁶⁶ On Hermann Burmeister, see Chapter 2 of Novoa and Levine, From Man to Ape.

¹⁹⁶⁷ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 217; 222.

¹⁹⁶⁸ Novoa and Levine, From Man to Ape, 70.

¹⁹⁶⁹ Lütge, Hoffmann, and Körner, Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien, 94.

territories between 1879 and 1884.¹⁹⁷⁰ In April 1904, Cárlos Burmeister was named (Redactor de informes sobre tierra pública).¹⁹⁷¹ In January 1906, Cárlos Burmeister was editor of publications from the Section Land and Colonies (Redactor de Informes de la Direccion de Tierras y Colonias) for the Ministry of Agriculture.¹⁹⁷² By March 1909, Cárlos Burmeister was Head Editor of Publications on Public Land from the Ministry of Agriculture.¹⁹⁷³

In January 1906, Victor Martin de Moussy served as assistant of import and export livestock inspection (auxiliar de la inspeccion de importacion y exporation de ganado).¹⁹⁷⁴ He was Alsatian and member of the Geographic Society of Paris and Berlin.¹⁹⁷⁵ In November 1907, the German economist and student of professor Wilhelm Roscher, Roberto Jannasch, offered to work for the Argentine Ministry of Agriculture and to study agricultural econonmy (economía agrícola) with the aim to write a book that would promote German immigration ¹⁹⁷⁰ María Silvia Di Liscia, “Drogas y maderas para la nación argentina. Los recursos naturales en las exposiciones universales,” in Argentina en exposición: ferias y exhibiciones durante los siglos XIX y XX, ed. Andrea Lluch and María Silvia Di Liscia (Sevilla: CSIC, 2009), 123.

¹⁹⁷¹ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 13 abril 1904],” April 13, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1246 O del año 1904].

¹⁹⁷² [José] Figueroa Alcorta and D[amián] M[anue] Torino, “República Argentina Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 31 enero 1906],” January 31, 1906, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 296 I del año 1906].

¹⁹⁷³ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 5 marzo 1909],” March 5, 1909, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1882 D del año 1909].

¹⁹⁷⁴ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and D[amián] M[anue] Torino, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decret 31 enero 1906],” January 31, 1906, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 298 G del año 1906].

¹⁹⁷⁵ Victor Martin de Moussy, Description géographique et statistique de la confédération Argentine, vol. 1 (Paris: Didot, 1860).

and German capital investment in Argentina.¹⁹⁷⁶ In January 1908, President Figueroa Alcorta issued the decree that Gustavo Niederlein would continue the work Roberto Jannasch had started in Argentina: economic studies on the production of the different regions in Argentina.¹⁹⁷⁷ Gustav Niederlein had travelled within Argentina in the name of the Argentine government and went to Germany in October 1908 in order to publish his results in Germany as well as bring Argentine trade products to Argentine consulates in Europe.¹⁹⁷⁸ In September 1908, the Argentine Ministry of Agriculture included the German Argentine Colonization Company in its decree.¹⁹⁷⁹ The Argentinisches Tageblatt published a German translation of the decree.¹⁹⁸⁰ The journal Süd-Amerika republished the article in November 1908 in Munich.¹⁹⁸¹ They celebrated the decree as a success and the accomplishment of the long efforts of Moritz Alemann (who died the day the decree was issued).

¹⁹⁷⁶ Figueroa Alcorta and Ezcurra, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 27 noviembre 1907].”

¹⁹⁷⁷ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Ezcurra, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 8 enero 1908],” January 8, 1908, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 27 J del año 1908].

¹⁹⁷⁸ Waldthausen, “Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft bei den La Plata Staaten to Reichskanzler von Bülow,” October 5, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 35.

¹⁹⁷⁹ Figueroa Alcorta and Ezcurra, “Ministerio de Agricultura: Colonias Pastoriles en Santa Cruz; [‘Boletín Oficial’ vom 9. September 1908].”

¹⁹⁸⁰ “Die neuen germanischen Siedelungen in Patagonien,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, September 11, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 39.

¹⁹⁸¹ “Die neuen germanischen (deutschen) Ansiedelungen in Patagonien,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, November 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 60.

In October 1908, Cárlos F. Wasserfall became the assistant to the meteorological office of the Department of Agriculture.¹⁹⁸² In April 1909, Anselmo Windhausen began his service as the geologist of the Division Mines, Geology, and Hydrology of the Argentinean Ministry of Agriculture.¹⁹⁸³ In September 1910, agronomist Silvio Spangenberg [*Argentina] became director of the school of arboriculture and horticulture in Casilda, province of Santa Fe, Argentina.¹⁹⁸⁴ In January 1911, Adolfo Flossdorf was employed as assistant geologist in the geology section of the Ministry of Agriculture and Ricardo Stappembeck as head of the hydrogeology section.¹⁹⁸⁵ In June 1911, Cárlos Weber worked as topographer for the Division of Mines, Geology and Hydrology and Luis Toll as cartographer.¹⁹⁸⁶

The following individuals and projects received funding from Argentine government for German colonization: Robert Jannasch, for travel in southern ¹⁹⁸² [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 1 octubre 1908],” October 1, 1908, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 5321 O del año 1908].

¹⁹⁸³ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 20 abril 1909],” April 20, 1909, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 1085 M del año 1909].

¹⁹⁸⁴ [?] and Ezequiel Ramos Mexia, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 20 septiembre 1910],” September 20, 1910, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 4531 E del año 1910].

¹⁹⁸⁵ [Roque] Sáenz Peña and Eleodoro Lobos, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 31 enero 1911],” January 31, 1911, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 620 M del año 1911].

¹⁹⁸⁶ [Roque] Sáenz Peña and Eleodoro Lobos, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 28 julio 1911],” July 28, 1911, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 5783 M del año 1911].

Argentina in 1907¹⁹⁸⁷ and 1908;¹⁹⁸⁸ Gustavo Niederlein for travel with Jannasch in 1907¹⁹⁸⁹ and 1908;¹⁹⁹⁰ the colonization project of the German shipping company Norddeutscher Lloyd received support from the Argentinean government in 1911;¹⁹⁹¹ and José Greger's journal Süd-Amerika was sponsored by the Argentinean state in 1911.¹⁹⁹²

9.2.3 Transfer of Knowledge by Argentinean Delegates

The Argentine government sent individuals from Argentina to Europe and paid them to report back on new economic and migration opportunities. In 1902, Enrique N. Green (the son) and Ernesto Vergara Biedma were given permission to advertise Argentinean commerce in South Africa.¹⁹⁹³ In January 1903, Arthur John Charles MacKenzie von Poellnitz or Arturo Poellnitz was commissioned by the Ministry of Agriculture to further promote migration from Germany to ¹⁹⁸⁷ Figueroa Alcorta and Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 27 noviembre 1907]."

¹⁹⁸⁸ Figueroa Alcorta and Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 8 enero 1908]."

¹⁹⁸⁹ Figueroa Alcorta and Ramos Mexia, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 3 septiembre 1907]."

¹⁹⁹⁰ Figueroa Alcorta and Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 8 enero 1908]."

¹⁹⁹¹ Sáenz Peña and Lobos, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 13 octubre 1911]."

¹⁹⁹² Lobos, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Resolución de 26 julio 1911]."

¹⁹⁹³ W. Escalante, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura," May 5, 1902, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 1183 del año 1902].

Argentina.¹⁹⁹⁴ In August 1903, Juan P. Hogberg was commissioned by the Ministry of Agriculture to further promote migration from Sweden and Norway to Argentina.¹⁹⁹⁵ In September 1903, the Ministry of Agriculture concurred with Hogberg's advice that territory around lake Argentino was well suited for colonization and settlement from migrants from Northern European countries.¹⁹⁹⁶ In May, a decree ordered the founding of an agricultural colony there with North European migrants.¹⁹⁹⁷ In December 1904, Hogberg brought a group of Finns to Argentina who intended to study the colonization conditions of the Argentinean South.¹⁹⁹⁸

Argentina wanted to demonstrate to its own citizens and to the rest of the world that it was among the most influential and civilized countries in the world. Like other advanced countries, it attempted to improve life within its state borders even further and participated in sending delegates to other countries in order to learn and bring home the best techniques. In November 1903, Rodolfo Hauthal ¹⁹⁹⁴ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 1 enero 1903]," January 1, 1903, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 2009 D del año 1903].

¹⁹⁹⁵ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 10 agosto 1903]," August 10, 1903, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 2392 del año 1903].

¹⁹⁹⁶ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 2 septiembre 1903]," September 2, 1903, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 2612 D del año 1903].

¹⁹⁹⁷ Norberto Quirno Costa and W. Escalante, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 26 mayo 1904]," May 26, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 1308 D del año 1904].

¹⁹⁹⁸ [Manuel] Quintana and D[amián] M[anue] Torino, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 7 diciembre 1904]," December 7, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 84 D del año 1904].

was confirmed as delegate of Argentine Republic to the Conference on Seismology in Strasbourg and to the Geology Congresses in Vienna and Kassel.¹⁹⁹⁹ Hauthal was a geologist and later (1912) published on mining in Argentina.²⁰⁰⁰ In March 1904, engineer Otto Krause was named commissioner of the Argentinean Ministry of Public Education to undertake studies in Europe concerning the cultivation and manufacturing of various textile fibers in Europe.²⁰⁰¹ In August 1906, Professor Alfredo Voigt, (Director del Laboratorio de Análisis y Contralor de Semillas) of Hamburg, was named delegate ad honorem of the Argentine Republic for the International Congress in Hamburg.²⁰⁰²

In April 1907, a contract between the Argentine Minister in Germany, Dr. Don Indalecio Gomez, and the Professor von Behring was concluded with the aim to prevent bovine tuberculosis.²⁰⁰³ In May 1907, Vicente T. Sousa was named ad-honorem commissioner to study the development of its milk industry in ¹⁹⁹⁹ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto 25 noviembre 1903” November 25, 1903, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 316 H del año 1904].

²⁰⁰⁰ Hauthal, Das Minenwesen in Argentinien.

²⁰⁰¹ [Julio Argentino] Roca and W. Escalante, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 8 marzo 1904],” March 8, 1904, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 599 K del año 1904].

²⁰⁰² [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Ezequiel Ramos Mexia, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 3 agosto 1906],” August 3, 1906, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 3117 A del año 1906].

²⁰⁰³ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Ezequiel Ramos Mexia, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 27 abril 1907],” April 27, 1907, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 57 L del año 1907].

Switzerland.²⁰⁰⁴ In July 1907, Aaron Paulowsky was named honorary delegate of the Ministry of Agriculture with the mission to study topics related to the project of a Commission for the development of agricultural economy (Comision de Fomento Economico Agricola).²⁰⁰⁵ In November 1907, Doctor Julio Mendez was honorary called to study agricultural education in various institutes in France and Germany.²⁰⁰⁶ German Anschütz represented Argentina in the congress on “school hygiene” in London in 1908.²⁰⁰⁷

In September 1907, the Argentinean President Figueroa Alcorta named Gustavo Niederlein the person in charge of organizing further cooperation between the German Empire and Argentina in the context of the German-Argentine Center in Berlin.²⁰⁰⁸ Niederlein’s employment by the Argentine state was declared by decree and he was put under direct dependence of the Argentinean Ministry of Agriculture (Ministerio de Agricultura). The newspaper DLPZ reported on German-Argentine trade and the creation of the German-

²⁰⁰⁴ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Ezequiel Ramos Mexia, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 20 mayo 1907],” May 16, 1907, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 2369 D del año 1907].

²⁰⁰⁵ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Ezequiel Ramos Mexia, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 11 julio 1907],” July 11, 1907, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 3394 D del año 1907].

²⁰⁰⁶ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 30 noviembre 1907],” November 30, 1907, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 6119 D del año 1907].

²⁰⁰⁷ “To Dr. Marco Avellaneda,” January 15, 1908, AR-AGN.DAI/MI.A.EG1. [expediente 270 H del año 1908].

²⁰⁰⁸ Figueroa Alcorta and Ramos Mexia, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 3 septiembre 1907].”

Argentine association in Berlin and published a list of companies involved in this cooperation project, as well as the Argentine state funding.²⁰⁰⁹

In July 1908, the German consul von Sanden reported to chancellor von Bülow that Carlos Burmeister had been sent to Germany by the Argentine government to attract the Poles who had lost property due to Prussian expropriation laws to Argentina.²⁰¹⁰ Then, A. Schmidt from the German consulate Buenos Aires corrected that assumption in a letter from August 1908: Carlos Burmeister wanted to travel to Germany to invite German nationals to Argentina.²⁰¹¹ He went to the German consulate Buenos Aires before leaving for Germany by steamer. He seemed to having been sent by the Argentine agricultural ministry and to seek Germans with small capital. The consular personal told him that according to the German emigration law from 9 June 1897, he needed special permission from German authorities to attract German emigrants; he responded he would personally ask the German chancellor. Schmidt wrote that while the German consulate Buenos Aires was skeptical of Burmeister's plans in Germany, they did not want any inconveniences happen to him in Germany. The letter ended with the statement that they assumed that for ²⁰⁰⁹ "Der deutsch-argentinische Handel ...," Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, August 6, 1907, Hermeroteca, Biblioteca Nacional de la República Argentina.

²⁰¹⁰ "Die deutsche Einwanderung nach Argentinien."

²⁰¹¹ A. Schmidt, "Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler von Bülow," August 18, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 14-16.

Burmeister his trip to Germany was largely motivated by the possibility to undertake a convenient trip to Europe with his family.

In January 1909, the Argentinean Ministry of Agriculture sent Ricardo J. Huergo on a study trip to Germany to learn more about agricultural schools (escuelas agrarias), in particular with regards to cereals.²⁰¹² In January 1909, Carlos Vallejo, agronomist engineer of the division of agricultural education, undertook a study trip to the U.S., in particular Utah, Texas, California, and Colorado.²⁰¹³

In December 1909, Gustavo Niederlein, then Argentine General Commissioner for the 1910 Agricultural Exhibition in Buenos Aires, addressed Dernburg to request the German Empire's participation in the exhibition.²⁰¹⁴ Gustavo Niederlein also authored a publication on Argentina's development in 1910.²⁰¹⁵ Besides German, his text was published in Spanish and French in order

²⁰¹² [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 29 enero 1909]," January 23, 1909, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 69 H del año 1909].

²⁰¹³ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 7 enero 1909]," January 7, 1909, AR-AGN.DAI/TCL.adisp [expediente 6937 V del año 1908].

²⁰¹⁴ "Gustav Niederlein to Excellenz Dernburg, Wirklicher Geheimer Rat, Staatssekretär des Reichs-Kolonialamts Grunewald; Internationale Ausstellung für Landwirtschaft zur ersten Jahrhundertfeier des Unabhängigkeit der Argentinischen Republik," December 7, 1909, BArch R 1001/8701, pag. 89.

²⁰¹⁵ Gustavo Niederlein, Chancen und Möglichkeiten in Argentinien in Viehzucht, Ackerbau, Industrie und Handel (Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1910).

to reach a maximum European audience.²⁰¹⁶ The German Agricultural society (Deutsche Landwirtschaftsgesellschaft) then sent numerous types of horses for the agricultural exhibition in Buenos Aires.²⁰¹⁷ Dr. Hermes was sent as their representative and undertook a longer study trip throughout Argentina, Chile, and Paraguay afterwards.²⁰¹⁸

In January 1910, the geologist Guillermo Bodenbender was sent to Germany by the Argentinean Ministry of Agriculture to acquire material for his division.²⁰¹⁹ In July 1910, the following people were sent to the Second International Congress of Refrigeration (Congreso del Frio) in Vienna as representatives of Argentina: Dr. Emilio Frers as president and Dr. Baldomero Sommer and engineer Otto Krause as report commissioners (vocales).²⁰²⁰ In June 1911, Isidoro G. Suarez was sent to Europe, in particular Switzerland and Austro-Hungary, to study the organization of the ministries of Agriculture and the ²⁰¹⁶ Gustavo Niederlein, Chances et possibilités de réussite dans la République Argentine, dans l'élevage, l'agriculture, l'industrie et le commerce ([Berlin], 1910); Gustavo Niederlein, Ventajas y posibilidades de éxito en la República Argentina en la cría de ganado, agricultura, industria y comercio ([Berlin], 1910).

²⁰¹⁷ "Deutsche Landwirtschaftsgesellschaft to Reichs-Kolonialamt," January 22, 1910, BArch R 1001/8701, pag. 99.

²⁰¹⁸ "Deutsche Landwirtschaftsgesellschaft to Herrn Staatssekretär des Reichs-Kolonialamts," December 30, 1910, BArch R 1001/8701, pag. 148.

²⁰¹⁹ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 27 enero 1910]," January 27, 1910, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 7333 M del año 1909].

²⁰²⁰ [José] Figueroa Alcorta and Pedro Ezcurra, "República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Decreto de 1 julio 1910]," July 1, 1910, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 3331 del año 1910].

problems relation to emigration and immigration.²⁰²¹ Overall, the emmisaries were succesful in their mission to bring home knowledge about better ways to organize everydaylife for Argentinean citizens.

9.3 German States

In recent years, the German-speaking community of Buenos Aires usually mentions the three countries and their representatives that maintain political ties: the Federal Republic of Germany, the Republic of Austria, and the Swiss Confederation. As discussed in the first part of this dissertation, the nation-state formation of three “German states” and thus a reduction to “only three” German states was a process that took place until 1990.

As we have seen, according to contemporary German-speakers, state colonization could take different forms and did not have to take place within the confines of protectorates or official colonies. State colonization could mean to provide financial help and incentives to citizens with few means for settlement in the protectorates. But state colonization could also mean that the German Empire enter into agreements with other states, e.g. Argentina, to ensure the good treatment of German-speaking colonists in that foreign state.

²⁰²¹ Eleodoro Lobos, “República Argentina, Ministerio de Agricultura [Resolución de 28 June 1911],” June 28, 1911, AR-AGN.DAI/TCI.adisp [expediente 5184 S del año 1911].

In 1892, Dr. Albert Zweck claimed in an article entitled “Agricultural Colonies as the Necessity for the Economic Development of Germany” that internal colonization (in Germany) was not satisfying the needs of the (German) nation.²⁰²² To use my terminology and apply it to Zweck’s words, he argued in favor of better controlling external colonization (in this case, Namibia was also considered to be “external” to the German Empire). In the same article, Zweck advocated for more German state colonization in Namibia. He wrote: “German South-West Africa, which had the reputation of being a barren desert upon appropriation, meanwhile has acquired a better verdict. Having proven settlement aptitude by deed has particularly carried weight. The land should develop best under state colonization: if less well off citizens with honest ambition would be provided with the opportunity to acquire their proper home, if they were ready to give up on the comfort of the homeland (Heimat).”²⁰²³ Zweck claimed that state colonization was important due to the security it offered to the migrant: he could calculate the amount of time he would need until he could possess his own fortune, whereas private enterprises depended on the arbitrariness (and despotism?) of an individual or a company.²⁰²⁴

²⁰²² Zweck, “Ackerbaukolonien als Bedürfnis der wirtschaftlichen Entwicklung Deutschlands,” 291: “Die innere Kolonisation kann dem Bedürfnisse der Nation nicht genügen. Wie erfreulich es ist, daß Tausende von Existenzen neu begründet werden, es wird doch nur ein kleiner Bruchteil von dem gerettet, was jährlich durch Auswanderung verlorgen geht, abgesehen davon, daß dem Thatendrang durch die innere Kolonisation nicht genügend Rechnung getragen wird.”

²⁰²³ Ibid., 292.

²⁰²⁴ Ibid.

But Zweck also stipulated in 1892 that the German state should enter into agreements with South American states to guarantee migrants there the maintenance of their German-ness.²⁰²⁵ There were other German-speaking authors who shared his opinion. Forty years prior, in 1852, Gottfried Wilhelm Kerst had advocated for something similar: he was convinced that only the German states (prior to the 1871 “unification” of the German Empire) could enter into agreements with the La Plata states for taking in German migrants in order to facilitate settlement.²⁰²⁶ And, to pick another example, several decades after Zweck, Richard Hennig included state agreements in the section on “state reproduction” of his 1928 publication.²⁰²⁷ However, it also has to be considered that the German empire only cared for its own citizens, which thus entailed the gradual increase in development of the Austrian and Swiss state representation in Argentina. This, in turn, also boosted the divergence between German-speakers siding with their respective states.

9.3.1 The German Empire Interfering in the South Atlantic

The Foreign Office (Auswärtiges Amt) in Berlin collected various newspaper and journal articles published in German, as well as in French and British newspapers, ²⁰²⁵ Ibid.

²⁰²⁶ Kerst, Die Länder im Stromgebiete des La Plata, 29.

²⁰²⁷ Hennig, Geopolitik, 215–301.

on German colonization in Argentina. For example, in January 1884, the newspaper Argentinisches Wochenblatt published a definition of colonies in Argentina: “Colonies are groups of a specific number of agricultural families, mostly Europeans, who have the aim to work a specific piece of land, having acquired it through purchase or endowment. The working the land is not communal. Every family works their own land and the only bond among the families of a colony is that of neighborhood. In every colony, the local or national authorities have a representative who keeps order and listened to grievances or complaints of the settlers. The agricultural centers in the different parts of the republic are numerous.”²⁰²⁸

In May 1890, the newspaper Tägliche Rundschau published an article on conditions in Argentina: it noticed the progress Argentina had made in recent years, in a collaborative effort between state and private initiatives.²⁰²⁹ The article mentioned the free passage and accommodation in the immigrants’ hotel in Buenos Aires provided to immigrants by the Argentinean state. It claimed that immigrants were the most needed good for an uncivilized country. The article also stated that a young country would not be spared from crises either, and warned of possible scams.

²⁰²⁸ “Die Colonien werden definiert wie folgt...”

²⁰²⁹ “Aus Kunst, Wissenschaft und Leben,” Tägliche Rundschau, May 11, 1890, BArch R 901/30405, pag. 175.

In May 1892, the newspaper Kölnische Zeitung published an article on the “Foreign Element in Buenos Aires.”²⁰³⁰ The author claimed that was a generational difference concerning preference for Argentina or Germany, usually alternating between them; people born in Argentina of German parents were “the better patriots.” He praised how well German-Argentineans learned German in Argentina (better than their counterparts in Brazil); nonetheless, “Deutschenkinder” should be sent back to Germany for education. But there were also Argentineans who spoke German well because they went to the German school in Buenos Aires and he praised the Germans schools abroad (Auslandsschulen). The author wrote that some German-speakers had Indians as “house slaves” and that there were some slaves and Indians who spoke or understood German because they worked for German-speaking families. In May 1896, Guido Drigalsky, a journalist who had lived several years in Argentina, published the text “Land and People in Argentina” in the newspaper Berliner Tageblatt.²⁰³¹ He claimed that since German migrants had difficulties in the U.S., Argentina represented the better migration destination.

In April 1901, the newspaper National Zeitung published an article on German-Argentinean economic relations: the trade relations were mostly to be attributed to German-speakers having settled in Argentina.²⁰³² The article claimed that between 1861 and 1894, a third of immigrants were German-speakers, mostly Swiss-Germans and German-Austrians. A census of the German consulate counted 500 German companies in Buenos Aires and an additional 500 in the rest of Argentina. German-speakers owned land worth 140 million marks. The article also noted that the great majority of German-speakers had lost their German citizenship. In June 1901 already, the newspaper Kölnische Zeitung reported that the “Jingos” of the U.S. were warning South American states of German annexation desires, described as the “German peril.”²⁰³³

²⁰³⁰ “Das Fremden-Element in Buenos Aires.”

²⁰³¹ Drigalsky, “Land und Leute in Argentinien.”

The newspapers reported about a colonization project of the Argentine government: In April 1903, the agricultural minister Escalante with support of President Roca presented a colonization project to the Argentine congress.²⁰³⁴ In March 1904, the German consult for Spain wrote to Chancellor Bülow that the Argentine government specifically wanted to promote German immigration.²⁰³⁵

²⁰³² “Deutsch-argentinische Wirtschaftsbeziehungen.”

²⁰³³ “Nochmals „die deutsche Gefahr“. Argentinien. Buenos Aires, 8. Mai,” Kölnische Zeitung, June 3, 1901, BArch R 901/30412, pag. 148.

²⁰³⁴ “Ein Kolonisationsprojekt der argentinischen Regierung”; “A New Colonisation Scheme of Great Importance Has Been Drawn up by Dr. Escalante, the Argentine Minister of Agriculture...,” The Standard, August 24, 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 17.

²⁰³⁵ “Kaiserlich Deutsches General-Konsulat für Spanien (Barcelona) to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” March 8, 1904, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 86.

In April 1903, Koser issued a warning of migration to Argentina because of the bad economic situation (Geschäftslage).²⁰³⁶ In April 1903, rumors circulated that Volga-Germans had asked the Russian government for permission to return to Russia because of bad settlement conditions in Argentina.²⁰³⁷ However, also in 1903, the Belgian legate in Argentina talked with Argentinean agricultural minister about settling Belgians in Argentina.²⁰³⁸ In April 1904, A. Wirth criticized that the Central-Stelle für Auswanderer continued to warn of emigration to Argentina.²⁰³⁹ He noted that this Central-Stelle was operated in cooperation with the Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft and thusly influenced. Wirth also described the conflict that M. Alemann encountered at the German Colonial Congress in Berlin: competition with the projects of Hermann Meyer in Brazil. He stated that a critical situation in Argentina persisted until 1903, which was followed by better times and he highlighted Argentina's growth in trade, industry, and population.

In March 1908, a Hamburg newspaper published a very positive article about conditions in Argentina, based on a report from the Argentinean ²⁰³⁶ Koser, "Argentinien. Nachtrag I. „Die Warnungen vor der Auswanderung nach Argentinien wegen der dortigen schlechten Geschäftslage halten noch an"...," April 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 14-15.

²⁰³⁷ Wangenheim, "[Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft 06.04.1903. deutsch-russische Einwanderer] Hans von Wangenheim to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow."

²⁰³⁸ "Vor einiger Zeit konferierte der belgische Gesandte mit dem Landwirtschaftsminister Argentinens wegen der Kolonisierung einer größeren Landstrecke mit belgischen Einwanderern..."

²⁰³⁹ A. Wirth, "Argentinien," Handel und Industrie, April 9, 1904, BArch R 901/30414, pag. 79.

government.²⁰⁴⁰ In July 1908, the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung published an article on “race” and the Argentinean government’s objective to attract more German settlers based on the “improvement of Argentine society.”²⁰⁴¹ While the author of the article criticized the use of the term “race” by the Argentine consul in Germany, J. F. Lopez – they argued that the existence of human races had not been scientifically confirmed – they did agree with the overall claim that German people had good attributes that would improve the Argentinean population.

In October 1908, the newspaper Hamburger Nachrichten published more positive news on the Argentinean economy, in particular with regards to agriculture and economic progress.²⁰⁴² In October 1908, the German colonization company H. Stroeder & Co. purchased agricultural land in the south of the Buenos Aires province and the territory Pampa Central.²⁰⁴³ In 1908, Michael Lux requested information on settling in Argentina. J. Wolff, on behalf of the Information Center for Emigrants of the German Colonial Office in Berlin, advised him to go to Namibia instead.²⁰⁴⁴

²⁰⁴⁰ “Einwanderung nach Argentinien,” Beilagen zum Hamburger [?], March 15, 1908, sec. Übersee, BArch R 901/30422, pag. 112.

²⁰⁴¹ “Konsulatsbericht aus Deutschland,” Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, July 4, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 236.

²⁰⁴² “Die wirtschaftliche Lage in Argentinien. Situationsbericht für den Monat September 1908,” Hamburger Nachrichten, October 28, 1908, BArch R 901/30424, pag. 34.

²⁰⁴³ Ibid.

²⁰⁴⁴ Wolff, “J. Wolff to Michael Lux, Monteur [Abraten von Auswanderung nach Patagonien, statt dessen Verweis auf Namibia (DSWA)].”

In 1910, the German Colonial Office in Berlin sponsored the publication of an Official Guidebook for Southwest Africa (Amtlicher Ratgeber für Südwestafrika) and in a letter, the secretary of the German Colonial Office specifically stated that propaganda for settlement had been avoided.²⁰⁴⁵ In April 1914, the newspaper Basler Nachrichten warned German farmers of migration to Argentina.²⁰⁴⁶ Discussion followed; a very skeptical article received two responses: one said the migration warning originated in Germany and was exaggerated, the other said the warning was rather accurate.²⁰⁴⁷ Prof. Gast was the director of the German South American Institute (Deutsch-Südamerikanisches Institut) in Aachen in 1916.²⁰⁴⁸ Dernburg said it was too dangerous to publish such an article in times of war.²⁰⁴⁹

The increasing German state influence was reflected in the fact that in 1909, Julius Friedrich advocated for colonial policy being considered a science (Wissenschaft), and more specifically as a new subfield of law.²⁰⁵⁰ According to the German emigration law of 9 July 1897, it was prohibited to advertise

²⁰⁴⁵ von Lindequist, "Der Staatssekretär des Reichs-Kolonialamts," March 26, 1910, BArch R 1001/6237, pag. 269.

²⁰⁴⁶ "Argentinien. Ein Warnruf an auswanderungslustige Landwirte II.," Basler Nachrichten, April 16, 1914, BArch R 901/30431, pag. 7-9.

²⁰⁴⁷ "Argentinien. Ein Warnruf an auswanderungslustige Landwirte. Auf die beiden ersten unter dieser Überschrift erschienen Artikel...," Basler Nachrichten, April 22, 1914, BArch R 901/30431, pag. 14-15.

²⁰⁴⁸ "Deutschland und Südamerika," Transocean, 1916, BArch R 901/57676, pag. 17.

²⁰⁴⁹ Bernhard Dernburg, "Dernburg to A. Schmidt," August 1, 1916, BArch R 901/57676, pag. 16.

²⁰⁵⁰ Julius Friedrich, Kolonialpolitik als Wissenschaft: ein neues Forschungsgebiet der Rechtsphilosophie (Berlin, Leipzig: Dr. W. Rothschild, 1909).

emigration in Germany.²⁰⁵¹ Around 1900, Argentina had no (official) emigration agencies in Germany according to Mr. Hobrecht, consul of the Argentine Republic.²⁰⁵² Enrique Hobrecht was named Argentine consul in Frankfurt am Main in 1893.²⁰⁵³ In the same year as the emigration law prohibited German emigration advertising, Otto Preusse[-Sperber] published the first edition of his Guide for Argentina in Buenos Aires.²⁰⁵⁴

In June 1901, the Alsatian David Moos wrote a petition to Emperor Wilhelm II asking him to pay for his passage to Argentina.²⁰⁵⁵ In September 1901, the journal Koloniale Zeitschrift warned of the colonization company Tarnassi & Co. in Argentina as being a fraud.²⁰⁵⁶ In February 1902, the Argentinisches Wochenblatt published an article by F. Albrecht on “Immigration and Colonization in Argentina.” The article started with the statement that it was a good sign that two more important German colonial journals, the Koloniale ²⁰⁵¹ “Instruktion an die Kaiserlichen Konsularbehörden zur Ausführung des Reichsgesetzes über das Auswanderungswesen vom 9. Juli 1897 (Reichsgesetzblatt S.463 ff.),” June 10, 1898, BArch R 901/30412, pag. 26-29.

²⁰⁵² “[Argentinien unterhält keine Auswanderungsagenturen in Deutschland nach Herr Hobrecht, Konsul der argentinischen Republik],” Frankfurter Zeitung, n.d., BArch R 901/30412, pag. 110.

²⁰⁵³ [Luis] Saenz-Peña and Tomás S. de Anchorena, “Departamento de Relaciones Exteriores, Decreto promoviendo al cargo de Cónsul en Franckfort, á Don Enrique Hobrecht, 28 febrero 1893,” in Registro nacional de la República Argentina (Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1893), 205.

²⁰⁵⁴ “Wegweiser für Argentinien zur Orientierung der Auswanderer und Kapitalisten. M. O. Preusse, Buenos Aires, 1897. Buchdruckerei von Herpig und Stoevcken, Corrientes 2322.”

²⁰⁵⁵ David Moos, “[Brief auf frz. vom Elsässer David Moos (?) an Kaiser Wilhelm II. Bitte um bezahlte Überfahrt nach Argentinien].,” June 17, 1901, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 2-4.

²⁰⁵⁶ “[neues Kolonisationsproject von der Regierung genehmigt: Tarnassi & Cia.],” Koloniale Zeitschrift, September 26, 1901, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 8.

Zeitschrift and the Deutsche Kolonialzeitung had recently repeatedly published articles on the settling Argentina and that this was proof of a turn towards a correct assessment of Argentina and its future as a settlement destination for German-speakers. Albrecht stated that Patagonia was suitable for German settlements. He advocated that the agricultural advisory council of the German legation in Buenos Aires take on the role to give further advice to German immigrants.²⁰⁵⁷

In May 1902, Streifensand reported to the German Foreign Office that the Argentinean government settled Boer families from South Africa in the Chubut territory in Patagonia, Argentina.²⁰⁵⁸ Many Welsh families left Patagonia just as the Boer families came.²⁰⁵⁹ The German Emigration Information Service collected information on the Welsh case, probably in order to avoid a similar fate for Germans.²⁰⁶⁰ The Welsh had attempted to get protection from the British Empire, which was not taken kindly by the Argentinean government: “It will be remembered that some two years ago a deputation from Chupat visited this country in the hope of enlisting the aid of the British Government. The colonists ²⁰⁵⁷ F. Albrecht, “Einwanderung & Kolonisation in Argentinien,” Argentinisches Wochenblatt, February 5, 1902, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 30-33.

²⁰⁵⁸ Streifensand, “[Brief über südafrikanische Auswanderer] Streifensand to Reichskanzler Herr Grafen von Bülow,” May 7, 1902, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 55-56; Hans von Wangenheim, “[Brief über südafrikanische Auswanderer] Hans von Wangenheim to Reichskanzler Herr Grafen von Bülow,” May 12, 1902, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 54.

²⁰⁵⁹ “Die Chubut-Kolonisten.”

²⁰⁶⁰ “[Report by the Hon. E- Scott on the Welsh colonies in Chubut],” n.d., BArch R 901/30413, pag. 63-65; “The Welsh in Patagonia,” Morning Post, September 5, 1901, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 10.

asked either for incorporation with the Empire as being a purely British community or, in the alternative, for independent autonomy, on the ground that their territory was a no-man's land at the time when they took it in occupation, and that the Argentine title to sovereignty was not clearly established. The mission, however, was unsuccessful. In the face of opposition in Buenos Ayres and of jealousy in Washington it was impossible to obtain any sympathy at Whitehall, and the question seemed too trivial to arouse public attention. But to the colonists themselves it was very far from being a small matter. Their plucky action in making an appeal to London was bitterly resented by the Argentine Government. The leaders of the local committee at Chupat were thrown into prison.”²⁰⁶¹ Many of them then undertook a new exodus to Canada. The Welsh had started settling Patagonia in 1865.²⁰⁶² Boer families settled in Argentina after the Boer wars.²⁰⁶³

In September 1902, one month before the German Colonial Congress even took place, the newspaper Deutsche Agrarkorrespondenz, edited by Edmund Klapper, published a polemic article entitled “Another Argentinean Hustle?”²⁰⁶⁴

The article summarized a press statement of Consul Vohsen on the reason the ²⁰⁶¹ “The Welsh in Patagonia.”

²⁰⁶² Glyn Williams, The Desert and the Dream: A Study of Welsh Colonization in Chubut, 1865-1915 (Cardiff: University of Wales Press, 1975); William Casnodyn Rhys, A Welsh Song in Patagonia: Memories of the Welsh Colonization in Patagonia, ed. David Hall Rhys ([United States?]: E.K. Vyhmeister, 2005).

²⁰⁶³ Du Toit, Colonia Boer.

²⁰⁶⁴ “Ein neuer Argentinierschwindel?,” Deutsche Agrarkorrespondenz, September 29, 1902, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 111.

1902 German Colonial Congress of 1902 was taking place: in order to further discuss why the founding of German protectorates had not solved the problem of Germans leaving Germany (and predominantly choosing the United States). It claimed that Vohsen's answer to the question of where Germans should be encouraged to go was "only Argentina," and argued that this was a huge mistake because German banks had already suffered from a great Argentinean hustle in the 1880s, and because colonization projects in Argentina were "anti-national."

Moritz Alemann, editor of the newspaper Argentinisches Tageblatt, travelled to Germany to participate in the Colonial Congress of 1902. He knew that he would be met with stark opposition. Alemann represented the German high finance (Grosskapital) group of Argentina, and was monitored by German authorities.²⁰⁶⁵ He died in October 1908 on a trip in Switzerland.²⁰⁶⁶ In 1912 and 1913, the German legate Bussche in Buenos Aires started travelling within Argentina to get a personal impression of the living situation of German colonists and to "strengthen the German-national sentiments."²⁰⁶⁷

Among the Germans working for the German Imperial Consulate in Buenos Aires, Ernst Pfannenschmidt was among the most important concerning ²⁰⁶⁵ Goetsch, "[Goetsch, Brief (über M. Alemann), Oktober 1902]," October 21, 1902, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 91; Goetsch, "[Goetsch, Brief (über M. Alemann), Oktober 1902]," October 24, 1902, BArch R 901/30413, pag. 92-93.

²⁰⁶⁶ "+ Moritz Alemann."

²⁰⁶⁷ [Hilmar] Bussche, "Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn von Bethmann Hollweg; [Inhalt: Reise des Kaiserlichen Gesandten]," March 18, 1912, BArch R 901/30429, pag. 35-42; [Hilmar] Bussche, "Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler," August 12, 1913, BArch R 901/30430, pag. 36-40.

colonization. He was the agricultural expert (landwirtschaftlicher Sachverständiger) for the Imperial German Consulate in Buenos Aires, and kept the Colonial Office in Berlin informed about the economic development of Argentina. In 1912, the Kaiserliches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires sent their reports about sheep herds in Argentina to Berlin,²⁰⁶⁸ which Pfannenschmidt then, in turn, sent on to the government in South-West Africa.²⁰⁶⁹ In September 1913, the Colonial economic committee contacted him, as they were attempting to further coordinate wool production abroad and assess further wool production in the German protectorate South-West Africa.²⁰⁷⁰

9.3.1.1 Inquiries about Migration from Argentina to Namibia

Inquiries about migration from Argentina to Namibia occurred almost simultaneously as those from Namibia to Argentina. The requests were motivated by different factors and can be understood in larger processes occurring at the time, which at the core were concerned with conflicting ideas about where German-speakers would best serve German economic interests:

²⁰⁶⁸ “Kaiserliches Generalkonsulat in Buenos Aires to [...]; Verkauf Der Merinoherde ‘Plomer’ -- Karakulschafe in Argentinien,” July 29, 1912, BArch R 1001/8516, pag. 102.

²⁰⁶⁹ “Kaiserliches Generalkonsulat in Buenos Aires to [...]; Verkauf Der Zuchtviehbestände Der Cabañas La Belén Und Las Barrancas.- Verlaufserslös Der Cabaña Plomer; Abschrift Dem Herrn Gouverneur in Windhuk,” August 24, 1912, BArch R 1001/8516, pag. 104-15.

²⁰⁷⁰ Supf, “Kolonialwirtschaftliches Komitee E.V. to Dr. Pfannenschmidt,” September 24, 1913, BArch R 1001/8516, pag. 117.

In February 1904, Otto Peust from Paraná, Argentina inquired with the German consul Sanden in Buenos Aires about possibilities for Volga-Germans to settle in a German protectorate in Africa, which then Sanden forwarded to German chancellor Bülow²⁰⁷¹ who then had Stübel, representing the Colonial Section of the German Foreign Ministry, contact the German governor of South-West Africa.²⁰⁷² While the German authorities considered these Volga-Germans as good material for German colonization, they also worried that their financial means would not suffice, as the German authorities would provide money for travel from Argentina to Africa but not for actual life in the protectorate. The journal Süd-Amerika published an article in October 1904 about Germans in Namibia wanting to migrate to South America – in particular Argentina – due to the “Herero War” [Namibian War]; this served for the authors as proof that the German protectorate South-West Africa was inhospitable for German settlers.²⁰⁷³ Argentina and Brazil were competing on who should take in more German-speakers (in 1904).²⁰⁷⁴ In January 1905, an article in Süd-Amerika claimed that the Deutscher Kolonial-Verein was finally paying attention to Argentina as a German

²⁰⁷¹ Sanden, “[Otto Peust aus Paraná: „etwaige Ansiedlung deutsch-russischer Kolonisten in den afrikanischen Kolonien des Deutschen Reiches um Auskunft bittet] Von Sanden to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow.”

²⁰⁷² Stübel, “[Otto Peust aus Paraná...].”

²⁰⁷³ “Deutsche Ansiedler in Südwestafrika und deren Übersiedlung nach Südamerika.”

²⁰⁷⁴ “[Bemühungen mehr Leute nach Argentinien als Brasilien zu locken] Kaiserlich deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires [to Stöpel],” September 1, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 69.

emigration destination but still, remained rather ignorant towards Argentina.²⁰⁷⁵ In September 1905, the Berliner Tageblatt published an article claiming that Argentine President Roca had vivid interest in the founding of a large colonization company.²⁰⁷⁶ The Südamerikanische Rundschau, in October 1904 published an article on colonization in South Argentina, colonization referring to agriculture (Ackerbau) for Germans; it claimed that the problem had been until then Argentina's low reputation in Germany.²⁰⁷⁷

In March 1908, a German-speaker settled in Argentina wrote to the Frankfurter Zeitung: “with regards to the many complaints and inquiries that have recently reached us from South-West Africa, I have to remark that it is a big misapprehension to think that one could found an accpetable existence with little capital here.”²⁰⁷⁸ In April 1908, the journal Süd-Amerika from Munich reprinted an article from the Südwestafrikanische Zeitung from Swakopmund where the latter critized the Zentralauskunftsstelle für Auswanderer in Berlin for misinforming potential farmers and that the conditions in South-West Africa were

²⁰⁷⁵ “Die Deutsche Colonialzeitung über Argentinien,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, January 1, 1905, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 112.

²⁰⁷⁶ “[Präsident Roca zeigt „lebhaftes Interesse“ an der Gründung einer großen Kolonialgesellschaft].”

²⁰⁷⁷ “Kolonisation in Südargentinien,” Südamerikanische Rundschau, October 4, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 34.

²⁰⁷⁸ “Die Ansiedelungsverhältnisse in Argentinien,” Frankfurter Zeitung, March 9, 1908, BArch R 901/30422, pag. 115.

not as good as elsewhere (e.g. Argentina).²⁰⁷⁹ In April 1908, the journal Süd-Amerika from Munich published an article on German officers from South-West Africa visiting Paraguay with the aim to inquire about migrating there.²⁰⁸⁰ In April 1908, the journal Süd-Amerika from Munich reprinted news from the Argentinisches Tageblatt on the situation of German migrants in South-West Africa, on how they were flooding the country but unable to find jobs and thus not creating good conditions in overseas “New Germany.”²⁰⁸¹

9.3.2 Tensions between German- Argentineans and German Imperial Authorities

Most likely, tensions between Argentinean German-speakers and German Imperial Authorities occurred because the latter were only focused on promoting German colonization in German protectorates, but cultural differences and increasing “Argentinization” of German-speakers in Argentina may also have played a role.

²⁰⁷⁹ “Die Zentralauskunftsstelle für Auswanderer in Berlin,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, April 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 190-191.

²⁰⁸⁰ “Deutsche Offiziere aus Südwestafrika in Paraguay.”

²⁰⁸¹ “Über die Aus- resp. Einwanderung in Südwestafrika,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, April 1, 1908, BArch R 901/30423, pag. 194.

In October 1903, the Bavarian government wrote a letter concerning José Greger and the founding of a “German-South American Association” (Deutsch-Südamerikanischer Verein): Greger was an emissary of the Argentine government, he was naturalized Argentinean but still had Bavarian citizenship.²⁰⁸² The Munich police set up a file on Greger.²⁰⁸³ In September 1904, the German Colonial Society wrote a letter concerning José Greger: that a brochure had to be corrected.²⁰⁸⁴ In 1905, the German legation in Buenos Aires reported back that José Greger was the brother of Heinrich Greger, a Bavarian citizen.²⁰⁸⁵ José Greger had a court case against him in Munich: he was accused of misinforming migrants about the conditions in Argentina in April 1906.²⁰⁸⁶

In January 1905, legate Waldthausen reported to chancellor Bülow about W. Vallentin and the planned German society for economic enterprise in Argentina, which mentioned Robert Jannasch’s travels to Argentina.²⁰⁸⁷ Vallentin became active in attempts to create a German commission for economic endeavors in Argentina and advised that R. Funke should become the director of ²⁰⁸² “[J. Greger] K. Regierung von Oberbayern, Kammer des Innern to K. Staatsministerium des Innern.”

²⁰⁸³ “[J. Greger] Akten der k. b. Polizeidirektion in München.”

²⁰⁸⁴ September 23, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 36.

²⁰⁸⁵ “[Erkundigung nach J. Greger] Kaiserliche dt. Gesandtschaft bei den La Plata Staaten, Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” July 12, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 16.

²⁰⁸⁶ “[Klage geben J.M.Greger, Amtsgericht München, 05.04.1906 [Fehlleitung/Fehlberatung von Auswanderern nach Argentinien],” April 5, 1906, BArch R 901/30418, pag. 79-90.

²⁰⁸⁷ Waldthausen, “[Dr. Vallentin und die geplante Gründung einer deutsche Gesellschaft für wirtschaftliche Unternehmungen in Argentinien] Julius von Waldthausen to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow.”

this society.²⁰⁸⁸ In January 1905, the journal Süd-Amerika published a very critical article of W. Vallentin and his colonization project, calling him a theorist who had no practical experience; it made a reference to the failed experience of Germans in the Hansa Colony in South Brazil; the article also claimed that Vallentin was commissioned by the Central-Verein für Handelsgeographie in Berlin, whose president was Dr. Jannasch. The authors of the article were German-Brazilians who were against any colonization project proposed by an academic.²⁰⁸⁹ In February 1905, the Argentinisches Tageblatt described Vallentin as an ardent pioneer of German colonization in Argentina.²⁰⁹⁰ In March 1905, German authorities in Germany were requesting more information on W. Vallentin from the German authorities in Buenos Aires.²⁰⁹¹

In December 1903, the German consulate Buenos Aires was inquiring about F. Bove, and M. Alemann provided them with information, claiming he did not know much about him and that his advertisements in the Argentinisches

²⁰⁸⁸ Vallentin, “Wilhelm Vallentin to Vorbereitungs-Kommission zur Gründung einer ‘Deutschen Gesellschaft für wirtschaftliche Unternehmungen in Argentinien.’ z.H. des Vorsitzenden Herrn R. Funke”; Wilhelm Vallentin, “Wilhelm Vallentin to Vorbereitungs-Kommission zur Gr. einer Deutschen Gesellschaft für wirtschaftliche Unternehmungen in Argentinien z.H. des Vorsitzenden Herrn R. Funke,” December 15, 1904, BArch R 901/30415, pag. 127-128.

²⁰⁸⁹ “Dr. W. Vallentin als Colonisator in Argentinien.”

²⁰⁹⁰ “Herr Dr. Vallentin, der eifrige Vorkämpfer deutscher Kolonisation in Argentinien...,” Argentinisches Tageblatt, February 20, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 35.

²⁰⁹¹ Julius von Waldthausen, “Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft bei den La Plata Staaten to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” March 21, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 34.

Tageblatt might be a fraud.²⁰⁹² In 1904, Robert Jannasch reported to Waldthausen.²⁰⁹³ Jannasch warned of the U.S. dominance in South America, but he did not have the authority to speak in the name of the German government.²⁰⁹⁴ In 1905, the Zentralstelle für Auswanderer Berlin wanted to renew their information booklet on Argentina.²⁰⁹⁵

In 1904, Gerhard was inquiring from Bessarabia about the migration of German-speakers from Bessarabia to Argentina.²⁰⁹⁶ In June 1905, Hermann Schroff reported back from his study trip to Bessarabia to German authorities in Germany that German-Russians from Bessarabia were ready to be sent to areas that suited German interests. He provided information on Gerhardt, the governor of Bessarabia, being a “Reichsdeutscher.” Schroff confirmed that German-Russians were the ideal “Kolonisten-Material” as they were “land-hungry.”²⁰⁹⁷ In 1905, the German Gesandtschaft Buenos Aires wanted to have more Volga-²⁰⁹² Moritz Alemann, “[F. Bove] Moritz Alemann to Kaiserlich deutsches Generalkonsulat,” December 29, 1903, BArch R 901/30414, pag.

²⁰⁹³ Robert Jannasch, “Robert Jannasch to Kaiserlich-Deutscher Gesandter Herrn von Waldthausen, Excellenz,” March 8, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag.

²⁰⁹⁴ Julius von Waldthausen, “[Jannasch Telegram] Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft bei den La Plata Staaten to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” January 5, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 52.

²⁰⁹⁵ “Leiter der Centralauskunftsstelle für Auswanderer gez. Lehmann to Auswärtiges Amt, ‘Erneuerung des Auskunftsheftes über Argentinien.’”

²⁰⁹⁶ Gerhardt, “K. K. Gerhard, Gouv. Bessarabien, Kreis Akkermann, Südrußland to Kaiserlich Deutsches Konsulat Buenos Aires.”

²⁰⁹⁷ Schroff, “Hermann Schroff to Direktor.”

Germans come to Argentina in order to strengthen Germanness in Argentina.²⁰⁹⁸

In 1906, German-speakers from Natal (Southern Africa) were inquiring about migration to Argentina.²⁰⁹⁹

In 1903, the following companies had “owned important real estate (Grundbesitz) in Argentina:” Lahusen, Bremen: Joh. Daniel Fuhrmann, and Th. Bracht & Co. = Antwerpen.²¹⁰⁰ In 1905, German companies with branches in Buenos Aires: Deutsche ÜberseeBank (Berlin), Staudt & Co. (Berlin), Hardt & Co. (Berlin), Richard Sievers (Hamburg), Joh. Bern. Hasenclever und Söhne (Remscheid).²¹⁰¹ In 1906, German companies with branches in Buenos Aires Staudt & Cie., Berlin; John. Bernhard Hasenclever & Söhne, Remscheid; Aug. A. Claussen, Bremen (Firma Linck & Co); Karl Kropp, Aachen; Felten & Guillaume, Carlswerk; R. Sievers, Hamburg.²¹⁰²

In 1906, the German consulate in Buenos Aires reported to the German chancellor Bülow the existence of good conditions for machine engineers²¹⁰³,

²⁰⁹⁸ Waldthausen, “[Btr. Deutsch-russische Bauern nach Argentinien] [Stärkung des Deutschtums] Deutsche Gesandtschaft bei den LaPlata Staaten to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow.”

²⁰⁹⁹ Wilhelm Klapprott, “Wilhelm Klapprott to Deutscher Consul Buenos Aires [On Migration from Natal to Argentina],” 1906, BArch R 901/30418, pag. 54.

²¹⁰⁰ “[deutsche Firmen Lahusen, Bremen: Joh. Daniel Fuhrmann, Th. Bracht & Co. = Antwerpen. „verfügen über bedeutenden Grundbesitz in Argentinien.“.]” ²¹⁰¹ “Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow,” February 10, 1905, BArch R 901/30416, pag. 12.

²¹⁰² “[deutsche Häuser mit Filialen in Buenos Aires].”

²¹⁰³ “Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow [-> gute Lagen für Maschineningenieure in AR],” July 30, 1906, BArch R 901/30419, pag. 32.

construction firms²¹⁰⁴, electrical engineers²¹⁰⁵, technicians,²¹⁰⁶ and young merchants.²¹⁰⁷ In 1906, the German consulate Buenos Aires reported to the German chancellor Bülow problems with Vallentin's colonization project.²¹⁰⁸ In 1907, the State minister of Lüneburg reported about Hermann Polich, that he claimed having an agreement with the Argentinean government about settlement of German migrants, and that he had been convicted to eight days of prison because of attempted extortion in Göttingen.²¹⁰⁹ By 1907, South Atlantic German-speakers were more adept in using the resources and (state) structures available to them, both in Argentina and Germany. In 1907, a new wave of colonization projects started in Patagonia. The journal Süd-Amerika (from José Greger, published in Munich) cited W. Vallentin as a South Atlantic colonization expert by highlighting his experience in Southern Africa having been a former Boer ²¹⁰⁴ "Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow [-> gute Lage für Maschinen- und Baufirmen. AR]," July 30, 1906, BArch R 901/30419, pag. 34.

²¹⁰⁵ "Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow [-> gute Lage für Ingenieure der Elektrotechnik in AR -> Eisenbahnbau]," August 22, 1906, BArch R 901/30419, pag. 62.

²¹⁰⁶ "Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow [-> gute Lage für Techniker in AR]," August 10, 1906, BArch R 901/30419, pag. 53-54.

²¹⁰⁷ "Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow [-> gute Lage für „tüchtige junge Kaufleute in Argentinien“]," August 10, 1906, BArch R 901/30419, pag. 49.

²¹⁰⁸ Schottmüller, "Kaiserlich Deutsches Generalkonsulat Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Herrn Grafen von Bülow [Probleme mit dem Vallentin'schen Kolonisationsprojekt]," September 17, 1906, BArch R 901/30419, pag. 71-72.

²¹⁰⁹ [Adolf von] Hartweg, "Hartweg to Reichskanzler Bülow," February 2, 1908, BArch R 901/30422, pag. 109.

captain.²¹¹⁰ Niederlein and Jannasch travelled in Patagonia and were paid by the Argentinean government. German companies in Argentina and Germany (like the Norddeutsche Lloyd) participated in this concrete colonization project. However, the Auskunftstelle in Germany did not cooperate as they wanted: this office attempted to continue its agenda and to encourage willing migrants to go to the German protectorate of South-West Africa.

In December 1907, the German legate Waldthausen informed the German chancellor Bülow that the Argentine Foreign ministry had advised all Argentinean consuls to contact press houses abroad that were publishing negative news about migration to Argentina and to intervene in order to stop negative propaganda against Argentina.²¹¹¹

9.4 Conclusion

The German Empire became increasingly involved in the South Atlantic. In Argentina, it was able to gain influence without controlling any territory officially, thus without exercising sovereignty over any land. It did so through the employees of the German embassy. The Austrian and Swiss states operated in ²¹¹⁰ “Was sagt Dr. W. Vallentin, der Forschungsreisende und ehemalige Burencapitain über unsere Kolonien,” Süd-Amerika. Organ für Ansiedlung und Landerwerb, Ackerbau und Viehzucht, Handel und Statistik, Forschung u. Expeditionen, Minenwesen, Aus- u. Einwanderung, Verkehrsverhältnisse u.s.w. in den Republiken Argentinien, Bolivien, Brasilien, Chile, Paraguay, Peru und Uruguay, May 1, 1907, BArch R 901/30420, pag. 69.

²¹¹¹ Waldthausen, “Kaiserlich Deutsche Gesandtschaft bei den La Plata Staaten, Buenos Aires to Reichskanzler Fürsten von Bülow,” December 23, 1907, BArch R 901/30422, pag. 78-79.

similar ways. In Namibia, the German Empire changed its strategy concerning colonial policy and became more “hands-on” under secretary Bernhard Dernburg after the Namibian War. Despite being a German protectorate, Namibia already started to move in the direction of increasing self-government and thus independent statehood. In 1990, when it finally gained independence, it retained the same borders it had in 1915 when South Africa took over control of the territory.

The Argentinean state was continuously involved in organizing and regulating agricultural colonization in its territory. The state apparatus promoting colonization was particularly expanded in the 1880s. Simultaneously, German-speakers participated in proposing private alternatives to the state-run system. Why did the Argentinean state embrace the terminology of “colonization” and “colony” when it used to be a former colony itself? I argue that European intellectuals such as Leroy-Beaulieu and Roscher influenced Argentinean intellectuals: only civilized nation-states could practice colonization.

Part III Concluding Remarks

In this third part of the dissertation, we have seen how colonization was connected to territoriality: “colonization” referred to the control of the land by people, whereby nation-state intervention took place with differing degrees. German-speakers settled the land in the South Atlantic and cultivated the land. Techniques of colonization were transferred to the South Atlantic from elsewhere. “Internal colonization” had long been practiced in Euro-German lands; German-speakers then travelled the South Atlantic in order to identify new areas suitable for colonization. South Atlantic German-speakers practiced colonization through private organizing associations or help from the state (the Euro-German states and Argentina). Their justification for colonization lay in their so-called civilizing mission. However, wars and the genocide of locals were among the result of colonization.

The decolonization movement following WWI and WWII harshly criticized this (white) European practice of using land located outside of Europe, and emphasized the abuse of the local, indigenous (non-white) populations. “Colonialism” and “imperialism” are analytical categories that scholars influenced by this movement have taken up, defined, and redefined from the 1960s to today.

I argue that colonization has not disappeared with the decolonization movement. Rather, colonization was able to change its skin: like a chameleon, it has adapted its appearance to its surroundings. And colonization has largely become subsumed under the neutral term “agriculture.” Thus, for example, the former German Colonial School (Deutsche Kolonialschule) of Witzenhausen has been integrated into the University of Kassel and today offers a degree in “ecological agricultural sciences” (Ökologische Agrarwissenschaften).²¹¹²

Meanwhile, the term colonization (colonización) has remained active in Argentinean vocabulary because Argentinean scholars writing post-1980 successfully argued that the term was engrained in their constitution and that agricultural colonization had nothing to do with colonialism and imperialism, since it concerned only their own national territory. Colonialism and imperialism thus seems to have merely changed its skin.

²¹¹² <https://www.uni-kassel.de/fb11/agrar/studienort-witzenhausen.html>

General Conclusion

The main objective of this dissertation has been to show that the analytical category of German imperialism, along with its subcategory colonialism, are nation-state centered categories that remain too narrow and short-sighted to study and understand the activities of German-speakers in the South Atlantic in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Anchored in the nation-state, imperialism and colonialism remain too focused on state actors and state actions. Even when they do allow for the study of the actions of private individuals and groups, these actions remain on the margins of the nation-state-centered approach. They obscure the ways German-speakers have participated in practicing the “civilizing mission,” in taking land from indigenous peoples, and in cultivating overseas land in order to foster Central European markets on both sides of the South Atlantic. It was members of the German people – German-speakers – who founded colonies and practiced colonization in the South Atlantic before and at times despite the creation and growing influence of nation-states in Central Europe. These German-speakers were mostly privately and individually motivated by contemporary ideas. These ideas included that of the “people” or the “nation” as a “social body,” which naturally needs to expand and reproduce. The various nation-states only gradually engrossed these activities.

Contrary to those historians who have stated that “German colonialism” was marginal or just imagined, I argue that “German colonialism” should and needs to be studied differently. This different examination is necessary in order to grasp the far-reaching impact of “German colonialism,” both on societies in Central Europe as well as on those on the South Atlantic rim. I am suggesting that the re-evaluation of the analytical terminology we use, and the reconsideration of what these terms signified in the vocabulary contemporaries used, can enable us to uncover similarities and connections between sites many scholars have categorized as “incomparable.” After all, Germans founded colonies and practiced colonization, German-speakers founded communities and practiced agriculture, and they did so in both of the locations that are today part of the nation-states of Argentina and Namibia.

Migration history has established that mobility, as a human activity, is the norm: people move around and have been moving around for as long as humanity has existed. It has formalized a model to study this movement and provided us with the language to describe the movements including “migrants,” “sending societies,” and “receiving societies.” Empire studies have put focus on power relations and power struggles among various societies. While the newest developments in migration history and empire studies have provided us with useful tools to study German-speakers in the South Atlantic, it is particularly also the more recent approaches of transnational and global history that contribute to widening our horizon in this regard. Taking up a “global perspective” means considering the interconnectedness of the world, oftentimes in the context of globalization, contrary to the older world history which aimed at writing total history.²¹¹³ Transnational history is a revisionist approach, which calls for a reorientation, a return to primary sources, and an alternative rewriting of national histories. Transnational history has introduced the objective of reevaluating the role of the nation-state, either by writing history below or beyond of the nation-state,²¹¹⁴ or by focusing on the very process of nation-state formation.²¹¹⁵

This dissertation has operated on the premise of three cases of change over time that occurred with regards to certain terms. Over the course of the nineteenth century, “German-speaker” became the preferred self-designation for “Germans” in the South Atlantic. This change occurred after the term “German” became increasingly associated with the German Empire, which, while being celebrated as the unification of German lands, encompassed only part of the German-speaking population in Central Europe. The term “German,” first used in reference to cultural identity, thus gradually became a reference for a political identity in the second half of the nineteenth century. In addition, in Namibia, the loss of sovereignty over the former German protectorate South-West Africa after WWI also made it necessary to distinguish between “Germans” remaining in Namibia ²¹¹³ Sebastian Conrad, What Is Global History? (Princeton, Oxford: Princeton University Press, 2016).

²¹¹⁴ Pierre-Yves Saunier, “Circulations, connexions et espaces transnationaux,” Genèses 4, no. 57 (2004): 110–26; Pierre-Yves Saunier, Transnational History (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013).

²¹¹⁵ Ian Tyrrell, Transnational Nation: United States History in Global Perspective Since 1789 (Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007).

that were no longer citizens of the German Empire. As the discussion of the various labels of self-assigned identity co-existing with German-ness in the South Atlantic has shown, German-ness was a complex cultural identity that was a transnational identity; its use as a reference to German states was only secondary. While especially during Nazism, the Third Reich did make efforts to incorporate more territories with German-speakers into the German state's direct sphere of influence and bring them under its control, we should be careful not to let this part of German history dominate and predetermine the study of what happened before and after Nazism. While English and French contemporaries perceived nineteenth-century Pan-German-ness (Pan-Germanismus) as a threat, we should remember that – just like German-speakers – they were involved in the competition between “civilizations” to become number one in the world.

Decolonization and post-colonial studies have influenced a change in terminology for two other sets of terms. The preferred term for “colony” became “community,” and the one for “colonization” became “agriculture” in order to mark discontinuity with “colonial times” and to obscure neutralize phenomena that nonetheless continue to function according to the similar mechanisms. The term German-speaking “community” eventually replaced the term of German-speaking “colony” after WWI and WWII. This was the case for the German-speaking community of Buenos Aires and for the German-speaking community of Namibia. The German-speaking community of Buenos Aires had specifically started referring to itself as “German colony of Buenos Aires” in 1884 in order to position itself in closer proximity with the “first German colony in Africa”: the territory which became known as the German protectorate South-West Africa.

German-speaking colonies in the sense of urban or “trade colonies,” as some contemporary intellectuals could have conceptualized them, really functioned as networks that were built upon the initiative of private individuals. These groups of individuals were mostly interested in two things: maintaining their level of civilization abroad while also raising the level of civilization of their receiving environment, and creating markets for the “German national body.” The German-speaking networks in the South Atlantic were focused on the economy. Numerous trade companies involved in import and export an integral part of the German-speaking communities. Many of the companies were run by family enterprises. Family networks played an important role within the larger network of the German-speaking communities. Churches and schools were at the core of the communities in order to bind the members closer together and ensure the transmission of German language and values. While for many of the descendants Spanish or respectively Afrikaans or English rival German as first language, German private schools, nowadays more than ever financially supported by tax money from the Federal Republic of Germany continue to flourish in the South Atlantic. In addition to supporting schools that were once set up by German-speaking migrants, the government-backed initiative for German schools abroad, PASCH, actively works towards integrating more and more local schools that offer classes in German into its network.²¹¹⁶ Fittingly, this initiative is called “Schools: Partners of the Future.” In a way, the quest for the future has been de-territorialized, as the focus is no longer on “lands of the future” but rather on institutions of the future that will ensure the “better tomorrow” through education and “civilization.” In this context, it is also to be noted that the Federal Republic of Germany currently plays a strong role in the European Union, as well as worldwide, maintaining export records.

German-speaking “colonization” became labeled as “agriculture” in the aftermath of the world wars and of decolonization. As I have argued, colonization was composed of three elements: “people,” “land,” and “control.” In a way, the study of the “people” – or migrants – has been subsumed under migration studies, where as study of the “control” – or power relations and sovereignty – has been subsumed under empire studies. What remains then is the “land,” and the use of land could otherwise be labeled as agriculture. I consider this to be the neutralization and silencing of complicated matters: replacing the term “colonization,” which encompassed several subjects with the seemingly neutral term “agriculture” fails to account for the people that were involved in the activity, and the issue of control and sovereignty over the land that was cultivated.

²¹¹⁶ “Schulen: Partner der Zukunft.”

In Argentinean history, the term “colonization” played a particularly interesting role in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. While the term “agricultural colonization” is still used today, many scholars maintain that colonization in Argentina was completely disconnected from the “European colonialism” of the nineteenth century. However, as we have seen in this dissertation, certain members of Argentinean society were striving towards competing with European colonial powers on the world market in order to assert themselves and their country as a full member of the family of civilized nation-states that were able to practice colonization on their own terms. They referred to the distinction between “external colonization” and “internal colonization.” This distinction addressed the differences in what was generally considered “European colonialism, “ the external colonization that practiced colonization on territory originally outside of the official state territory, and internal colonization

More focus should also be put on how Europeans, with German-speaking participation, have treated indigenous peoples in Argentina: they erased them. Similar to the United States, this continues to be a difficult topic to address and to reconcile with the narrative of the founding of the nation-state and national(ist) history. Across the South Atlantic, the topic has received a different level of recent attention. By contrast, the Namibian War, and how to handle its consequences today, are topics that are still being negotiated between groups of the descendants of the genocide and the government of the Federal Republic of Germany.

In Argentina, the further development of agribusiness in the second half of the twentieth century has radically changed the practice of agricultural colonization as machinery has replaced humans, and the number of colonists or people involved in the work process has been decreased. Instead of more people to do the work, more territory was needed to increase production for individual companies. Founded as the German-speaking family business Bunge y Born in the 1880s, the company has meanwhile been renamed Bunge Limited, and is still active, after several transformations, reorientations, and further expansion into Brazil and the United States.²¹¹⁷ In the case of such multi-national corporations, state control and regulation has become almost obsolete.

While agribusiness is well and alive in today's Argentina, Namibia has taken a different path. Its vast and varying landscapes have become the object of eco-tourism, and the towns with German architecture and German street names remain a vague reminder of the era of colonial presence in Southern Africa.²¹¹⁸ Many of the tourists come from Germany and are quite surprised to encounter such history, as most had learned little of it prior to their visit.

²¹¹⁷ "Our History."

²¹¹⁸ Philipp Rodrian, Das Erbe der deutschen Kolonialzeit in Namibia im Fokus des "Tourist Gaze" deutscher Touristen, Würzburger geographische Arbeiten. Mitteilungen der Geographische Gesellschaft Würzburg 102 (Würzburg: Selbstverlag des Instituts für Geographie der Julius-Maximilians-Universität Würzburg, 2009).

In Namibia, “colonization” meant the settlement and use of land as part of the domination and exploitation of the territory. Here, the transition to “agriculture” as a term replacing or coexisting with “colonization” is not as evident as in Argentina. Nonetheless, some publications by historians as well as the renaming of the colonial school Witzenhausen into the “ecological agricultural sciences” (Ökologische Agrarwissenschaften) as part of the school of the University of Kassel testify to such a development.²¹¹⁹

Two currents of historiography could be further examined with regards to German-speaking colonization in the South Atlantic: environmental history and globalization. While environmental history is a topic of study of recent interest in Namibia, it could still be expanded to focus on the specific role of German-speakers in this regard.²¹²⁰ Several historians have worked on the relation between colonization and Imperial Germany, or colonization and German Colonialism.²¹²¹

²¹¹⁹ Lau and Reiner, 100 Years of Agricultural Development in Colonial Namibia; Uwe Hoering and Forum Umwelt und Entwicklung, Agrar-Kolonialismus in Afrika: eine andere Landwirtschaft ist möglich (Hamburg: VSA-Verlag, 2007); <https://www.uni-kassel.de/fb11agrar/studienort-witzenhausen.html>.

²¹²⁰ Susanne Berzborn and Solich, “Pastoralism and Nature Conservation in Southern Africa,” in Pastoralism in Africa: Past, Present and Future, ed. Michael Bollig, Michael Schnegg, and Hans-Peter Wotzka (New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2013), 440–70; Michael Bollig, “Social-Ecological Change and Institutional Development in a Pastoral Community in North-Western Namibia,” in Pastoralism in Africa: Past, Present and Future, ed. Michael Bollig, Michael Schnegg, and Hans-Peter Wotzka (New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2013), 316–40; Emmanuel Kreike, Environmental Infrastructure in African History: Examining the Myth of Natural Resource Management in Namibia (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2013).

²¹²¹ Andreas Eckert, Kolonialismus: Globalisierung und Kolonialismus, der amerikanische Doppelkontinent und die Karibik, Asien, der Nahe Osten und Afrika, die Prozesse der Dekolonisation (Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuchverlag, 2006); Reinhard Wendt, Vom Kolonialismus zur Globalisierung: Europa und die Welt seit 1500 (Paderborn: Schöningh, 2007);

Nonetheless, it would be interesting to examine the possible turn of the contemporary category of experience “colonization” into “globalization,” in particular with regards to the competition of the different colonial powers on the “world market.”

To conclude, then, Argentina and Namibia constituted a field of experimentation for German-speakers setting up community networks and practicing colonization in the form of controlling land through settlement. While historians have constructed the experience of German-speakers in these two locations as fundamentally different, I have pointed out similarities and connections between the two cases, as well as how the vocabulary the people used changed over time, as they adjusted to world-wide developments and changes regarding imperialism and colonialism in particular. Meanwhile, I argue that the approaches of transnational and connected history allow for the reconsideration of this part of history of German-speakers in the South Atlantic as well as their receiving societies, as we take a step back from the focus on nation-states and state actors as the main framework of analysis. Instead, I have focused in this study on the initiative of individuals and the networks they created in order to achieve control over people and land far from their original home.

Andrew Zimmerman, Alabama in Africa: Booker T. Washington, the German Empire, and the Globalization of the New South (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2010); Conrad, Globalisation and the Nation; Julia Laura Rischbieter, Mikro-Ökonomie der Globalisierung: Kaffee, Kaufleute und Konsumenten im Kaiserreich 1870-1914 (Köln: Böhlau, 2011); Christof Dejung and Niels P. Petersson, eds., The Foundations of Worldwide Economic Integration: Power, Institutions, and Global Markets, 1850–1930 (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2013).

Bibliography

Archival Sources

Archivo General de la Nacion Argentina, Buenos Aires – AR-AGN

Dirección Nacional de Migraciones, Libros de pasajeros vía marítima – DNM.1pm

Dirección Nacional de Migraciones, Actas de Inspección Marítima – DNM.aim

Caja 41

Caja 67

Caja 72

Ministerio del Interior, Archivo. Expedientes Generales 1 – MIA.EG1
Caja 2

Tierras, Colonias e Inmigración; Actos dispositivos – TCI.adisp
Caja 1-11

Bundesarchiv, Berlin - BArch

Auswärtiges Amt – R 901

R 901/30396 – R 901/30434: Überwachung der Auswanderung aus Deutschland nach Argentinien

R 901/54086; R 901/54087; R 901/54088: Jahresberichte der Konsulate, Buenos Aires, Argentinien

R 901/72253 Kolonial-Institut in Hamburg, Bd.1

Reichskolonialamt – R 1001

R 1001/1151 [Auswärtiges Amt Kolonial-Abtheilung]

R 1001/1152

R 1001/1559 Deutsche Handels- und Colonisations-Gesellschaft (Zehlicke & von Egloff)

R 1001/1608 Hanseatische Land-, Minen- und Handels-Gesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika, Bd.1

R 1001/1630 Damara- und Namaqua-Handels-Gesellschaft

R 1001/1668 Swakopmunder Handelsgesellschaft
 R 1001/1685 - R 1001/1687 Siedlungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika
 (Besiedlung von Klein-Windhuk), Bd.1- Bd.3
 R 1001/1700 Neue Südwestafrikanische Siedlungsgesellschaft, Bd.1
 R 1001/1732 Deutsch-Afrikanische Handelsgesellschaft
 R 1001/1736 - R 1001/1740 Vereine in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, Bd.1 – Bd.5
 R 1001/1741 Landwirtschaftliche Vereine in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, Bd.1
 R 1001/1742 Vereine zur Förderung deutscher Interessen in Südafrika
 R 1001/1874 - R 1001/1880 Evangelische Mission in Deutsch-Südwestafrika,
 Bd.1 –Bd.7
 R 1001/1949 - R 1001/1953 Schulsachen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, Bd.1- Bd.5
 R 1001/1979 Aufsätze und Gedichte über Deutsch-Südwestafrika und dort hergestellte Kunstgegenstände
 R 1001/4532 Jahrbuch für die deutschen Kolonien
 R 1001/4632 Lieferung des „Kolonialblattes“ an deutsche Missionen im Ausland
 R 1001/5423 - R 1001/5424 Mischehen und Mischlinge in Deutsch-
 Südwestafrika, Bd.1- Bd.2
 R 1001/5622 Veröffentlichung von Leo Woerl: „Führer nach den deutschen Kolonien“
 R 1001/6230 Deutsches Auslands-Institut in Stuttgart
 R 1001/6233 - R 1001/6234 Regelung des Auswanderungswesens. –Allgemeines,
 Bd.1-Bd.2
 R 1001/6237 - R 1001/6239 Material für die Auskunftserteilung für
 Auswanderung in die deutschen Schutzgebiete, Bd.1- Bd.3
 R 1001/6240 Anfragen über Auswanderungsbedingungen, Bd.1
 R 1001/6360 - R 1001/6362 Kolonial-Museen, Bd.1-Bd.3
 R 1001/6877 Sprachenfragen in den Kolonien. –Einführung der deutschen
 Sprache als Verkehrssprache
 R 1001/7003 - R 1001/7006 Kolonialkongresse und andere Kongresse (außer medizinische), Bd.1- Bd.4
 R 1001/7010 Allgemeiner deutscher Kongreß zur Förderung überseeischer
 Interessen
 R 1001/7314 - R 1001/7315 Schulwesen in Deutschland und in fremden
 Kolonien, Bd.1-Bd.2
 R 1001/7576
 R 1001/7839 Landwirtschaft in Mittel- und Südamerika (Mai 1896 - April 1918)
 R 1001/7923
 R 1001/8245
 R 1001/8456
 R 1001/8516
 R 1001/8701

Reichsministerium für die kirchlichen Angelegenheiten - R 5101

R 5101/21921 Evangelische Kirche im sonstigen Ausland. –Südamerika:
Deutsche evangelische Kirchengemeinden in Südamerika, Bd.3

Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft – R 8023

R 8023/18 Kolonialausstellungen von Gesellschaften, Verbänden, Vereinen, Bd.1

R 8023/37 Südwestafrikanische Landesausstellung, Windhuk 1914

R 8023/42 Deutscher Kolonialkongreß 1902. –Mitgliederliste

R 8023/43 Deutscher Kolonialkongreß 1905. – Vorbereitung der Kolonialausstellung 1905

R 8023/51 Deutscher Kolonialkongreß 1905. – Korrespondenzen mit den
Veranstaltern

R 8023/65 Deutscher Kolonialkongreß 1905. – Mitgliederliste

R 8023/114 Auswanderungsfrage. – Auskunftsmaterial. Angola, Argentinien, ...
Bd.1

R 8023/116 Auswanderungsfrage. – Auskunftsmaterial. Argentinien, Paraguay,
Bd.3

R 8023/132 Zentralstelle für die Einwanderung nach Südwestafrika

R 8023/153 Frauenbund der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft, Bd.1

R 8023/170 Entsendung deutscher Frauen nach Deutsch-Südwestafrika. – Haushaltsgründung ehemaliger Angehöriger der Deutschen Schutztruppe,
Bd.1

R 8023/236 Reiseverkehr von Vereinen in deutsche Kolonien

R 8023/253 Gründung des Deutschen Kolonialvereins

R 8023/256 Geschichte der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft

R 8023/261 - R 8023/262 Südamerikanische Kolonisationsgesellschaft, Leipzig,
Bd.1-Bd.2

R 8023/263 - R 8023/264 Gesellschaft für Deutsche Kolonisation, Berlin, Bd.1-
Bd.2

R 8023/281 Allgemeiner deutscher Kolonialkongreß. – Vorbereitung durch verschiedene Kolonialvereine

R 8023/300 - R 8023/301 Verein für das Deutschtum im Ausland. – Deutscher
Schulverein e.V., Generalia, Bd.1-Bd.2

R 8023/302 Hamburgisches Kolonialinstitut. –Zentralstelle, Generalia, Bd.1

R 8023/309 Hauptverband deutscher Flottenvereine im Auslande

R 8023/314 Koloniale Handelsgesellschaften und Vereine

R 8023/318 Jubiläen von Instituten und Vereinen

R 8023/417 Südamerikanische Land- und Hypotheken-Gesellschaft mbH, Berlin

R 8023/522 Angola. –Deutsche Ansiedlungspolitik, Bd.1

R 8023/551 Deutsche Siedler in Argentinien und Paraguay

- R 8023/553a Wahrung der Deutschthums in den deutschen Kolonien
 R 8023/650 Deutsches Auslands-Institut Stuttgart. – Museum und Institut zur Kunde des Auslandsdeutschthums und zur Förderung deutscher Interessen im Ausland
 R 8023/826 Dr. Bernhard Förster. – Denkschrift über die Anlegung deutscher Kolonien im oberen Laplata-Gebiet.
 R 8023/895a Reichsangehörigkeit der im Ausland lebenden Deutschen
 R 8023/955 - R 8023/956 Verein für das Deutschthum im Ausland (Allgemeiner Deutscher Schulverein e.V.), Bd.1-Bd.2

Kolonialwirtschaftliches Komitee - R 8024

- R 8024/254 „Südwest“ Unabhängige Zeitung für die Interessen des gesamten
 Schutzgebietes GmbH, Windhuk
 R 8024/326 Südamerikanische Kolonisationsgesellschaft, Leipzig [almost nothing]

Alldeutscher Verband - R 8048

- R 8048/517 Hänsch, Felix: Grundzüge deutscher Siedlungspolitik in den
 Kolonien. –Mainz, 1912, H.31

Centres des Archives Diplomatiques, Nantes - CADN

- 132 PO/1/19
 132 PO/1/32
 132 PO/2/23
 132 PO/2/74
 132 PO/2/79
 132 PO/2/84
 132 PO/2/111

Evangelisches Zentralarchiv, Berlin – EZA

Kirchenbundesamt, Evangelischer Ober-Kirchenrat

- 5/2061 Auslandsdiaspora, Argentinien Nr.1, Bd.1 (August 1852-December 1929)
 5/2916 Auslandsdiaspora, Schutzgebiete in Afrika Nr.1a, Bd.1 (August 1896- Juli 1916)
 5/2917 Auslandsdiaspora, Schutzgebiete in Afrika Nr.1a, Bd.2 (August 1916 – Dezember 1921) Die allgemeinen kirchlichen pp. Verhältnisse in Deutsch-Süd-West-Afrika

5/2985 Die kirchliche Versorgung der evangelischen Deutschen, Deutsch-Südwestafrika (21.12.1907 – 31.12.1927)

5/4095 - 5/4097 Private Acten des Pastors Siegel betreffend die deutsch evangelische Gemeinde in Buenos Ayres, Bd.1- Bd.3

Centralvorstand des Evangelischen Vereins der Gustav-Adolf-Stiftung [in Leipzig]

200/1/89 Diaspora-Anstalten – Konferenz bet. 1902[-1929]

200/1/93 Diaspora-Conferenz: Konferenz der im Auslande thätigen und thätig gewesenen Diasporageistigen, 1882

200/1/98 Deutscher Schulverein, Bd.2 (1904[-1925])

200/1/117 Diverse Korrespondenz, Bd. 16 (1931)

200/1/731 Rundschreiben, Bd. 1 (1915)

200/1/846 Vorträge und Reisen der theologischen Berufsarbeiter, Bd. 4 (1926)

200/1/1768 Unterstützung der evangelischen Gemeinde Argentinien. Allgemeines
Bd. 1 (1906)

200/1/2156 Unterstützung des Vereins zur Pflege des deutschen evangelischen
Lebens in den Schutzgebieten und im Auslande in Breslau, Bd. 1 (1909)

200/1/2332 Die Unterstützung der evangelischen Gemeinde Capstadt in Afrika
(1886)

200/1/4240 Unterstützung der evangelischen Gemeinde La Plata-Staaten, -
Synode - . Bd.1 (1902)

200/1/5734 Unterstützung der evang. Reiseprediger der La Plata Synode (1908)

200/1/6453 Unterstützung der evang. Gemeinde Deutsch-Süd-Westafrika.
Allgemeines, Bd. 1 (1910)

200/1/6983 Akten btr. der Unterstützung der evangelischen Waldenser
Gemeinden La Plata-Staaten, Bd. 2 (1914)

200/1/7131 Unterstützung der evang. Gemeinde Windhuk, Deutsch-
Südwestafrika (1906)

200/1/7369 Acta betr. die Unterstützung der evangelischen Gemeinde zu Buenos Ayres (Gutn Lüftn) in Südamerika betr. Bd.1 (1847)

National Archives of Namibia, Windhoek – NAN

Secretary to the Protectorate (1915-1919) – ADM

ADM 117/2 - ADM 117/3 American Consul General

Kaiserliches Bezirksamt Grootfontein - BGR

BGR 3 L.4.C Landverkäufe der Otavi Minen- und Eisenbahn Gesellschaft

BGR 3 L.4.C.L Landverkäufe der South West Africa Company Ltd.

Kaiserliches Bezirksamt Windhuk - BWI

BWI 1 A.2.A Aichwesen
BWI 150 K.2 Kirchenangelegenheiten
BWI 270 S.14.C Zählung der weißen Bevölkerung
BWI 429 Getränkeanmeldungen
Geheimakte

Zentralbureau - ZBU

ZBU 1017 J.XIV.A. Zeitungen

Vereinte Evangelische Mission (Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft), Wuppertal - RMG

Allgemeines

2.490 Katholische Mission in Südwestafrika
3.297 Friedrich A. Spiecker: Reisebericht über Besuch bei der Missionshandelsgesellschaft in Afrika

Stationen u. Farmen

2.528a Swakopmund (mit Walvis Bay)
2.533a Windhoek (mit Klein-Windhoek, Katatura)
2.573 Kolonisten (Briefe und Berichte aus Otjimbingwe)
2.577 Schätzungen des Eigentums der RMG in Südwestafrika

Zur Geschichte Südwestafrikas

2.591 Windhoek: Geschichte der Station und des Volksstammes der Afrikaner
2.598 Anfänge der Mission im Namaqualand/Südwestafrika

Missionarskonferenzen

2.611 - 2.613 Missionarskonferenzen im Hereroland: Protokolle
2.620 Missionarskonferenzen im Hererolande: Referate
2.622 - 2.623 Missionarskonferenzen im Namalande: Protokolle
2.628 Missionarskonferenzen im Namalande: Referate
2.635a Vorträge u. Aufsätze zu Südwestafrika

Schularbeit

2.648 Augustineum in Otjimbingwe und Okahandja: Gehilfenseminar
2.650a - 2.650b Augustineum: Erziehungsanstalt für halbweiße Kinder

Kolonialbehörden u. Mission in Südwestafrika

2.657 Deutsche Kolonialbehörden in Südwestafrika

DELK in Südwestafrika

2.691 Korrespondent mit deutschen Pfarrern in Südwestafrika

The National Archives, London - TNA

Colonial Office - CO

CO 879/80/6 Walfisch [Walvis] Bay and the German South West Africa
Protectorate; correspondence

Dominions Office - DO

DO 119/6 Walfish Bay: situation reports on German South West Africa from British resident magistrate

Foreign Office - FO

FO 367/8 African Department: General Correspondence from 1906. Germany.
Code 418 Files 212 - 713

FO 367/11 African Department: General Correspondence from 1906. Germany.
Code 418 Files 3440 - 12296

FO 367/12 African Department: General Correspondence from 1906. Germany.
Code 418 Files 12347 – 43366

FO 446/1 Embassy and Consulate, Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic: General Correspondence and Miscellanea. Miscellanea. Letters and papers relating to claims of British subjects

War Office - WO

WO 106/47 Military policy regarding German South West Africa - proposed plan of attack - Defence of Cape Colony in the event of an attack from German South West Africa (E2/6)

Newspapers

Argentinisches Tageblatt, (1889, 1898, 1907, 1916)

Argentinisches Wochenblatt, (1883, 1884, 1885)

Caras y Caretas, (1907)

Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, (1876, 1877, 1878, 1880, 1907, 1914, 1916)

Deutsche Zeitung am Rio de la Plata, (1866)
Deutsche Zeitung – Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata, (1872)
Die Heimat: Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, (1877, 1878)
Germania, (1915, 1916)
Keetmanshooper Zeitung, (1913, 1914)
La Agricultura, (1893)
Lüderitzbuchter Zeitung, (1909)
Republikein, (1988)
Windhoeker Anzeiger, (1898, 1899, 1900)

Published Sources

17. Jahresbericht der Deutsch-Argentinischen Volks-Schule Belgrano. Buenos Aires: Artes Gráficas: Fr. Schenker, 1926.
- 25 Jahre Neuer Deutscher Turnverein, Buenos Aires: 1911-1936. Neuer Dt. Turnverein, 1936.
- A. Petermann, ed. Mittheilungen aus Justus Perthes' geographischer Anstalt über wichtige neue Erforschungen auf dem Gesamtgebiete der Geographie. Gotha: Justus Perthes, 1867.
- Abhandlungen der Naturforschenden Gesellschaft zu Görlitz*, 1887.
- Abhandlungen der Naturforschenden Gesellschaft zu Görlitz*. Dresden: Die Gesellschaft, 1901.
- Abi-Mershed, Osama. Apostles of Modernity: Saint-Simonians and the Civilizing Mission in Algeria. Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 2010.
- Abós, Álvaro. Eichmann en Argentina. Buenos Aires: Edhasa, 2007.
- Adam, Thomas, ed. Germany and the Americas: Culture, Politics, and History. Santa Barbara California: ABC-CLIO, 2005.
- . Intercultural Transfers and the Making of the Modern World, 1800-2000: Sources and Contexts. Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire; New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012.
- Adelman, Jeremy. Frontier Development: Land, Labour, and Capital on the Wheatlands of Argentina and Canada, 1890-1914. Oxford Historical Monographs. Oxford; New York: Clarendon Press; Oxford University Press, 1994.
- . Republic of Capital: Buenos Aires and the Legal Transformation of the Atlantic World. Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 1999.
- Adressbuch für Deutsch-Südwestafrika*. Berlin: Paetel, 1908.
- AG gegen Rassismus in den Lebenswissenschaften, ed. Gemachte Differenz: Kontinuitäten biologischer "Rasse"-Konzepte. Münster: Unrast, 2009.
- Aguet, L., H. J. Gremminger, and Theodor Alemann. Der Schweizerische Einwanderer in Argentinien: Nützliche Winke. Buenos Aires: Schweizer Gesandtschaft, 1926.

- Aitken, Robbie. Exclusion and Inclusion: Gradations of Whiteness and Socio-Economic Engineering in German Southwest Africa, 1884-1914. Cultural Identity Studies 6. Oxford: Lang, 2007.
- Albrecht, Christian. Friedrich Fabri und seine Bedeutung für die Missionsgeschichte. München: GRIN Verlag, 2010.
- Albrecht, Monika. “Europa ist nicht die Welt”: (Post)Kolonialismus in Literatur und Geschichte der westdeutschen Nachkriegszeit. Bielefeld: Aisthesis, 2008.
- Alemanes del Volga 1878-2003: ein treues Volk; 2. Congreso Argentino de descendientes de Alemanes de Rusia*. Buenos Aires: o.Verl., 2004.
- Alemann, Ernesto Fernando. Grünes Gold und rote Erde: Beobachtungen von einer Reise. Sonderabdruck aus dem Argentinischen Tageblatt. Buenos Aires: Buchdruckerei des Argentinischen Tageblattes, 1926.
- . Hamburgs Schiffahrt und Handel nach dem La Plata. Heidelberg: Rössler & Herbert, 1915.
- Alemann, Johann Jakob. Bilder aus der Argentinischen Republik. Buenos Aires: Dampf-Buchdruckerei des “Courier de la Plata,” 1877.
- Alemann, Juan. Neueste Mitteilungen über die Argentinische Republik. Biel: [s.n.], 1882.
- Alemann, Moritz. Am Rio Negro: Ein Zukunftsgebiet germanischer Niederlassung: Drei Reisen nach dem argentinischen Rio Negro-Territorium. Ein Führer für Ansiedler, Unternehmer und Kapitalisten. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1907.
- . Argentiniens Bedeutung für Handel, Kapitalanlagen und Niederlassung. Vortrag gehalten in der Kaufmännischen Gesellschaft zu Basel, am 28. März 1908. Basel: Geering, 1908.
- . Die Kolonie Tornquist im Distrikt Bahia Blanca (im Süden der Provinz Buenos Aires) als Ansiedlungspunkt für schweizerische und deutsche Ackerbau-Familien. Bern: Bei Orell Füssli & Cie., 1886.
- Alemann, Moritz, and Theodor Alemann. Kolonisationsgebiete im Süden der Argentinischen Republik. Buenos Aires: Selbstverlag, 1898.
- Alemann, Norma. El legado suizo en el Bicentenario argentino. Buenos Aires: Cámara de Comercio Suizo Argentina, 2010.
- Alemann, Peter. Deutsch in Argentinien. Buenos Aires: Talleres Gráficos de Alemann, 1988.
- Alemann, Roberto T. “Erinnerungen: Seit 60 Jahren in der Redaktion des ‘Argentinischen Tageblatts.’” Argentinisches Tageblatt. April 29, 2009.
- Alemann S.R.L. Argentinisches Tageblatt im hundertsten Jahrgang 1889-29. April - 1989: Sonderdruck aus der Jubiläumsausgabe vom 29. April 1988. Buenos Aires: Alemann S.R.L., 1988.
- Alemann, Theodor. Aus dem Südwesten der argentinischen Klee-Region: das National-Territorium Pampa Central von einem alten Grenzer. Buenos Aires, 1904.
- . Die Zukunft des Deutschtums in Amerika. Buenos Aires: Beutelspacher & Co., 1917.
- . El Gran Problema. Buenos Aires: [La Nueva Artística], 1913.
- . Kolonisationsgebiete im Zentrum der argentinischen Weizenregion. Buenos Aires: Buchdruckerei “Helvetia,” 1892.

- . Station und Emporio Stroeder: Reisebeschreibung. Buenos Aires, 1914.
- Alexander, James Edward. Entdeckungsreise in das innere Südwestafrikas: Bericht über eine Reise von Kapstadt nach Walvishbay durch das Gross-Namaland in den Jahren 1835 und 1846. Translated by Klaus Becker. Windhoek: Wolfgang Tuschmann Verlag Schreibstube Probeer, 2005.
- Allgemeine deutsche 7. Diaspora-Anstalten-Konferenz in Hagen (Westfalen) [...] am 7. und 9. Oktober 1902 (angeschlossen an die Generalversammlung des Evang. Bundes)*, 1902.
- Allgemeiner Deutscher Schulverein zur Erhaltung des Deutschtums im Auslande, ed. Handbuch des Deutschtums im Auslande nebst einem Adreßbuch der deutschen Auslandsschulen, zwei Kartenbeilagen und fünf Kartenskizzen. Second Edition. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- Alsina, Juan A. La inmigración europea en la República Argentina. Third edition. Buenos Aires: Imprenta, calle México, 1422, 1898.
- . Memoria de la Dirección de Inmigración correspondiente al año 1891. Buenos Aires: Imprenta de Pablo E. Coni é hijos, 1892.
- . Memoria de la Dirección de Inmigración correspondiente al año 1908. Buenos Aires: Talleres de Publicaciones de la Oficina Meteorológica Argentina, 1909.
- Altena, Thorsten. “Ein Häuflein Christen mitten in der Heidenwelt des dunklen Erdteils”: zum Selbst- und Fremdverständnis protestantischer Missionare im kolonialen Afrika, 1884-1918. Münster: Waxmann Verlag, 2003.
- Alvarado Leyton, Cristian. Native Anthropology: Kritische Ethnographie einer Debatte um den Zweck der Ethnologie. Berlin; Münster: LIT Verlag, 2009.
- Alvarado Leyton, Cristian, and Philipp Erchinger, eds. Identität und Unterschied: zur Theorie von Kultur, Differenz und Transdifferenz. Bielefeld: Transcript, 2010.
- Alverdes, Hermann. Mein Tagebuch aus Südwest: Erinnerungen aus dem Feldzuge gegen die Hottentotten. Oldenburg: G. Stalling, 1906.
- Amerlan, Albert. An der Frontera. Leipzig: Mutze, 1884.
- . Nächte am Rio Paraguay: Kriegsbilder und Charakter-skizzen. Buenos Aires: H. Tjarks, 1890.
- . Nights on the Rio Paraguay: Scenes of War and Charactersketches. Translated by Henry F. Suksdorf. Buenos Aires: Hermann Tjarks & Company, 1902.
- Amerlen, Bert. “Malon”: Der Schrecken der Pampas! Ein Roman nach wahren Begebenheiten. Buenos Aires: Libreria “Goethe,” 1942.
- Andermann, Jens. The Optic of the State: Visuality and Power in Argentina and Brazil. Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh Press, 2007.
- Anderson, Amanda J. “Building a ‘New Germany’: Clara Brockmann’s and Helene von Falkenhausen’s Call for the Immigration of German Women to Africa.” Honors Thesis, Brigham Young University, 2007.
- Anderson, Benedict. Imagined Communities: Reflections on the Origin & Spread of Nationalism. London; New York: Verso, 1983.

- Anderson, Karl Johan. Notes of Travel in South-Western Africa. New York: G.P. Putnam's sons, 1875.
- Andersson, Charles John. Reisen in Südwest-Afrika bis zum See Ngami in den Jahren 1850 bis 1854. Translated by Hermann Lotze. Vol. 1. Leipzig: H. Costenoble, 1858.
- . Reisen in Südwest-Afrika bis zum See Ngami in den Jahren 1850 bis 1854. Translated by Hermann Lotze. Vol. 2. Leipzig: Costenoble, 1858.
- . Trade and Politics in Central Namibia 1860-1864: Diaries and Correspondence of Charles John Andersson. Windhoek: Archives Service Division, Dept. of National Education, 1989.
- Andree, Karl, ed. Buenos Ayres und die argentinischen Provinzen: Nach den neuesten Quellen. Leipzig: C. B. Lorck, 1856.
- . Geographie des Welthandels. Mit geschichtlichen Erläuterungen. Edited by Richard Andree. Second Edition. Vol. 1. Berlin: Verlag für Sprach- und Handelswissenschaft (Dr. P. Langenscheidt), 1877.
- . Karl Andrees Geographie des Welthandels: eine wirtschaftsgeographische Schilderung der Erde. Edited by Franz Heiderich and Robert Sieger. Wien: L. W. Seidel, 1913.
- . Südafrika und Madagaskar geschildert durch die neuesten Entdeckungsreisenden, namentlich Livingstone und Ellis. Leipzig, 1859.
- Andress, Reinhard. "'Tercer espacio' e 'hibridación': el caso del escritor argentino-alemán Robert(o) Schopflocher." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 251–68.
- Annalen des Norddeutschen Bundes und des Deutschen Zollvereins für Gesetzgebung, Verwaltung und Statistik*. v. Stilke & van Muyden, 1868.
- anonymous. Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonisation. Edited by Johann Eduard Wappäus. Leipzig: J.C. Hinrichs, 1846.
- Anton, Guenter Kurt. Die Siedelungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Vortrag, gehalten in der Staatswissenschaftlichen Gesellschaft zu Jena 1907. Jena: G. Fischer, 1908.
- Anz, [Wilhelm]. Deutschlands Pflichten in Südwestafrika. Stuttgart: Druck und Verlag der Chr. Belser'schen Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1908.
- Applegate, Celia. A Nation of Provincials: The German Idea of Heimat. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1990.
- Arbeitsausschuss der Deutschen Armee-, Marine- und Kolonial-ausstellung, ed. Offizieller Katalog und Führer für die Deutsche Armee-, Marine- und Kolonial-ausstellung: Berlin 1907, 15. Mai bis 15. September. Berlin: Stella-Verlag, 1907.
- Arenas, Patricia. Antropología en la Argentina: el aporte de los científicos de habla alemana. Buenos Aires: Institución Cultural Argentino-Germana, 1991.
- Arendt, Otto. Ziele Deutscher Kolonialpolitik. Berlin: Verlag von walther, 1886.
- Arent, Alfred. Argentinien, Ein Land Der Zukunft. Third edition. Muenchen: Steinebach, 1913.
- . Argentinien, ein Land der Zukunft!: Jubiläumsschrift zur Hundertjahrfeier der Begründung der Republik Argentinien. Second Edition. Leipzig-Naunhof: Schönfelder, 1910.

- . Ein Land der Zukunft: Ein Beitrag zur näheren Kenntnis Argentiniens. München: Verlag der "Südamerika" (J. Greger), 1906.
- . "Patagonien, ein deutsches Kolonisationsgebiet." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 723–40. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- Arfs, Jörn Helmuth. Die Beziehungen der Hansestadt Hamburg zu den La Plata-Staaten, 1815-1866. Hamburger Beiträge zur Überseegeschichte 1. Münster: LIT Verlag, 1991.
- Argentina Departamento General de Inmigración. Memoria del Departamento General de Inmigración. Buenos Aires: Departamento General de Inmigración, 1892.
- Argentina, and Cultura y Deporte Ministerio de Turismo. Gauchos Judios: huellas de la colonización agrícola: un recorrido por nuestra tierra, nuestra gente y nuestra diversidad cultural. [Buenos Aires]: Shalom Argentina: Ministerio de Turismo, Cultura y Deporte, 2001.
- Argentinien als Ziel für germanische Auswanderung – Handbuch nebst einem Stadtplan und der neusten Eisenbahnkarte*. Buenos Aires: H. Herpig, 1906.
- Armbruster, Heidi. "'Realising the Self and Developing the African': German Immigrants in Namibia." Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies 36, no. 8 (2010): 1229–46.
- . Sozialstrukturen in Innovationsteams: Analyse Sozialer Netzwerke. Wiesbaden: Dt. Univ.-Verl., 2005.
- . "'With Hard Work and Determination You Can Make It Here': Narratives of Identity Among German Immigrants in Post-Colonial Namibia." Journal of Southern African Studies 34, no. 3 (2008): 611–28.
- Armus, Diego. The Ailing City: Health, Tuberculosis, and Culture in Buenos Aires, 1870–1950. Duke University Press, 2011.
- Arndt, Karl John Richard, and May E. Olson, eds. German-American Newspapers and Periodicals, 1732-1955: History and Bibliography. Heidelberg: Quelle & Meyer, 1961.
- , eds. The German Language Press of the Americas. München: Verlag Dokumentation, 1973.
- Ashcroft, Bill, Gareth Griffiths, and Helen Tiffin. The Empire Writes Back: Theory and Practice in Post-Colonial Literatures. London; New York: Routledge, 1989.
- Asp, Otto. Expedición al Pilcomayo 27 de marzo-6 de octubre de 1903. Buenos Aires: Tall. Publicaciones de la Oficina Meteorológica Argentina, 1905.
- Asúa, Miguel de. Science in the Vanished Arcadia: Knowledge of Nature in the Jesuit Missions of Paraguay and Río de La Plata. Leiden; Boston: BRILL, 2014.
- Azzi, María. Pioneros de la industria argentina. Buenos Aires: Editorial el Ateneo, 2008.
- Bachmann, Ernst, ed. Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires. First Edition. Buenos Aires: Hugo Kunz & Cia., 1884.
- , ed. Jahrbuch und Adress-Kalender der Deutschen Colonie in Buenos Aires. Second Edition. Buenos Aires: Hugo Kunz & Cia., 1886.

- Bachmann, Jeanne. Erprobte Kochrezepte der neuen und alten Welt. Second Edition. Tucuman; B[ueno]s Aires: Alemann, 1944.
- Backhaus, Alexander. Welche Aussichten bieten sich den Deutschen in Südamerika? Berlin: W. Süsserott, 1911.
- Bade, Klaus, ed. Deutsche im Ausland, Fremde in Deutschland: Migration in Geschichte und Gegenwart. Second Edition. München: Beck, 1992.
- . “Die deutsche überseeische Massenauswanderung im 19. und frühen 20. Jahrhundert: Bestimmungsfaktoren und Entwicklungsbedingungen.” In Sozialhistorische Migrationsforschung, edited by Michael Bommers and Jochen Oltmer, 303–44. Göttingen: V&R unipress, 2004.
- . “Die ‘zweite Reichsgründung’ in Übersee: Imperiale Visionen, Kolonialbewegung und Kolonialpolitik in der Bismarckzeit.” In Die Herausforderung des europäischen Staatensystems: Nationale Ideologie und staatliches Interesse zwischen Restauration und Imperialismus, edited by Adolf M Birke and Günther Heydemann, 183–215. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1989.
- . Friedrich Fabri und der Imperialismus in der Bismarckzeit: Revolution - Depression - Expansion. Osnabrück: Internet-Ausgabe: www.imis.uni-osnabrueck.de/BadeFabri.pdf, 2005.
- , ed. Imperialismus und Kolonialmission: kaiserliches Deutschland und koloniales Imperium. Wiesbaden: Steiner, 1982.
- . Migration in European History. Malden, MA: Blackwell Pub., 2003.
- , ed. Population, Labour, and Migration in 19th- and 20th-Century Germany. Leamington Spa [UK]; New York, New York: Berg; St. Martin’s Press, 1987.
- Bade, Klaus J. Sozialhistorische Migrationsforschung. Edited by Michael Bommers and Jochen Oltmer. Göttingen: V & R Unipress, 2004.
- Baer, Heinrich. Argentinien: Volkswirtschaftliche und handelspolitische Vorträge. Bern: W. Wälchli, 1909.
- Bahre, L., ed. Gegenwart und Zukunft der Plata-Länder für deutschen Handel und Colonisation. Mittheilungen über die Verhältnisse in den Ländern am Plata namentlich mit Rücksicht auf die bestehenden Interessen Deutschen Handels- und Colonisationswesens in Buenos Aires 1. Hamburg: Hoffman & Campe, 1852.
- . Mittheilungen über die Verhältnisse in den Ländern am Plata, namentlich mit Rücksicht auf die bestehenden Interessen deutschen Handels- und Colonisationswesens in Buenos-Ayres. Hamburg, 1852.
- Baily, Samuel L. Immigrants in the Lands of Promise: Italians in Buenos Aires and New York City, 1870-1914. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1999.
- Baily, Samuel, and Eduardo Jose Miguez, eds. Mass Migration to Modern Latin America. Wilmington: Scholarly Resources, 2003.
- Bake, Elise. Schwere Zeiten: Schicksale eines deutschen Mädchens in Südwestafrika. München: Gmelin, 1913.

- Ballard, Martin. White Men's God: The Extraordinary Story of Missionaries in Africa. Oxford, England; Westport, Conn.: Greenwood World Pub., 2008.
- Banse, Ewald. Unsere grossen Afrikaner: das Leben deutscher Entdecker und Kolonialpioniere. Berlin: Haude & Spenersche Buchhandlung Max Pasche, 1940.
- Barbero, María Inés. "Business Groups in Argentina during the Export-Led Growth Period (1870-1914)." In Entrepreneurship and Growth: An International Historical Perspective, edited by Gabriel Tortella and Gloria Quiroga, 69–91. Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire; New York, NY: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013.
- . "Business History in Latin America: A Historiographical Perspective." The Business History Review 82, no. 3 (2008): 555–75.
- Barbero, María Inés, and Andrea Lluch. "Family Capitalism in Argentina: Changes and Continuity over the Course of a Century." In Evolution of Family Business: Continuity and Change in Latin America and Spain, edited by Paloma Fernández Pérez and Andrea Lluch, 123–56. Cheltenham, Glos: Edward Elgar Publishing, 2016.
- Barbian, Nikolaus. Auswärtige Kulturpolitik und „Auslandsdeutsche“ in Lateinamerika, 1949-1973. Wiesbaden: Springer-Verlag, 2014.
- Barcina, Florencia, ed. Alemanes en la arquitectura rioplatense. Buenos Aires: CEDODAL; Deutsche Botschaft = Embajada de Alemania, 2005.
- Barkan, Elliott. "Introduction: Immigration, Incorporation, Assimilation, and the Limits of Transnationalism." Journal of American Ethnic History 25, no. 2 (2006): 7–32.
- Barre, André. La menace allemande. Paris: L. Michaud, 1907.
- Barth, Boris, and Jürgen Osterhammel, eds. Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- Bartmuß, Hartmut. Bernhard Dernburg Kolonialpolitiker der Kaiserzeit. Jüdische Miniaturen 148. Berlin: Hentrich, 2014.
- Battolla, Octavio C. La Sociedad de Antaño. Second Edition. Buenos Aires: Librería J. Menendez, 1910.
- Bauch, Kurt, and Alice Mertens. Deutsche Kultur Am Kap = German Culture at the Cape = Duitse Kultuur Aan Die Kaap. Cape-Town: Tafelberg, 1964.
- Bauer, Alfredo. La Asociación Vorwärts y la lucha democrática en la Argentina. Buenos Aires: Editorial Legasa, 1989.
- Bauer, Heinz Wilhelm. Kolonien oder nicht? Die Einstellung von Partei und Staat zum kolonialen Gedanken. Leipzig: Richard Bauer Verlag, 1935.
- Baumgarten, Johannes. Amerika: Eine ethnographische Rundreise durch den Kontinent und die Antillen. Charakterbilder, Sittenschilderungen, Scenen aus dem Volksleben. Nach den besten und neuesten, deutschen und ausländischen Quellen. Stuttgart: Rieger'sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1882.
- . "Die Pampas-Indianer." In Amerika: Eine ethnographische Rundreise durch den Kontinent und die Antillen. Charakterbilder, Sittenschilderungen, Scenen aus dem Volksleben. Nach

- den besten und neuesten, deutschen und ausländischen Quellen*, 3–12. Stuttgart: Rieger'sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1882.
- Bayer, Maximilian. Der Krieg in Südwest-Afrika und seine Bedeutung für die Entwicklung der Kolonie: Vortrag. Leipzig: Engelmann, 1907.
- . Die Helden der Naukluft. Leipzig: Otto Spamer, 1912.
- . Die Helden der Naukluft: Eine Erzählung aus Deutsch-Südwest. Ninth Edition. Potsdam: Voggenreiter, 1942.
- . Mit dem Hauptquartier in Südwestafrika. Second Edition. Leipzig: Otto Spamer, 1909.
- . Okowi - ein Hererospion? Eine Geschichte aus dem südwestafrikanischen Kriege. Berlin: Wilhelm Weicher, Marine- und Kolonialverlag, 1910.
- . The Rehoboth Baster Nation of Namibia. Edited by Peter Carstens. Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, 1984.
- Bayly, Christopher A. The Birth of the Modern World, 1780-1914: Global Connections and Comparisons. Malden, MA: Blackwell Publisher, 2004.
- Becerra. "La economía social argentina en las exposiciones internacionales. La Exhibición del Museo Social Argentino en la Exposición Universal e Industrial de Gante (1913)." In Argentina en exposición: ferias y exhibiciones durante los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Andrea Lluch and María Silvia Di Liscia, 209–38. Sevilla: CSIC, 2009.
- Bechhaus-Gerst, Marianne, and Reinhard Klein-Arendt, eds. Die (koloniale) Begegnung□: AfrikanerInnen in Deutschland 1880-1945, Deutsche in Afrika 1880-1918. Frankfurt am Main; New York: Lang, 2003.
- Bechhaus-Gerst, Marianne, and Mechthild Leutner, eds. Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- Beck Bernard, Carlos. Argentinien. Über's Meer: Taschenbibliothek für deutsche Auswanderer 5. Leipzig: Weltpost, 1883.
- . Die Argentinische Republik. Bern: Heinrich Robert, 1874.
- . Die Argentinische Republik als Auswanderungsziel. Bern: Allemann, 1868.
- . Die Argentinische Republik: ein Handbuch für Auswanderer und Kolonisten. Bern: J. Allemann, 1872.
- . La République Argentine ... ancien Directeur de la colonie de San Carlos, près de Santa Fé (Amérique du Sud). Lausanne: Delafontaine et Rouge, 1865.
- . La République argentine: Manuel de l'émigrant et du cultivateur. Berne: Imprimerie J. Allemann, 1872.
- Beck Bernard, Lina. El río Paraná: cinco años en la Confederación Argentina, 1857-1862. Memoria argentina; Variation: Memoria argentina. Buenos Aires, Argentina: Emecé, 2001.
- . Le Rio Parana: Cinq années de séjour dans la République Argentine. Paris: Gressart, 1864.
- Beck, Heinrich, Dieter Geuenich, Heiko Steuer, and Dietrich Hakelberg, eds. Zur Geschichte der Gleichung "germanisch-deutsch": Sprache und Namen, Geschichte und Institutionen. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2004.

- Becker, Frank, ed. Rassenmischehen, Mischlinge, Rassentrennung: zur Politik der Rasse im deutschen Kolonialreich. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 2004.
- Beckmann, August. Die Rheinisch-Westindische Kompagnie, ihr Wirken und ihre Bedeutung. Borna-Leipzig: Robert Noske, 1915.
- Beeker, Käthe van. Heddas Lehrzeit in Süd-West: Erzählung für Mädchen. Stuttgart: Loewes Verlag Ferdinand Carl, 1909.
- Behrens, Hans Oscar. Grundlagen und Entwicklung der regelmässigen deutschen Schiffahrt nach Südamerika. Vol. 4. Hefte zur Verbreitung geographischer Kenntnisse in ihrer Beziehung zum Kultur- und Wirtschaftsleben 2. Halle a. S.: Gebauer-Schwetschke Druckerei und Verlag, 1905.
- Bein, Roberto. "Aspectos lingüísticos de las minorías de origen alemán: mantimiento, hibridación y cambio de lengua." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 23–37.
- Beis, Von Elena. "Deutsche Kolonialgeschichte: Der Verleugnete Völkermord." Die Tageszeitung. 2011, sec. Deutschland. <http://www.taz.de/Deutsche-Kolonialgeschichte!/79124/>.
- Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft*. Vol. 5. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1904.
- Belgard, Martin. Parzellierung und innere Kolonisation in den 6 östlichen Provinzen Preußens, 1875-1906. Leipzig: Verlag von Duncker & Humblot, 1907.
- Belgum, Kirsten. "A Nation for the Masses: Production of German Identity in the Late-Nineteenth-Century Popular Press." In A User's Guide to German Cultural Studies, edited by Scott D. Denham, Irene Kacandes, and Jonathan Petropoulos, 163–80. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1997.
- . "Reading Alexander von Humboldt: Cosmopolitan Naturalist with an American Spirit." In German Culture in Nineteenth-Century America: Reception, Adaptation, Transformation, edited by Lynne Tatlock and Matt Erlin, 107–27. Rochester, NY: Camden House, 2005.
- Bell, Stephen. A Life in Shadow: Aimé Bonpland in Southern South America, 1817–1858. Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 2010.
- Bender, Thomas. A Nation among Nations: America's Place in World History. New York: Hill and Wang, 2006.
- , ed. Rethinking American History in a Global Age. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2002.
- Bener, Gustav Paul. Landwirtschaftliche Kolonisation in Süd-Amerika. Chur, Switzerland: Bischofsberger & Co., 1936.
- Ben-Messahel, Sahlia. Des frontières de l'interculturalité: étude pluridisciplinaire de la représentation culturelle: identité et altérité. Villeneuve-d'Ascq: Presses universitaires du Septentrion, 2009.
- Bennett, Brett M, and Joseph Morgan Hodge. Science and Empire Knowledge and Networks of Science Across the British Empire, 1800-1970. Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire; New York, NY: Palgrave Macmillan, 2011.
- Bentz. "Deportation nach Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Von einem deutsch-südwestafrikanischen Ansiedler." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 484–86.

- Berding, Helmut. Nationales Bewusstsein und kollektive Identität: Studien zur Entwicklung des kollektiven Bewusstseins in der Neuzeit 2. Frankfurt am Main: Suhrkamp, 1994.
- Berghahn, Volker. Imperial Germany, 1871-1918: Economy, Society, Culture, and Politics. Rev. and expanded ed. New York: Berghahn Books, 2005.
- Berghahn, Volker R., ed. Quest for Economic Empire: European Strategies of German Big Business in the Twentieth Century. Providence: Berghahn Books, 1996.
- Berghaus, Heinrich Karl Wilhelm, Paul Anton Fedor Konstantin Possart, and Traugott Bromme. Allgemeine Länder und Völkerkunde. Vol. 5. Hoffmann'sche Verlags-Buchhandlung, 1843.
- Bergmann, Günther. Auslandsdeutsche in Paraguay, Brasilien, Argentinien. Bad Münstereifel: Westkreuz, 1994.
- Beris, A. P. J. From Mission to Local Church: One Hundred Years of Mission by the Catholic Church in Namibia with Special Reference to the Development of the Archdiocese of Windhoek and the Apostolic Vicariate of Rundu. Windhoek, Namibia: John Meinert, 1996.
- Berman, Russell. Enlightenment or Empire: Colonial Discourse in German Culture. Lincoln Neb.: University of Nebraska Press, 1998.
- . "German Colonialism: Another Sonderweg?" In German Colonialism: Another Sonderweg?, edited by Marcia Klotz, Special Edition. Vol. 16. European Studies Journal 2. Cedar Falls, Iowa: University of Northern Iowa, 1999.
- Bernadez, Manuel. "Aus dem geistigen Leben Argentinens." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 2:100–104. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914.
- Bernand, Carmen. Histoire de Buenos Aires. [Paris]: Fayard, 1997.
- Bernasconi, Alicia. "La inmigración de habla alemana en Argentina. Aproximación a partir de las listas de desembarco." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 5–22.
- Bernecker, Walther L. Die Handelskonquistadoren: Europäische Interessen und mexikanischer Staat im 19. Jahrhundert. Stuttgart: Steiner Franz Verlag, 1988.
- Bernecker, Walther L., Gertrut Krömer, and Kristina Birn, eds. Die Wiederentdeckung Lateinamerikas: die Erfahrung des Subkontinents in Reiseberichten des 19. Jahrhunderts. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1997.
- Bernecker, Walther L., and Rüdiger Zoller. "¿Transformaciones políticas y sociales a través de elites? Algunas reflexiones sobre casos latinoamericanos." In Elites en América Latina, edited by Peter Birle, 33–133. Madrid; Frankfurt am Main: Iberoamericana; Vervuert, 2007.
- Berner, Oskar T. Die Schweizer im ehemaligen Südwestafrika / The Swiss in the former South West Africa. Windhoek: Typoprint, Schweizer Club Namibia, 1998.
- Bernhard, Robert. "Droht der deutschen Landwirtschaft aus einer zunehmenden Besiedlung Südbrasilens Gefahr?" Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 2 (1901 1900): 241–46.
- . "Praktische Winke für südbrasilische Siedelungsgesellschaften." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 208–13.

- Bertelsmann, Werner. Die deutsche Sprachgruppe Südwestafrikas in Politik und Recht seit 1915. Windhoek; Stuttgart: F. Steiner, 1979.
- . “Die Minderheitenrechte der deutschsprachigen Bevölkerung in Südwestafrika.” Ph.D., Georg-August-Universität zu Göttingen, 1970.
- Bertuch, Friedrich Justin, ed. Neue allgemeine geographische Ephemeriden. Vol. 10. Weimar: Verlag des Landes-Industrie-Comptoirs, 1822.
- Besten, Julia. “Des Meisters Ruf: Lina Stahlhut: Missionarsehefrau und Missionsschwester der Rheinischen Mission.” In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 146–55. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- Bhabha, Homi. “Culture’s In-Between.” In Questions of Cultural Identity, edited by Stuart Hall and Paul Du Gay, 53–60. London; Thousand Oaks Calif.: Sage, 1996.
- , ed. Nation and Narration. London; New York: Routledge, 1990.
- . The Location of Culture. London; New York: Routledge, 1994.
- Bianchi, Susana. Historia de las religiones en la Argentina: Las minorías religiosas. Penguin Random House Grupo Editorial Argentina, 2012.
- Biess, Frank, Mark Roseman, and Hanna Schissler, eds. Conflict, Catastrophe and Continuity: Essays on Modern German History. Berghahn Books, 2007.
- Billorou, María José, and Ana María Rodríguez. “Reinas y campesinas: las ‘hijas de los colonos’ en escena.” In Cuando las mujeres reinaban: belleza, virtud y poder en la Argentina del siglo XX, edited by Mirta Zaida Lobato, 121–42. Buenos Aires: Editorial Biblos, 2005.
- Birle, Peter. Argentinien nach zehn Jahren Menem: Wandel und Kontinuität. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 2002.
- , ed. Buenos Aires Berlin. Berlin: Ibero-Amerikanisches Institut Preussische Kulturbesitz, 2004.
- . Die Beziehungen zwischen Deutschland und Argentinien. Bibliotheca Ibero-Americana□; Bd. 135. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 2010.
- , ed. Elites en América Latina. Madrid; Frankfurt am Main: Iberoamericana; Vervuert, 2007.
- Bjerg, María. Historias de la inmigración en la Argentina. Buenos Aires; Barcelona: Edhasa, 2009.
- . “Una mirada panorámica de la inmigración en la Argentina.” In Historias de la inmigración en la Argentina, 19–33. Buenos Aires; Barcelona: Edhasa, 2009.
- Bjerg, María, and Hernán Otero. Inmigración y redes sociales en la Argentina moderna. Tandil: Cemla-Iehs, 1995.
- Blackbourn, David. History of Germany, 1780-1918: The Long Nineteenth Century. 2nd ed. Malden MA: Blackwell Pub., 2003.
- Blancpain, Jean-Pierre. Francia y los franceses en Chile: 1700-1980. Santiago: Hachette, 1987.
- . Les européens en Argentine: Immigration de masse et destins individuels (1850-1950). Paris: Editions L’Harmattan, 2011.
- . Les juifs allemands et l’antisémitisme en Amérique du sud: 1930-1950. Paris: Harmattan, 2008.

- . Los Alemanes en Chile: 1816-1945. Fourth edition. Paris: Hachette, 1987.
- . Migrations et mémoire germaniques en Amérique latine à l'époque contemporaine: contribution à l'étude de l'expansion allemande outre-mer. Strasbourg: Presses universitaires de Strasbourg, 1994.
- Blancpain, Marc. Aujourd'hui, l'Amérique latine. [Paris]: Berger-Levrault, 1966.
- Blaschnitz, Edith. "Auswanderer, Emigranten, Exilanten – die österreichische Kolonie in Buenos Aires. Von den Anfängen bis zum Ende des Zweiten Weltkrieges, unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Jahre 1918 – 1945." Diplom, Universität Wien, 1992.
- Bleek, Wilhelm. "Auslandsdeutsche." In Handwörterbuch des politischen Systems der Bundesrepublik Deutschland, edited by Uwe Andersen and Wichard Woyke. Opladen: Leske Budrich, 2003.
- Bley, Fritz. Die Weltstellung des Deutschtums. Der Kampf um das Deutschtum 1. München: J.F. Lehmann, 1897.
- Bley, Helmut. Namibia Under German Rule. Münster: LIT Verlag, 1996.
- . South-West Africa under German Rule, 1894-1914. English ed. Evanston: Northwestern University Press, 1971.
- Bley, Helmut, and Hans-Georg Schleicher. "Deutsch-deutsch-namibische Beziehungen von 1960 bis 1990." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 274–91. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Blum, Otto, and Erich Giese. Wie erschliessen wir unsere Kolonien? Berlin: D. Reimer (E. Vohsen), 1907.
- Blumenthal, Gladis. In the Land of the Gauchos: The History of the Jewish German Immigration. Porto Alegre: SIBRA, 2001.
- Boardman, John. The Greeks Overseas: Their Early Colonies and Trade. New York: Thames and Hudson, 1980.
- Bodemer, Klaus, ed. El triángulo atlántico: América Latina, Europa y Estados Unidos en un sistema internacional cambiante. Sankt Augustin: Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung; Asociación Alemana de Investigación sobre América Latina (ADLAF), 2002.
- Bodems, P. "Die Deutsch-Russen in Südamerika." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 740–53. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- Bodnar, John. The Transplanted: A History of Immigrants in Urban America. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1987.
- Boer, Pim den, Heinz Duchhardt, Georg Kreis, and Wolfgang Schmale, eds. Europäische Erinnerungsorte 3: Europa und die Welt. Oldenbourg Verlag, 2012.
- Boetticher, Else von. Das Heimathaus in Keetmanshoop und das Jugendheim in Lüderitzbucht, die 'Adda v. Liliencron-Stiftung! Berlin: (Linden-Druckerei), 1914.
- Böhm, Johann Albrecht Friedrich. Johann Albrecht Friedrich Böhm: Missionar in Südwestafrika 1863 - 1907; mit der Biographie, die seine Urenkel erarbeitet haben und Texten von ihm selber. Edited by Niels-Peter Moritzen and Alice Rössler. Nürnberg: VTR, 2014.

- Böhm-Bawerk, Eugen von, Karl Theodor von Inama-Sternegg, Eugen von Philippovich, Ernst von Plener, and Friedrich Freiherr von Wieser, eds. Zeitschrift für Volkswirtschaft, Sozialpolitik und Verwaltung: Organ der Gesellschaft österreichischer Volkswirte. 17. Wien; Leipzig: Wilhelm Braumüller, 1907.
- Bokemeyer, Heinrich, ed. Das Auswanderungswesen in der Schweiz, in Belgien, England und Deutschland nach offiziellen Schriftenmaterial. Berlin: Heymann, 1892.
- Boletín del Departamento Nacional de Agricultura*. 9 vols. Buenos Aires: Imprenta del Departamento Nacional de Agricultura, 1885.
- Boletín del Instituto Geográfico Argentino*. Vol. 7. Buenos Aires: Instituto Geográfico Argentino, 1886.
- Boletín del Instituto Geográfico Argentino*. Vol. 8. Buenos Aires: Instituto Geográfico Argentino, 1887.
- Boletín Oficial: Opinión del Comercio: Sobre su importancia*. Buenos Aires: Imprenta del “Boletín Oficial,” 1898.
- Bollig, Michael. “Landreform in Namibia: Landverteilung und Transformationen kommunalen Landbesitzes.” In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 304–23. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Bollig, Michael, Michael Schnegg, and Hans-Peter Wotzka, eds. Pastoralism in Africa: Past, Present and Future. New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2013.
- Bongard, Oskar. Staatssekretär Dernburg in Britisch- und Deutsch-Süd-Afrika. Second edition. Berlin: W. Süsserott, 1909.
- Boragina, Jerónimo E. “Carlos Kern Alemann - Uno de Tantos.” Humboldt - Archivo de Temas - Amistad: Fisonomías de Una Relación Compleja - Goethe-Institut, 2009. <http://www.goethe.de/wis/bib/prj/hmb/the/151/es4898543.htm>.
- Borchard, H. Verzeichnis der deutschen evangelischen Diaspora-Gemeinden und -Geistlichen in Südamerika, Australien, Orient, Rumänien, Serbien, Italien, Schweiz, Frankreich und England, zusammengestellt im Auftrage der Diaspora-Conferenz. Leipzig: Verlag von M. L. Matthies, 1883.
- Born, Joachim, and Georg Kremnitz, eds. Lenguas, literaturas y sociedad en la Argentina: dialogos sobre la investigación en Argentina, Uruguay y en países germanofonos: actas del coloquio (Viena, 25-28 de marzo de 2003). Wien: Edition Praesens, 2004.
- Borowka-Clausberg, Beate. Balthasar Sprenger und der frühneuzeitliche Reisebericht. München: Iudicium, 1999.
- Bortis, Hans-Ruedi. Presencia Suiza en la colonización de la República Argentina. Buenos Aires: Cámara de Comercio Suizo Argentina, 2007.
- Bosch, Beatriz. La primera colonia agrícola argentina. Paraná: Editorial de Entre Ríos, 2004.
- Boshart, August. Zehn Jahre afrikanischen Lebens. Leipzig: Wigand, 1898.
- Böttger. “‘Günstige Rückwirkung auf das nationale Empfinden in Deutschland.’ Zwei Quellen zur zeitgenössischen Wahrnehmung des ‘Hererokrieges.’” In Kolonialismus, edited by Mihran

- Dabag, Horst Gründer, and Uwe-Karsten Ketelsen, 216–31. München: Wilhelm Fink Verlag, 2004.
- Böttger, Jan Henning. “‘Bienvenue dans la capitale de l’Empire!’: Die Tagung des ‘Institut Colonial International’ in Berlin (1897).” In “... Macht und Anteil an der Weltherrschaft”: Berlin und der deutsche Kolonialismus, edited by Ulrich van der Heyden and Joachim Zeller, 109–15. Münster: Unrast, 2005.
- Boulbina, Seloua Luste. “La décolonisation des savoirs et ses théories voyageuses.” Rue Descartes 2, no. 78 (2013): 19–33.
- Bourdieu, Pierre. Ce que parler veut dire: l’économie des échanges linguistiques. Paris: Fayard, 1982.
- . “Ökonomisches Kapital, kulturelles Kapital, soziales Kapital.” In Soziale Ungleichheiten, edited by Reinhard Kreckel. Soziale Welt 2. Göttingen: Schwartz, 1983.
- Bower, Stephanie. “Political and Socio-Economic Elites: The Encounter of Provincials with Portenos in Fin-De-Siècle Buenos Aires.” The Americas 59, no. 3 (2003): 379–403.
- Bowersox, Jeff. Raising Germans in the Age of Empire: Youth and Colonial Culture, 1871-1914. Corby: Oxford University Press, 2013.
- Brandariz, Gustavo. Alemania en la Argentina. Buenos Aires Argentina: Manrique Zago Ediciones, 1997.
- Brandl, Alois. “Die Bedeutung der Deutschen Sprache über See für Deutschlands Machtstellung.” In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 434–41. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- Braun, Thomas. Die Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft und der Missionshandel im 19. Jahrhundert. Erlangen: Verlag der Evangelisch-Lutherischen Mission, 1992.
- Brehl, Medardus. “Diskursereignis ‘Herero-Aufstand’: Konstruktion, Strategien der Authentifizierung, Sinnzuschreibung.” In Deutsche Sprache und Kolonialismus: Aspekte der nationalen Kommunikation 1884-1919, edited by Ingo H. Warnke, 167–202. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2009.
- Breitenbach, Wilhelm. Die Provinz Rio Grande do Sul, Brasilien, und die deutsche Auswanderung dahin. Heidelberg: C. Winter, 1885.
- Brenning, Alfred. Innere Kolonisation. Aus Natur Und Geisteswelt: Sammlung Wissenschaftlich-Gemeinverständlicher Darstellungen 261. Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1909.
- Brepohl, Friedrich Wilhelm. Die deutschen Kolonien Costa Machado, Queixadas und Nova-Germania, sowie die ungarische Kolonie Santo Antonio im brasilianischen Staate São Paulo. Ponta Grossa, Paraná: Raschel, Raicosk, 1932.
- Briefs, Goetz. El militarismo alemán. Translated by Juan Langenstein. Los Alemanes, cómo piensan, cómo hablan, cómo se defienden 12. Buenos Aires: Beutespacher y Cía, 1918.
- Briones, Claudia, and José Luis Lanata, eds. Contemporary Perspectives on the Native Peoples of Pampa, Patagonia, and Tierra Del Fuego: Living on the Edge. Westport, Conn.: Greenwood Publishing Group, 2002.

- Britz, Rudolf G, Hartmut Lang, and Cornelia Limpricht. Kurze Geschichte der Rehobother Baster bis 1990. Göttingen; Windhoek: K. Hess, 1999.
- Brockmann, Clara. Briefe eines deutschen Mädchens aus Südwest. Berlin: E.S. Mittler und Sohn, 1912.
- . Die Deutsche Frau in Südwestafrika: Ein Beitrag Zur Frauenfrage in Unseren Kolonien. Berlin: Mittler, 1910.
- Brodersen-Manns, Hertha. Wie alles anders kam in Afrika: Südwester Erinnerungen aus den Jahren 1914-15. Windhoek Namibia: Kuiseb-Verlag, 1991.
- Brose, Maximilian, ed. Die deutsche Kolonialliteratur im Jahre (1884-1908). Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1908.
- . “Repertorium der Deutschen Kolonialliteratur.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis 11 (1898): 278-.
- Brown, Matthew, ed. Informal Empire in Latin America: Culture, Commerce and Capital. Oxford, UK: Blackwell Publisher, 2008.
- . “The Global History of Latin America.” Journal of Global History 10, no. 3 (2015): 365–86.
- Brown, Matthew, and Gabriel B Paquette, eds. Connections After Colonialism: Europe and Latin America in the 1820s. Tuscaloosa: University of Alabama Press, 2013.
- Brubaker, Rogers. Citizenship and Nationhood in France and Germany. Cambridge Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1992.
- . Nationalism Reframed: Nationhood and the National Question in the New Europe. Cambridge [England]; New York: Cambridge University Press, 1996.
- . “The ‘Diaspora’ Diaspora.” Ethnic and Racial Studies 28, no. 1 (2005): 1–19.
- Brubaker, Rogers, and Frederick Cooper. “Beyond ‘Identity.’” Theory and Society 29, no. 1 (2000): 1–47.
- Bruch, Rüdiger Vom. “Kulturimperialismus Und Kulturwissenschaften.” BEWI Berichte Zur Wissenschaftsgeschichte 13, no. 2 (1990): 83–92.
- Bruch, Rüdiger Vom, Uta Gerhardt, and Aleksandra Pawliczek, eds. Kontinuitäten und Diskontinuitäten in der Wissenschaftsgeschichte des 20. Jahrhunderts. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 2006.
- Bruck, Felix Friedrich. Noch einmal die Deportation und Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Breslau: Verlag von M. & H. Marcus, 1906.
- . “Ueber Deportation nach Südwest-Afrika.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Zehnter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1897 10 (1897): 67–83.
- Brückmann, Thomas, Franziska Maetzky, and Tino Plümecke. “Rassifizierte Gene: Zur Aktualität biologischer ‘Rasse’ - Konzepte in den neuen Lebenswissenschaften.” In Gemachte Differenz: Kontinuitäten biologischer “Rasse”-Konzepte, edited by AG gegen Rassismus in den Lebenswissenschaften, 20–64. Münster: Unrast, 2009.

- Brummer, Christopher James. "Blood and Iron in the Sand: Colonialism, Politics and Culture in German Southwest Africa." Ph.D., The University of Chicago, 2001.
- Brunschwig, Henri. L'expansion allemande outre-mer du 15e siècle à nos jours. Paris: PUF, 1957.
- Brunswig, Hermann. Hinter der Tropilla: eine Reiseerinnerung aus Süd-Patagonien. Buenos Aires: Deutscher Volksbund für Argentinien, 1929.
- Brüstle, Andrea. Das Deutsche Ausland-Institut und die Deutschen in Argentinien, 1933-1945. Berlin: wvb, Wissenschaftlicher Verlag, 2006.
- Bryce, Benjamin. Germans in Ontario and Buenos Aires, 1905 - 1918: Das Argentinische Tageblatt and Das Berliner Journal's Discourse about Ethnicity and Its Changes during World War I. Toronto, Ontario: York University, 2008.
- . "La etnicidad en el Argentinisches Tageblatt, 1905-1918: la discusión de una comunidad germánica y alemana." In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 125–43. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- . "Los caballeros de beneficencia y las damas organizadoras: El Hospital Alemán y la idea de comunidad en Buenos Aires, 1880-1930." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 79–108.
- . "Making Ethnic Space: Education, Religion, and the German Language in Argentina and Canada, 1880-1930." Ph.D., York University, 2013.
- Buchenau, Jürgen. "Blond and Blue-Eyed in Mexico City, 1821 to 1975." In The Heimat Abroad: The Boundaries of Germanness, edited by Krista O'Donnell, Renate Bridenthal, and Nancy Ruth Reagin, 85–110. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2005.
- . Tools of Progress: A German Merchant Family in Mexico City, 1865-Present. Albuquerque: The University of New Mexico Press, 2004.
- Büchner, Else. "Skizzen aus dem Leben einer Farmerfrau in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." In Süsserott's Illustrierter Kolonialkalender 1914, 75–81. Berlin: W. Süsserott, 1914.
- Buckeley. Deutschtum und deutsche Kolonien in Paraguay. [Köln]: [Kölnische Zeitung], 1931.
- Budde, Gunilla, Sebastian Conrad, and Oliver Janz, eds. Transnationale Geschichte: Themen, Tendenzen und Theorien. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2006.
- Bueno-Aniola, Cíntia. Soziale Stereotypen und ihre sprachliche Indizierung in den "deutschen Kolonien" in Südbrasilien. Europäische Hochschulschriften . Reihe 1, Deutsche Sprache und Literatur. Bern: Lang, 2007.
- Bühler, Andreas Heinrich. Der Namaaufstand gegen die deutsche Kolonialherrschaft in Namibia von 1904-1913. Frankfurt am Main: IKO, Verlag für Interkulturelle Kommunikation, 2003.
- Bühler-Dietrich, Annette. "Zwischen Glaubwürdigkeit und make believe: Karl May im Kontext der deutschamerikanischen Literatur des 19. Jahrhunderts." In Karl May: Brückenbauer zwischen den Kulturen, edited by Wolfram Pyta, 169–87. Berlin: LIT Verlag, 2010.
- Bujaldón de Esteves, Lila. "Hans Silber ensayista." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 231–40.

- . “Wilhelm Keiper y la educación alemana en la Argentina.” In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 157–72. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- Bullard, Daniel Thomas. “A Deterritorialized History: Investigating German Colonialism through Deleuze and Guattari.” M.A., University of Victoria, Canada, 2005.
- Bülow, Alexander von. Auswanderung und Colonisation im Interesse des deutschen Handels. E.S. Mittler & Sohn, 1849.
- . “Pauperismus und Colonisation.” Die Grenzboten: Zeitschrift für Politik, Literatur und Kunst 2 (1842): 561–81.
- . Über Organisation der Auswanderung und Colonisation: Vortrag in der öffentlichen Sitzung des Central-Vereins für die Deutsche Auswanderungs- und Colonisations-Angelegenheit. Berlin: Selbstverlag des Vereins, 1852.
- Bülow, Franz Joseph von. Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Drei Jahre im Lande Hendrik Witboois. Schilderungen von Land und Leute. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1896.
- . “Politik und Kolonisation in Windhoek.” In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Drei Jahre im Lande Hendrik Witboois. Schilderungen von Land und Leute, 220–36. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1896.
- Bülow, Heinrich August Ernst. Deutsch-Südwestafrika seit der Besitzergreifung, die Züge und Kriege gegen die Eingeborenen. Berlin: Süsserott, 1904.
- Bunge, Augusto. La inferioridad económica de los Argentinos nativos. Buenos Aires, 1919.
- Bunge, Carlos Octavio. Nuestra América. Barcelona: Imprenta de Henrich y Ca., 1903.
- Bunge de Gálvez, Delfina. Viaje alrededor de mi infancia. Buenos Aires: [Lopez], 1941.
- Bunge, Octavio. Viajes en Europa y América. Vol. 2. Buenos Aires: P.E. Coni, 1882.
- . Viajes en Europa y América. Vol. 1. Buenos Aires: P.E. Coni, 1882.
- Bunge, Ricardo. Ernesto Bunge. Buenos Aires, 1941.
- Burbank, Jane, and Frederick Cooper. Empires in World History: Power and the Politics of Difference. Princeton University Press, 2010.
- Bürki, Yvette, and Henriette Partzsch, eds. Redes de comunicación: Estudios sobre la prensa en el mundo hispanohablante. Berlin: Frank & Timme GmbH, 2016.
- Bürklin, Wilhelm. Süd- und Mittelamerika unter dem Einfluss des Weltkrieges. Göttingen, Berlin: O. Hapke, 1915.
- Burmeister, Hermann. Karte der südlichen Provinzen der Argentinischen Republik, zu seiner Reise durch die La Plata-Staaten entworfen von Dr. Hermann Burmeister. [Halle]: [Druck und Verlag von H. W. Schmidt], 1861.
- . Physikalische Beschreibung der argentinischen Republik nach eigenen und den vorhandenen fremden Beobachtungen. Vol. 1. Halle: Anton, 1875.
- . Reise durch die La Plata-Staaten, mit besonderer Rücksicht auf die physische Beschaffenheit und den Culturzustand der Argentinischen Republik. Ausgeführt in den Jahren 1857, 1858, 1859 und 1860. Vol. 2. 2 vols. Halle: H. W. Schmidt, 1861.

- . Reise durch die La Plata-Staaten, mit besonderer Rücksicht auf die physische Beschaffenheit und den Culturzustand der Argentinischen Republik: ausgeführt in den Jahren 1857, 1858, 1859 und 1860. Vol. 1. 2 vols. Halle: H. W. Schmidt, 1861.
- . Über das Klima der Argentinischen Republik. Nach dreijährigen Beobachtungen während einer Reise durch die La Plata-Staaten geschildert und mit numerischen Angaben der gefundenen Werthe belegt. Halle: H. W. Schmidt, 1861.
- Burton, Antoinette. After the Imperial Turn: Thinking With and Through the Nation. Durham [N.C.]: Duke University Press, 2003.
- Busch, Fritz. Südwesten und Stahlhelm. Stuttgart: Union, 1926.
- Buschmann, Rainer F. Anthropology's Global Histories: The Ethnographic Frontier in German New Guinea, 1870-1935. Honolulu: University of Hawaii Press, 2009.
- Bussemeyer, Peter. 50 Jahre Argentinisches Tageblatt, Werden und Aufstieg einer Auslandsdeutschen Zeitung. [n.p., 1940.
- Bußmann, Klaus. Treu deutsch und evangelisch: die Geschichte der deutschen evangelischen Gemeinde zu Asunción, Paraguay von 1893-1963. Acta Humboldtiana, Alexander-von-Humboldt-Stiftung. Series geographica et ethnographica, Deutsche Ibero-Amerika-Stiftung. Stuttgart: Steiner, 1989.
- Büttner, Karl Gotthilf. Ackerbau und Viehzucht in Süd-West-Afrika: (Damara- und Gr. Namaqualand). Die Deutschen Colonialgebiete 3. Leipzig: Schloemp, 1885.
- . Das Hinterland von Walfischbai und Angra Pequena: eine Übersicht der Kulturarbeit deutscher Missionare und der seitherigen Entwicklung des deutschen Handels in Südwestafrika. Sammlung von Vorträgen für das deutsche Volk 9. Heidelberg: Winter, 1884.
- . Kolonialpolitik und Christentum betrachtet mit Hinblick auf die deutschen Unternehmungen in Südwestafrika. Heidelberg: Winter, 1885.
- Büttner Lermen, Gisela. Deutsche Auswanderinnen in Südbrasilien: Lebenswelt und Erfahrung von Frauen in Kolonie und katholischer Kirche (1824-1939). Heidelberg: Verlag Regionalkultur, 2006.
- Cafferata, Antonio F. Apuntes sobre inmigración y colonización. Universidad Nacional de Buenos Aires, Facultad de Derecho y Ciencias Sociales, 1898.
- Cain, Peter J., and Anthony Gerald Hopkins. British Imperialism: Innovation and Expansion, 1688-1914. London; New York: Longman, 1993.
- Cañizares-Esguerra, Jorge. How to Write the History of the New World: Histories, Epistemologies, and Identities in the Eighteenth-Century Atlantic World. Stanford Calif.: Stanford University Press, 2001.
- , ed. The Atlantic in Global History: 1500-2000. Upper Saddle River NJ: Pearson Education Prentice Hall, 2006.
- Cannilla, Flavio, ed. Argentina - Alemania: un recorrido a lo largo de 150 años de relaciones bilaterales. Buenos Aires: Embajada de la República Federal de Alemania, 2007.
- Canstatt, Oskar. Die deutsche Auswanderung: Auswandererfürsorge und Auswandererziele. Berlin-Schöneberg: Ernst Hahn Verlag, 1904.

- . “Die deutsche Einwanderung in Argentinien.” In Die deutsche Auswanderung: Auswandererfürsorge und Auswandererziele, 263–72. Berlin-Schöneberg: Ernst Hahn Verlag, 1904.
- . “Zur Frage der Anlage von deutschen Ackerbaukolonien.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 37–59.
- Caraco, Benjamin. “La Connexion, Guide de La Comparaison - Entretien Avec Romain Bertrand (2/3).” Nonfiction.Fr, août 2012. http://www.nonfiction.fr/article-6053-la_connexion_guide_de_la_comparaison__entretien_avec_romain_bertrand__23.htm.
- Cárdenas, Eduardo José, and Carlos Manuel Payá. La Argentina de los hermanos Bunge: 1901-1907. Buenos Aires: Edición Sudamericana, 1997.
- . La familia de Octavio Bunge. Buenos Aires: Edición Sudamericana, 1995.
- Carl, August. Friedrich Gerstäcker der Weitgereiste: Ein Lebensbild, der deutschen Jugend vorgeführt. Gera: Issleib und Rietzschel, 1873.
- Carlswärd, Tage. El servicio de comunicaciones operativas en el ala derecha del ejército alemán del oeste y su influencia en el resultado de la batalla del Marne 1914. Buenos Aires: Tall. Gráf. de L. Bernard, 1931.
- Carnica de Bertona, Claudia. “Integración o exclusión: los inmigrantes alemanes a través de las novelas de Livia Neumann y Heinrich Eberhardt.” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 195–204.
- Carow, Richard. Deutsch-Süd-West-Afrika: Plaudereien nach eigenen Erfahrungen. Oranienbaum: Buchdr. Oranienbaum, 1899.
- Carrasquero, S. I., and V. Villamayor. “Historia de la colección Flossdorf del Museo de La Plata (1905-1920).” 1a Congreso Nacional de Museos Universitarios, 2010.
- Carreras, Sandra. Auf dem Weg in die neue Heimat: deutsche Auswanderung nach Argentinien, Brasilien und Chile 1824-1914; eine Ausstellung des Ibero-Amerikanischen Instituts PK. Berlin: Ibero-Amerikanisches Institut, 2006.
- . “Construcciones de identidad y ciudadanía entre los migrantes de origen alemán en Argentina.” In Ciudadanía vivida, (in)seguridades e interculturalidad, edited by Barbara Potthast, Juliana Stroebele/Gregor, and Doerte Wollrad, 200–212. Buenos Aires: Friedrich Ebert Stiftung; Nueva Sociedad, 2008.
- , ed. Der Nationalsozialismus und Lateinamerika: Institutionen - Repräsentationen - Wissenskonstrukte. Ibero-Online 3, I. Berlin: Ibero-Amerikanisches Institut, 2005.
- . “Die Quesada-Bibliothek kommt nach Berlin. Zu den Hintergründen einer Schenkung.” In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 305–20. Münster: Lit, 2004.
- . “‘Spenger, Quesada y yo...’ Intercambio intelectual y relaciones personales entre la Argentina y Alemania.” In Sin fronteras: Encuentros de mujeres y hombres entre América Latina y Europa, siglos XIX-XX, edited by Eugenia Scarzanella and Mónica Raisa Schpun. Madrid; Frankfurt am Main: Iberoamericana Editorial, 2008.
- Carreras, Sandra, and Günther Maihold, eds. Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur. Münster: LIT Verlag, 2004.

- Carreras, Sandra, Horacio Tarcus, and Jessica Zeller, eds. Los socialistas alemanes y la formación del movimiento obrero argentino: antología del Vorwärts, 1886-1901 = Die deutschen Sozialisten und die Anfänge der argentinischen Arbeiterbewegung. Ed. bilingüe. Buenos Aires: Buenos Libros; IAIPK Instituto Ibero-Americano Patrimonio Cultural Prussiano; CeDinCi Editores, 2008.
- Caruso, Marcelo. "Zweideutige Verweise. Preußen als Vorbild argentinischer Schulreformen unter besonderer Berücksichtigung des Projekts von Carlos Saavedra Lamas." In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 285–304. Münster: LIT Verlag, 2004.
- Cáseres Miranda, Marcelo L. "La Librería Peuser, una tradición porteña." HISTORIAS de la ciudad: una revista de Buenos Aires, 2001.
- Castles, Stephen. Ethnicity and Globalization: From Migrant Worker to Transnational Citizen. London; Thousand Oaks Calif.: Sage Publications, 2000.
- . "Migration and Community Formation under Conditions of Globalization." International Migration Review 36, no. 4 (2002): 1143.
- Castro, Donald S. The Development and Politics of Argentine Immigration Policy, 1852-1914: To Govern Is to Populate. San Francisco: Mellen Research University Press, 1991.
- Cattaruzza, Alejandro Manuel. Historia de la Argentina 1916-1955. Buenos Aires: Siglo XXI Ed., 2009.
- . Los usos del pasado: la historia y la política argentinas en discusión, 1910-1945. Buenos Aires: Ed. Sudamericana, 2007.
- Cecchetto, Sergio. La biología contra la democracia: eugenesia, herencia y prejuicio en Argentina, 1880-1940. Mar del Plata Argentina: EUDEM, 2008.
- Centralbureau der Nationalliberalen Partei, ed. Die Kolonialpolitik seit der Reichstagsauflösung von 1906. Berlin: Buchh. d. Nationalliberalen Partei, 1909.
- Certeau, Michel de. The Practice of Everyday Life. Translated by Steven Rendall. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1984.
- Cervera, Manuel M. Colonización Argentina y Fundación de Esperanza. Esperanza, Provincia de Santa Fe, República Argentina: Municipalidad de Esperanza, 1906.
- Cervini, Analía, and Juan Kayser. Identidad estratégica: alternativas locales en mercados globales. Buenos Aires: Instituto Metropolitano de Diseño e Innovación, 2004.
- Ceva, Mariela. "De la exportación cerealera a la diversificación industrial. Las empresas Bunge y Born en Argentina (1884-1940)." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 22/23, no. 65 (2009): 81–98.
- Chakrabarty, Dipesh. Provincializing Europe: Postcolonial Thought and Historical Difference. Princeton N.J.: Princeton University Press, 2000.
- Chang, Kornel S. Pacific Connections: The Making of the U.S.-Canadian Borderlands. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2012.
- Chapman, William James Bushnell, and Nicol Stassen. Reminiscences. Including an Account of the Trek Boers into Angola and of Their Sojourn during the Forty-Eight Years They Struggled in That Country under Portuguese Rule. Pretoria: Protea Book House, 2010.

- Chartier, Roger. "La conscience de la globalité (commentaire)." Annales, Histoire, Sciences Sociales 56, no. 1 (2001): 119–23.
- Chase, Jennifer Lynn. "'We Are Not an Immigrant Nation': Race, Sexuality and Citizenship in the New Germany." Ph.D., University of California, Irvine, 2008.
- Chatzoudis, Georgios. "Von der Kolonie Südwestafrika zum Nationalstaat Namibia - das politische System seit 1949." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 258–73. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Chéradame, André. La colonisation et les colonies allemandes. Paris: Plon-Nourrit, 1905.
- Chickering, Roger. We Men Who Feel Most German: A Cultural Study of the Pan-German League, 1886-1914. Boston: Allen & Unwin, 1984.
- Choate, Mark I. Emigrant Nation: The Making of Italy Abroad. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 2008.
- Ciarlo, David M. Advertising Empire: Race and Visual Culture in Imperial Germany. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 2011.
- . "Consuming Race, Envisioning Empire: Colonialism and German Mass Culture, 1887-1914." Ph.D., University of Wisconsin, Madison, 2003.
- Citriniti, José. La Agricultura Nacional: Órgano de los intereses rurales. Buenos Aires, 1907.
- Claraz, Jorge. Diario de viaje de exploración al Chubut, 1865-1866. Edited by Rodolfo M. Casamiquela and Meinrado Hux. Buenos Aires: Ediciones Marymar, 1988.
- Cloos, Hans. Der Erongo; ein vulkanisches Massiv im Tafel, Gebirge des Hererolandes und seine Bedeutung für die Raumfrage plutonischer Massen. Berlin: Im Vertrieb bei der Geologischen Landesanstalt, 1919.
- . Geologie des Erongo im Hererolande (Geologische Beobachtungen in Südafrika, Teil II). Beiträge zur geologischen Erforschung der Deutschen Schutzgebiete. Berlin: Geol. Landesanst., 1911.
- Cohen, Deborah Anne. "Love and Money in the Informal Empire," 2016.
- Cohen, Robin. "Diasporas, the Nation-State, and Globalisation." In Global History and Migrations, edited by Wang Gungwu, 117–43. Boulder, Colo: Westview Press, 1997.
- . Global Diasporas. 2nd ed. London; New York: Routledge, 2008.
- Cohn, Emanuel. "Die deutsche Kolonisation in Afrika und ihre sanitäre Bedeutung." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 589–609.
- Colditz, Rudolf F. von. Aus den hohen Anden Süd-Amerikas: Vortrag gehalten am 5. März 1914 in der Aula der Kgl. Kriegsakademie zu Berlin. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 10. Berlin: Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband, 1914.
- . "Der Einfluß der Volksrassen auf die Entwicklung der Vereinigten Staaten von Nordamerika und der Argentinischen Republik." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 2:193–221. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914.

- . Die Aussichten für deutsches Grosskapital in Argentinien. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 3. Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912.
- . Im Reich des Kondor: Streifzüge durch die Wildnisse Südamerikas. Berlin: P. Parey, 1925.
- . Unter Gauchos und Siedlern in Argentinien. Berlin: Safari-verlag, 1928.
- Coleman, Simon, and Pauline Von Hellermann, eds. Multi-Sited Ethnography: Problems and Possibilities in the Translocation of Research Methods. New York: Routledge, 2011.
- Comaroff, Jean, and John L. Comaroff. Ethnicity, Inc. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2009.
- . Theory from the South: Or, How Euro-America Is Evolving toward Africa. Boulder, Colo.; London: Paradigm Publishers, 2012.
- Commercial Museum, Philadelphia. Meetings of the International Advisory Board: Opening of the Museum by President McKinley and Addresses Made at the Banquet. June First, Second, Third and Fourth, 1897. Philadelphia: Press of Avil Printing Co., 1897.
- Compañía Eldorado. Die Eldorado-Kolonien: Eldorado, Puerto Rico und Monte Carlo in dem argentinischen Territorium Misiones: die Kolonien für den deutschen Siedler. Buenos Aires: La Compañía, 1928.
- Compañía Eldorado. Leben und Treiben in Eldorado, Misiones-Argentinien. Buenos Aires: Compañía Eldorado, 1931.
- Condat, Vincent. “De la nécessité de la guerre contre l’Indien en Argentine.” In Passion de la guerre et guerre des passions dans les Etats-Unis d’Amérique, edited by Anne Garrait-Bourrier and Ineke Bockting, 271–86. Clermont-Ferrand: Presses Universitaires Blaise Pascal, 2008.
- Confino, Alon. “Collective Memory and Cultural History: Problems of Method.” The American Historical Review 102, no. 5 (1997): 1386.
- . The Nation as a Local Metaphor: Württemberg, Imperial Germany, and National Memory, 1871-1918. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1997.
- Congregación Evangélica Alemana en Buenos Aires. Congregación Evangélica Alemana en Buenos Aires: su historia, 1943-1993. Buenos Aires: Congregación Evangélica Alemana en Buenos Aires, 1993.
- . Deutsche Evangelische Gemeinde Buenos Aires: 1843 - 1968 [Informationsschrift aus Anlaß der 125. Jahrfeier]. Buenos Aires, 1968.
- . “Memoria de la Congregación Evangélica Alemana, Buenos Aires = Jahresbericht der Deutschen Evangelischen Gemeinde zu Buenos Aires, 1897-1964,” 1964.
- Conn, Steven. “An Epistemology for Empire: The Philadelphia Commercial Museum, 1893–1926.” Diplomatic History 22, no. 4 (2002): 533–63.
- Conrad, Christoph, and Sebastian Conrad, eds. Die Nation schreiben: Geschichtswissenschaft im internationalen Vergleich. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2002.
- Conrad, Sebastian. “Die Zivilisierung des ‘Selbst’: Japans koloniale Moderne.” In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 245–68. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.

- . “Double Marginalization: A Plea for a Transnational Perspective on German History.” In Comparative and Transnational History: Central European Approaches and New Perspectives, edited by Heinz-Gerhard Haupt and Jürgen Kocka, 52–76. New York: Berghahn Books, 2009.
- . German Colonialism: A Short History. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2012.
- . Globalisation and the Nation in Imperial Germany. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2010.
- . Globalisierung und Nation im Deutschen Kaiserreich. München: C.H. Beck, 2010.
- . “Globalisierungseffekte: Mobilität und Nation im Kaiserreich.” In Das Deutsche Kaiserreich in der Kontroverse, edited by Sven Oliver Müller and Cornelius Torp, 406–21. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2009.
- . “‘Here, the German Is Not Degenerating’: Brazil, Emigration and the Nation’s Fountain of Youth.” In Globalisation and the Nation in Imperial Germany, 275–333. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2010.
- . What Is Global History? Princeton, Oxford: Princeton University Press, 2016.
- Conrad, Sebastian, and Jürgen Osterhammel, eds. Das Kaiserreich transnational: Deutschland in der Welt 1871-1914. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2004.
- , eds. Das Kaiserreich transnational: Deutschland in der Welt 1871-1914. Second Edition. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2006.
- Conrad, Sebastian, and Dominic Sachsenmaier, eds. Competing Visions of World Order: Global Moments and Movements, 1880s-1930s. The Palgrave Series in Transnational History. New York: Palgrave, 2007.
- . “Introduction: Competing Visions of World Order: Global Moments and Movements, 1880s-1930s.” In Competing Visions of World Order Global Moments and Movements, 1880s-1930s, edited by Sebastian Conrad and Dominic Sachsenmaier, 1–25. The Palgrave Series in Transnational History. New York: Palgrave, 2007.
- Conradt, Ludwig. Erinnerungen aus zwanzigjährigem Händler- und Farmerleben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Edited by Thomas Keil. Göttingen: Klaus Hess, 2006.
- Consejo Agrario Nacional, República Argentina, ed. La colonización nacional en la República Argentina (1850-1975). Buenos Aires: Ministerio de Economía, Secretaría de Estado de Agricultura y Ganadería de la Nación, Consejo Agrario Nacional, 1977.
- Converse, Christel. The Rise and Fall of Nazi Influence Among the German Chileans. Washington: Georgetown University, 1993.
- Conzen, Kathleen Neils. “Phantom Landscapes of Colonization: Germans in the Making of a Pluralist America.” In The German-American Encounter: Conflict and Cooperation Between Two Cultures, 1800-2000, edited by Frank Trommler and Elliott Shore, 7–21. New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2001.
- Conzen, Kathleen Neils, Ewa Morawska, and Rudolph J Vecoli. “The Invention of Ethnicity: A Perspective from the U.S.A.” Journal of American Ethnic History 12, no. 1 (1992): 3–41.

- Cooper, Allan D. The Occupation of Namibia: Afrikanerdom's Attack on the British Empire. Lanham, Md.: University Press of America, 1991.
- Cooper, Frederick, and Ann Laura Stoler. "Between Metropole and Colony: Rethinking a Research Agenda." In Tensions of Empire: Colonial Cultures in a Bourgeois World, edited by Frederick Cooper and Ann Laura Stoler, 1–37. Berkeley Calif.: University of California Press, 1997.
- , eds. Tensions of Empire: Colonial Cultures in a Bourgeois World. Berkeley Calif.: University of California Press, 1997.
- Coppius, Adolf. Hamburgs Bedeutung auf dem Gebiete der deutschen Kolonialpolitik. Berlin: C. Heymanns Verlag, 1905.
- Cordell, Dennis D. The Human Tradition in Modern Africa. Lanham, Md.: Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, 2012.
- Cornevin, Robert. Geschichte der deutschen Kolonisation. Translated by Hans Jenny. Goslar: Hermann Hübener, 1974.
- Coronato, Fernando R. "Le rôle de l'élevage ovin dans la construction du territoire de la Patagonie." AgroParisTech, 2010.
- Cramer, Ada. Weiss oder Schwarz: Lehr- und Leidensjahre eines Farmers in Südwest im Lichte des Rassenhasses. Berlin: Deutscher Kolonial-Verlag, 1913.
- Cristoff, María Sonia. Acento extranjero: dieciocho relatos de viajeros en la Argentina. Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 2000.
- Cronon, William. Changes in the Land: Indians, Colonists, and the Ecology of New England. New York: Hill and Wang, 1983.
- . Uncommon Ground: Toward Reinventing Nature. New York: W.W. Norton & Co., 1995.
- Crosby, Alfred. Ecological Imperialism: The Biological Expansion of Europe, 900-1900. Cambridge [Cambridgeshire]; New York: Cambridge University Press, 1986.
- Crosby, Alfred W. The Columbian Exchange: Biological and Cultural Consequences of 1492. Westport, Conn.: Greenwood Press, 1972.
- Cuenca, Alvaro. La Colonia Británica de Montevideo y la Grand Guerra. Montevideo: Torre del Vigía Ed., 2006.
- Czaya, Eberhard. "Der deutsche Imperialismus in Süd- und Südwestafrika: ein Beispiel für Kontinuität und Elastizität der deutschen kolonialen Bestrebungen." Ph.D., Humboldt Universität zu Berlin, 1967.
- Czimmek, Ulrich. Deutsche Seepost Hamburg - Westafrika: Fahrpläne und Reisedaten der Woermann-Dampfer 1890-1914 mit einer Bewertung ihrer Seepostbelege. Schriften zur Deutschen Kolonialphilatelie und Kolonialgeschichte 2. Göttingen: Arbeitsgemeinschaft der Sammler deutsche Kolonialpostwertzeichen, 1994.
- Dabag, Mihran. "National-koloniale Konstruktionen in politischen Entwürfen des Deutschen Reichs um 1900." In Kolonialismus, edited by Mihran Dabag, Horst Gründer, and Uwe-Karsten Ketelsen, 19–66. München: Wilhelm Fink Verlag, 2004.
- Dabag, Mihran, Horst Gründer, and Uwe-Karsten Ketelsen, eds. Kolonialismus. München: Wilhelm Fink Verlag, 2004.

- Dahlmann, Dittmar. "Sibirien: Der Prozess der Eroberung des Subkontinents und die russische Zivilisierungsmission im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert." In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 55–71. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- . "Zwischen Europa und Asien: Russischer Imperialismus im 19. Jahrhundert." In Imperialistische Kontinuität und nationale Ungeduld im 19. Jahrhundert, edited by Wolfgang Reinhard, 50–86. Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, 1991.
- Dammann, Ernst. "Die deutsche Mission in den ehemaligen deutschen Kolonien zwischen den beiden Weltkriegen." In Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, edited by Klaus Bade, 289–305. Steiner, 1982.
- Daniels, Ed. "From Mercantilism to Imperialism: The Argentine Case, Part 1." NACLA Newsletter 4, no. 4 (1970): 1–10.
- Dannert, Eduard. "Geschichtlicher Überblick unserer kolonialen Entwicklung." In Deutscher Wille, 2–8. Bücherrei Deutscher Wille 3. Berlin: Deutscher Wille [O. Franke], 1927.
- Darch, John H. Missionary Imperialists?: Missionaries, Government and the Growth of the British Empire in the Tropics, 1860-1885. Milton Keynes: Paternoster, 2009.
- Darwin, Charles. Reise eines Naturforschers um die Welt. Translated by J. Victor Carus. Stuttgart: E. Schweizerbart'sche Verlagshandlung (E. Koch), 1875.
- Darwin, John. The Empire Project: The Rise and Fall of the British World-System, 1830-1970. Cambridge, UK; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2009.
- . "The Weakest Link: Britain in South Africa." In The Empire Project: The Rise and Fall of the British World-System, 1830-1970, 217–54. Cambridge, UK; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2009.
- Das Ausland: Wochenschrift für Länder- u. Völkerkunde*. Cotta, 1853.
- Das Reichsgesetz über das Auswanderungswesen vom 9. Juni 1897, nebst Ausführungsverordnungen*. Second edition. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1907.
- Das überseeische Deutschland: Die deutschen Kolonien in Wort u. Bild*. Stuttgart, Berlin, Leipzig: Union Deutsche Verlagsgesellschaft, 1903.
- Davis, John R., Stefan Manz, and Margrit Schulte Beerbühl, eds. Transnational Networks: German Migrants in the British Empire, 1670-1914. Leiden: Brill, 2012.
- Daymond, Margaret J., Dorothy Driver, Sheila Meintjes, Leloba Molema, Chiedza Musengezi, Margie Orford, and Nobantu Rasebotsa, eds. Women Writing Africa: The Southern Region. New York: Feminist Press at CUNY, 2003.
- De Groof, Bart, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, eds. En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Decharme, Pierre. Compagnies et sociétés coloniales allemandes. Paris: Masson et cie, 1903.
- . La Colonisation Allemande. Bibliothèque de Bibliographies Critiques. Paris: Albert Fontemoing, 1900.
- Décultot, Elisabeth, Michel Espagne, and Jacques Lerider, eds. Dictionnaire du monde germanique. Paris: Bayard, 2007.

- Dedering, Tilman. Hate the Old and Follow the New: Khoekhoe and Missionaries in Early Nineteenth-Century Namibia. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1997.
- . “The Ferreira Raid of 1906: Boers, Britons and Germans in Southern Africa in the Aftermath of the South African War.” Journal of Southern African Studies 26, no. 1 (2000): 43–59.
- Degler, Carl N. “The Impact of Darwinism on Religion and Science in America and Europe During the Nineteenth Century.” In Bridging the Atlantic: The Question of American Exceptionalism in Perspective, edited by Elisabeth Glaser and Hermann Wellenreuther, 83–102. Cambridge England; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2002.
- Dehn, Paul. Von deutscher Kolonial- und Weltpolitik. Second Edition. Berlin: Allgemeiner Verein für Deutsche Litteratur, 1907.
- Dehne, Phillip A. On the Far Western Front: Britain's First World War in South America. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2009.
- Dejung, Christof, and Niels P. Petersson, eds. The Foundations of Worldwide Economic Integration: Power, Institutions, and Global Markets, 1850–1930. New York: Cambridge University Press, 2013.
- Delanghe, Henri. “Victor Delhez y el arte del grabado en Argentina.” In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 193–200. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Delbrück, Hans. El sistema militar alemán comparado con el inglés, el francés y el ruso. Lo que es Alemania 2. Buenos Aires: Unión de librerías alemanas, 1916.
- Demesmay, Claire, and Hans Stark, eds. Qui sont les Allemands? Villeneuve d'Ascq: Presses universitaires du Septentrion, 2006.
- Demhardt, Imre. Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft 1888-1918: ein Beitrag zur Organisationsgeschichte der deutschen Kolonialbewegung. Wiesbaden: Selbstverlag, 2002.
- . Deutsche Kolonialgrenzen in Afrika: historisch-geographische Untersuchungen ausgewählter Grenzräume von Deutsch-Südwestafrika und Deutsch-Ostafrika. Hildesheim; New York: G. Olms, 1995.
- . Die Entschleierung Afrikas: deutsche Kartenbeiträge von August Petermann bis zum Kolonialkartographischen Institut. Gotha: Klett-Perthes, 2000.
- . “Namibia definitiva.” Journal of the Namibia Scientific Society, 1991.
- . “Tourismusgeographische Entwicklungen in der Western Cape Province (Republik Südafrika) seit dem Ende der Apartheid.” Habilitation, Technische Universität Darmstadt, 2002.
- . “Von der Schutzgewalt zur Kolonialgewalt: Die Schutzverträge und die rechtliche Entstehung des kolonialen Staatsraums.” In Föderative Raumstrukturen und wirtschaftliche Entwicklungen in Namibia, edited by Heinrich Lamping and Uwe Jäschke, 17–58. Frankfurt am Main: Institut für Wirtschafts- und Sozialgeographie der Johann-Wolfgang-Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main, 1993.
- Denham, Scott D., Irene Kacandes, and Jonathan Petropoulos, eds. A User's Guide to German Cultural Studies. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1997.

- Dennis, David Brandon. "Mariners and Masculinities: Gendering Work, Leisure, and Nation in the German-Atlantic Trade, 1884-1914." Ph.D., The Ohio State University, 2011.
- Denzer, Jörg. Die Konquista der Augsburger Welser-Gesellschaft in Südamerika (1528-1556): historische Rekonstruktion, Historiografie und lokale Erinnerungskultur in Kolumbien und Venezuela. München: C.H. Beck, 2005.
- Dernburg, Bernhard. Die Vorbedingungen für erfolgreiche koloniale und überseeische Betätigung. Berlin: W. Borngräber, 1912.
- . Die weltwirtschaftlichen Interessen und die internationale Organisation der Völker. Weltwirtschaft und Weltfriede,; Heft 2; Berlin, Liebheit & Thiesen, 1917.
- . Kapital und Staatsaufsicht, eine finanzpolitische Studie. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler, 1911.
- . Koloniale Erziehung: Vortrag. München: Knorr & Hirth, 1907.
- . Koloniale Finanzprobleme: Vortrag. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1907.
- . Koloniale Lehrjahre: Vortrag gehalten in Stuttgart am 23. Januar 1907. Stuttgart, Berlin, Leipzig: Union Deutsche Verlagsgesellschaft, 1907.
- . Südwestafrikanische Eindrücke. Industrielle Fortschritte in den Kolonien. Zwei Vorträge. Berlin: Mittler, 1909.
- . Zielpunkte des deutschen Kolonialwesens: Zwei Vorträge. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1907.
- Deutsche Akademische Vereinigung. Veröffentlichungen der Deutschen Akademischen Vereinigung zu Buenos Aires, 1899-1904. Buenos Aires: G. van Woerden & Cia., 1904.
- "Deutsche Auswanderer-Zeitung□: Wochenschr. für d. wirtschaftl. u. kulturellen Interessen d. dt. Auswanderer, d. Auslandsdeutschen u. d. Deutschen im Auslande; Zeitschr. zur Förderung d. dt. Außenhandelsbeziehungen.," 1919.
- Deutsche Evangelische La Plata-Synode = Sínoo Evangélico Alemán del Río de la Plata. Religionsbuch in deutscher und spanischer Sprache = Manual de la doctrina cristiana en alemán y castellano. Buenos Aires: Deutsche Evangelische La Plata-Synode = Sínoo Evangélico Alemán del Río de la Plata, 1913.
- Deutsche Handelskammer in Buenos Aires, ed. Cámara de Comercio Argentino-Alemana: 1916-1966. Deutsch-Argentinische Handelskammer. Buenos Aires: Parada Obiol Artes Gráf, 1966.
- , ed. Einwirkungen des Weltkrieges auf die Volkswirtschaft Argentinens: Studie der Deutschen Handelskammer in Buenos Aires. Buenos Aires: Impr. "Germania," 1920.
- Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, ed. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft. Vol. 1. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1899.
- , ed. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft. Vol. 2. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1900.
- , ed. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft. Vol. 3. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1901.
- , ed. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft. Vol. 4. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1902.

- , ed. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft. Vol. 5. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1903.
- , ed. “Deutsche Zeitungen in unseren Kolonien.” Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 84.
- , ed. “Die Geschichte der deutschen Colonial-Gesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika.” Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 385–88.
- Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft, and Central-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer, eds. Argentinien. Berlin: Rudolf Mosse, 1902.
- Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Central-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer, Chile*. Berlin: Rudolf Mosse, 1902.
- Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Central-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer, Rio Grande do Sul*. Berlin: Rudolf Mosse, 1903.
- Deutsche Kolonialzeitung*, 1905.
- Deutsche Kolonialzeitung*, 1906.
- Deutsche Kultur in der Welt: unabhängige Zeitschrift für geistige, politische und wirtschaftliche Ziele deutscher Arbeit im In- und Auslande*. Vol. 1. K. F. Köhler, 1915.
- Deutsche Missions-Konferenz von Süd-Afrika, ed. Bericht über die dritte deutsche Missions-Konferenz von Süd-Afrika: gehalten in Kapstadt, vom 25.-27. Oktober 1910. Empangweni, South Africa: Buchdruckerei der Hermannsbürger Mission, 1911.
- Deutsche Zeitung: Organ der germanischen Bevölkerung am Rio de la Plata*. Buenos Aires: Ruhland & Reinhardt, 1936.
- Deutscher Klub, ed. Club Alemán en Buenos Aires: su sesquicentenario. Un recorrido por sus 150 años de vida. 1. ed. Buenos Aires: Club Alemán, 2005.
- Deutscher Kolonialkongress, ed. Festschrift zum Deutschen Kolonialkongreß. Berlin, am 10. und 11. Oktober 1902. Leipzig: Bibliographisches Institut, 1902.
- , ed. Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- , ed. Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1910 zu Berlin, am 6., 7. und 8. Oktober 1910. Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1910.
- , ed. Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- , ed. In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- Deutscher La-Plata-Kalender für 1873*. Buenos Aires: Ruhland & Reinhardt, 1873.
- Deutscher Lehrerverein Buenos Aires, and E. C. Schmidt, eds. Zeitschrift für argentinische Volkskunde, 1911.
- Deutscher Wille*. Berlin: Deutscher Wille [O. Franke], 1927.
- Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein. “Bericht des Deutschen Wissenschaftlichen Verein zu Buenos Aires.” Bericht des Deutschen Wissenschaftlichen Verein zu Buenos Aires, 1911.

- . Satzungen des Deutschen Wissenschaftlichen Vereins zu Buenos Aires: angenommen in der ausserordentlichen Hauptversammlung vom 5. November 1913. Buenos Aires: Deutscher Wissenschaftliche Verein, 1922.
- Deutsches Kolonial-Handbuch nach amtlichen Quellen bearbeitet*. Vol. 12. Berlin: Hermann Paetel, 1912.
- Deutsches Kolonial-Handbuch nach amtlichen Quellen bearbeitet*. Vol. 13. Berlin: Hermann Paetel, 1913.
- Deutsches Seemannsheim. Deutsches Seemannsheim: Hogar Alemán para Marineros. Buenos Aires: [s.n.], 1919.
- Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Amtlicher Ratgeber fuer Auswanderer*. Second Edition. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1908.
- Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Amtlicher Ratgeber für Auswanderer*. Berlin: Reimer, 1910.
- Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Zentral-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer*. Berlin: Zentralauskunftsstelle für Auswanderer, 1910.
- Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Zentral-Auskunftsstelle für Auswanderer*. Selbstverl., 1913.
- Devoto, Fernando. Historia de la inmigración en la Argentina. Buenos Aires: Ed. Sudamericana, 2003.
- . “Poblar, civilizar, nacionalizar: el tema de la inmigración en la cultura argentina.” In Argentina: un país de inmigrantes. Buenos Aires: Dirección Nacional de Migraciones, 1998.
- Devoto, Fernando, and Eduardo Jose Miguez. Asociacionismo, trabajo e identidad étnica: los italianos en América Latina en una perspectiva comparada. Buenos Aires: CEMLA-CSER-IEHS, 1992.
- Dibelius, Wilhelm, and Gustav Lenz, eds. Handbuch des Deutschtums im Auslande. Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1904.
- Die deutschen Interessen in Argentinien, Chile, Bolivien and Peru: Eine der wichtigsten Fragen für Deutschlands Zukunft. Von einem alten Praktiker*. Berlin: Süd-und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1911.
- Die Feier der Grundsteinlegung zur Capelle der Deutsch-Evangelischen Gemeinde in Buenos Ayres am 18. October 1851, nebst einigen Notizen ueber die Gemeinde selbst*. Buenos Ayres: Ymprenta de la Gaceta Mercantil, 1851.
- Die Katholischen Missionen, illustrierte Monatschrift des Vereins der Glaubensverbreitung in den Ländern deutscher Zunge mit den Zentralen Aachen, München, Wien und Teplitz-Schönau*, 1890.
- Die Sonderbotschaft der Argentinischen Republik in Deutschland 25. Mai bis Juni 1913*. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 9. Berlin: Deutsch-Argentinischer Zentralverband, 1914.
- Dierks, Klaus. Chronologie der namibischen Geschichte: von der vorgeschichtlichen Zeit zur Unabhängigkeit. 1st ed. Windhoek: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2000.

- Dietrich, Anette. "Rassenkonstruktionen im deutschen Kolonialismus: 'Weiße Weiblichkeiten' in der kolonialen Rassenpolitik." In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 176–87. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- . Weisse Weiblichkeiten: Konstruktionen von "Rasse" und Geschlecht im deutschen Kolonialismus. Bielefeld: transcript Verlag, 2007.
- Diggs, Cerue K. "Brazil After Humboldt: Triangular Perceptions and the Colonial Gaze in Nineteenth-Century German Travel Narratives." Ph.D., University of Maryland, 2008.
- Dinter-Windhoek, Kurt. "Eine Wanderung nach dem Omatako (2680 m) in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 604–8.
- Dirlik, Arif. "Is There History after Eurocentrism? Globalism, Postcolonialism, and the Disavowal of History." Cultural Critique, 1999, 1–36.
- Dittmer, R. "Reise des Forstreferendars Wiedeberg nach Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 308–10.
- Djenderedjian, Julio. "Expansion agrícola y colonización en Entre Ríos, 1850-1890." Desarrollo económico 47 (2008): 577–606.
- . Gringos en las pampas: inmigrantes y colonos en el campo argentino. Nudos de la historia argentina. Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 2008.
- . La agricultura pampeana en la primera mitad del siglo XIX. Historia del capitalismo agrario pampeano 4. Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Editores Argentina, 2008.
- . "La colonización agrícola en Argentina, 1850-1900: problemas y desafíos de un complejo proceso de cambio productivo en Santa Fe y Entre Ríos." América Latina en la historia económica 15 (2008): 127–57.
- . "Modernización e innovación. Reconsiderando el papel y las particularidades de los fenómenos de cambio técnico en la agricultura pampeana entre 1840 y 1900." Encuentros Latinoamericanos 4, no. 10/11 (2010).
- . "Un aire de familia? Producción ganadera y sociedad en perspectiva comparada: las fronteras rioplatenses a inicios del siglo XIX." Jahrbuch für Geschichte Lateinamerikas 41 (2004): 247–73.
- Djenderedjian, Julio, Sílcora Bearzotti, and Juan Luis Martirén. Expansión agrícola y colonización en la segunda mitad del siglo XIX. Vol. 2. 2 vols. Historia del capitalismo agrario pampeano 6. Buenos Aires: Teseo; Editorial Universidad de Belgrano, 2010.
- . Expansión agrícola y colonización en la segunda mitad del siglo XIX. Vol. 1. 2 vols. Historia del capitalismo agrario pampeano 6. Buenos Aires: Teseo; Editorial Universidad de Belgrano, 2010.
- Djenderedjian, Julio, and Juan Luis Martirén. "La distribución de la riqueza rural entre tradición y modernidad. Los casos de la colonia Esperanza y el distrito de Paraná durante la década de 1860." Población & Sociedad 19, no. 2 (2012): 125–54.
- Djenderedjian, Julio, and Roberto Schmit. "Avances y límites de la expansión agraria argentina: Crecimiento económico y distribución de la riqueza rural en Entre Ríos (1860-1892)." IHE Investigaciones de Historia Económica 4, no. 11 (2008): 75–106.

- Dobrizhoffer, Martin. Geschichte der Abiponer einer berittenen und kriegerischen Nation in Paraquay: bereichert mit einer Menge Beobachtungen über die wilden Völkerschaften, Städte, Flüsse, vierfüßigen Thiere, Amphibien, Insekten, merkwürdigsten Schlangen, Fische, Vögel, Bäume, Pflanzen und andere Eigenschaften dieser Provinz. Translated by A. Kreil. Wien: J. Edler von Kurzbek, 1783.
- . Geschichte der Abiponer einer berittenen und kriegerischen Nation in Paraquay: bereichert mit einer Menge Beobachtungen über die wilden Völkerschaften, Städte, Flüsse, vierfüßigen Thiere, Amphibien, Insekten, merkwürdigsten Schlangen, Fische, Vögel, Bäume, Pflanzen und andere Eigenschaften dieser Provinz. Translated by A. Kreil. Vol. 3. Wien: J. Edler von Kurzbek, 1784.
- Domínguez, Germán. African and Afrikaner Presence in Argentina. Durban: American Studies Association of South Africa, 1994.
- Dominguez Koch, Santos A. “Un linaje de los Koch de la Argentina.” Deutsche in Argentinien. Buenos Aires, 1996.
- Donghi Halperin, Tulio. Historia contemporanea de America Latina. Buenos Aires: Alianza Editorial, 2007.
- Douki, Caroline, and Philippe Minard. “Histoire globale, histoires connectées: un changement d’échelle historiographique ?” Revue d’histoire moderne et contemporaine 5, no. 54–4bis (2007): 7–21.
- Dove, Karl. Afrikanische Wirtschaftsstudien: Die natürlichen Grundlagen des Wirtschaftslebens in Südafrika: Die Wasserkräfte Afrikas. Braunschweig: G. Westermann, 1917.
- . Das Klima des aussertropischen Südafrika: mit Berücksichtigung der geographischen und wirtschaftlichen Beziehungen nach klimatischen Provinzen dargestellt. Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht’s Verlag, 1888.
- . Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Berlin: W. Süsserott, 1903.
- . Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Ergebnisse einer wissenschaftlichen Reise im südlichen Damaralande. Petermanns Mitteilungen. Ergänzungsband XXVI. Gotha: J. Perthes, 1896.
- . “Meteorologische Beobachtungen aus den deutschen Schutzgebieten.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 23–32.
- . Südwestafrika. Die Deutschen Kolonien 4. Berlin, Leipzig: G. J. Göschen, 1913.
- . Südwest-Afrika: Kriegs und Friedensbilder aus der ersten deutschen Kolonie. Second Edition. Berlin: Allgemeiner Verein für Deutsche Litteratur, 1896.
- Drechsler, Horst. Südwestafrika unter deutscher Kolonialherrschaft: der Kampf der Herero und Nama gegen den deutschen Imperialismus (1884-1915). Studien zur Geschichte Asiens, Afrikas und Lateinamerikas. Berlin: Akad.-Verl., 1966.
- Dreher, Martin. Kirche und Deutschtum in der Entwicklung der Evangelischen Kirche Lutherischen Bekenntnisses in Brasilien. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht, 1978.
- Dreyer, Ronald F. The Mind of Official Imperialism: British and Cape Government Perceptions of German Rule in Namibia from the Helgoland-Zanzibar Treaty to the Kruger Telegram (1890-1896). Essen: Hobbing, 1987.

- Du Toit, Brian. Colonia Boer: An Afrikaner Settlement in Chubut, Argentina. Lewiston: E. Mellen Press, 1995.
- Duara, Prasenjit. "Historicizing National Identity, or Who Imagines What and When." In Becoming National: A Reader, edited by Geoff Eley and Ronald Grigor Suny, 151–77. New York: Oxford University Press, 1996.
- . "Transnationalism and the Challenge to National Histories." In Rethinking American History in a Global Age, edited by Thomas Bender, 25–46. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2002.
- Duchhardt, Heinz. Herausforderung Südwest?: die deutschen Kulturwissenschaften und das "Schutzgebiet" Deutsch-Südwestafrika. 1. Stuttgart: Steiner, 2013.
- Dudek, Peter. Vom Schulmeister zum Menschen: Max Tepp - ein jugendbewegter Reformpädagoge, Schriftsteller und Verleger. Bad Heilbrunn: Julius Klinkhardt, 2014.
- Duerloo, Luc. "Perón y la diplomacia belga." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 87–92. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Dufoix, Stéphane. Diasporas. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2008.
- Duignan, Peter. The Rulers of German Africa, 1884-1914. Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 1979.
- Dukes, Jack R., and Joachim Remak, eds. Another Germany: A Reconsideration of the Imperial Era. Westview Special Studies in West European Politics and Society; Variation: Westview Special Studies in West European Politics and Society. Boulder and London: Westview Press, 1988.
- Dünel, Julia. "Johann Bernhard Hasenclever & Söhne." Ph.D., Friedrich Schiller Universität Jena, 2005.
- Dunker, Carl. Kolonien und Kolonisation. Berlin: R. Gaertners Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1898.
- Duran-Merk, Alma. "European Migrants as 'Ambassadors of Modernization'? The Case of the Germans in Yucatán During the Henequén Boom." presented at the 54th International Congress of Americanists, Wien, 2012.
- Dussel, Enrique. 1492, el encubrimiento del otro: hacia el origen del "mito de la modernidad." Santa Fe de Bogota: Anthropos, 1992.
- . The Invention of the Americas: Eclipse of "the Other" and the Myth of Modernity. New York: Continuum, 1995.
- Düttmann, F. "Kurze Reiseerinnerungen aus dem Nordwesten Deutsch-Südwestafrikas und dem südlichen Angola." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 2 (1901 1900): 612–25.
- Duve, Thomas. El contexto alemán del pensamiento de Ernesto Quesada. Buenos Aires: Inst. de Investigaciones de Historia del Derecho, 2002.
- , ed. El tratado argentino-alemán de amistad, comercio y navegación de 1857: Estudios histórico-jurídicos. Buenos Aires: Inst. de Investigaciones de Historia del Derecho, 2007.
- . "Friedrich von Gülich, el 'Zollverein' y el Tratado de Amistad, Comercio y Navegación con la Confederación Argentina." In El tratado argentino-alemán de amistad, comercio y

- navegación de 1857: Estudios histórico-jurídicos*, edited by Thomas Duve, 107–46. Buenos Aires: Inst. de Investigaciones de Historia del Derecho, 2007.
- Ebel, Arnold. Das Dritte Reich und Argentinien: die diplomatischen Beziehungen unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Handelspolitik (1933-1939). Köln: Böhlau, 1971.
- Ebelot, Alfred. La Pampa: Costumbres argentinas. Buenos Aires: Joseph Escary, 1890.
- . La Pampa: Costumbres argentinas. Edited by María Sáenz Quesada. Buenos Aires: taurus, 2001.
- Eberhardt, Martin. “Die deutsche Siedlergemeinschaft in Namibia.” In Deutsche evangelische Kirche im kolonialen südlichen Afrika: die Rolle der Auslandsarbeit von den Anfängen bis in die 1920er Jahre, edited by Hanns Lessing, Julia Besten, Tilman Dederling, Christian Hohmann, and Lize Kriel, 211–24. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, 2011.
- . Zwischen Nationalsozialismus und Apartheid: die deutsche Bevölkerungsgruppe Südwestafrikas 1915-1965. Münster: LIT Verlag, 2007.
- Ebers-Haffstrom, Winfried. “Deutscher kirchlicher Aufbau im südlichen Afrika.” Deutsche Diaspora. Neue Folge der Beihefte “Die evangelische Diaspora” 2 (1934): 2–10.
- Ebner, Else. Meine erste Pad in Südwest: Keetmanshoop - Kub, 1912 [Manuskript]. [Basel]: [Basler Afrika Biographien], 1988.
- Eckenbrecher, Margarethe von. Africa: What It Gave Me, What It Took from Me: Remembrances from My Life as a German Settler in South West Africa. Translated by David P. Crandall, Hans-Wilhelm Kelling, and Paul E. Kerry. Bethlehem, PA: Lehigh University Press, 2015.
- . “Padleben in Südwestafrika.” In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Kriegs- und Friedensbilder: Selbsterlebnisse, edited by W. Weicher, 1–20. Leipzig: W. Weicher, 1907.
- . Was Afrika mir gab und nahm: Erlebnisse einer deutschen Ansiedlerfrau in Südwestafrika. Berlin: Mittler, 1908.
- . Was Afrika mir gab und nahm: Erlebnisse einer deutschen Frau in Südwestafrika 1902-1936. Seventh and Expanded. Berlin: E.S. Mittler & Sohn, 1937.
- Eckert, Andreas. “Bringing the ‘Black Atlantic’ into Global History: The Project of Pan-Africanism.” In Competing Visions of World Order Global Moments and Movements, 1880s-1930s, edited by Sebastian Conrad and Dominic Sachsenmaier, 237–57. The Palgrave Series in Transnational History. New York: Palgrave, 2007.
- . “Germany and Africa in the Late Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: An Entangled History?” In Comparative and Transnational History: Central European Approaches and New Perspectives, edited by Heinz-Gerhard Haupt and Jürgen Kocka, 226–46. New York: Berghahn Books, 2009.
- . Kolonialismus: Globalisierung und Kolonialismus, der amerikanische Doppelkontinent und die Karibik, Asien, der Nahe Osten und Afrika, die Prozesse der Dekolonisation. Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuchverlag, 2006.
- Eckl, Andreas. “Grundzüge einer feministischen Missionsgeschichtsschreibung: Missionarsgattinnen, Diakonissen und Missionsschwestern in der deutschen kolonialen Frauenmission.” In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 132–45. Berlin: Links, 2009.

- . “‘Je weniger man an Macht hat, so sicherer soll man Negern gegenüber auftreten.’ Koloniale Begegnungen im Norden Deutsch-Südwestafrikas.” In Die (koloniale) Begegnung: AfrikanerInnen in Deutschland 1880-1945, Deutsche in Afrika 1880-1918, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Reinhard Klein-Arendt, 65–83. Frankfurt am Main; New York: Lang, 2003.
- Eckl, Andreas E., Georg Hillebrecht, and Franz Epp. “‘S’ist ein übles Land hier’: zur Historiographie eines umstrittenen Kolonialkrieges; Tagebuchaufzeichnungen aus dem Herero-Krieg in Deutsch-Südwestafrika 1904 von Georg Hillebrecht und Franz Ritter von Epp. 22. Köln: Köppe, 2005.
- Eheberg, Karl Theodor von. Die deutsche Auswanderung. Heidelberg: Winter, 1885.
- Eick, Simone, ed. Nach Buenos Aires!: deutsche Auswanderer und Flüchtlinge im 20. Jahrhundert. Bremerhaven: Deutsches Auswandererhaus, 2008.
- Eidt, Robert C. Pioneer Settlement in Northeast Argentina. University of Wisconsin Press, 1971.
- Eigler, Friederike, and Jens Kugele, eds. “Heimat”: At the Intersection of Memory and Space. Göttingen: Walter de Gruyter, 2012.
- Eisenstein, Richard (Freiherr von und zu). Reise nach Panama, Peru, Chile mit Feuerland, Argentinien, Paraguay, Uruguay und Brasilien: Tagebuch mit Erörterungen, um zu überseeischen Reisen und Unternehmungen anzuregen. Wien: K. Gerolds Sohn, 1906.
- Eisinger, Emil. Im Damaraland und Kaokofeld: Erinnerungen an Südwest-Afrika. Konkordia, 1913.
- Ejikeme, Anene. Culture and Customs of Namibia. Culture and Customs of Africa. Santa Barbara, California: Greenwood, 2011.
- El desarrollo económico de la República Argentina en los últimos cincuenta años*. Buenos Aires: Mercatali, 1920.
- El Suizo-Argentino: Il Svizzero-Argentino. Le Suisse-Argentin. Der Schweizer-Argentinier*. A. Trüb., 1913.
- Elazar, Daniel Judah, and Peter Medding. Jewish Communities in Frontier Societies: Argentina, Australia, and South Africa. New York: Holmes and Meier, 1983.
- Eley, Geoff. A Crooked Line: From Cultural History to the History of Society. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2005.
- . “Imperial Imaginary, Colonial Effect: Writing the Colony and the Metropole Together.” In Race, Nation and Empire: Making Histories, 1750 to the Present, edited by Catherine Hall and Keith McClelland, 217–36. Manchester; New York: Manchester University Press, 2010.
- . Society, Culture, and the State in Germany, 1870-1930. Ann Arbor Mich: University of Michigan Press, 1996.
- . “Theory and the Kaiserreich - Problems with Culture: German History after the Linguistic Turn.” Central European History 31, no. 3 (1998): 197–227.
- Elflein, Ada M. Geschichten aus Argentinien. Buenos Aires: Tjarks & Company, 1911.
- Elkins, Caroline, and Susan Pedersen, eds. Settler Colonialism in the Twentieth Century: Projects, Practices, Legacies. New York: Routledge, 2005.

- Ellis, Delancey M. New York at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition St. Louis, 1904: Report of the New York State Commission, 1907.
- Elsner, Erich. Chronik der deutschen Kolonie Rosarios. Buenos Aires? [s.n.], 1932.
- Eltzschig, Georg, ed. Des deutschen Buches Wert und Wirkung für das Ausland-Deutschtum: Eine Denkschrift, 1928. Bremen: Halem Export- und Verlangsbuchhandlung A.-G., 1928.
- Endlich, R. "Winke für die Besiedelung Deutsch-Südwestafrikas." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 249–56.
- Engel, Lothar. "'... und dass wir Pfarrer ausgesprochene Träger des Deutschtums sind': Zur Geschichte der deutschsprachigen evangelischen Gemeinden in Namibia." In Deutsche evangelische Kirche im kolonialen südlichen Afrika: die Rolle der Auslandsarbeit von den Anfängen bis in die 1920er Jahre, edited by Hanns Lessing, Julia Besten, Tilman Dederling, Christian Hohmann, and Lize Kriel, 225–54. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, 2011.
- . "Die Rheinische Missionsgesellschaft und die deutsche Kolonialherrschaft in Südwestafrika 1884-1915." In Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, edited by Klaus Bade, 142–64. Steiner, 1982.
- . "Die Stellung der Rheinischen Missionsgesellschaft zu den politischen und gesellschaftlichen Verhältnissen Südwestafrikas und ihr Beitrag zur dortigen kirchlichen Entwicklung bis zum Nama-Herero-Aufstand 1904-1907." Universität Hamburg, 1972.
- . Kolonialismus und Nationalismus im deutschen Protestantismus in Namibia 1907 bis 1945: Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen evangelischen Mission und Kirche im ehemaligen Kolonial- und Mandatsgebiet Südwestafrika. Studien zur interkulturellen Geschichte des Christentums 7. Bern: Lang, 1976.
- Engel, Ulf. Die Afrikapolitik der Bundesrepublik Deutschland 1949-1999: Rollen und Identitäten. Münster: Lit, 2000.
- Engombe, Lucia. Kind Nr. 95: Meine Deutsch-Afrikanische Odyssee. First edition. Berlin: Ullstein, 2004.
- Enseñanza de Alemán en los países del Mercosur. Una colaboración al plurilingüismo en el sistema educativo*. Buenos Aires: Goethe-Institut Buenos Aires, 1998.
- Enz, Héctor María. Museo Social Argentino: espíritu, obra y personalidad de sus fundadores. Buenos Aires: Ediciones del Museo Social Argentino, 2011.
- Epp, Jovita. Auf den Boulevards der Pampa; Roman. München: Biederstein Verlag, 1970.
- . Die argentinische Heirat: Roman. München: Biederstein Verl., 1960.
- . Die Frau des Fremden, Novelle. Buenos Aires: Südamerika-Verlag, 1951.
- . Herederos sin historia. Translated by Susana Spiegler. Buenos Aires: Emecé, 1979.
- . Im Banne der Pampa. Buenos Aires: Goethe Buchhandlung, 1944.
- . Santa Maria der guten Lüfte: Roman. München: R. Piper, 1978.
- Erausquín, Estela. La construcción del Otro: identidad e inmigración en la historia argentina. Université Paris 8, 2005.

- Erckert, F. C. "Die wirtschaftlichen Interessen Deutschlands in Guatemala." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 225-; 269-.
- Eriksen, Tore Linné, and Richard Moorsom. The Political Economy of Namibia: An Annotated Critical Bibliography. Nordic Africa Institute, 1989.
- Eriksen, Wolfgang. Kolonisation und Tourismus in Ostpatagonien. Ein Beitrag zum Problem kulturgeographischer Entwicklungsprozesse am Rande der Ökumene. Bonn: Dümmler in Komm., 1970.
- Erklärung Der Hochschullehrer Des Deutschen Reiches* □: Berlin 23 Okt. 1914 = Manifiesto de Los Catedráticos de Universidades e Institutos Técnicos de Imperio Alemán. [Berlin: Klokow], 1914.
- Eschwege, Wilhelm Ludwig von. Journal von Brasilien, oder vermischte Nachrichten aus Brasilien, auf wissenschaftlichen Reisen gesammelt. Vol. 2. Neue Bibliothek der wichtigsten Reisebeschreibungen zur Erweiterung der Erd- und Völkerkunde ... Weimar: Im Verlage des Landes-Industrie-Comptairs, 1818.
- . Journal von Brasilien, oder vermischte Nachrichten aus Brasilien, auf wissenschaftlichen Reisen gesammelt. Vol. 1. Neue Bibliothek der wichtigsten Reisebeschreibungen zur Erweiterung der Erd- und Völkerkunde ... Weimar: Im Verlage des Landes-Industrie-Comptairs, 1818.
- Eschweiler, Gabriele. Geschichten vom Ende der Welt: Patagonien und Feuerland in der Weltliteratur. Zürich: Edition 8, 2009.
- Escolar, Diego, and Julio Esteban Vezub. "¿Quién mató a Millaman □? Venganzas y guerra de ocupación nacional del Neuquén, 1882-3." Nuevo Mundo Mundos Nuevos. Nouveaux mondes mondes nouveaux - Novo Mundo Mundos Novos - New world New worlds, 2013. <http://nuevomundo.revues.org/65744>.
- Espagne, Michel, and Hans-Jürgen Lüsebrink, eds. Transferts de savoirs sur l'Afrique. Hommes et sociétés. Paris: Éditions Karthala, 2015.
- Esterhuysen, J. H. South West Africa, 1880-1894: The Establishment of German Authority in South West Africa. Cape Town: C. Struik, 1968.
- Etkind, Alexander. Internal Colonization: Russia's Imperial Experience. Cambridge UK; Malden, MA: Polity, 2011.
- Ette, Ottmar. "daß es einem leid tut, wie er aufgehört hat, deutsch zu sein': Alexander von Humboldt, Preußen und Amerika." In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 31–57. Münster: Lit, 2004.
- . "Est-ce que l'on sait où l'on va? Dimensionen, Orte und Bewegungsmuster des Reiseberichts." In Die Wiederentdeckung Lateinamerikas: die Erfahrung des Subkontinents in Reiseberichten des 19. Jahrhunderts, edited by Walther L. Bernecker, Gertrud Krömer, and Kristina Birn, 29–77. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1997.
- Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt für Deutsch-Südwestafrika*. Swakopmund: Swakopmunder Buchhandlung, 1914.

- Evangelisches Gemeindeblatt für die La Plata-Staaten*. Vol. 13. Buenos Aires: Druckerei der La Plata Synode, 1907.
- Evrard, Antoine. “Los diplomáticos belgas frente a la política argentina del período de entreguerras.” In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 83–85. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Ezeh, Mary-Noëlle, and U. Okonkwo. Our Women Our Strength: Issues in African Women History and Gender Studies. Lagos Nigeria: Grace Anasiudu Press, 2009.
- Fabri, Friedrich. Angra Pequena und Südwestafrika. Edited by Alexander Frhr von Danckelmann. Deutsche Kolonialbestrebungen. Elberfeld: Friderichs, 1884.
- . Bedarf Deutschland der Colonien?: Eine politisch-ökonomische Betrachtung. Gotha: F.A. Perthes, 1879.
- . Fünf Jahre deutscher Kolonialpolitik: Rück- und Ausblicke. Gotha: F.A. Perthes, 1889.
- Fabri, Johann Ernst. Magazin für die Geographie, Staatenkunde und Geschichte. Raspe, 1797.
- Falkenhausen, Helene Nitze von. Ansiedlerschicksale: Elf Jahre in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 1893-1904. Third Edition. Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- . Bei den Hereros: Erzählung a. d. Aufständen Südwestafrikas. Berlin-Tempelhof: Verlag der Adler-Bibliothek, 1914.
- . “Ein Tag auf der Farm. Aus dem Brief einer Farmersfrau.” In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 33–34. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- Falkenhayn, Erich. El comando supremo del ejército alemán, 1914-1916 y sus decisiones esenciales. Buenos Aires: Ferrari Hnos., 1920.
- Fallace, Magdalena, ed. Alemanes: Alemanes en la arquitectura argentina. 1. ed. Buenos Aires: Emedé, 2011.
- Fanon, Frantz. Les damnés de la terre. Paris: François Maspero, 1961.
- . The Wretched of the Earth. Translated by Constance Farrington. New York: Grove Press, 1963.
- Fariña, Richard A., Sergio F. Vizcaíno, and Gerry De Iuliis. Megafauna: Giant Beasts of Pleistocene South America. Bloomington, Indiana: Indiana University Press, 2013.
- Fasse, Gisela, ed. “My Story - Your Story - Our History”: A History Project in Namibia at Deutsche Höhere Privatschule (DHPS), Windhoek. “Meine Geschichte, deine Geschichte, unsere Geschichte”: Ein Geschichtsprojekt in Namibia an der Deutschen Höheren Privateschule (DHPS), Windhoek. Windhoek, Namibia: Klaus Hess Publishers, 2006.
- Faulhaber, H. “Deutschtum in Südbrasilien.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 435–38.
- Fehleisen de Ibáñez, Elsa. La colonización germana en el Río de Las Conchas: primera colonia agrícola del período de la confederación. Paraná, Entre Ríos, Argentina: Tráfico de Arte, 2004.
- Feierstein, Ricardo. Los mejores relatos con gauchos judíos. Buenos Aires: Ameghino Editora, 1998.

- Feldman, Gerald D. German Imperialism, 1914-1918: The Development of a Historical Debate. New York: Wiley, 1972.
- Fellmer, Max. "Aufforstungsprämien für Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 379–80.
- . "Einrichtung eines großen Viehtransportweges durch Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902).
- Fenske, Hans. "Ungeduldige Zuschauer: Die Deutschen und die europäische Expansion, 1815-1880." In Imperialistische Kontinuität und nationale Ungeduld im 19. Jahrhundert, edited by Wolfgang Reinhard, 87–123. Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, 1991.
- Fernández, María Inés. Las inversiones francesas en la Argentina, 1880-1920. Buenos Aires: Editorial Biblos, 1999.
- Fernández Pérez, Paloma, and Andrea Lluch, eds. Evolution of Family Business: Continuity and Change in Latin America and Spain. Cheltenham, Glos: Edward Elgar Publishing, 2016.
- Ferrari Etcheberry, Alberto. "¿Hubo influencia alemana en la formación argentina?" In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 33–51. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- Ferrari, Gustavo, and Ezequiel Gallo, eds. La Argentina del ochenta al centenario. Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 1980.
- Ferrari, Roberto A. "La Sociedad Científica Alemana en Buenos Aires." In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 173–91. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- Ferreira, Eduardo de Sousa. Portugiesischer Kolonialismus zwischen Südafrika und Europa. Freiburg i. Br.: Aktion Dritte Welt, 1972.
- Ferro, Gabo. Degenerados, anormales y delincuentes. Gestos entre ciencia, política y representaciones en el caso argentino. Buenos Aires: Marea, 2010.
- Fest, Wilfried. Dictionary of German History, 1806-1945. New York: St. Martin's Press, 1978.
- Feuerstein, Alfred. Wir fliehen nach Deutschland: tragische Schicksale Alfred Feuersteins in Deutsch-Südwestafrika und Angola. Die Kolonien rufen!: Sonderreihe des Reichskolonialbundes 10. Reutlingen: Enßlin & Laiblin, 1940.
- Fichte, Johann. Addresses to the German Nation. Edited by Gregory Moore. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2008.
- Fick, A. "Ist die Welt vergeben?" In Deutsche Kolonialzeitung, edited by Richard Lesser, 1:51–56, 75–80. Frankfurt am Main: Verlag des Deutschen Kolonialvereins, 1884.
- Fiebig-von Hase, Ragnhild. Lateinamerika als Konfliktherd der deutsch-amerikanischen Beziehungen, 1890-1903: vom Beginn der Panamerikapolitik bis zur Venezuelakrise von 1902/03. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1986.
- Fiedler, Matthias. Zwischen Abenteuer, Wissenschaft und Kolonialismus: der deutsche Afrikadiskurs im 18. und 19. Jahrhundert. Köln, Weimar: Böhlau Verlag, 2005.
- Finkelstein, Kerstin. "Argentinien." In Ausgewandert: wie Deutsche in aller Welt leben, 1. Aufl., 30–46. Berlin: Links, 2005.

- . Ausgewandert: wie Deutsche in aller Welt leben. 1. Aufl. Berlin: Links, 2005.
- . “Namibia.” In Ausgewandert: wie Deutsche in aller Welt leben, First edition., 188–92. Berlin: Links, 2005.
- Fischer, Adolf. “Südwestler Phantasie.” In Afrika spricht zu Dir: Selbsterlebnisse deutscher Kolonialpioniere, edited by Paul Ritter, 11–55. Mühlhausen, Thüringen: Bergwald-Verlag Walter Paul, 1938.
- Fischer, Peter Wilhelm. Der Einfluss des Auslandskapitals auf die wirtschaftliche Entwicklung Argentiniens, 1880-1964. [Göttingen]: [O. Schwartz], 1970.
- Fischer, Thomas. “Ausländische ‘Eliten’ und ‘Entwicklung nach außen.’” In Wirkungen von Migrationen auf aufnehmende Gesellschaften, edited by Hans Hopfinger and H. Kopp, 25–58. Neustadt an der Aisch: Degener, 1996.
- . “Deutsche Kaufleute in Lateinamerika - 1830 bis 1930.” In Deutsche in der Fremde: Assimilation, Abgrenzung, Integration, edited by Torsten Kühlmann and Bernd Müller-Jacquier, 163–90. St. Ingbert: Röhrig Universitätsverlag, 2007.
- Fischer-Buder, Ingrid, ed. 100 Jahre Deutsche Schule Kapstadt. Tamboerskloof: Deutscher Schulverein Kapstadt, 1983.
- Fischer-Tiné, Harald. “Englands interne Zivilisierungsmission. Arbeitshäuser für Europäer im kolonialen Indien (ca. 1860-1914).” In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 169–99. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- . “Global Civil Society and the Forces of Empire: The Salvation Army, British Imperialism, and the ‘Prehistory’ of NGOs (ca. 1880-1920).” In Competing Visions of World Order Global Moments and Movements, 1880s-1930s, edited by Sebastian Conrad and Dominic Sachsenmaier, 29–67. The Palgrave Series in Transnational History. New York: Palgrave, 2007.
- Fischer-Treuenfeld, R. von. “Die deutsche Kolonie San Bernadino in Paraguay.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 5 (1903): 95–96.
- . “Die Entdeckung des Chaco und Boliviens. (Mit einer Karte).” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904).
- . “Kolonie ‘Nueva Germania’ in Paraguay.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 273–77.
- . “Viehzucht in Paraguay.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 227–33.
- Fishburn, Evelyn, and Eduardo L. Ortiz, eds. Science and the Creative Imagination in Latin America. London: Institute for the Study of the Americas, 2005.
- Fitzner, Rudolf, ed. Deutsches Kolonial-Handbuch nach amtlichen Quellen bearbeitet. Berlin: Paetel, 1904.
- Fitzpatrick, Matthew. “Imperialism from Below: Informal Empire and the Private Sector in Nineteenth-Century Germany.” Australian Journal of Politics & History 54, no. 3 (2008): 358–72.

- . “Informal Empire and Private Sector Imperialism, 1849-1884.” In Liberal Imperialism in Germany, 75–100. New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2008.
- , ed. Liberal Imperialism in Europe. New York, NY: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012.
- . Liberal Imperialism in Germany. New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2008.
- . “Narrating Empire: ‘Die Gartenlaube’ and Germany’s Nineteenth-Century Liberal Expansionism.” German Studies Review 30, no. 1 (2007): 97–120.
- . “The Threat of Woolly-Haired Grandchildren: Race, the Colonial Family and German Nationalism.” The History of the Family 14, no. 4 (2009): 356–68.
- Fitzpatrick, Matthew, and Peter Monteath. “Expansions and Contractions: The Internal and External Frontiers of Europe.” Australian Journal of Politics & History 56, no. 3 (2010): 329–35.
- Fitzpatrick, Matthew P. Purging the Empire: Mass Expulsions in Germany, 1871-1914. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2015.
- Flachs, Maria Cristina Vera de. Emigraciones transoceánicas. Los alemanes en América. 1850 - 1914. El caso argentino. Madrid: Servicio de Publicaciones de la Universidad Complutense, 2005.
- . Las colectividades extranjeras en Córdoba en el siglo XIX: identidad e integración. Córdoba, Argentina: Junta Provincial de Historia de Córdoba, 1993.
- Fletcher, Lea. “La profesionalización de la escritora y de sus protagonistas. Argentina, 1900-1919.” Revista Iberoamericana LXX, no. 206 (2004): 213–24.
- Flint, W., and J. D. F. Gilchrist, eds. Science in South Africa: A Handbook and Review. Prepared under the Auspices of the South African Governments and the South African Association for the Advancement of Science. Cape Town, Pretoria, Bulawayo: T. Maskew Miller, 1905.
- Flores, Fabián Claudio. “Redes sociales y espacios religiosos: de la colonia Ruso-Alemana a la villa Adventista (Puiggari, Entre Rios, 1870-1920).” Estudios migratorios latinoamericanos 16, no. 49 (2001): 623–40.
- Flores, Fabián Claudio, and Paula Seiguer, eds. Experiencias plurales de lo sagrado: la diversidad religiosa argentina. Buenos Aires: Imago Mundi Ediciones, 2014.
- Foellbach, Sabine, Katharina Rottenaicher, and Alexander Thomas. Beruflich in Argentinien: Trainingsprogramm für Manager, Fach- und Führungskräfte. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2002.
- Forbes, Ian Lawrence Duff. German Commercial Relations with South America, 1890-1914. University of Adelaide, 1975.
- . “German Informal Imperialism in South America before 1914.” The Economic History Review 31, no. 3 (1978): 384–398.
- Forrest, Frederick August. Immigration as a Factor of Progress in Argentina, 1536-1853. Stanford Univ., 1948.
- Förster, Bernhard. Deutsche Colonien in dem oberen Laplata-Gebiete mit besonderer Berücksichtigung von Paraguay: Ergebnisse eingehender Prüfungen, praktischer Arbeiten und Reisen, 1883-1885. Second Edition. Leipzig: Gustav Fock, 1886.

- . Dr. Bernhard Förster's Kolonie Neu-Germania in Paraguay. Edited by Eli Förster. Berlin: Commissions-Verl. der Actien-Gesellschaft "Pionier," 1891.
- Förster, Larissa. "From 'General Field Marshal' to 'Miss Genocide.'" Journal of Material Culture 13, no. 2 (2008): 175–94.
- . Postkoloniale Erinnerungslandschaften wie Deutsche und Herero in Namibia des Kriegs von 1904 gedenken. Frankfurt, M.: Campus-Verlag, 2010.
- . "Zwischen Waterberg und Okakarara: namibische Erinnerungslandschaften." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 164–79. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Förster, Larissa, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, eds. Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Förster, Stig. "Die Kontinuität der Flexibilität: Strategie und Praxis des britischen Imperialismus um 1800." In Imperialistische Kontinuität und nationale Ungeduld im 19. Jahrhundert, edited by Wolfgang Reinhard, 31–49. Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, 1991.
- Foucault, Michel. Les mots et les choses: une archéologie des sciences humaines. Paris: Gallimard, 1966.
- . The Order of Things: An Archaeology of the Human Sciences. New York: Pantheon Books, 1971.
- François, Kurt von. Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: Geschichte der Kolonisation bis zum Ausbruch des Krieges mit Witbooi, April 1893. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1899.
- Frank, Michael. Die letzte Bastion: Nazis in Argentinien. Hamburg: Rütten & Loening, 1962.
- Frank, Susi K. "'Innere Kolonisation' und Frontier-Mythos," 2004.
- Franke, Otto. Der Deutsche Gedanke und der englische Imperialismus: Ein Vortrag. Hamburg: Verlag von C. Bensen, 1918.
- Freimut, Ernst. Gedanken am Wege: Reiseplaudereien aus Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Berlin: Deutscher Kolonial-Verl., 1909.
- Fren, Wilibald. Gebt uns Kolonien!: ein socialpolitischer Mahnruf aus der deutschen Jugend. Chemnitz: Verlag von Ernst Schmeitzner, 1928.
- Frenssen, Gustav. "Peter Moors Eisenbahnfahrt von Swakopmund nach Windhuk im Jahre 1904." In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 16–19. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- . Peter Moors Fahrt nach Südwest, ein Feldzugsbericht. Berlin: G. Grote'sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1906.
- . Peter Moor's Journey to Southwest Africa: A Narrative of the German Campaign. Translated by Margaret Ward Ward. London; Boston; New York: Archibald Constable & Co.; Houghton Mifflin, 1908.
- Frers, Emilio. Banco colonizador de la Nación Argentina: Proyecto de ley presentado al congreso nacional. Buenos Aires: Coop. de artes gráficas, 1912.
- . El banco agrícola. Proyecto de ley presentado á la Camara de disputados de la nación en la sesion de agosto 8 de 1913, 1915.

- . El progreso agrícola de la nación y la Sociedad Rural: Reseña Histórica. Buenos Aires: P. Gadola, 1916.
- . El prohibicionismo y la política comercial argentina cartas á un hombre de estado. Buenos Aires: Impr. de J. Peuser, 1902.
- . En la administración pública. Vol. V. Buenos Aires: Gadola, 1920.
- . En la administración pública. Vol. VI. Buenos Aires: Gadola, 1921.
- Frers, Emilio, Heriberto Gibson, and Enrique Lynch Arribálzaga. Plan de Organizacion de la Direccion General de Tierras y Agricultura: Proyecto de Presupuesto: Memoria. Buenos Aires: Imprenta, Litografía y Encuadernación, Mariano Moreno, 1893.
- Freyberg, Hermann. Verrat in Der Wüste: Ein Erlebnis Aus Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Edited by Karl Mühlmeister. 112. Gütersloh: Bertelsmann, 1943.
- Friedman, John T. Imagining The Post-Apartheid State: An Ethnographic Account of Namibia. Berghahn Books, 2013.
- Friedman, Max. “Beyond ‘Voting with Their Feet’: Toward a Conceptual History of ‘America’ in European Migrant Sending Communities, 1860s to 1914.” Journal of Social History 40, no. 3 (2007): 557–75.
- Friedmann, Artur. Arbeitermangel und Auswanderung: Referat erstattet dem Zentralausschuß des “Bund Österreichischer Industrieller.” Wien: Bund Österreichischer Industrieller, 1907.
- Friedmann, Germán. “Alemanes antinazis e identidad alemana en la Argentina. La conformación de una identidad colectiva en un grupo minoritario.” Studi Emigrazione 46, no. 174 (2009): 447–67.
- . Alemanes antinazis en la Argentina. 1a. ed. Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Editores, 2010.
- . “Alemania y los alemanes en la prensa alemana antinazi de Buenos Aires.” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 123–42.
- Friedrich, Claus. “La fase inicial del Deutscher Volksbund für Argentinien (Unión Germanica) (1916-1923).” In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 71–89. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- Friedrich, Julius. Kolonialpolitik als Wissenschaft: ein neues Forschungsgebiet der Rechtsphilosophie. Berlin, Leipzig: Dr. W. Rothschild, 1909.
- Friedrich, Karl. Die La Plata Länder unter besonderer Berücksichtigung ihrer wirtschaftlichen Verhältnisse, Viehzucht und Kolonisation und ihrer Bedeutung für Deutsche Kapitalisten und Auswanderer. Hamburg: L. Friederichsen, 1884.
- Friedrichs, Elisabeth. Die deutschsprachigen Schriftstellerinnen des 18. und 19. Jahrhunderts: ein Lexikon. Stuttgart: Metzler, 1981.
- Friedrichsmeyer, Sara, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop, eds. The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998.
- Fröbel, Julius. Aus Amerika: Erfahrungen, Reisen und Studien. Vol. 1. 2 vols. Leipzig: J. J. Weber, 1857.
- . Aus Amerika: Erfahrungen, Reisen und Studien. Vol. 2. 2 vols. Leipzig: J. J. Weber, 1858.

- . Die deutsche Auswanderung und ihre culturhistorische Bedeutung. Fünfzehn Briefe an den Herausgeber der Allgemeinen Auswanderungs-zeitung. Leipzig: F. Wagner, 1858.
- . Die Gesichtspunkte und Aufgaben der Politik. Eine Streitschrift nach verschiedenen Richtungen. Leipzig: Verlag von Duncker & Humblot, 1878.
- . Ein Lebenslauf: Aufzeichnungen, Erinnerungen und Bekenntnisse. Vol. 1. 2 vols. Stuttgart: Verlag der J.G. Cotta'schen Buchhandlung, 1890.
- . Ein Lebenslauf: Aufzeichnungen, Erinnerungen und Bekenntnisse. Vol. 2. 2 vols. Stuttgart: Verlag der J.G. Cotta'schen Buchhandlung, 1891.
- . Geographisch-statistische Beschreibung der argentinischen Republik, oder die Freistaaten vom Rio de la Plata, des Freistaats vom Uruguay und des Staats Paraguay. Vol. 4. Vollständiges Handbuch der neuesten Erdbeschreibung 20. Weimar: Verlag des Geographischen Instituts, 1832.
- . Seven Years' Travel in Central America, Northern Mexico, and the Far West of the United States. London: Richard Bentley, 1859.
- Frobenius, Else. "Koloniale Frauenarbeit." Die Frau, no. 25 (1917): 295–98.
- Fröhlich, Michael. Imperialismus: Deutsche Kolonial- und Weltpolitik, 1880-1914. München: Deutscher Taschenbuch Verlag, 1994.
- Fruhinsholz, Adolphe. Mes souvenirs patriotiques: 1870-1918. Berger-Levrault, 1932.
- Frutos, Arturo R. La Colonización Argentina. Buenos Aires: Imprenta de E. S. Arbol y M. Pereyra Acosta, 1902.
- Fuchs, V. Ein Siedlungsvorschlag für Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1907.
- Fuente, D. G. de la, ed. Tierras, colonias y agricultura: recopilación de leyes, decretos y otras disposiciones nacionales. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1898.
- Fuhrmann, Malte. Der Traum vom deutschen Orient: zwei deutsche Kolonien im Osmanischen Reich 1851-1918. Campus Verlag, 2006.
- Fuhrmann, Wolfgang. Imperial Projections: Screening the German Colonies. New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2015.
- Fuller, Janet. "Language and Identity in the German Diaspora." In German Diasporic Experiences: Identity, Migration, and Loss, edited by Mathias Schulze, James Skidmore, David John, Grit Liebscher, and Sebastian Siebel-Achenbach. Waterloo Ont.: Wilfrid Laurier University Press, 2008.
- Fundación Nuestra Historia. Primer Congreso de Historia de la Confederación Argentina (1831-1852). Buenos Aires: Fundación Nuestra Historia Instituto Argentino de Estudios Históricos, 1976.
- Funke, Alfred. Die Besiedlung des östlichen Südamerika, mit besonderer Berücksichtigung des Deutschtums. Vol. 10. Angewandte Geographie. Hefte zur Verbreitung geographischer Kenntnisse in ihrer Beziehung zum Kultur- und Wirtschaftsleben 1. Halle a. S.: Gebauer-Schwetschke Druckerei und Verlag, 1903.
- . "Südamerika." In Die Weltwirtschaft: Ein Jahr- und Lesebuch, edited by Ernst von Halle, 1:265–76. Leipzig, Berlin: B.G. Teubner, 1906.

- . “Über die kulturellen Interessen und Aufgaben Deutschlands in Südbrasilien.” In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 479–93. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- Gabaccia, Donna. Italy's Many Diasporas. Seattle: University of Washington Press, 2000.
- Gabaccia, Donna, and Dirk Hoerder, eds. Connecting Seas and Connected Ocean Rims: Indian, Atlantic, and Pacific Oceans and China Seas Migrations from the 1830s to the 1930s. Leiden; Boston: Brill, 2011.
- Gädicke, Fritz. Die deutsche Kolonie am See Llanquihue (Chile). Valparaíso: Impr. “Germania,” 1918.
- Gaebler, Ernst Wilhelm Johann. Deutsche Auswanderung und Kolonisation: Erster Rechenschaftsbericht des Berliner Vereins zur Centralisation Deutscher Auswanderung und Kolonisation, erstattet im Auftrage des Verwaltungsraths. Berlin: F. L. Schneider & Company, 1850.
- Gaertner, Franz von. Kampf um Raum und Brot: deutsches Soldatentum in Südwestafrika. Berlin: Süßerott Verl., 1941.
- Gallagher, John, and Ronald Robinson. “The Imperialism of Free Trade.” The Economic History Review 6, no. 1 (1953): 1–15.
- Gallero, María Cecilia. Con la patria a cuestas: la inmigración alemana-brasileña en la Colonia Puerto Rico, Misiones. Buenos Aires: Araucaria Editora, 2009.
- Gallo, Ezequiel. La Pampa gringa: la colonización agrícola en Santa Fe (1870-1895). Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 1983.
- Gallo, Klaus. The Struggle for an Enlightened Republic: Buenos Aires and Rivadavia. London: Institute for the Study of the Americas, 2006.
- Galton, Francis. Narrative of an Explorer in Tropical South Africa: Being an Account of a Visit to Damaraland in 1851. Ward, Lock, 1889.
- Gálvez, Lucía. Delfina Bunge: Diarios íntimos de una época brillante. Buenos Aires: Editorial Planeta Argentina, 2000.
- . Historias de inmigración: testimonios de pasión, amor y arraigo en tierra argentina (1850 - 1950). 1. ed., 5. reimpr. Buenos Aires [u.a.]: Grupo Ed. Norma, 2004.
- Gann, Lewis H., and Peter Duignan. Burden of Empire: An Appraisal of Western Colonialism in Africa South of the Sahara. Hoover Press, 1967.
- Gans, H. “Symbolic Ethnicity and Symbolic Religiosity: Towards a Comparison of Ethnic and Religious Acculturation.” Ethnic and Racial Studies. 17, no. 4 (1994): 577.
- García Canclini, Néstor. Hybrid Cultures: Strategies for Entering and Leaving Modernity. Minneapolis Minn.: University of Minnesota Press, 1989.
- . L'Amérique latine au XXIe siècle. Sainte-Foy, Québec: Presses de l'Université Laval, 2007.
- . Reabrir espacios públicos: políticas culturales y ciudadanía. First Edition. México D.F.: Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana; Plaza y Valdés, 2004.
- García Fanlo, Luis. Genealogía de la argentinidad. Buenos Aires: Gran Aldea Editores, GAE, 2010.

- . “Sociología positivista y educación patriótica en el discurso de Carlos Octavio Bunge.” Sociedad 26 (2007): 211–31.
- Garff, Dorothea, ed. Investitionshandbuch Argentinien 2006: Ratgeber für Markteinstieg und Expansion. Buenos Aires: Deutsche-Argentinische Industrie- und Handelskammer, 2006.
- Garnica de Bertona, Claudia. “Auslandsdeutsche Literatur in Argentinien,” n.d.
- . “Literatura en alemán escrita en la Argentina: los comienzos.” In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 193–209. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- Gast, Paul, ed. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts. Vol. 1. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913.
- , ed. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts. Vol. 2. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914.
- , ed. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts. Vol. 3. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915.
- , ed. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts. Vol. 6. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1918.
- , ed. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts. Vol. 9. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1922.
- Gaudichaud, Franck. Le volcan latino-américain: gauches, mouvements sociaux et néolibéralisme. Paris: Textuel, 2008.
- Geary, Patrick J. “‘Teutonische’ Rassenideologie im Amerika des 19. Jahrhunderts.” In Zur Geschichte der Gleichung ‘germanisch-deutsch’: Sprache und Namen, Geschichte und Institutionen, edited by Heinrich Beck, Dieter Geuenich, Heiko Steuer, and Dietrich Hakelberg, 343–56. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2004.
- Geertz, Clifford. After the Fact: Two Countries, Four Decades, One Anthropologist. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 2009.
- . Local Knowledge: Further Essays in Interpretive Anthropology. New York: Basic Books, 2008.
- . The Interpretation of Cultures: Selected Essays. New York: Basic Books, 1973.
- . “Thick Description: Toward an Interpretive Theory of Culture.” In The Interpretation of Cultures: Selected Essays, 3–30. New York: Basic Books, 1973.
- . Works and Lives: The Anthropologist as Author. Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 1988.
- Geigel, Martin. Ökonomie der Bevölkerungsbewegung mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Deutschen Staaten. München: Buchholz und Werner, 1881.
- Geisler, Sebastian. “‘Coolbox’ mit ‘Nam-Flavour’ - Der Rapper Ees.” Die Zeit, June 11, 2007, sec. Weblog.
- Geissler, Christopher. “Reinvigorating the Reich: African Slaves, German Saviours and Imperial Identity in the Deutsche Kolonialzeitung, 1888–1889.” Journal of European Studies 40, no. 1 (2010): 39–57.

- Geli, Patricio. "Imágenes de la Argentina en la prensa socialista belga (1889-1930)." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 63–70. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Gellner, Ernest. Nations and Nationalism. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1983.
- Gemeaux, Christine de, ed. Empires et colonies: l'Allemagne, du Saint-Empire au deuil postcolonial. Clermond-Ferrand: Presses Univ. Blaise Pascal, 2010.
- Gentz. "Der Hererokrieg und die Besiedelungsfrage in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 517–21.
- . "Die Rechtliche Stellung der Bastards in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902).
- George, David M. Historia de la Iglesia Anglicana de la Argentina, 1825-1994. Buenos Aires: D. George, 1999.
- Gerbing, Stefan. Afrodeutscher Aktivismus: Interventionen von Kolonisierten am Wendepunkt der Dekolonisierung Deutschlands 1919. Zivilisationen & Geschichte 6. Frankfurt am Main: Lang, 2010.
- Gerchunoff, Alberto. Los Gauchos Judíos. La Plata, 1910.
- Gerding. "Die Bahn Swakopmund-Windhoek." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 381–416.
- Germania Schule. Lehrpläne: Germania-Schule. Buenos Aires: Herpig & Stoeveken, 1904.
- Germania-Schule (Realschule) zu Buenos Aires. Ordnung der Schlussprüfung der Prima ...: Germania-Schule (Realschule) zu Buenos Aires. Buenos Aires: Fessel & Mengen, 1908.
- Germany. Die Kolonialgesetzgebung des deutschen Reichs, mit dem Gesetze über die Konsulargerichtsbarkeit. Hannover: Helwing'sche Buchhandlung, 1896.
- Germond, Carine, and Henning Tuerk, eds. A History of Franco-German Relations in Europe: From "Hereditary Enemies" to Partners. First Edition. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008.
- . "Old Foes and New Friends: Historical Perspectives on Franco-German Relations since Napoleon." In A History of Franco-German Relations in Europe: From "Hereditary Enemies" to Partners, edited by Carine Germond and Henning Tuerk, First Edition., 1–10. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008.
- Gerstäcker, Friedrich. Achtzehn Monate in Süd-Amerika und dessen deutschen Colonien. Vol. 1. Leipzig: Hermann Costenoble, 1863.
- . Aus Nord- und Südamerika: Erzählungen. Prag; Leipzig: Kath. Gerzabek; Heinrich Hübner, 1855.
- . Aus zwei Welttheilen: Gesammelte Erzählungen. Vol. 2. Leipzig: Arnold, 1854.
- . Aus zwei Welttheilen: Gesammelte Erzählungen. Vol. 1. Leipzig: Arnold, 1854.
- . Gerstäcker's Travels: Rio de Janeiro - Buenos Ayres - Ride Through the Pampas - Winter Journey Across the Cordilleras - Chili - Valparaiso - California and the Gold Fields. Translation of Reisen: Südamerika. London: T. Nelson, 1854.

- . Reisen: Südamerika. Stuttgart, Tübingen: J.G. Cotta'scher Verlag, 1853.
- Gerstenberger, Katharina. Truth to Tell: German Women's Autobiographies and Turn-of-the-Century Culture. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2001.
- Gerstenhauer, M. R. "Burenansiedlungen und Burenpolitik in Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 40–47.
- . "Zur Geschichte der Besiedlung von Deutsch-Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 5 (1903): 203-224; 272-288; 299-308.
- Gerstmann, Adolf. Der Südwester und Der Knopf: Zwei Schwarzwaldgeschichten. Reutlingen: Enßlin und Laiblin, 1915.
- Gestrich, Andreas, and Margrit Schulte Beerbühl, eds. Cosmopolitan Networks in Commerce and Society, 1660-1914. London: German Historical Institute London, 2011.
- Getz, Trevor R., and Heather Streets-Salter. Modern Imperialism and Colonialism: A Global Perspective. Boston: Prentice Hall, 2011.
- Geulen, Christian. Wahlverwandte: Rassendiskurs und Nationalismus im späten 19. Jahrhundert. 1st ed. Hamburg: Hamburger Edition, 2004.
- Gewald, Jan-Bart. "Flags, Funerals and Fanfares: Herero and Missionary Contestations of the Acceptable, 1900-1940." Journal of African Cultural Studies 15, no. 1 (2002): 105–17.
- . Herero Heroes: A Socio-Political History of the Herero of Namibia, 1890-1923. Athens, Ohio: Ohio State University Press, 1999.
- . "Ovita ovia Zürn - 'Zürns Krieg.'" In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 78–91. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- . "The Herero Genocide: German Unity, Settlers, Soldiers, and Ideas." In Die (Koloniale) Begegnung: AfrikanerInnen in Deutschland 1880-1945, Deutsche in Afrika 1880-1918, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Reinhard Klein-Arendt, 109–27. Frankfurt am Main; New York: Lang, 2003.
- Geyer, Martin H., Johannes Paulmann, and German Historical Institute in London. The Mechanics of Internationalism: Culture, Society, and Politics from the 1840s to the First World War. Oxford University Press, 2001.
- Geyer, Michael, and Charles Bright. "World History in a Global Age." American Historical Review 100, no. 4 (1995): 1034–60.
- Giesebrecht, Franz. Die deutsche Kolonie Hansa in Südbrasilien: Reiseerlebnisse aus dem Staate Santa Catharina. 5. Aufl. Berlin: Hermann Paetel, 1899.
- Gilbert, Jorge. Empresario y empresa en la Argentina moderna: el Grupo Tornquist, 1873-1930. Victoria Pcia. de Buenos Aires: Universidad de San Andrés, 2002.
- . "Ernesto Tornquist, entre los negocios y las políticas económicas." Revista de Instituciones, Ideas y Mercados, no. 58 (May 2013): 47–78.
- Gillham, Nicholas Wright. A Life of Sir Francis Galton: From African Exploration to the Birth of Eugenics. Oxford, New York: Oxford University Press, 2001.

- Gilroy, Paul. Against Race: Imagining Political Culture Beyond the Color Line. Harvard University Press, 2000.
- Girola, Carlos D. Investigación Agrícola en la República Argentina: Preliminares: Notas y observaciones sobre los trabajos efectuados hasta febrero de 1904. Buenos Aires: Compañía Sud-Americana de Billetes de Banco, 1904.
- Glaser, Elisabeth, and Hermann Wellenreuther, eds. Bridging the Atlantic: The Question of American Exceptionalism in Perspective. Cambridge England; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2002.
- Gliech, Oliver. "Argentinier in Deutschland (1900-1945)." In Argentinien und das Dritte Reich: mediale und reale Präsenz, Ideologietransfer, Folgewirkungen, edited by Holger Meding and Georg Ismar, 39–56. Berlin: Wissenschaftlicher Verlag Berlin, 2008.
- Glümer, von. Vortrag, bestimmt für die öffentliche Sitzung des Berliner Vereins zur Centralisation deutscher Auswanderung und Colonisation am 5. März 1851: Über deutsche Auswanderung nach Venezuela. Schneeberg: Dr. v. C. M. Gärtner, 1851.
- Goebel, Michael. Argentina's Partisan Past: Nationalism and the Politics of History. Liverpool [England]: Liverpool University Press, 2011.
- Gohard-Radenkovic, Aline. Récits de vie, récits de langues et mobilités: nouveaux territoires intimes, nouveaux passages vers l'altérité. Paris: l'Harmattan, 2009.
- Goldberger, Ludwig Max. Das Land der unbegrenzten Möglichkeiten: Beobachtungen über das Wirtschaftsleben der Vereinigten Staaten von Amerika. Seventh Edition. Berlin, Leipzig: F. Fontane & Company, 1905.
- Goldblatt, I. History of South-West Africa, from the Beginning of the Nineteenth Century. Cape Town: Juta, 1971.
- Goldman, Noemí, ed. El pensamiento político de los hombres de Mayo. 1a. ed. Buenos Aires: El Ateneo, 2009.
- , ed. Lenguaje y revolución: conceptos políticos clave en el Río de la Plata, 1780-1850. Buenos Aires: Prometeo, 2008.
- Goldman, Noemí, and Ricardo Donato Salvatore, eds. Caudillismos rioplatenses: nuevas miradas a un viejo problema. [Buenos Aires, Argentina]: Eudeba, Facultad de Filosofía y Letras, Universidad de Buenos Aires, 1998.
- Goldstein, Leon. Alemania en la Argentina. Buenos Aires: Zago, 1997.
- Golf, Arthur. Ackerbau in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: das Trockenfarmen und seine Anwendung in D.S.W.A. Koloniale Abhandlungen 50. Berlin: Süsserott, 1911.
- Gollwitzer, Heinz. Die Standesherrn. Die politische und gesellschaftliche Stellung der Mediatisierten 1815-1918. Göttingen, 1964.
- Goltz, Rosemarie / von der, ed. Actas del simposio: 18 al 20 de agosto de 1992; 100o aniversario de la muerte de Hermann Burmeister (Stralsund 1807 - Buenos Aires 1892). Buenos Aires: Embajada de la Republica Federal de Alemania, 1993.
- Gomez Langenheim, Antonio. Colonización. Buenos Aires: Martín Biedma, 1895.
- . Colonización en la República Argentina. Buenos Aires: M. Biedma é hijo, 1906.

- Gómez, Leila. Darwinism in Argentina: Major Texts (1845-1909). Lanham, Md.: Bucknell University Press; Co-published with Rowman & Littlefield Pub. Group, 2012.
- Gondra, Carlos. Colonizacion. Buenos Aires: Carlos Condra, 1928.
- Goñi, Uki. Perón y los alemanes: la verdad sobre el espionaje nazi y los fugitivos del Reich. Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 1998.
- . The Real Odessa: Smuggling the Nazis to Perón's Argentina. London; New York: Granta, 2002.
- González Bernaldo, Pilar. "Argentine d'Amérique ?" Outre-Terre 12, no. 3 (2005): 79–91.
- . Civilidad y política en los orígenes de la nación Argentina: las sociabilidades en Buenos Aires, 1829-1862. Buenos Aires: Fondo de Cultura Económica, 2001.
- . Civilité et politique aux origines de la nation argentine: les sociabilités à Buenos Aires, 1829-1862. Paris: Publications de la Sorbonne, 1999.
- . Civility and Politics in the Origins of the Argentine Nation: Sociabilities in Buenos Aires, 1829-1862. Los Angeles: UCLA Latin American Center Publications University of California Los Angeles, 2006.
- . "La 'identidad nacional' en el Río de la Plata post-colonial," 1997.
- . "New Relational Forms: Associative Sociability." In Civility and Politics in the Origins of the Argentine Nation: Sociabilities in Buenos Aires, 1829-1862, 63–109. Los Angeles: UCLA Latin American Center Publications University of California Los Angeles, 2006.
- González Comas, Anibal. Villa Urquiza: La primera colonia agrícola argentina. Vol. 1. Paraná, Entre Ríos, Argentina: Ediciones del Clé, 2004.
- González, Galaxis Borja. Jesuitische Berichterstattung über die Neue Welt: Zur Veröffentlichungs-, Verbreitungs-, und Rezeptionsgeschichte jesuitischer Americana auf dem deutschen Buchmarkt im Zeitalter der Aufklärung. Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2011.
- González, Ricardo, Pilar González Bernaldo, and Juan Suriano. La temprana cuestión social: la ciudad de Buenos Aires durante la segunda mitad del siglo XIX. Madrid: Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas, 2010.
- González-Bernaldo, Pilar, Manuela Martini, and Marie-Louise Pelus-Kaplan, eds. Étrangers et sociétés: représentations, coexistences, interactions dans la longue durée. Rennes: Presses universitaires de Rennes, 2008.
- Good, Byron, and Mary-Jo DelVecchio Good. "On the 'Subject' of Culture: Subjectivity and Cultural Phenomenology in the Work of Clifford Geertz." In Clifford Geertz by His Colleagues, edited by Richard A. Shweder and Byron Good, 98–107. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2005.
- Gordon, Robert J. "Unsettled Settlers: Internal Pacification and Vagrancy in Namibia." In Ethnography in Unstable Places: Everyday Lives in Contexts of Dramatic Political Change, edited by Carol J. Greenhouse, Elizabeth Mertz, and Kay B. Warren, 61–84. Durham, London: Duke University Press, 2002.
- Gori, Gastón. Colonización: Estudio histórico y social de la colonial Humboldt. Santa Fé, República Argentina: Librería y Editorial Colmegna, 1948.

- . Colonización suiza en Argentina: Colonizadores de San Carlos hasta 1860. Santa Fé, República Argentina: Librería y Editorial Colmegna, 1947.
- . Inmigración y colonización en la Argentina. Buenos Aires: Editorial Universitaria de Buenos Aires, 1964.
- Gouaffo, Albert. Wissens- und Kulturtransfer im kolonialen Kontext: das Beispiel Kamerun-Deutschland (1884-1919). Würzburg: Königshausen & Neumann, 2007.
- Gouchón, Emilio. Apuntes sobre inmigración y colonización. Dissertation, Universidad nacional de Buenos Aires. Buenos Aires: Imprenta “La Nación,” 1889.
- Gouda, Frances. Dutch Culture Overseas: Colonial Practice in the Netherlands Indies, 1900-1942. Amsterdam: Amsterdam University Press, 1995.
- Gougeon, Jacques-Pierre. L'Allemagne du XXIe siècle, une nouvelle nation? Paris: A. Colin, 2009.
- Gräbel, Carsten. Die Erforschung der Kolonien: Expeditionen und koloniale Wissenskultur deutscher Geographen, 1884-1919. transcript Verlag, 2015.
- Graciano, Osvaldo. El agro en cuestión: discursos, políticas y corporaciones en la Argentina, 1870-2000. Buenos Aires: Prometeo Libros Editorial, 2006.
- Graefe, Iris. Zur Volkskunde der Russlanddeutschen in Argentinien. Wien: Schendl, 1971.
- Graham-Yooll, Andrew. Imperial Skirmishes: War and Gunboat Diplomacy in Latin America. Oxford: Signal, 2002.
- . The Forgotten Colony: A History of the English-Speaking Communities in Argentina. London: Hutchinson, 1981.
- Graichen, Gisela, and Horst Gründer. Deutsche Kolonien: Traum und Trauma. Berlin: Ullstein, 2007.
- Granqvist, Raoul, and Jürgen Martini, eds. Preserving the Landscape of Imagination: Children's Literature in Africa. Amsterdam; Atlanta: Rodopi, 1997.
- Graudenz, Karlheinz, and Hanns Michael Schindler. Die deutschen Kolonien: Geschichte der deutschen Schutzgebiete in Wort, Bild und Karte. München: Südwest Verlag, 1982.
- Green, Nancy. “The Comparative Method and Poststructural Structuralism: New Perspectives for Migration Studies.” Journal of American Ethnic History 13, no. 4 (1994): 3–22.
- Green, Nancy, and François Weil, eds. Citizenship and Those Who Leave: The Politics of Emigration and Expatriation. Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 2007.
- Green, Raúl, and Catherine Laurent. El poder de Bunge & Born. Buenos Aires: Ed. Legasa, 1988.
- Green, Reginald Herbold. From Südwestafrika to Namibia. 58. Uppsala: Nordiska Afrikainstitutet, 1967.
- Greger, José. 25 Briefe von seit Oktober 1903 nach Argentinien (Südamerika) ausgewanderten Personen und Familien aus München ... München: Selbstverl. d. Verf., 1905.
- . 100 Briefe von nach Argentinien (Südamerika) ausgewanderten Familien und einzelnen Personen. Freising vor München: Selbstverlag, 1913.
- . Argentinien einst und jetzt ... Freising b. München: Südamerika, 1912.

- . Die Provinz Buenos Aires in der Argentinischen Republik: Südamerika. Basel: E. Birkhäuser, 1885.
- . Die Republik Argentinien: Ein Wegweiser für Fremde und Auswanderer. Basel: Emil Birkhäuser, 1886.
- . Die Republik Argentinien, oder nach Südamerika, nach Argentinien. Ein Wegweiser für Reisende und Auswanderer, etc. Basel, 1883.
- . Die Republik Argentinien. Reisehandbuch für Geschäftsleute, Fremde und Auswanderer. Second edition. Basel und Buenos Aires: Verlag von José Greger, 1887.
- . Die Schafzucht in Patagonien für Ausiedler. München-Freisig: Selbstverl., 1913.
- . Die Schafzucht in Patagonien, Republik Argentinien (Südamerika) für Ansiedler mit 3000 M. bis 100000 M. und darüber. München-Freisig: Selbstverl., 1913.
- . Illustrierte Bilder aus Süd-Amerika: Greger's Reise-Bibliothek. Enthaltend: Selbsterlebtes; Volkotypen und Gebräuche; Ureinwohner (Indianer); Reisen und Forschungen usw. München: Druck von Victor Burgard, 1911.
- . Illustrierte Bilder aus Süd-Amerika Bd. 1 An der Frontera, der Gaucho, argent. Volkstypen ... Greger's Reise-Bibliothek. München: Seitz, 1902.
- . Illustrierte Bilder aus Süd-Amerika Bd. 2/3 Patagonien und dessen Bewohner, eine Forschungsreise in Patagonien ... Greger's Reise-Bibliothek. München: Seitz, 1903.
- . Über Auswanderung: Höchst wichtige Worte für jeden Auswanderungslustigen und für Jedermann, mit einer Beschreibung der Provinz Buenos-Aires in der Argentinischen Republik (Südamerika) mit Karten und Abbildungen. Basel: Emil Birkhäuser, 1882.
- Gregor, Neil, Nils H. Roemer, and Mark Roseman. German History from the Margins. Indiana University Press, 2006.
- Grentrup, Theodor. Die Rassenmischehen in den deutschen Kolonien. Paderborn: F. Schöningh, 1914.
- Gretschel, Hans-Volker. Von Kampfwitwen und-waisen: Berichte aus den Internierungsjahren in Südwestafrika, 1939-1946. Windhoek: Klaus Hess Verlag, 2009.
- Grever, Maria. "Plurality, Narrative and the Historical Canon." In Beyond the Canon: History for the Twenty-First Century, edited by Maria Grever and Siep Stuurman, 31–47. Basingstoke; New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007.
- Grever, Maria, and Siep Stuurman, eds. Beyond the Canon: History for the Twenty-First Century. Basingstoke; New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007.
- Grimm, Hans. Afrikafahrt West: Von Hamburg, Antwerpen, Boulogne und Southampton nach Madeira und den Kanarien und über Madeira-Kanarien nach Swakopmund, Lüderitzbucht und Kapstadt. Ein Reisebuch und Einführungsbuch. Frankfurt am Main: M. Henschel, 1913.
- . Das deutsche Südwest-Buch. München: A. Langen, 1929.
- . Die dreizehn Briefe aus Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. München: A. Langen, 1928.
- . Die Olewagen-Saga. München: A. Langen, 1918.

- . Gustav Voigts: ein Leben in Deutsch-Südwest [Afrika]. Third edition. Gütersloh [Germany]: Verlag C. Bertelsmann, 1942.
- . Lüderitzland. Sieben Begebenheiten. München: A. Langen, G. Müller, 1934.
- . Südafrikanische Novellen. München: A. Langen, G. Müller, 1913.
- . Volk ohne Raum. München: A. Langen, 1926.
- Grinker, Roy Richard, Stephen C. Lubkemann, and Christopher B. Steiner, eds. Perspectives on Africa: A Reader in Culture, History and Representation. Second Edition. Chichester, West Sussex, UK; Malden, Mass.: Wiley-Blackwell, 2010.
- Groppe, Carola. Der Geist des Unternehmertums: 1649-1840. Köln, Weimar: Böhlau Verlag, 2004.
- Gross, Ariela. “‘Of Portuguese Origin’: Litigating Identity and Citizenship among the ‘Little Races’ in Nineteenth-Century America.” Law and History Review 25, no. 3 (2007): 467–512.
- Grosse, Pascal. “Die Deutschen Kolonialkongresse in Berlin 1902, 1905 und 1910.” In “... Macht und Anteil an der Weltherrschaft”: Berlin und der deutsche Kolonialismus, edited by Ulrich van der Heyden and Joachim Zeller, 95–100. Münster: Unrast, 2005.
- . Kolonialismus, Eugenik und bürgerliche Gesellschaft in Deutschland 1850-1918. Frankfurt/Main; New York: Campus, 2000.
- . “What Does German Colonialism Have to Do with National Socialism?” In Germany’s Colonial Pasts, edited by Eric Ames, Marcia Klotz, and Lora Wildenthal, 115–34. Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2005.
- . “Zwischen Privatheit und Öffentlichkeit: Kolonialmigration in Deutschland, 1900-1940.” In Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, edited by Birthe Kundrus. Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003.
- Grote, Gerhard. Untersuchungen zur deutschen Kolonialpolitik um die Jahrhundertwende. Historische Studien 363. Vaduz: Kraus, 1965.
- Grotewold, Christian. Unser Kolonialwesen und seine wirtschaftliche Bedeutung. Stuttgart: Ernst Heinrich Moritz, 1907.
- Groth, Hendrik. Das Argentinische Tageblatt: Sprachrohr der demokratischen Deutschen und der deutsch-jüdischen Emigration. Münster: Lit, 1996.
- Gründer, Horst. -- da und dort ein junges Deutschland gründen: Rassismus, Kolonien und kolonialer Gedanke vom 16. bis zum 20. Jahrhundert. Originalausg. München: Deutscher Taschenbuch Verlag, 1999.
- . Christliche Mission und deutscher Imperialismus: eine politische Geschichte ihrer Beziehungen während der deutschen Kolonialzeit (1884-1914) unter besonderer Berücksichtigung Afrikas und Chinas. Sammlung Schöningh zur Geschichte und Gegenwart. Paderborn: Schöningh, 1982.
- . “Deutsche Missionsgesellschaften auf dem Wege zur Kolonialmission.” In Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, edited by Klaus Bade, 68–102. Steiner, 1982.
- . Geschichte der deutschen Kolonien. Paderborn: Schöningh, 1985.

- . “Imperialismus und deutscher Kolonialismus in Afrika.” In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 26–43. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Grünewald, Hildemarie. Die Geschichte der Deutschen in Südafrika. Second Edition. Kapstadt: Ulrich Naumann, 1993.
- Guempell, Jean. Ins Land der Herero: Erlebnisse eines jungen Deutschen; Erzählung für die reifere Jugend. Berlin: Süsserott, 1904.
- Guenther, Mathias. Kalahari and Namib Bushmen in German South West Africa: Ethnographic Reports by Colonial Soldiers and Settlers. Quellen Zur Khoisan-Forschung 18. Köln: Köppe, 2005.
- Guettel, Jens-Uwe. “From the Frontier to German South-West Africa: German Colonialism, Indians, and American Westward Expansion.” Modern Intellectual History 7, no. 3 (2010): 523–552.
- . German Expansionism, Imperial Liberalism and the United States, 1776-1945. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2012.
- Gümbel, Annette. “Volk ohne Raum”: der Schriftsteller Hans Grimm zwischen nationalkonservativem Denken und völkischer Ideologie. Selbstverlag der Hessischen Historischen Kommission und der Historischen Kommission für Hessen, 2003.
- Gungwu, Wang, ed. Global History and Migrations. Boulder, Colo: Westview Press, 1997.
- Gürich, Georg. Deutsch Südwest-Afrika: Reisebilder und Skizzen aus den Jahren 1888 und 1889, mit einer Original-Routenkarte. Hamburg: Friederichsen, 1891.
- Gustafsson, Heinz. Namibia, Bremen und Deutschland: ein steiniger Weg zur Freundschaft. Delmenhorst: Aschenbeck & Holstein, 2003.
- Gutierrez, R. “Transnationalizing Borderlands History.” Western Historical Quarterly 41, no. 1 (2010): 27–54.
- Guy, Donna J. Sex & Danger in Buenos Aires: Prostitution, Family, and Nation in Argentina. Lincoln, London: University of Nebraska Press, 1991.
- Haarhoff, Dorian. The Wild South-West: Frontier Myths and Metaphors in Literature Set in Namibia, 1760-1988. Johannesburg: Witwatersrand University Press, 1991.
- Haas, Albert. Ernesto Quesada: seine Stellung im Geistesleben und in der Geschichtsschreibung Argentiniens. Buenos Aires, 1928.
- Haas, Alberto. Historia de la literatura alemana moderna. Buenos Aires: Imprenta de la Universidad, 1928.
- Haase, Jenny. Patagoniens verflochtene Erzählwelten: der argentinische und chilenische Süden in Reiseliteratur und historischem Roman (1977-1999). Walter de Gruyter, 2009.
- Habel, Jean. Ansichten aus Südamerika. Schilderungen einer Reise am La Plata, in den argentinischen Anden und an der Westküste. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1897.
- Hacking, Ian. The Social Construction of What? Cambridge Mass: Harvard University Press, 1999.
- Hackländer, Daisy. Heute heisst dieses Land Namibia: Erinnerungen an die Pionierzeit in Südwest-Afrika. Göttingen: K. Hess Verlag, 2000.

- Häfner, Claudia. Heimischwerdung am La Plata: Von der Deutschen Evangelischen La Plata Synode zur Iglesia Evangélica del Río de la Plata. Kirchen in der Weltgesellschaft 3. Berlin; Münster: LIT Verlag, 2008.
- Hagemann, Karen, and Jean H. Quataert, eds. Gendering Modern German History: Rewriting Historiography. Berghahn Books, 2008.
- Hagen, Mark von. "Empires, Borderlands, and Diasporas: Eurasia as Anti-Paradigm for the Post-Soviet Era." American Historical Review 109, no. 2 (2004): 445–68.
- Hager, Joh. Georg. Geographischer Büchersaal zum Nutzen und Vergnügen eröffnet. Chemnitz, 1766.
- Hahn, Carl Hugo. Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Edited by Brigitte Lau. 5 vols. Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1984.
- . Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part I: 1837-1845. Edited by Brigitte Lau. Vol. 1. 5 vols. Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1984.
- . Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part II: 1846-1851. Edited by Brigitte Lau. Vol. 2. 5 vols. Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1984.
- . Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part III: 1852-1855. Edited by Brigitte Lau. Vol. 3. 5 vols. Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1985.
- . Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part IV: 1856-1860. Edited by Brigitte Lau. Vol. 4. 5 vols. Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1985.
- . Carl Hugo Hahn Tagebücher 1837-1860 Diaries: A Missionary in Nama- and Damaraland. Part V: Register and Indexes. Edited by Brigitte Lau. Vol. 5. 5 vols. Windhoek, Namibia: Archives Services Division, Department of National Education, 1985.
- Hahn, Emma Sarah. The Letters of Emma Sarah Hahn, Pioneer Missionary Among the Herero. Edited by Dorothy Guedes and Peter Reiner. Windhoek; Johannesburg: Namibia Scientific Society; Thorold's Africana Books [distributor], 1992.
- Hahn, Josaphat. "Das Land der Ovaheréro." In Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, edited by Wilhelm David Koner, 3:193–224; 493–507. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1868.
- . "Die Ovaheréro. (Zweite Abtheilung)." In Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, edited by Wilhelm David Koner, 4:226–58. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1868.
- . "Gegenwärtiges Verhältniß der Namaqua zu den Hereró." In Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, edited by Wilhelm David Koner, 5:468–469. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1870.
- . "Hereró-Land." In Mittheilungen aus Justus Perthes' geographischer Anstalt über wichtige neue Erforschungen auf dem Gesamtgebiete der Geographie, edited by A. Petermann, 274–275. Gotha: Justus Perthes, 1867.

- Hahn, Theophilus. "Der hottentotische Tsü-ĩllgoa-b und der griechische Ζεῦς." In Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, edited by Wilhelm David Koner, 5:452–456. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1870.
- Halford, A. J. Congressional Directory, 1908.
- . Official Congressional Directory, 1910.
- . Official Congressional Directory, 1904.
- Halikiopoulou, Daphne, and Sofia Vasilopoulou, eds. Nationalism and Globalisation: Conflicting Or Complementary? New York, N.Y.: Routledge, 2011.
- Hall, Catherine, ed. Cultures of Empire: Colonizers in Britain and the Empire in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: A Reader. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2000.
- . "Introduction: Thinking the Postcolonial, Thinking the Empire." In Cultures of Empire: Colonizers in Britain and the Empire in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: A Reader, edited by Catherine Hall. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2000.
- Hall, Catherine, and Keith McClelland, eds. Race, Nation and Empire: Making Histories, 1750 to the Present. Manchester; New York: Manchester University Press, 2010.
- Hall, Martin. Farmers, Kings, and Traders: The People of Southern Africa, 200-1860. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1990.
- Hall, Stuart. Identités et cultures: politiques des cultural studies. Paris: Amsterdam, 2007.
- Hall, Stuart, and Paul Du Gay, eds. Questions of Cultural Identity. London; Thousand Oaks Calif.: Sage, 1996.
- Halle, Ernst von, ed. Die Weltwirtschaft: Ein Jahr- und Lesebuch. Vol. 1. Leipzig, Berlin: B.G. Teubner, 1906.
- Haller, Peter. Südwester Kochbuch: Eine Sammlung Original Südwestafrikanischer Kochrezepte. Swakopmund Namibia: Peter's Antiques, 1997.
- Hamilton, Majida. Mission im kolonialen Umfeld: deutsche protestantische Missionsgesellschaften in Deutsch-Ostafrika. Universitätsverlag Göttingen, 2009.
- Handelmann, Heinrich. Geschichte der Amerikanischen Kolonisation und Unabhängigkeit. Vol. 1. Kiel, 1856.
- Handlin, Oscar. The Uprooted: The Epic Story of the Great Migrations That Made the American People. Boston: Little, Brown, 1951.
- Hanemann. Wirtschaftliche und politische Verhältnisse in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Berlin: Deutscher Kolonial-Verlag, 1904.
- Hanke, W, Ingeborg Klohn, and Max Tepp. Indianer Südamerikas. Buenos Aires: Die Umwelt, 1938.
- Hänsch, Felix. Grundzüge deutscher Siedlungspolitik in den Kolonien. Flugschriften des Alldeutschen Verbandes. Verlag der Vermögensverwaltung des Alldeutschen Verbandes, 1912.
- Hansen, Jason D. Mapping the Germans: Statistical Science, Cartography, and the Visualization of the German Nation, 1848-1914. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2015.

- Hansen, Marcus Lee. German Schemes of Colonization Before 1860. Northampton, Mass.: Dept. of History of Smith College, 1924.
- Harder, Friedrich Wilhelm von. "Das Land der Zukunft: Argentinien." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 5 (1903): 33–49.
- Harding, Paulette. Tausend Kochrezepte in deutsch und spanisch = Mil Recetas de Cocina en alemán y castellano. 11. Aufl. Buenos Aires: Alemann, 1965.
- Hardinge, Rex. South African Cinderella: A Trek through Ex-German West Africa. London: H. Jenkins, 1937.
- Hardt, Michael. Multitude: War and Democracy in the Age of Empire. New York: The Penguin Press, 2004.
- Harispuru, Adela, and Jorge Gilbert. "El holding 'Tornquist' y su vinculacion con la comunidad belgo-alemana, en Argentina." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 22/23, no. 65 (2009): 61–79.
- Harper, Marjory, and Stephen Constantine. Migration and Empire. Oxford; New York: Oxford University Press, 2010.
- Harries, Patrick. "From the Alps to Africa: Swiss Missionaries and Anthropology." In Ordering Africa: Anthropology, European Imperialism and the Politics of Knowledge, edited by Helen Tilley and Robert J Gordon, 201–24. Studies in Imperialism. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2007.
- Hartmann, Georg. "Das Kaoko-Gebiet in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika auf Grund eigener Reisen und Beobachtungen (Sonderabruck)." Verhandlungen der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin 2 (1897): 115–41.
- . Der Krieg in Süd-Afrika und seine Lehren für Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: Nach einem Vortrag gehalten in der Abtheilung Bremen der Deutschen Kolonial-Gesellschaft. Berlin: Mittler, 1900.
- . Deutsch-Südwestafrika im Zusammenhang mit Süd-Afrika: Vortrag. Berlin: J. Belling, 1899.
- . Die Zukunft Deutsch-Südwestafrikas. Beitrag zur Besiedlungs- und Eingeborenenfrage. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1904.
- . "Meine Expedition 1900 ins nördliche Kaokofeld und 1901 durch das Amboland." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 431–34.
- . Meine Expedition 1900 ins nördliche Kaokofeld und 1901 durch das Amboland. Mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Zukunftsaufgaben in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Berlin: Süsserott, 1903.
- Hartmann, Wolfram. "'... als durchaus unerwünscht erachtet ...': Zur Genese des 'Mischehenverbotes in Deutsch-Südwestafrika.'" In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 182–93. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- . "Eine situation érotique et coloniale im 19. Jahrhundert: Männer und Frauen im südwestlichen Afrika." In Die (koloniale) Begegnung: AfrikanerInnen in Deutschland

- 1880-1945, Deutsche in Afrika 1880-1918, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Reinhard Klein-Arendt, 129–45. Frankfurt am Main; New York: Lang, 2003.
- . “Sexual Encounters and Their Implications on an Open and Closing Frontier: Central Namibia from the 1840s to 1905.” Ph.D., Columbia University, 2002.
- Hartmann, Wolfram, Jeremy Silvester, and Patricia Hayes. The Colonising Camera: Photographs in the Making of Namibian History. Cape Town South Africa; Athens: University of Cape Town Press; Ohio University Press, 1999.
- Harvey, David. The Condition of Postmodernity: An Enquiry into the Origins of Cultural Change. Oxford, England; New York, NY, USA: Blackwell, 1989.
- Harzig, Christiane, Dirk Hoerder, and Donna Gabaccia. What Is Migration History? Cambridge UK; Malden MA: Polity, 2009.
- Hasenkamp. “Eine deutsche Schule auf dem Tafelberge.” In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 30–33. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- Hassell, Ulrich von (Author). Haben wir eine Kolonial-Reform? Kolonialpolitische Betrachtungen über die Ära Dernburg. Vol. 34. Zeitfragen des christlichen Volkslebens 7. Stuttgart: Belsler, 1909.
- Hassert, Kurt. “Der Kampf um Südafrika und die deutschen Interessen.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 2 (1901 1900): 289-;329-; 368-.
- . “Die Welserzüge in Venezuela. Das erste deutsche überseeische Kolonialunternehmen im 16. Jahrhundert.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901).
- Hastedt, Pedro. Deutsche Direktinvestitionen in Lateinamerika – ihre Entwicklung seit dem Ersten Weltkrieg und ihre Bedeutung für die Industrialisierung des Subkontinents. Göttingen: Otto Schwartz, 1970.
- Hastings, Adrian. The Construction of Nationhood Ethnicity, Religion, and Nationalism. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 1997.
- Haubrichs, Wolfgang. “Theodiscus, Deutsch und Germanisch - drei Ethnonyme, drei Forschungsbegriffe. Zur Frage der Instrumentalisierung und Wertbesetzung deutscher Sprach- und Volksbezeichnungen.” In Zur Geschichte der Gleichung “germanisch-deutsch”: Sprache und Namen, Geschichte und Institutionen, edited by Heinrich Beck, Dieter Geuenich, Heiko Steuer, and Dietrich Hakelberg, 199–228. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2004.
- Hauff, Walter von. “Das Deutschtum in Brasilien und Argentinien.” In Deutsche im Ausland, im Auftrage des Reichswanderungsamtes und in Verbindung mit dem Verein für das Deutschtum im Ausland, edited by Friedrich Wilhelm Mohr, 210–27. Breslau: F. Hirt, 1923.
- . “Der Wert deutscher Ackerbaukolonien in Argentinien für Deutschland und Argentinien.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 2:144–47. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914.
- Haupt, Heinz-Gerhard, and Jürgen Kocka, eds. Comparative and Transnational History: Central European Approaches and New Perspectives. New York: Berghahn Books, 2009.

- Hauser, Henri. Colonies allemandes impériales et spontanées. Études d'économie coloniale. Paris: Nony & cie, 1900.
- . Germany's Commercial Grip on the World: Her Business Methods Explained. London: Eveleigh Nash Company limited, 1917.
- . Les débuts du capitalisme. Paris: Impr. des Presses universitaires de France; libr. Félix Alcan, 1927.
- . Les Méthodes Allemandes d'expansion Économique. Second Edition. Paris: Armand Colin, 1916.
- Hauser, Richard. Die deutschen Überseebanken. Abhandlungen des Staatswissenschaftlichen Seminars zu Jena 3, 4. Jena: G. Fischer, 1906.
- Hauthal, Rudolf. Das Minenwesen in Argentinien. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 6. Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912.
- . Mitteilungen über den heutigen Stand der geologischen Forschung Argentinien. Wien: Hollinek, 1904.
- Hauthal, Rudolf Johann Friedrich. Beiträge zur Geologie der argentinischen Provinz Buenos Aires, Inaugural-Dissertation. Gotha: J. Perthes, 1904.
- Hayes, Patricia. "A History of the Ovambo of Namibia, c. 1880-1935." Ph.D., Cambridge University, 1992.
- . "'Cocky' Hahn and the 'Black Venus': The Making of a Native Commissioner in South West Africa, 1915-46." In Cultures of Empire: Colonizers in Britain and the Empire in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: A Reader, edited by Catherine Hall, 329–58. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2000.
- Heberlein, Regine I. Writing a National Colony: The Hostility of Inscription in the German Settlement of Lake Llanquihue. Amherst: Cambria Press, 2008.
- Hébert, Yvonne. Negotiating Transcultural Lives: Belongings and Social Capital Among Youth in Comparative Perspective. Toronto; Buffalo: University of Toronto Press, 2006.
- Heilborn, Adolf. Die deutschen Kolonien (Land und Leute): Zehn Vorlesungen. Third edition. Aus Natur und Geisteswelt 98. Leipzig: B.G. Teubner, 1912.
- Hein, Kerstin. Hybride Identitäten: Bastelbiografien im Spannungsverhältnis zwischen Lateinamerika und Europa. Kultur und soziale Praxis. Bielefeld: transcript, 2006.
- Heinzelmann, Friedrich, ed. "III. Reisen in Brasilien und den La Plata-Ländern. Nach Gardner, Prinz Maximilian von Neuwied, Darwin u. A." In Reisen in Südamerika und Westindien, 211–305. Die Weltkunde in einer planmässig geordneten Rundschau der wichtigsten neueren Land- und Seereisen 8. Leipzig: F. Fleischer, 1851.
- , ed. Reisen in Afrika durch die Länder der Nordküste und die Sahara, Senegambien, den Sudan, beide Guinea's und das Gebiet des Südens. Leipzig: F. Fleischer, 1852.
- , ed. Reisen in Südamerika und Westindien. Die Weltkunde in einer planmässig geordneten Rundschau der wichtigsten neueren Land- und Seereisen 8. Leipzig: F. Fleischer, 1851.
- Heinzelmann, Friedrich, and Wilhelm Harnisch. Die Weltkunde: in einer planmässig geordneten Rundschau der wichtigsten neueren Land- und Seereisen für das Jünglingsalter und die

- Gebildeten aller Stände auf Grund des Reisewerkes von Dr. Wilhelm Harnisch dargestellt und hrsg. von Friedrich Heinzelmann.* Leipzig: Fleischer, 1847.
- Helbig, Helga, and Ludwig Helbig. Mythos Deutsch-Südwest: Namibia und die Deutschen. Weinheim: Beltz, 1983.
- Helbig, Muriel. "To Be, or Not to Be ... German, Russian, or Ethnic German: Ethnic Self-Labeling Among Adolescent Ethnic German Immigrants." Ph.D., Friedrich Schiller Universität Jena, 2006.
- Hellmann, Gustav, and Elisabeth Hellmann. Südwest ist und bleibt das Land der Überraschungen und Enttäuschungen: die Tagebücher des Missionskaufmanns Gustav Hellmann und seiner Frau Elisabeth, 1907-1923. Edited by Christiane Kuchler Williams and Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst. Afrika und Europa: koloniale und postkoloniale Begegnungen 9. Frankfurt am Main: Peter-Lang-Ed., 2013.
- Helms, Fred Adlam. "Deutsches Ausland-Institut, 1917-1933: An Administrative History." Ph.D., University of Delaware, 1976.
- Helmut. "Weihnachten in Südwest." In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 26. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- Hemer, Oscar. Fiction and Truth in Transition: Writing the Present Past in South Africa and Argentina. Wien; Münster: Lit, 2012.
- Hemme, Tanja. "'Deutschland hat Hände im Uebermaß für eine solche Arbeit zur Verfügung'. Ernst von Weber - Diamantensucher und Kolonialagitator." In "... Macht und Anteil an der Weltherrschaft": Berlin und der deutsche Kolonialismus, edited by Ulrich van der Heyden and Joachim Zeller, 51–54. Münster: Unrast, 2005.
- Hemming, John. Red Gold: The Conquest of the Brazilian Indians. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1978.
- Henderson, William Otto. Friedrich List: Economist and Visionary, 1789-1846. Abingdon, Oxon; New York: Frank Cass, 1983.
- . Studies in German Colonial History. Chicago: Quadrangle Books, 1962.
- Hennig, Richard. Deutsch-Südwest im Weltkrieg. Leipzig: Brockhaus, 1925.
- . Geopolitik: Die Lehre vom Staat als Lebewesen. Leipzig, Berlin: B. G. Teubner, 1928.
- Henning vda de Küppers, Marga. "¿Porqué?" In La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera, edited by Olga Zamboni, 101–23. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Henoch, Hubert, ed. Deutsche Kolonialzeitung. 25. Berlin: Eigentum und Verlag des Deutschen Kolonialvereins, 1908.
- Henrichsen, Dag. "'... unerwünscht im Schutzgebiet ... nicht schlechthin unsittlich': 'Mischehen' und deren Nachkommen im Visier der Kolonialverwaltung in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 80–90. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- . "Die Hegemonie der Herero in Zentralnamibia zu Beginn der deutschen Kolonialherrschaft." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa

- Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 44–59. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- , ed. Hans Schinz: Bruchstücke: Forschungsreisen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, 2012.
- . “Herrschaft und Identifikation im vorkolonialen Zentralnamibia: das Herero- und Damaraland im 19. Jahrhundert.” University of Hamburg, 1998.
- Henrici, Ernst. Kolonialwirtschaftliche Aufgaben des deutschen Kaufmanns. Leipzig: Hesse & Becker, 1908.
- Hensel, Silke. “Africans in Spanish-America: Slavery, Freedom and Identities in the Colonial Era.” Indiana 24 (2007): 25–37.
- Hepe, Rodolfo. Crónica sobre 50 años de historia: Federación de Asociaciones Argentino-Germanas = Chronik über 50 Jahre Geschichte. Verband der deutsch-argentinischen Vereinigungen. Buenos Aires: FAAG, 2005.
- Herb, C. “Die Aussichten neuer Unternehmungen im tropischen Südamerika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 329–; 344–.
- Hermann, E. “Landbau in Deutsch-Südwestafrika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902 1901): 423–.
- Hermann, R. “Statistik der fremden Bevölkerung in den deutschen Schutzgebieten.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 2 (1901 1900): 86–; 210–; 268–; 364–; 403–; 431–; 453–.
- Hermann-Nomtsas, E. “Über Landmeliorationen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 158–60.
- Hermes, Stefan. “Bewältigungsversuche. Die wilhelminische Herrschaft über Südwestafrika in der deutschsprachigen ‘postkolonialen’ Literatur.” In Deutsch-afrikanische Diskurse in Geschichte und Gegenwart: Literatur- und kulturwissenschaftliche Perspektiven, edited by Michael Hofmann and Rita Morrien. Amsterdamer Beiträge zur neueren Germanistik 80. Amsterdam; New York, NY: Rodopi, 2012.
- . “Fahrten nach Südwest”: die Kolonialkriege gegen die Herero und Nama in der deutschen Literatur (1904-2004). Interkulturelle Moderne 3. Würzburg: Königshausen & Neumann, 2009.
- Herran, Hieronymus. Brieffe aus Paraquarien. Num.551. Gegenwärtiger Zustand der Provinz Paraquarien laut der aus Brieffen von Buenes Aeres vom 20ten Hornung 1733 erhaltenen Nachricht erstlich aus dem Spanischen ins Französische anjetzo aus diesem ins Deutsche übersezet. Edited by Petro Probst. Allerhand so Lehr- als Geist-reiche Brieffe, Schrifften und Reise-Beschreibungen, welche von denen Missionariis der Gesellschaft Jesu aus Beyden Indien, und anderen über Meer gelegenen Ländern, meistens von A. 1730 bis 1740 in Europa angelangt seynd. Aus Hand-schriftlichen Urkunden, und anderen bewehrten Nachrichten zusammengetragen 28. Wien: Leopold Johann Kaliwoba, 1740.
- Herwig, Holger H. Germany’s Vision of Empire in Venezuela, 1871-1914. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1986.

- Herzfeld, Hans. Verhaltensformen der Argentinier. Second edition. Buenos Aires: Alemann, 1982.
- Herzog, H. "Entwicklung des Post- und Telegraphenverkehrs der deutschen Kolonien seit 1899." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 472–82.
- Herzog, Tamar. Defining Nations: Immigrants and Citizens in Early Modern Spain and Spanish America. Yale University Press, 2008.
- Hespers, Carl. "Die katholischen Missionen in den deutschen Schutzgebieten." Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Vierter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1891 4 (1892): 32–48.
- . "Die katholischen Missionen in den deutschen Schutzgebieten." Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Sechster Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1893 6 (1894): 108–21.
- Hess, Klaus, and Klaus Becker, eds. Vom Schutzgebiet Bis Namibia 2000. Göttingen; Windhoek: Hess, 2002.
- Hess, Remi. L'observation participante: dans les situations interculturelles. Paris: Economica, 2006.
- Hesse, Hermann. "Die Frage der Reichsangehörigkeit der Auswanderer." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 616–27. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- . Die Landfrage und die Frage der Rechtsgültigkeit der Konzessionen in Südwestafrika: ein Beitrag zur wirtschaftlichen und finanziellen Entwicklung des Schutzgebietes. Jena: Hermann Costenoble, 1906.
- . "Die Schutzverträge in Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 899-.
- . "Reichs- und Staatsangehörigkeit." Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis 11 (1898): 97–136.
- . "Zur Geltung des bürgerlichen Rechts in den Schutzgebieten." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 158–60.
- Heuser, Karl Wilhelm. Diederich David Bunge. Remscheid, 1970.
- Heusser, Johann Christian, and George Claraz. Allgemeine Bemerkungen über Fleischproduction und Fleischverwerthung in der argentinischen Provinz Buenos-Aires. Winterthur: s.n., 1868.
- Hey, Friedrich. "Argentinien und die österreichische Auswanderung." In Zeitschrift für Volkswirtschaft, Sozialpolitik und Verwaltung: Organ der Gesellschaft österreichischer Volkswirte, edited by Eugen von Böhm-Bawerk, Karl Theodor von Inama-Sternegg, Eugen von Philippovich, Ernst von Plener, and Friedrich Freiherr von Wieser, 359–65. 17. Wien; Leipzig: Wilhelm Braumüller, 1907.
- Heyden, Ulrich van der. "Die deutsche Kolonialpolitik in Südwestafrika in Bezug auf die Ansiedlung von Buren während und nach dem Südafrikanischen Krieg von 1899 bis 1902." Asien, Afrika, Lateinamerika 18, no. 6 (1990): 1075–85.

- Heyden, Ulrich van der, and Heike Liebau, eds. Missionsgeschichte, Kirchengeschichte, Weltgeschichte: christliche Missionen im Kontext nationaler Entwicklungen in Afrika, Asien und Ozeanien. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1996.
- Heyden, Ulrich van der, and Joachim Zeller, eds. "... Macht und Anteil an der Weltherrschaft": Berlin und der deutsche Kolonialismus. Münster: Unrast, 2005.
- Heydt, von der. Von der Heydt's Kolonial-Handbuch, Jahrbuch der deutschen Kolonial- und Uebersee-Unternehmungen. Herausgegeben von Franz Mensch und Julius Hellmann... Berlin: Verlag für Börsen- und Finanzliteratur, 1907.
- Heymann, Jochen. "Amerika für Jedermann: Reiseberichte über Lateinamerika in der Revue des Deux Mondes (1830-1876)." In Die Wiederentdeckung Lateinamerikas: die Erfahrung des Subkontinents in Reiseberichten des 19. Jahrhunderts, edited by Walther L. Bernecker, Gertrud Krömer, and Kristina Birn, 353–75. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1997.
- Hieke, Ernst. Hanseatische Kaufleute als deutsche Kolonialpioniere. Deutsches Ringen um kolonialen Raum 8. Hamburg: Hartung, 1938.
- Highmore, Ben. Michel de Certeau: Analysing Culture. London; New York: Continuum, 2006.
- Hilb, Claudia, and Philippe-Joseph Salazar. New Beginnings: Argentina & South Africa. Cape Town: AfricaRhetoric Publishing, 2012.
- Hildebrand, Klaus. Das vergangene Reich: deutsche Außenpolitik von Bismarck bis Hitler: 1871-1945. Stuttgart: Dt. Verl.-Anst., 1995.
- . German foreign policy from Bismarck to Adenauer: the limits of statecraft. London; Boston: Unwin Hyman, 1989.
- Hill, Christopher L. "National Histories and World Systems: Writing Japan, France, and the United States." In Turning Points in Historiography: A Cross-Cultural Perspective, edited by Q. Edward Wang and Georg G. Iggers, 163–84. Rochester, NY: Boydell & Brewer, 2002.
- . National History and the World of Nations: Capital, State, and the Rhetoric of History in Japan, France, and the United States. Duke University Press, 2008.
- Hillebrecht, Werner. "Hendrik Witbooi: Ikone und Inspiration des anticolonialen Widerstands und des unabhängigen Namibias." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 144–53. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Hiller, Georg. Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Argentinien. Band 1: Einwanderung und Einwanderungspolitik. Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1912.
- Hindorf, Direktor Dr. "Die weisse Einwanderung nach Südwestafrika." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 627–39. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- Hintrager, Oskar. Südwestafrika in der deutschen Zeit. München: Kommissionsverlag R. Oldenbourg, 1955.
- Hintze, Otto. Alemania y el sistema político universal. Lo que es Alemania 5. Buenos Aires: Unión de Libreros Alemanes, 1916.
- Hintze, Willy. Das Geldwesen in den deutschen Schutzgebieten. Guttentagsche Sammlung deutscher Reichsgesetze 105. Berlin: J. Guttentag, 1912.

- Hinz, Paul Erich. Die Rechtsbegriffe "Inland" und "Ausland" in Anwendung auf die deutschen Schutzgebiete. Borna-Leipzig: R. Noske, 1908.
- Hipperdinger, Yolanda. Die Sprache(n) der Wolgadeutschen in Argentinien: die Kolonisierung des Bezirks Coronel Suarez. Translated by Max Doppelbauer. Wien: Edition Praesens, 2005.
- Hirsch, Heinrich. Überseeische Kolonisation durch Österreich-Ungarn: Mit handelsstatistischen und handelsgeographischen Anhängen. Wien und Olmütz: Eduard Hölzel, 1888.
- Hirsching, Friedrich Carl Gottlob. Allgemeines Archiv für die Länder- und Völkerkunde. Hilscher, 1791.
- Hobsbawm, Eric. Nations and Nationalism Since 1780: Programme, Myth, Reality. Cambridge [England]; New York: Cambridge University Press, 1990.
- Hodann, Valerie. Auf rauhen Pfaden: Schicksale einer deutschen Farmerstochter in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Dresden: Dietrich, 1910.
- Hodge, Carl Cavanagh. Encyclopedia of the Age of Imperialism, 1800-1914: A-K. Greenwood Publishing Group, 2008.
- Hoefler, C. "Aus dem Bereich der Mission in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 3 (1902/1901): 579–84.
- Hoegener, Steve. Koloniale Identitätskonstruktionen in der Literatur zwischen den Kriegen. München: GRIN Verlag GmbH, 2008.
- Hoening, Robert. Das Deutschtum im Ausland. Aus Natur und Geisteswelt: Sammlung wissenschaftlich-gemeinverständlicher Darstellungen 402. Leipzig, Berlin: B.G. Teubner, 1913.
- Hoerder, Dirk. Cultures in Contact: World Migrations in the Second Millennium. Durham: Duke University Press, 2002.
- . "Losing National Identity or Gaining Transcultural Competence: Changing Approaches in Migration History." In Comparative and Transnational History: Central European Approaches and New Perspectives, edited by Heinz-Gerhard Haupt and Jürgen Kocka. New York: Berghahn Books, 2009.
- . People in Transit: German Migrations in Comparative Perspective, 1820-1930. Washington D.C.; Cambridge; New York: German Historical Institute; Cambridge University Press, 1995.
- . "The German-Language Diasporas: A Survey, Critique, and Interpretation." Diaspora: A Journal of Transnational Studies 11 (2002): 7–44.
- Hoerder, Dirk, Christiane Harzig, and Adrian Shubert, eds. The Historical Practice of Diversity: Transcultural Interactions from the Early Modern Mediterranean to the Postcolonial World. New York: Berghahn Books, 2003.
- Hoering, Uwe, and Forum Umwelt und Entwicklung. Agrar-Kolonialismus in Afrika: eine andere Landwirtschaft ist möglich. Hamburg: VSA-Verlag, 2007.
- Hoffmann, H. Edler v. "Fragen des protestantischen Kolonialkirchenrechtes." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 492–97.

- Hoffmann, Katrin. “¿Construyendo una ‘comunidad’? Theodor Alemann y Hermann Tjarks como voceros de la prensa germanoparlante en Buenos Aires, 1914-1918.” Iberoamericana 9, no. 33 (2009): 121–38.
- Hoffmann, Martin D. Keine Kolonien! Eine Kampfschrift gegen den neuen, deutschen Imperialismus! Windischleuba (Thür.): Schumann, 1927.
- Hoffmann, Robert. “Die katholische Missionsbewegung in Deutschland vom Anfang des 19. Jahrhunderts bis zum Ende der deutschen Kolonialgeschichte.” In Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, edited by Klaus Bade, 29–50. Steiner, 1982.
- Hofmann, Michael. Deutsche Kolonialarchitektur und Siedlungen in Afrika. Petersberg: Dr. M. Imhof, 2013.
- Hofmann, Michael, and Rita Morrien, eds. Deutsch-afrikanische Diskurse in Geschichte und Gegenwart: Literatur- und kulturwissenschaftliche Perspektiven. Amsterdamer Beiträge zur neueren Germanistik 80. Amsterdam; New York, NY: Rodopi, 2012.
- Hofmann, Siegfried. Die Stellung des deutschen Kaufmanns im Ausland: nach den deutschen Handels- und Konsularverträgen. Nürnberg: J.L. Stich, 1903.
- Hoge, John. Die Geschichte der ältesten Evangelisch-Lutherischen Gemeinde in Kapstadt: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Deutschtums in Südafrika. München: Reinhardt, 1939.
- . Personalia of the Germans at the Cape, 1652-1806. Staatsdr., 1946.
- Holm, Orla. Aus Südwest-Afrika: Blätter aus dem Tagebuche einer deutschen Frau, 1902-1904. Leipzig: Veit, 1905.
- . Ovita: Episode aus dem Hereroland. Dresden: Reißner, 1909.
- . Pioniere: Ein Kolonialroman aus Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Berlin: F. Fontane & Co., 1906.
- Holstein, Christine (Margarete Jähne). Deutsche Frau in Südwest: den Erlebnissen einer Farmersfrau im heutigen Afrika nacherzählt. Leipzig: Koehler & Amelang, 1937.
- Homet, Juan B. Diario de un argentino: soldado en la guerra actual. Buenos Aires: Ed. Martín Schneider, 1918.
- Honold, Alexander. “Raum ohne Volk. Zur Imaginationsgeschichte der kolonialen Geographie.” In Kolonialismus, edited by Mihran Dabag, Horst Gründer, and Uwe-Karsten Ketelsen, 95–110. München: Wilhelm Fink Verlag, 2004.
- Hopfengärtner, Johanna. “Zwischen Emigration und Immigration. Deutschsprachige jüdische Frauen in Argentinien.” In Der Nationalsozialismus und Lateinamerika: Institutionen - Repräsentationen - Wissenskonstrukte, edited by Sandra Carreras, First Edition. Berlin: Ibero-Amerikanisches Institut, 2005.
- Hopfinger, Hans, and H. Kopp, eds. Wirkungen von Migrationen auf aufnehmende Gesellschaften. Neustadt an der Aisch: Degener, 1996.
- Höpker, Lydia. Als Farmerin in Deutsch-Südwest: Was ich in Afrika erlebte. Second edition of “Um Scholle und Leben.” Minden in Westf.: W. Köhler, 1936.
- . Um Scholle und Leben: Schicksale einer deutschen Farmerin in Südwest-Afrika. Minden: Köhler, 1927.

- Hora, Roy. "Britain, the British Landed Class, and Argentine Landowners." Canadian Journal of Latin American and Caribbean Studies / Revue Canadienne Des Études Latino-Américaines et Caraïbes 30, no. 59 (2005): 9–54.
- . "Landowning Bourgeoisie or Business Bourgeoisie? On the Peculiarities of the Argentine Economic Elite, 1880-1945." Journal of Latin American Studies 34, no. 3 (2002): 587–623.
- Hoss de le Comte, Monica G. Goethe-Schule: Un Siglo. Buenos Aires: Selbstverl., 1997.
- Höbblin, Richard von. Der deutsche Auswanderer nach überseeischen Ländern. Landwirtschaftliche Merkblätter 41. Stuttgart: Ulmer, 1911.
- Housser, Jakob Christian, and Jorge Claraz. Beiträge zur geognostischen und physikalischen Kenntniss der Provinz Buenos Aires. Zürich, 1865.
- Hubbard, Diane. "Urieta (Johanna Maria) Kazahendike, God's Peace and Blessing, Namibia 1861, German." In Women Writing Africa: The Southern Region, edited by Margaret J. Daymond, Dorothy Driver, Sheila Meintjes, Leloba Molema, Chiedza Musengezi, Margie Orford, and Nobantu Rasebotsa, 96–97. New York: Feminist Press at CUNY, 2003.
- Hübbe-Schleiden, Wilhelm. Deutsche Colonisation: Eine Replik auf das Referat des Friedrich Kapp über Colonisation und Auswanderung. Hamburg: Friederichsen, 1881.
- Huber, Hansjörg Michael. Koloniale Selbstverwaltung in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Entstehung, Kodifizierung und Umsetzung. Rechtshistorische Reihe 213. Frankfurt am Main; New York: P. Lang, 2000.
- Huber, Victor Aimé. "Ueber innere Colonisation." Janus: Jahrbücher deutscher Gesinnung, Bildung und That 7–8 (1846): 193–222, 225–56.
- Huberman, Ariana. Gauchos and Foreigners: Glossing Culture and Identity in the Argentine Countryside. Lanham, Md: Lexington Books, 2011.
- Huergo, Luis A. Boletín Del Instituto Geográfico Argentino. Vol. 6. Buenos Aires: Jacobo Peuser, 1885.
- "Hugo Stroeder, el conquistador de la pampa - Municipalidad de Patagones - Patagonia Argentina." Patagones Municipio, 2012. <http://www.patagones.gov.ar/stroeder/hugo-stroeder/>.
- Hundt von Hafften auf Turowo, E. C. Vorschläge zur Beseitigung der Massen-Auswanderung. Berlin: Kortkamp, 1873.
- Ihering, Hermann Von. Die Geschichte des Atlantischen Ozeans. Jena: Gustav Fischer, 1927.
- Ilg, Karl. Das Deutschtum in Chile und Argentinien. Wien: Österreichische Landsmannschaft, 1982.
- . Heimat Südamerika: Brasilien und Peru: Leistung und Schicksal deutschsprachiger Siedler. Innsbruck; Wien: Tyrolia-Verlag, 1982.
- Imaz, José Luis. "Alejandro E. Bunge, economista y sociólogo (1880 - 1943)." Desarrollo económico Vol. 14, no. Nr.55 (1974): 545–67.
- Imfeld, Daniel J. Sujetos y espacios en una colonia agrícola: Rafaela (1881 ca. 1910). Rafaela en el tiempo. Rafaela: Centro de Estudios e Investigaciones Históricas de Rafaela, 2001.
- Informe oficial de la Comisión Científica agregada al Estado Mayor General de la Expedición al Río Negro (Patagonia) Realizada en los meses de Abril, Mayo y Junio de 1879, bajo las*

- órdenes del General D. Julio A. Roca / Entrega I. Zoología.* Buenos Aires: Imprenta de Ostwald y Martinez, 1881.
- Informe oficial de la Comision Científica agragada al Estado Mayor General de la Expedicion al Rio Negro (Patagonia) Realizada en los meses de Abril, Mayo y Junio de 1879, bajo las órdenes del General D. Julio A. Roca / III. Geología.* Buenos Aires: Imprenta "Ostwald," 1882.
- Ingenieros, José. Die Bildung einer argentinischen Rasse. Buenos Aires: Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein, 1915.
- Ingolf, Diener, and Olivier Graefe. Contemporary Namibia: The First Landmarks of a Post-Apartheid Society. Windhoek Namibia: Gamsberg Macmillan, 2001.
- Ingrao, Charles, and Franz A. J. Szabo, eds. The Germans and the East. West Lafayette, Ind: Purdue University Press, 2007.
- Insausti, Magdalena. Argentina: Un País de Inmigrantes. [Buenos Aires Argentina?]: Programa Museo Hotel del Inmigrante, 1998.
- Insel, Claire Elizabeth. "Shifting Publics and Shifting Alignments in a Sprachinsel of Southern Brazil." Ph.D., University of Michigan, 2011.
- Institución Ernesto Tornquist. Ernesto Tornquist, 1842-1942. Buenos Aires: Talleres de la Compañía Impresora Argentina s.a., 1942.
- Institut, Geographisches. Neue allgemeine geographische und statistische Ephemeriden. Verlag des Landes-Industrie-Comptoirs, 1829.
- Instituto de Informacion, Estudio y Accion Sociales, ed. Museo Social Argentina 1911. Buenos Aires: Gran Campaña Social, 1911.
- Instituto Panamericano de Geografía e Historia., ed. La inmigración a America Latina: primeras jornadas internacionales sobre la migracion en America. Instituto Panamericano de Geografía e Historia, 1985.
- Interessengemeinschaft Deutschsprachiger Südwestler, IG. Interessengemeinschaft Deutschsprachiger Südwestler, IG. Windhoek, 1919.
- Irigoyen, Bernardo de. Colonización é Inmigración en la República Argentina: Datos y antecedentes. La Plata: Talleres de Publicationces del Museo, 1901.
- Iriye, Akira, and Pierre-Yves Saunier, eds. The Palgrave Dictionary of Transnational History. Basingstoke [England]; New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009.
- Irlé, Hedwig. Die schwarze Johanna: Johanna Maria Gertse, die erste Hererochristin. Stuttgart: Jugend- und Volksschriften-Verlag, 1900.
- . Eine schwarze Prinzessin. Barmen: Missionshaus-Verlag, 1910.
- . In Gottes Schule: Lebensbild einer Missionarin. Barmen: Verlag [Kontor] des Missionshauses, 1925.
- . Unsere schwarzen Landsleute in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Gütersloh: Bertelsmann, 1911.
- . Wie ich die Herero lieben lernte. Gütersloh: Bertelsmann, 1914.
- Irlé, Jakob. Die Herero: Ein Beitrag zur Landes-, Volks- und Missionskunde. Gütersloh: [Bertelsmann], 1906.

- Isaak, Paul John. The Evangelical Lutheran Church in the Republic of Namibia in the 21st Century. Gamsberg Macmillan, 2000.
- Ismar, Georg. "Der deutsch-argentinische Pressestreit: Die Auseinandersetzung zwischen Argentinischem Tageblatt und der Deutschen La Plata Zeitung." Argentinisches Tageblatt. October 1, 2005.
- . Der Pressekrieg argentinisches Tageblatt und deutsche La Plata Zeitung 1933 - 1945. Berlin: wvb Wiss. Verl., 2006.
- Jackisch, Carlota. El nazismo y los refugiados alemanes en la Argentina, 1933-1945. Buenos Aires: Editorial de Belgrano, 1989.
- Jacob, Raúl. "Bunge y Born en Uruguay (1915-1945)." Ciclo en la historia, la economía y la sociedad Año 5, no. 5 (1995): 29–54.
- Jacobi, E. "Die Verbreitung der deutschen Sprache in den Schutzgebieten." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 40–47.
- . "Ein bayrisches Kolonialunternehmen im 17. Jahrhundert." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 5 (1903): 184–200.
- . "Eine koloniale Schulrechtsfrage." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 273–77.
- Jacobson, Matthew Frye. Special Sorrows: The Diasporic Imagination of Irish, Polish, and Jewish Immigrants in the United States. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1995.
- Jaeger, Hans. Unternehmer in der deutschen Politik (1890-1918). Bonn: Röhrscheid, 1967.
- Jaehn, Tomas. Germans in the Southwest, 1850-1920. Albuquerque: The University of New Mexico Press, 2005.
- Jäger, Michaela. "Ring frei für die Nam-Slang-Kontroverse: Südwesterdeutsches Kunstwerk oder faules Plagiat in Fäkalsprache? Beim 'Naminator' scheiden sich die Geister." Allgemeine Zeitung. April 27, 2007, sec. Kultur und Unterhaltung.
- Jäggi-Gyger, Friedrich. Argentinische Zustände: Ein unbefangenes Urtheil. Vol. 1. Bern: B. F. Haller, 1875.
- Jahn, Adalbert. Wichtige Beiträge zur Einwanderung und Kolonisation in Brasilien. Berlin: J. Guttentag, 1874.
- Jahnel, Markus J. Das Bodenrecht in "Neudeutschland über See": Erwerb, Vergabe und Nutzung von Land in der Kolonie Deutsch-Südwestafrika 1884-1915. Frankfurt am Main: Peter Lang, 2009.
- Jahrbuch für die Kenntnis und Entwicklung der Deutschen Kolonien*. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1908.
- Jaime, Juan Cruz. Pinamar: sueño de Jorge Bunge. 1. ed. Buenos Aires: Pinamar S.A., 2003.
- Jakob, Christfried. Das intellektuelle Argentinien und seine Beziehungen zur romanischen und germanischen Kultur. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 2. Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912.

- Jannasch, Robert. "Argentinien als Wirtschafts- und Auswanderungsgebiet." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 753–73. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- . Deutsche Arbeit in Südamerika. [Berlin], 1916.
- . Die Deutsche Handelsexpedition 1886. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1887.
- . "Die praktischen Aufgaben der deutschen Auswanderungspolitik." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 586–96. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- , ed. Die Wege und Entfernungen zur See im Weltverkehr. Berlin; Leipzig: Verlag des "Export"; R. Friese, 1904.
- . Mitteilungen über Industrielle Unternehmungen in Siebenbürgen. Berlin: R. Jannasch, 1900.
- , ed. Rathschläge für Auswanderer nach Südbrasilien. Auf Veranlassung des Centralvereins für Handelsgeographie und Förderung deutscher Interessen im Auslande zu Berlin. Berlin: Allgemeine Verlags-Agentur, 1897.
- , ed. Rathschläge für Auswanderer nach Südbrasilien. Auf Veranlassung des Central-Vereins für Handelsgeographie und Förderung deutscher Interessen im Auslande zu Berlin. Fifth edition. Berlin; Leipzig: Central-Verein; Friese in Komm, 1913.
- . Telegraphenkarte für den Weltverkehr ... Herausgegeben von Dr. R. Jannasch. ... Massstab, 1: 47,000,000. Berlin: Lithogr. Institut, 1901.
- . Unsere Pferde: Ein Beitrag zur deutschen Nationalöconomie. Dresden: Zeh, 1860.
- . Vorschläge zur Abänderung des Auswanderungs-Gesetzentwurfes [Eingabe] an das Präsidium des Hohen Deutschen Reichstages. Berlin: Gergonne, 1893.
- . Weshalb die Deutschen im Auslande unbeliebt sind! Im Auftrage des "Centralvereins für Handelsgeographie und Förderung Deutscher Interessen im Auslande." Berlin: Verlag des "Export" Berlin W 62, 1915.
- Jaya, Peruvemba S. "Themes of Identity: An Auto-Ethnographical Exploration." The Qualitative Report 16, no. 3 (2011): 745–63.
- Jefferson, Mark. "[Review of] Argentinien, ein Land der Zukunft." Bulletin of the American Geographical Society 46, no. 7 (1914): 537.
- . "[Review of] Süd- und Mittel-Amerika. Seine Bedeutung für Wirtschaft und Handel. Ein Ratgeber für Exporteure, Importeure, Ansiedler, Minen-Interessenten, Kapitalisten, usw. Von O. Prusse-Sperber." Bulletin of the American Geographical Society 46, no. 9 (1914): 688.
- Jefferson, Mark Sylvester William. Peopling the Argentine Pampa. Kennikat Press Scholarly Reprints. Series in Latin-American History and Culture. Port Washington, N.Y.: Kennikat Press, 1971.
- Jeffries, Matthew. Contesting the German Empire, 1871-1918. Malden, MA; Oxford: Blackwell Pub., 2008.
- Jeremy, Silvester, ed. Re-Viewing Resistance in Namibian History. Windhoek: University of Namibia Press, 2015.

- Jessen, Ralph, and Jakob Vogel, eds. Wissenschaft und Nation in der europäischen Geschichte. Frankfurt; New York: Campus, 2002.
- Jesser, Franz. Innere Kolonisation in den Sudetenländern: Mit einem Nachwort. Deutsche soziale Rundschau, 1913.
- Joeden-Forgey, Elisa von. "Nobody's People: Colonial Subjects, Race Power and the German State, 1884-1945." Ph.D., University of Pennsylvania, 2004.
- Johannsen, G. Kurt (Gustav Kurt), and Heinrich Helmut Kraft. Germany's Colonial Problem: The Necessity for Redistributing the World's Raw Material Resources; London: T. Butterworth Ltd., 1937.
- Johns, Michael. "Industrial Capital and Economic Development in Turn of the Century Argentina." Economic Geography 68, no. 2 (1992): 188–204.
- Johnston, William. Der österreichische Mensch: Kulturgeschichte der Eigenart Österreichs. Wien: Böhlau, 2010.
- Jones, Charles A. European Bankers and Argentina, 1880-90. University of Cambridge Centre of Latin American Studies Working Papers. Business Imperialism Series 3. Cambridge: Centre of Latin American Studies, University of Cambridge, 1970.
- Jones, Geoffrey, and Andrea Lluch, eds. The Impact of Globalization on Argentina and Chile: Business Enterprises and Entrepreneurship. Cheltenham: Edward Elgar Publishing, 2015.
- Jr, Alfred E. Eckes. The Contemporary Global Economy: A History since 1980. John Wiley & Sons, 2011.
- Juhel, Pierre. La conquête de l'océan Atlantique. Paris: Vuibert, 2009.
- Jung, Karl Emil. Deutsche Kolonien. Ein Beitrag zur besseren Kenntniss des Lebens und Wirkens unserer Landsleute in allen Erdteilen. Leipzig, 1884.
- Junge, Hergen, Gerhard Töttemeyer, and Marianne Zappen-Thomson, eds. The Identity and Role of the German-Speaking Community in Namibia. Windhoek, Namibia: Namibisch-Deutsche Stiftung für Kulturelle Zusammenarbeit, 1993.
- Kade. Mission und Kolonisation: ein Vortrag, gehalten in der Abtheilung Aschaffenburg der Deutschen Kolonial-Gesellschaft. Aschaffenburg: Wailandt, 1892.
- Kaelble, Hartmut. "Between Comparison and Transfers - and What Now? A French-German Debate." In Comparative and Transnational History: Central European Approaches and New Perspectives, edited by Heinz-Gerhard Haupt and Jürgen Kocka, 33–38. New York: Berghahn Books, 2009.
- Kaempffer, Adolf. "Wachtmeister Felgenstein: Eine Begebenheit in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." In Afrika spricht zu Dir: Selbsterlebnisse deutscher Kolonialpioniere, edited by Paul Ritter, 221–58. Mühlhausen, Thüringen: Bergwald-Verlag Walter Paul, 1938.
- Kaerger, Karl. Landwirtschaft und Kolonisation im Spanischen Amerika. Erster Band. Die La Plata-Staaten. Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1901.
- Kahn, Siegbert. Der wiedererstandene deutsche Imperialismus. Berlin: Die Wirtschaft, 1955.
- Kalinna, Lea. Exil und Identität: Die deutsche Emigration in Argentinien während des Nationalsozialismus am Beispiel der Freien Deutschen Bühne. Berlin: s.l., 2009.

- Kamphoefner, Walter. "¿Quiénes fueron al sur? La elección de destino entre los inmigrantes alemanes en el siglo XIX." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 14, no. 42 (1999): 23–47.
- Kanzler, Sven-Eric. Expelled From a Beloved Country: The Story of Two Brothers From Germany and Their Farm Karios at the Fish River Canyon in Namibia Against the Background of German Colonial Times and the First World War in South West Africa. Windhoek: Nature Investments Pty Ltd., 2003.
- Kapler, Dr. Die deutschen Schutzgebiete als Arbeitsfeld für den Gustav Adolf-Verein. Vortrag gehalten auf der 65. Hauptversammlung des Gustav Adolf-Vereins in Kiel. Leipzig: J.C. Hinrichs'sche Buchhandlung, 1913.
- Karlen, Stefan, and Hans Werner Tobler. "Massen- und Einzelauswanderung aus der Schweiz nach Lateinamerika im 19. und 20. Jahrhundert." Traverse Schweiz - Dritte Welt, 1998.
- Karow, Maria. Wo sonst der Fuss des Kriegers trat: Farmerleben in Südwest nach dem Kriege. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1909.
- Karsten, Paula. Wer ist mein Nächster? Negertypen aus Deutschwestafrika. Berlin: Gose und Tetzlaff, 1903.
- Kasdorf, Otto. Der Wirtschaftskampf um Südamerika. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1916.
- Kaufmann, Heinrich W. Meine Erlebnisse in Deutsch-Südwestafrika 1913-1916; Tagebuchblätter von Heinrich W. Kaufmann. Bonn: Schergens-Verl., 1916.
- Kaulich, Udo. Die Geschichte der ehemaligen Kolonie Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 1884-1914. Frankfurt am Main; New York: P. Lang, 2001.
- Kavari, Jekura, Dag Henrichsen, and Larissa Förster. "Die oturupa." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 154–63. Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Kazal, Russell. Becoming Old Stock: The Paradox of German-American Identity. Princeton N.J.: Princeton University Press, 2004.
- . Revisiting Assimilation: The Rise, Fall and Reappraisal of a Concept in American Ethnic History. Washington D.C.: American Historical Association, 1995.
- Keil, Hartmut. "Die Vereinigten Staaten von Amerika zwischen kontinentaler Expansion und Imperialismus." In Imperialistische Kontinuität und nationale Ungeduld im 19. Jahrhundert, edited by Wolfgang Reinhard, 68–86. Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, 1991.
- Keil, Thomas. "Die postkoloniale deutsche Literatur in Namibia (1920-2000)." Ph.D., Universität Stuttgart, 2003.
- Keiper, Wilhelm. "Argentinien in der Deutschen Literatur." Ibero-amerikanisches Archiv 14, no. 4 (1941): 256–99.
- . Begleitworte zu den Wettbewerbsbedingungen für einen deutschen Brunnen in Buenos Aires. Buenos Aires, 1909.
- . Das deutsche höhere Schulwesen. Buenos Aires: Schneider, 1919.

- . “Das Deutschtum als Volksgemeinschaft: Begriff und Umfang.” In Das Deutschtum in Argentinien: Sein Werden, Wesen und Wirken, 188–96. Berlin, 1943.
- . Der deutsche Brunnen in Buenos Aires: Das Werk und der Künstler. Stuttgart: Stähle & Friedel, 1928.
- . Der Deutsche in Argentinien. Buenos Aires: (Deutsche Angestelltenschaft Ortsgruppe Buenos Aires), 1935.
- . Der Deutsche in Argentinien für Jugend und Volk zusammengestellt. Der Deutsche im Auslande 57. Langensalza: J. Beltz, 1928.
- . “Der Stand der Forschung über das Deutschtum in Argentinien.” Peine, May 1949.
- . Deutsche Kulturaufgaben in Argentinien: Vortrag, gehalten am 30. Januar 1914 im Preußischen Abgeordnetenhaus. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 7. Berlin: Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband, 1914.
- . Die Belgranoschule in Buenos Aires, 1897 bis 1927. Buenos Aires: Deutsche Schulvereinigung, 1927.
- . Fernando Fader. Buenos Aires Compañia sud-americana de billetes de banco, 1918.
- . La cuestión del profesorado secundario por el Dr. Wilhelm Keiper. Publicaciones del Instituto nacional del profesorado secundario 1. Buenos Aires: Tipografía Leo Mirau, 1907.
- . La enseñanza de la historia en los colegios nacionales. Buenos Aires: Talleres gráficos de la penitenciaría nacional, 1910.
- . La enseñanza secundaria alemana. Second Edition. Buenos Aires: Garcia Santos, 1928.
- . Santos Vega, von Robert Lehmann-Nitsche, Buenos Aires 1917. [S.l., 1917.
- . Vom deutschen Schulwesen in Argentinien. Buenos Aires, 1936.
- . Voran mit Goethe: den Deutschen in Argentinien zur hundertjährigen Wiederkehr seines Todestages / Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von; Associated name; (Associated name). Buenos Aires [Beutelspacher], 1932.
- . Ziele und Aufgaben des Deutschen Wissenschaftlichen Vereins in Buenos Aires: im Auftrage des Vorstandes von Prof. Dr. Wilhelm Keiper, Vorsitzenden. Buenos Aires: Mengen, 1913.
- . Zur Frage der Vereinheitlichung des deutschen Schulwesens von Buenos Aires und Umgebung: Vortrag gehalten am 19. August 1919. Buenos Aires, 1919.
- Kellenbenz, Hermann. Die Auswanderung nach Lateinamerika und die deutschen Kaufleute: vornehmlich am Beispiel Brasilien. Köln: Böhlau, 1989.
- Keltie, J. Scott, ed. The Stateman's Year-Book: Statistical and Historical Annual of the States of the World for the Year 1891. Vol. 28. London: Macmillan and Co., 1891.
- Kelz, Robert. “El teatro y la concepción de lo nacional: el Deutsches Theater (Ney-Bühne).” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 177–94.
- Kenny, Kevin. “Diaspora and Comparison: The Global Irish as a Case Study.” Journal of American History 90, no. 1 (2003): 134–62.

- Kerp, Heinrich. Die aussereuropäischen Erdteile nebst den deutschen Kolonien. Methodisches Lehrbuch einer begründend-vergleichenden Erdkunde. Mit begründender Darstellung der Wirtschafts- und Kulturgeographie 3. Trier: F. Lintz, 1904.
- Kerst, Samuel Gottfried. Die Länder am Uruguay. Vortrag, gehalten in der Sitzung des Berliner Vereins zur Centralisation deutscher Auswanderung und Colonisation am 8. October 1851. Berlin: Julius Sittenfeld, 1851.
- . Die Länder im Stromgebiete des La Plata, mit Rücksicht auf den deutschen Handel und die deutsche Auswanderung. Vortrag, gehalten am 12. Mai 1852 in der öffentlichen Sitzung des Central-Vereins für Deutsche Auswanderungs- und Colonisations-Angelegenheiten in Berlin. Berlin: Selbstverlag des Vereins, 1852.
- . Die Plata-Staaten und die Wichtigkeit der Provinz Otuquis und des Rio Bermejo seit der Annahme des Princips der freien Schifffarth auf den Zuflüssen des Rio de la Plata. Berlin: Veit und Comp., 1854.
- . Über brasilianische Zustände der Gegenwart, mit Bezug auf die deutsche Auswanderung nach Brasilien und das System der brasilianischen Pflanzer, den Mangel an afrikanischen Sklaven durch deutsche Proletarier zu ersetzen. Berlin: Beit und Comp, 1853.
- Kersten, O., ed. Geographische Nachrichten für Welthandel und Volkswirtschaft. Berlin: Selbstverlag des Centralvereins für Handelsgeographie und Förderung der deutschen Interessen im Auslande, 1879.
- Kesselmann, Günter F. "Frisch, fromm, fröhlich, frei: Der Turnverein als gesellschaftlicher Faktor in Südwestafrika." In Vom Schutzgebiet bis Namibia 2000, edited by Klaus Hess and Klaus Becker. Göttingen; Windhoek: Hess, 2002.
- Kessler, Gabriel. "L'expérience de paupérisation de la classe moyenne argentine." Cultures & Conflits 35 (1999): 71–93.
- Kienetz, Alvin. "Nineteenth-Century South West Africa as a German Settlement Colony." Ph.D., University of Minnesota, 1976.
- Kiepert, Richard, ed. Globus: illustrierte Zeitschrift für Länder- und Völkerkunde. Braunschweig: F. Vieweg und Sohn, 1881.
- Kietz, Kurt. Deutsche kolonisieren: Berichte berühmter Kolonial-Deutscher. Hirts Deutsche Sammlung. Sachkundliche Abteilung. Länder -und Völkerkunde ... Gruppe III: Mensch und Volkstum 7. Breslau: F. Hirt, 1934.
- Kindt, Ludwig. "Sollen die Eingeborenen und die fremden Arbeiter in unseren Kolonien die deutsche Sprache erlernen?" Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 281–84.
- King, John Anthony, and Thomas Richard Whitney. Twenty-Four Years in the Argentine Republic: Embracing the Author's Personal Adventures, with the Civil and Military History of the Country, and an Account of Its Political Condition before and during the Administration of Governor Rosas; His Course of Policy; the Causes and Character of His Interference with the Government of Monte Video, and the Circumstances Which Led to the Interposition of England and France. Longman, Brown, Green, and Longmans, 1846.
- Kirchberger, Ulrike. Aspekte deutsch-britischer Expansion: die Überseeinteressen der deutschen Migranten in Grossbritannien in der Mitte des 19. Jahrhunderts. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1999.

- Kirchenbundesrat des Deutschen Evangelisch-Lutherischen Kirchenbundes in Süd- und SüdwestAfrika, ed. Afrikanischer Heimatkalender 1978. Windhoek: Afrikanischer Heimatkalender, 1978.
- Kirkpatrick, F. A. South America and the War. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1918.
- Kitzmantel, Angelika. “Die Jesuitenmissionare Martin Dobrizhoffer und Florian Paucke und ihre Beiträge zur Ethnographie des Gran Chaco im 18. Jahrhundert.” Ph.D., Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München, 2004.
- Kjæret, Kristin, and Kristian Stokke. “Rehoboth Baster, Namibian or Namibian Baster? An Analysis of National Discourses in Rehoboth, Namibia.” Nations and Nationalism 9, no. 4 (2003): 579–600.
- Klammer, Ivana R. “Reinventing the Colonial Fantasy in the Post-WWII Era: Jovita Epp’s Amado Mio.” M.A., Brigham Young University, 2010.
- Klaussmann, Anton O. Mit Büchse, Spaten und Ochsenstrick in Südvest-Afrika: Für d. reifere Jugend. Phönix-Bibliothek 2. Kattowitz: K. Siwinna, 1903.
- Kleinschmidt, Harald. Menschen in Bewegung: Inhalte und Ziele historischer Migrationsforschung. Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2002.
- Klich, Ignacio, ed. Sobre nazis y nazismo en cultura argentina. [S.l.]: Hispamerica, 2002.
- Klingenfuss, Karl. “Handel und Wandel: Fünf Jahrzehnte Kammerarbeit.” In Cámara de Comercio Argentino-Alemana: 1916-1966. Deutsch-Argentinische Handelskammer, 87–104. Buenos Aires: Parada Obiol Artes Gráf, 1966.
- Klössel, M. Hans. “Deutsche Kolonisation in Südamerika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 457–85.
- . Die südafrikanischen Republiken. Buren-Freistaaten. Geschichte und Land der Buren für Deutschlands Export und Auswanderung. Nach amtlichen Quellen des Reichsamtes des Innern in Berlin bearbeitet. Leipzig: Verlag von Eduard Heinrich Mayer, 1888.
- Klotz, Marcia, ed. German Colonialism: Another Sonderweg? Special Edition. Vol. 16. European Studies Journal 2. Cedar Falls, Iowa: University of Northern Iowa, 1999.
- Klötzel, Lydia. Die Russlanddeutschen zwischen Autonomie und Auswanderung: Die Geschicke einer nationalen Minderheit vor dem Hintergrund des wechselhaften deutsch-sowjetischen/russischen Verhältnisses. Münster: LIT Verlag, 1999.
- Knieß, Günter. 20 años de la caída del Muro, 60 años de la República Federal de Alemania. Buenos Aires: Embajada de la Republica Federal de Alemania, 2009.
- Knöbl, Wolfgang. Die Kontingenz der Moderne: Wege in Europa, Asien und Amerika. Campus Verlag, 2007.
- Knobloch, Phillip Dylan Thomas. Pädagogik in Argentinien. Waxmann Verlag, 2013.
- Knoll, Arthur, and Hermann J. Hiery, eds. The German Colonial Experience. Lanham Md.; Boulder Colo.: University Press of America, 2010.
- Knoll, Hans. “Los comienzos de la inmigración alemana hacia la Argentina tras la Primera Guerra Mundial.” In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited

- by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 91–107. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- . “Villa General Belgrano en el siglo XX: El proyecto de colonización de Paul Friedrich Heintze y su puesta en práctica.” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 37–48.
- Knoll, Paul W. “The Most Unique Crusader State: The Teutonic Order in the Development of the Political Culture of Northeastern Europe during the Middle Ages.” In The Germans and the East, edited by Charles Ingrao and Franz A. J. Szabo, 37–48. West Lafayette, Ind: Purdue University Press, 2007.
- Köbner, Otto Max. Einführung in die Kolonialpolitik. Jena: G. Fischer, 1908.
- Koch, Bernhard. Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: “Feldpost” auf Seeposten 1904 - 1907. Hamburg, 1981.
- Koch, Henny. Die Vollrads in Südwest: eine Erzählung für junge Mädchen. Stuttgart, Berlin, Leipzig: Union, 1916.
- Kocka, Jürgen, and Heinz-Gerhard Haupt. “Comparison and Beyond: Traditions, Scope and Perspectives.” In Comparative and Transnational History: Central European Approaches and New Perspectives, edited by Heinz-Gerhard Haupt and Jürgen Kocka, 1–32. New York: Berghahn Books, 2009.
- Koenen, Eberhard von. Heil- und Giftpflanzen in Südwestafrika. Windhoek: Akad. Verl. Windhoek, 1977.
- . Namibias Heilkunde im Wandel: Rückblick auf ein Leben zwischen Natur- und Geisteswissenschaft. Göttingen; Windhoek: Klaus Hess, 2008.
- Kogut, Bruce. The Transatlantic Exchange of Ideas and Practices: National Institutions and Diffusion. Paris: Institut français des relations internationales, 2000.
- Kohut, Karl, ed. Deutsche in Lateinamerika - Lateinamerika in Deutschland. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1996.
- Kokkonen, Pellervo. “Religious and Colonial Realities: Cartography of the Finnish Mission in Ovamboland, Namibia.” History in Africa 20 (1993): 155–71.
- Kolben, Peter. The Present State of the Cape of Good Hope: Or, A Particular Account of the Several Nations of the Hottentots: Their Religion, Government, Laws, Customs, Ceremonies, and Opinions; Their Art of War, Professions, Language, Genius, Etc. Translated by Mr. Medley. London: W. Innys, 1731.
- Koller, Christian. “Eine Zivilisierungsmission der Arbeiterklasse? Die Diskussion über eine ‘sozialistische Kolonialpolitik’ vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg.” In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 229–43. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- Kolonialkongreß, Deutscher. Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, 1924: zu Berlin am 17. und 18. September 1924. Berlin: Verlag Kolonialkriegerdank (“Koloniale Rundschau”), 1924.
- Kolonialpolitik, nicht Kolonialskandale und Nebenregierung!: Ein Rückblick auf die letzten Reichstagverhandlungen*. Berlin: Buchh. d. Nationallib. Partei, 1907.

- Kolonialwirtschaftliche Ausstellung der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft auf der Wanderausstellung der Deutschen Landwirtschafts-Gesellschaft. Die Kolonialwirtschaftliche Ausstellung der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft auf der Wanderausstellung der Deutschen Landwirtschafts-Gesellschaft vom 2. bis 7. Juni 1910 in Hamburg. Berlin: Mosse, 1910.
- Kolonien und Kolonialpolitik*. M. Gladbach: Volksvereins-Verlag, 1909.
- Koner, Wilhelm David, ed. Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin. Vol. 3. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1868.
- König, Hans-Joachim, and Stefan Rinke, eds. Transatlantische Perzeptionen: Lateinamerika-USA-Europa in Geschichte und Gegenwart. Stuttgart: H.-D. Heinz, 1998.
- Köppen, Margit. "Strategies of German Big Business and Their International Setting During the 1980s." In Quest for Economic Empire: European Strategies of German Big Business in the Twentieth Century, edited by Volker R. Berghahn, 159–69. Providence: Berghahn Books, 1996.
- Korn, Brigitte. Willkommen in Buenos Aires: Tipps, Erfahrungen und Kontakte. Edited by Deutsch-Argentinische Industrie- und Handelskammer. Third edition. Buenos Aires: Cámara de Industria y Comercio Argentino-Alemana, 2009.
- Körner, Friedrich. Süd-Afrika: Natur- und Kulturbilder mit einer historischen Einleitung und einer ausführlichen Uebersicht der neueren Reisen. Breslau, Leipzig: Ferdinand Hirt, 1873.
- Körner, Karl Wilhelm. "Johann Christian Zimmermann: Ein deutscher Unternehmer in Übersee." Tradition: Zeitschrift für Firmengeschichte und Unternehmerbiographie 15, no. 6 (1970): 282–95.
- Koschitzky, Max von. Deutsche Colonialgeschichte. Leipzig: P. Froberg, 1887.
- Koschorke, Klaus, Frieder Ludwig, Mariano Delgado, and Roland Spliesgart. A History of Christianity in Asia, Africa, and Latin America, 1450-1990: A Documentary Sourcebook. Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing, 2007.
- Koselleck, Reinhart. "Social History and Conceptual History." International Journal of Politics, Culture, and Society 2, no. 3 (1989): 308–25.
- Koslowski, Peter. The Theory of Ethical Economy in the Historical School: Wilhelm Roscher, Lorenz von Stein, Gustav Schmoller, Wilhelm Dilthey, and Contemporary Theory. Studies in Economic Ethics and Philosophy. Berlin; New York: Springer-Verlag, 1995.
- Kössler, Reinhard. Namibia and Germany: Negotiating the Past. Windhoek: University of Namibia Press, 2015.
- Kössler, Reinhard. "Entangled History and Politics: Negotiating the Past between Namibia and Germany." Journal of Contemporary African Studies 26, no. 3 (2008): 313–39.
- . "Kolonialherrschaft - auch eine deutsche Vergangenheit." In Kolonialismus und Erinnerungskultur: Die Kolonialvergangenheit im kollektiven Gedächtnis der deutschen und niederländischen Einwanderungsgesellschaft, edited by Helma Lutz and Kathrin Gawarecki, 23–40. Münster, New York: Waxmann Verlag, 2005.
- Kostka, Helga, and Siegfried Gruber. Seiner Zeit: 1874 bis 1929; Redakteur Franz Seiner und seine Zeit. Graz: Acad. Publ., 2007.

- Krämer, Nadja D. "Auf, Freudige Germanen...!: Hans Grimm's Colonial Project, 1913-1926." Ph.D., Indiana University, 2002.
- Kramer, Paul Alexander. Blood of Government: Race, Empire, the United States, and the Philippines: Race, Empire, the United States, and the Philippines. Chapel Hill, North Carolina: University of North Carolina Press, 2006.
- . The Pragmatic Empire: U.S. Anthropology and Colonial Politics in the Occupied Philippines, 1898-1916. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University, 1998.
- Kramer, Valentin. "Deutsch, deutsch-argentinisch, argentinisch. Kulturelle Aushandlungsprozesse in deutschen Einwanderervereinen in Argentinien, 1856-1930." In Migration – Religion – Identität. Aspekte transkultureller Prozesse: Migration – Religion – Identity. Aspects of Transcultural Processes, edited by Kerstin Kanzazi, Angela Treiber, and Tim Wätzold, 95–107. Wiesbaden: Springer Fachmedien, 2016.
- . Zwischen den Heimaten: Deutsch-argentinische Einwanderervereine in Rosario und Esperanza, 1856-1933. Bielefeld: transcript Verlag, 2016.
- Kratzenstein, Eduard. Kurze Geschichte der Berliner Mission in Südafrika. Third Edition. Berlin: Selbstverlag des Missionshauses, 1887.
- Krause, Otto. Krause cien años despues: Historia de la Educación Industrial. Homenaje al Centenario de la inauguración del edificio. Emblema de la enseñanza para el desarrollo industrial argentino. Buenos Aires, 2008.
- Kreike, Emmanuel. Environmental Infrastructure in African History: Examining the Myth of Natural Resource Management in Namibia. New York: Cambridge University Press, 2013.
- Krome, Fritz. Deutsche in Südamerika. Leipzig: Verlag Lüche & Co., 1938.
- Kroyer, Sylvia. Deutsche Vermögen in Argentinien 1945-1965: ein Beitrag über deutsche Direktinvestitionen im Ausland. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 2005.
- Krüger, Gesine. "Koloniale Gewalt, Alltagserfahrungen und Überlebensstrategien." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 92–105. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- . Kriegsbewältigung und Geschichtsbewusstsein: Realität, Deutung und Verarbeitung des deutschen Kolonialkriegs in Namibia 1904 bis 1907. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1999.
- Krüger, Karl. Deutsche Grossraumwirtschaft. Hamburg: Hanseatische Verlagsanstalt, 1932.
- Kruse, Jens. Reiseberichte aus den deutschen Kolonien: Das Bild vom "Eingeborenen" in Reiseberichten der deutschen Kolonialzeit, 1884-1918. München: GRIN Verlag GmbH, 2007.
- Kühlmann, Torsten M., and Bernd Müller-Jacquier, eds. Deutsche in der Fremde: Assimilation - Abgrenzung - Integration. Schriften des Instituts für Internationale Kommunikation und Auswärtige Kulturarbeit Bayreuth / Institut für Internationale Kommunikation und Auswärtige Kulturarbeit Bayreuth. - St. Ingbert: Röhrig, 2007- 1. St. Ingbert: Röhrig, 2007.
- Kühn, Franz. Argentinien: Handbuch zur physischen Landeskunde. Vol. 2. Breslau: Hirt, 1927.
- . Argentinien: Handbuch zur physischen Landeskunde. Vol. 1. Breslau: F. Hirt, 1927.

- . Aus den Hochkordilleren von San Juan (Argentinien). Gotha: Perthes, 1913.
- . Bilder aus den argentinischen Cordilleren. Paraná: Deutscher Volksbund für Argentinien, 1926.
- . “Buenos Aires. Eine siedelungskundliche Studie.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 2:267–87. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914.
- . Das neue Argentinien: eine wirtschaftsgeographische Analyse mit Betriebs- und Verbrauchskunde. Hamburg: Behre, 1941.
- . “Die atlantische Küstenschiffahrt Patagoniens vor dem Weltkrieg.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Otto Quelle, 8:39–48. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1920.
- . Die Cordillerenlandschaft in Südmendoza (Argentinien): Ergebnisse einer Studienreise von San Rafael nach dem Quellgebiet des Río Atuel. Frankfurt am Main: Verein für Geographie und Statistik, 1924.
- . Die Hochgebirgslandschaft der Sierra Famatina, Provinz La Rioja, Argentinien. Buenos Aires: Preusche, 1922.
- . Die patagonischen Häfen Argentiniens. Buenos Aires: Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein zur Kultur- und Landeskunde Argentiniens, 1915.
- . “Geographischer Bericht aus Argentinien während der Kriegsjahre 1914 bis 1919.” Edited by Walter Behrmann. Zeitschrift der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, 1919, 442–62.
- . Grundriss der Kulturgeographie von Argentinien. Untersuchung eines südamerikanischen Lebensraumes nach anthropogeographischen und geopolitischen Gesichtspunkten. Hamburg, 1933.
- Kuhn, Philalethes. Gesundheitlicher Ratgeber für Südwestafrika. Berlin: Mittler, 1907.
- Kuhn, Philalethes, and Kurd Schwabe, eds. Taschenbuch für Südwestafrika 1908. Leipzig: Wilhelm Weicher, 1907.
- Külz, Wilhelm. Deutsch-Südafrika im 25. Jahre deutscher Schutzherrschaft: Skizzen und Beiträge zur Geschichte Deutsch-Südafrikas. Second Edition. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1909.
- Kundrus, Birthe. “Blind Spots: Empire, Colonies, and Ethnic Identities in Modern German History.” In Gendering Modern German History: Rewriting Historiography, edited by Karen Hagemann and Jean H. Quataert, 86–106. Berghahn Books, 2008.
- . “Das Reichskolonialamt zwischen nationalem Geltungsbewusstsein und Weltbürgertum. Die Staatssekretäre Friedrich von Lindequist und Wilhelm Solf.” In “... Macht und Anteil an der Weltherrschaft”: Berlin und der deutsche Kolonialismus, edited by Ulrich van der Heyden and Joachim Zeller, 14–21. Münster: Unrast, 2005.
- . “Die Kolonien - ‘Kinder des Gefühls und der Phantasie.’” In Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, edited by Birthe Kundrus, 7–18. Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003.
- . Moderne Imperialisten: das Kaiserreich im Spiegel seiner Kolonien. Köln: Böhlau, 2003.
- , ed. Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus. Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003.

- . “Von Windhoek nach Nürnberg? Koloniale ‘Mischehenverbote’ und die nationalsozialistische Rassengesetzgebung.” In Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, edited by Birthe Kundrus, 110–31. Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003.
- Kunter, Katharina, and Jens Holger Schøjrring, eds. Changing Relations Between Churches in Europe and Africa: The Internationalization of Christianity and Politics in the 20th Century. Otto Harrassowitz Verlag, 2008.
- Künzel, Heinrich, and Wilhelm Stricker. Bericht über die Entstehung und bisherige Wirksamkeit des Nationalvereins für deutsche Auswanderung und Ansiedelung zu Frankfurt a.M. Darmstadt; Frankfurt am Main: R. v. Auw; C. Krebs-Schmitt, 1849.
- Kurowski, Ursula M. “Lebenslauf von Reinhard Maack.” Boletín Paranense de Geografía 10–15, no. Festschrift zum siebzigsten Geburtstag von Reinhard Maack (1964).
- Kurze Mitteilungen über die Republik Argentinien als Einwanderungs-Gebiet*. Second Edition. Buenos Aires: Druckerei des Meteorologischen Amtes, 1904.
- Kuß, Susanne. “Der Herero-Deutsche Krieg und das deutsche Militär: Kriegsursachen und Kriegsverlauf.” In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 62–77. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Laak, Dirk van. “‘Ist je ein Reich, das es nicht gab, so gut verwaltet worden?’: Der imaginäre Ausbau der imperialen Infrastruktur in Deutschland nach 1918.” In Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, edited by Birthe Kundrus, 71–90. Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003.
- . Über alles in der Welt: deutscher Imperialismus im 19. und 20. Jahrhundert. München: C.H.Beck, 2005.
- Labra, Rafael M. de. La Colonización en la Historia: Conferencias del ateneo científico literario de Madrid. Madrid: Librerías de A. de San Martín, 1876.
- Lachapelle Aguilar, Carlos. El ejército alemán en su actual organización de 1893. Madrid: El correo militar, 1893.
- Laffey, John F. Imperialism and Ideology: An Historical Perspective. Black Rose Books, 2000.
- Lagrou, Pieter. “Alfred Marbais du Graty, 1823-1891. Un aristócrata y aventurero que en diez años perdió la nacionalidad belga y la argentina.” In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 49–53. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Lanciotti, Norma, and Andrea Lluch. “Foreign Direct Investment in Argentina: Timing of Entry and Business Activities of Foreign Companies (1860-1950).” Entreprises et Histoire 54, no. 1 (2009): 37.
- Lanctot, Brendan. Beyond Civilization and Barbarism: Culture and Politics in Postrevolutionary Argentina. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2013.
- Landry, Stan M. Ecumenism, Memory, and German Nationalism, 1817-1917. Syracuse, New York: Syracuse University Press, 2014.
- Langbehn, Volker, ed. German Colonialism, Visual Culture, and Modern Memory. London, New York: Routledge, 2010.

- Langbehn, Volker Max, and Mohammad Salama, eds. German Colonialism: Race, the Holocaust, and Postwar Germany. New York: Columbia University Press, 2011.
- Lange, Friedrich. Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika, Kriegs- und Friedensbilder. Windhuk: Franz Rohloff, 1907.
- Langhans, Paul, ed. Deutsche Erde: Beiträge zur Kenntnis deutschen Volkstums allerorten und allerzeiten. Gotha: Justus Perthes, 1902.
- . Deutscher Kolonial-Atlas: 30 Karten mit 300 Nebenkarten. Gotha: J. Perthes, 1897.
- Längin, Bernd G. Die deutschen Kolonien: Schauplätze und Schicksale; 1884 - 1918. Hamburg: Mittler, 2004.
- Laqueur, Walter. Generation Exodus: The Fate of Young Jewish Refugees from Nazi Germany. London, New York: I.B.Tauris, 2004.
- Laragione, Lucía. 10 Plays from Argentina & South Africa. George, South Africa: Proyecto 34°S, 2011.
- Larden, Walter. Estancia Life; Agricultural, Economic, and Cultural Aspects of Argentine Farming. London, T. F. Unwin, 1911. Detroit: B. Ethridge--Books, 1974.
- Larson, Carolyne R. Our Indigenous Ancestors: A Cultural History of Museums, Science, and Identity in Argentina, 1877–1943. Penn State Press, 2015.
- Las relaciones intelectuales franco-argentinas; antecedentes recopilados por un argentino*. Buenos Aires: Impr. y Casa Editora "Coni," 1923.
- Latour, Bruno. Reassembling the Social: An Introduction to Actor-Network-Theory. Oxford; New York: Oxford University Press, 2005.
- Latzina, Francisco. Die argentinische Republik als Ziel der europäischen Auswanderung, statistisch-geographische Uebersicht über das Land und seine Hülfquellen, von allen Gesichtspunkten aus betrachtet durch Franz. Buenos-Aires: Stiller und Laass, 1883.
- . The Argentine Republic as a Field for European Emigration: A Statistical and Geographical Review of the Country and Its Resources with All Its Various Features. Buenos Aires, 1883.
- Lau, Brigitte. "Concerning the Hendrik Witbooi Papers." In History and Historiography: 4 Essays in Reprint, edited by Annemarie Heywood, 17–38. Windhoek: Discourse/ MSORP, 1995.
- . "Conflict and Power in Nineteenth-Century Namibia." The Journal of African History 27, no. 1 (1986): 29–39.
- . History and Historiography: 4 Essays in Reprint. Edited by Annemarie Heywood. Windhoek: Discourse/ MSORP, 1995.
- . "Johanna Uerieta Gertze and Emma Hahn: Some Thoughts on the Silence of Historical Records, with Reference to Carl Hugo Hahn." In History and Historiography: 4 Essays in Reprint, edited by Annemarie Heywood, 53–64. Windhoek: Discourse/ MSORP, 1995.
- . Namibia in Jonker Afrikaner's Time. 1st Edition. Windhoek: National Archives of Namibia, Department of National Education, 1987.
- . Southern and Central Namibia in Jonker Afrikaner's Time. Windhoek: National Archives, Dept. of Nat. Education, 1987.

- . “‘Thank God the Germans Came’: Vedder and Namibian Historiography.” In History and Historiography: 4 Essays in Reprint, edited by Annemarie Heywood, 1–16. Windhoek: Discourse/ MSORP, 1995.
- . “The Emergence of Kommando Politics in Namaland, Southern Namibia, 1800-1870.” University of Cape Town, 1985.
- . The Oppressed as Oppressors: Unresolved Issues of Namibian Historiography. Cape Town: University of Cape Town, Centre for African Studies, 1985.
- . “Uncertain Certainties - The Herero-German War of 1904.” In History and Historiography: 4 Essays in Reprint, edited by Annemarie Heywood, 39–52. Windhoek: Discourse/ MSORP, 1995.
- Lau, Brigitte, and Werner Hillebrecht. “The Role of the Namibian National Archives and Coordinaton with Private Archives in Namibia.” In Coordination of Information Systems and Services in Namibia. Papers of the Seminar (Windhoek, Namibia, February 25- March 5, 1993), edited by Andrée-Jeanne Töttemeyer, Johan Loubser, and Alet E. Marais, 106–13. Bonn; Windhoek: German Foundation for International Development; Ministry of Education and Culture (Namibia); University of Namibia, 1993.
- Lau, Brigitte, and Peter Reiner. 100 Years of Agricultural Development in Colonial Namibia: A Historical Overview of Visions and Experiments. Windhoek: National Archives of Namibia, 1993.
- Lauer, Hiltrud. “Die sprachliche Vereinnahmung des afrikanischen Raums im deutschen Kolonialismus.” In Deutsche Sprache und Kolonialismus: Aspekte der nationalen Kommunikation 1884-1919, edited by Ingo H. Warnke, 203–33. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2009.
- Lawrence, David M. Upheaval from the Abyss: Ocean Floor Mapping and the Earth Science Revolution. Rutgers University Press, 2002.
- Le Comte, Sophie. Buenos Aires, 1910-2010: bicentenario. 1. ed. [Martínez Buenos Aires: Maizal 2010 c2008], 2010.
- Lege, Klaus-Wilhelm, ed. Asociaciones Argentinas de Lengua Alemana: un aporte a la responsabilidad social = Argentinische Vereinigungen deutschsprachigen Ursprungs. Buenos Aires: Camara Argentino-Alemana de Buenos Aires, 2007.
- . “Deutscher Beitrag zum 200jährigen Jubiläum der Argentinischen Revolution 2010.” Unpublished manuscript. Buenos Aires, 2008.
- Legnazzi, Lilian, and María Inés Nocetti. Los inmigrantes alemanes en el recuerdo de sus descendientes. Buenos Aires: Universidad del Salvador, 2005.
- Legré-Zaidline, Françoise. Alcide Dessalines d'Orbigny (1802-1857). Paris; Budapest; Torino: l'Harmattan, 2002.
- Lehman, Kathryn. “Geography and Gender in the Narrative of Argentinean National Origin: The ‘Pampa’ as Chronotope.” Revista de Estudios Hispánicos - Alabama Then St. Louis 32, no. 1 (1998): 3–28.
- Lehmann, Emil. Die deutsche Auswanderung. Berlin: G. Reimer, 1861.
- Lehmann, Hartmut. “The Role of Religion in Germany and America in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries.” In Bridging the Atlantic: The Question of American Exceptionalism

- in Perspective*, edited by Elisabeth Glaser and Hermann Wellenreuther, 69–81. Cambridge England; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2002.
- Lehmann, Jon. Kaisers Geburtstag in Südwestafrika. Mühlhausen i.Th.: G. Danner, 1905.
- Lehmann-Nitsche, Robert. Aus der Pampa: Dichtungen vom Silberstrom. Leipzig: Meiner, 1940.
- . Aus ethnologischen Sternbilderstudien: I. Die Jugula. S.l., 1925.
- . Catálogo de La Sección Antropológica Del Museo de La Plata. Buenos Aires: Impr. de Coni hermanos, 1910.
- . Die Sterilisierung des Probierhengstes im lateinischen Amerika. Berlin: August Hirschwald, 1916.
- . Mitología Sudamericana. Buenos Aires, 1918.
- . Quelques observations nouvelles sur les indiens Guayaquis du Paraguay. La Plata: Talleres de Publicaciones del Museo, 1899.
- . ¿Quiére que le cuente el cuento del gallo pelado?: Estudio folklórico leído en la Junta de Historia y Numismática Americana. Buenos Aires: Peuser, 1908.
- . Ulrich Schmidel: der erste Geschichtschreiber der La Plata-Länder. Buenos Aires: Gmo. Van Woerden, 1909. <http://catalog.hathitrust.org/api/volumes/oclc/18994273.html>.
- . Un Craneo Patagon, Con Pinturas Geometricas En Rojo y Negro Procedente de San Blas (Costa Atlantica). Buenos Aires: Editora Coni, 1930.
- Lehmann-Nitsche, Robert, and Vicente Rossi. Etimolojiomanía Sobre El Vocablo "Gáucho." Córdoba [Argentine Republic: Casa Editora Imprenta Argentina, 1927.
- Lehmann-Nitsche, Robert, and Theophilus F Schmid. Two Linguistic Treatises on the Patagonian or Teheulche Language. Buenos Aires: Printed by Coni Bros., 1910.
- Leist, R. "Die Kolonialgesellschaften und ihre Eintragung in das Handelsregister." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 424–25.
- Lempérière, Annick. "Transnationalizing the Nation-Building History of Mexico from the XVIIIth to the XXth century." Nuevo Mundo Mundos Nuevos, Debates, no. Debates (2010). <http://nuevomundo.revues.org/59401>.
- Lennert, Gernot. "Kolonisationsversuche Brandenburgs, Preußens und des Deutschen Reiches in der Karibik." In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 9–30. Münster: Lit, 2004.
- Lenssen, Hans E. Chronik von Deutsch-Südwestafrika: eine kurzgefaßte Aufzählung geschichtlicher Ereignisse aus der deutschen Kolonialzeit von 1883-1915. Windhoek: Verl. d. S.W.A. Wiss. Gesellsch., 1966.
- Lenz, Gustav. "Deutsche Schulen im Ausland." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 20–25.
- . "Die deutsche Schule im Auslande." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 935–36.
- Lenz, Sylvia. Alemães no Rio de Janeiro: diplomacia e negócios, profissões e ócios (1815-1866). Bauru Brazil: EDUSC, 2008.

- Leonhard, Jörn, and Rolf G. Renner, eds. Koloniale Vergangenheiten - (post-)imperiale Gegenwart. BWV Verlag, 2010.
- Leroy-Beaulieu, Paul. De la colonisation chez les peuples modernes. Paris: Guillaumin et cie, 1874.
- . De la colonisation chez les peuples modernes. Fourth Edition. Paris: Guillaumin et cie, 1898.
- Lerp, Dörte. “Zwischen Bevölkerungspolitik und Frauenbildung: Die Kolonialfrauenschulen in Witzenhausen und Bad Weilbach.” In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 32–39. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- Lesser, Richard, ed. Deutsche Kolonialzeitung. Vol. 1. Frankfurt am Main: Verlag des Deutschen Kolonialvereins, 1884.
- . “Die Angra Pequena-Frage: 1. Deutsches Recht und Englische Kolonialgelüste.” In Deutsche Kolonialzeitung, edited by Richard Lesser, 1:233–36. Frankfurt am Main: Verlag des Deutschen Kolonialvereins, 1884.
- . “Unser Programm.” In Deutsche Kolonialzeitung, edited by Richard Lesser, 1:1–2. Frankfurt am Main: Verlag des Deutschen Kolonialvereins, 1884.
- Lessing, Hanns, Julia Besten, Tilman Dederling, Christian Hohmann, and Lize Kriel, eds. Deutsche evangelische Kirche im kolonialen südlichen Afrika: die Rolle der Auslandsarbeit von den Anfängen bis in die 1920er Jahre. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, 2011.
- Letters Concerning the Country of the Argentine Republic (South America) Being Suitable for Emigrants and Capitalists to Settle In. 1869 ...* Second Edition. London: Waterlow and Sons, 1869.
- Leutwein, Paul. Afrikanerschicksal: Gouverneur Leutwein und seine Zeit. Stuttgart: Union deutsche Verlagsgesellschaft, 1929.
- . Die Gründung von Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Wie Deutschlands Zweitgrößter Überseebesitz Entstand. Neue durchges. Aufl. Die Kolonien Rufen! □: Sonderreihe Des Reichskolonialbundes. - Reutlingen □: Enßlin & Laiblin, [1940] 1. Reutlingen: Enßlin & Laiblin, 1940.
- , ed. Dreissig Jahre deutsche Kolonialpolitik: mit weltpolitischen Vergleichen und Ausblicken. Berlin: Gersbach & Sohn, 1922.
- Leutwein, Theodor Gotthilf von. “Die wirtschaftliche Erschließung des Schutzgebietes.” In Elf Jahre Gouverneur in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, Second Edition., 391–427. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1907.
- . Elf Jahre Gouverneur in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Second Edition. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1907.
- . “Wirtschaftliches: Meteorologische Verhältnisse, Acker-, Gartenbau, Forstkultur.” In Elf Jahre Gouverneur in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, Second Edition., 329–90. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1907.
- Levin, Elena. Historias de una emigración (1933-1939): Alemanes judíos en la Argentina. Second Edition. Buenos Aires: Ed. de Belgrano, 1997.

- Ley de inmigración y colonización de la República Argentina, sancionada por el Congreso nacional de 1876. Publicación oficial.* Buenos Aires: Imprenta del Departamento Nacional de Agricultura, 1882.
- Licht, Otavio Augusto Boni. Povoadores alemaes do Rio Grande do Sul: 1847-1849; o recenseamento dos moradores das colonias de Sao Leopodo e Mundo Novo, Provincia de Sao Pedro do Rio Grande. Porto Alegre: EST Edicoes, 2005.
- Liehr, Reinhard. "Geschichte Lateinamerikas in Berlin." In Geschichtswissenschaft in Berlin im 19. und 20. Jahrhundert: Persönlichkeiten und Institutionen, edited by Reimer Hansen, Wolfgang Ribbe, and Willi Paul Adams. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 1992.
- Lienard, Amandine. "Le Transvaal, un terrain d'affrontement pour les puissances euroéennes, d'après le corps consulaire français en Afrique australe (1885-1906)." Université d'Angers, 2005. CADN (M 279).
- Liepsch, Ilse. Durst und Dornen: so lebte ein Pionier, Schutztruppler und Südwestler. Swakopmund [Namibia]: Peter's Antiques, 1997.
- Liesenberg, C. Die deutsche Auswanderung, ihre Organisation und ihre colonisatorischen Ziele. Berlin: Burmeister & Stempel, 1883.
- Lieven, Dominic. "The Russian Empire and the Soviet Union as Imperial Polities." The Journal of Contemporary History 30, no. 4 (1995): 607–36.
- Liliencron, Adda von. Nach Südwestafrika: Erlebnisse aus dem Hererokrieg nach Briefen von Mitkämpfern. Deutsche Jugend- und Volksbibliothek 208. Stuttgart: J.F. Steinkopf, 1906.
- . ed. Reiterbriefe aus Südwest: Briefe und Gedichte aus dem Feldzuge in Südwest-Afrika in den Jahren 1904-1906. Oldenburg: Stalling, 1907.
- Limb, Peter, Norman A. Etherington, and Peter Midgley, eds. Grappling With the Beast: Indigenous Southern African Responses to Colonialism, 1840-1930. Leiden: BRILL, 2010.
- Lindner, Ulrike, ed. Hybrid Cultures - Nervous States: Britain and Germany in a (Post)Colonial World. Rodopi, 2010.
- . Koloniale Begegnungen: Deutschland und Großbritannien als Imperialmächte in Afrika 1880-1914. Frankfurt am Main: Campus, 2011.
- Lingelbach, Gabriele. "Erträge und Grenzen zweier Ansätze: Kulturtransfer und Vergleich am Beispiel der französischen und amerikanischen Geschichtswissenschaft während des 19. Jahrhunderts." In Die Nation schreiben: Geschichtswissenschaft im internationalen Vergleich, edited by Christoph Conrad and Sebastian Conrad, 333–59. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2002.
- . "Intercultural Transfer and Comparative History: The Benefits and Limits of Two Approaches." Translated by Isabelle Rispler, Karen Beasley, Lana Rings, and Jacqueline Zeledon. Traversea 1 (2011): 46–59.
- Linne, Karsten. Deutschland jenseits des Äquators?: Die NS-Kolonialplanungen für Afrika. Berlin: Ch. Links Verlag, 2008.
- Lipovetsky, Gilles. Hypermodern Times. Cambridge, UK; Malden, MA.: Polity, 2005.
- Lipovetsky, Gilles, and Jean Serroy. La culture-monde: réponse à une société désorientée. Paris: Odile Jacob, 2008.

- Lippert, Pedro. El culto de Dios en el pueblo alemán. Translated by Juan Langenstein. Los Alemanes, cómo piensan, cómo hablan, cómo se defienden 4. Buenos Aires: Beutespacher y Cía, 1916.
- Lista, Ramón. Los indios tehuelches: una raza que desaparece. Buenos Aires: Patagonia Sur Ediciones, 1894.
- Liwerant, Judit Bokser de. Identities in an Era of Globalization and Multiculturalism: Latin America in the Jewish World. Leiden: BRILL, 2008.
- Lluch, Andrea. "From Local to Global Markets: Notes on the Role and Function of Commercial Networks in the Export Boom of Argentina, 1890-1930." Business and Economic History On-Line 1 (2003): [1-16].
- Lluch, Andrea, and Norma Lanciotti. "Las empresas europeas en Argentina: Condicionantes, destinos de inversión y cambios organizativos entre la primera y la segunda guerra mundial." Desarrollo económico 52, no. 205 (2012): 119–46.
- Lluch, Andrea, and María Silvia Di Liscia, eds. Argentina en exposición: ferias y exhibiciones durante los siglos XIX y XX. Sevilla: CSIC, 2009.
- Lobato, Mirta Zaida, ed. Cuando las mujeres reinaban: belleza, virtud y poder en la Argentina del siglo XX. Buenos Aires: Editorial Biblos, 2005.
- Lockyer, Sir Norman, Nature Publishing Group, and UM-MEDSEARCH Gateway. Nature. Nature Publishing Group, 1881.
- Loehnis, H. Die europäischen Kolonien: Beiträge zur Kritik der deutschen Kolonialprojekte. Bonn: Emil Strauß, 1881.
- Lohr, Otto. Deutschland und Übersee: zur Geschichte deutscher Kulturbeiträge im Ausland. H. Erdmann, 1962.
- Lom-Keil, Hanno von. Sedimentary Waves on the Namibian Continental Margin and in the Argentine Basin: Bottom Flow Reconstructions Based on High Resolution Echosounder Data. Bremen: Fachbereich Geowiss., Univ., 2001.
- Loosen, Livia. Deutsche Frauen in den Südsee-Kolonien des Kaiserreichs: Alltag und Beziehungen zur indigenen Bevölkerung, 1884-1919. Bielefeld: transcript Verlag, 2014.
- Lopes, Marília dos Santos. Fremdwahrnehmung und Selbsteinschätzung: frühneuzeitliche Reiseberichte aus dem südlichen Atlantikraum im Vergleich. Bamberg: Förderverein Forschungsförderung für Vergleichende Europäische Überseegegeschichte in Zusammenarbeit mit dem Lehrstuhl für Neuere Geschichte an der Universität Bamberg, 1995.
- López Barrios, Mario. "¿Una adaptación al medio local? Manuales y libros de lectura para los Colegios Alemanes realizados en el país (1900-1930)." In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 145–56. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- López de Abiada, José Manuel, and Gustav Siebenmann. Lateinamerika im deutschen Sprachraum: eine Auswahlbibliographie = América Latina en el ámbito cultural alemán: selección bibliográfica. Tübingen: Niemeyer, 1998.
- López Rodrigo, A. El alemán tal cual es: su naturaleza, su educación, su moral individual y colectiva, su misticismo de la fuerza. Valencia: Impr. de M. Pau, 1916.

- Losada, Leandro. Historia de las elites en la Argentina. Buenos Aires: Sudamericana, 2009.
- . La alta sociedad en la Buenos Aires de la “Belle époque”: sociabilidad, estilos de vida e identidades. Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Editora Iberoamericana, 2008.
- Loth, Heinrich. Die christliche Mission in Südwestafrika; zur destruktiven Rolle der Rheinischen Missionsgesellschaft beim Prozess der Staatsbildung in Südwestafrika (1842-1893). Berlin: Akademie-Verlag, 1963.
- Lowe, John. The Great Powers, Imperialism, and the German Problem, 1865 - 1925. London; New York: Routledge, 1994.
- Lübke, Christian. “Before Colonization: Christendom at the Slav Frontier and Paga Resistance.” In The Germans and the East, edited by Charles Ingrao and Franz A. J. Szabo, 17–26. West Lafayette, Ind: Purdue University Press, 2007.
- Lubrich, Oliver, and Rex Clark. “German Studies Go Postcolonial.” Eighteenth-Century Studies 35, no. 4 (2002).
- Luca, Rubén Mario de. Familias platenses. Buenos Aires: Libronauta; Ethos, 2002.
- Lucassen, Jan, Leo Lucassen, and Patrick Manning, eds. Migration History in World History: Multidisciplinary Approaches. Leiden; Boston: Brill, 2010.
- Lucassen, Leo. “Is Transnationalism Compatible with Assimilation? Examples from Western Europe since 1850.” Edited by Jochen Oltmer. IMIS-Beiträge, Historische Integrationssituationen, no. 29 (2006): 15–35.
- Lucidi, Nora. Die deutsche Schule Santiago de Chile: Gründung und frühe Entwicklung. Berlin: Wvb Wiss. Verl., 2009.
- Lucius. “Der Sternhimmel in Südwest.” In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 27–28. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- Lücke, Joachim Heinrich. Bevölkerung und Aufenthaltsrecht in den Deutschen Schutzgebieten Afrikas. Abhandlungen des Hamburgischen Kolonialinstituts 12. Hamburg: L. Friederichsen & Co. (L. & R. Friederichsen), 1913.
- Ludloff, Rudolf. Nach Deutsch-Namaland: (Südwestafrika); Reisebriefe. Coburg: Dietz, 1891.
- Lüdtke, Alf. “Introduction: What Is the History of Everyday Life and Who Are Its Practitioners?” In The History of Everyday Life: Reconstructing Historical Experiences and Ways of Life, edited by Alf Lüdtke, 3–40. Princeton Studies in Culture/Power/History. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 1995.
- , ed. The History of Everyday Life: Reconstructing Historical Experiences and Ways of Life. Princeton Studies in Culture/Power/History. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 1995.
- Ludwig, Jörg. “Literatur über Lateinamerika in Deutschland 1760-1830: Das Beispiel Sachsen.” In Sachsen und Lateinamerika: Begegnungen in vier Jahrhunderten, edited by Michael Zeuske, Bernd Schröter, and Jörg Ludwig, 80–118. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert Verlag, 1995.
- . “Sächsischer Handel und die südamerikanischen Freistaaten 1822-1828: die ‘Elb-Amerikanische Compagnie.’” In Sachsen und Lateinamerika: Begegnungen in vier

- Jahrhunderten*, edited by Michael Zeuske, Bernd Schröter, and Jörg Ludwig, 201–27. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert Verlag, 1995.
- Luebke, Frederick. Germans in Brazil: A Comparative History of Cultural Conflict during World War I. Baton Rouge: Louisiana State University Press, 1987.
- . Germans in the New World: Essays in the History of Immigration. Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1990.
- . “The German Ethnic Group in Brazil: The Ordeal of World War I.” In Germans in the New World: Essays in the History of Immigration, 123–37. Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1990.
- Lugan, Bernard. Cette Afrique qui était allemande. Paris: J. Picollec, 1990.
- . “Le Sud-ouest Africain avant 1914.” In Cette Afrique qui était allemande, 77–96. Paris: J. Picollec, 1990.
- Luisi, Paulina. Para una mejor descendencia. Buenos Aires: Casa Editora “Juan Perrotti,” 1919.
- Luschan, Professor Dr. Felix von. Ziele und Wege der Völkerkunde in den deutschen Schutzgebieten. Sonderabdruck aus den Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses., 1902.
- Lütge, Wilhelm, Werner Hoffmann, and Karl Wilhelm Körner. Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien. Buenos Aires: Deutscher Klub, 1955.
- Lütge, Wilhelm, Werner Hoffmann, Karl Wilhelm Körner, and Karl Klingenfuss. Deutsche in Argentinien. 2nd edition of Geschichte des Deutschtums in Argentinien. Buenos Aires: Alemann, 1981.
- Lütgens, Rudolf. Geographische Bilder aus dem argentinischen Chaco und vom oberen Paraná. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 4. Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912.
- Luther, Tammo. Volkstumspolitik des Deutschen Reiches 1933-1938: die Auslandsdeutschen im Spannungsfeld zwischen Traditionalisten und Nationalsozialisten. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 2004.
- Lutz, Helma, and Kathrin Gawarecki, eds. Kolonialismus und Erinnerungskultur: Die Kolonialvergangenheit im kollektiven Gedächtnis der deutschen und niederländischen Einwanderungsgesellschaft. Münster, New York: Waxmann Verlag, 2005.
- Lützeler, Paul Michael. “The St. Louis World’s Fair of 1904 as a Site of Cultural Transfer: German and German-American Participation.” In German Culture in Nineteenth-Century America: Reception, Adaptation, Transformation, edited by Lynne Tatlock and Matt Erlin, 59–86. Rochester, NY: Camden House, 2005.
- Maack, Reinhard. Die Entwicklung der Gondwana-Schichten Südbrasieliens und ihre Beziehungen zur Karru Formation Südafrikas. Symposium sur les séries de Gondwana, 19. Congrès Géologique International. Alger: Comptes Rend., 1952.
- . Kontinentaldrift und Geologie des südatlantischen Ozeans. Berlin: W. de Gruyter, 1969.
- Maack, Reinhard, and Alexander Marchant. German, English, French, Italian and Portuguese Literature on German Immigration and Colonization in Southern Brazil. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1939.

- Maas, Lieselotte. Deutsche Exilpresse in Lateinamerika. Frankfurt am Main: Buchhändler-Vereinigung, 1978.
- Mackenna, Benjamin Vicuña. El Mensajero de La Agricultura. Boletín Mensual de La Sociedad Nacional de Agricultura. Vol. 3. Santiago de Chile: Imprenta Chilena, 1856.
- Madero, Fernando M. "Ernesto Tornquist." In La Argentina del ochenta al centenario, edited by Gustavo Ferrari and Ezequiel Gallo, 628–31, 634–37. Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 1980.
- Maercker, ed. Unvergessenes Heldentum: das Kolonisationswerk der Deutschen Schutztruppe und Marine. Berlin: Kolonialwarte, 1924.
- Magee, Gary Bryan, and Andrew S. Thompson. Empire and Globalisation: Networks of People, Goods and Capital in the British World, c.1850-1914. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2010.
- Maggiori, Ernesto. Colonias Alemanas en Patagonia Argentina: una descripción de sus comienzos y fracasos. Ediciones Patagónicas; 10. Comodoro Rivadavia: Vela al Viento, 2009.
- . Donde los lagos no tienen nombre: la historia de Río Pico, sus pobladores, sus alrededores y la Colonia Alemana "Friedland". Comodoro Rivadavia, Chubut, Argentina: Editorial Universitaria de Patagonia, 2001.
- Maier Schwerdt, Héctor, and Vicente Schwab, eds. Nuestras colonias y nuestra gente: compendio histórico-cultural de los Alemanes del Volga = Unsere Kolonien und unsere Leute. Coronel Suarez: Ediciones Nuestras Colonias, 2001.
- Mallmann, Rudolf. Die Staatsangehörigkeit in den deutschen Schutzgebieten. Colonial government pamphlets 15. Berlin, Leipzig: Brandstetter, 1912.
- Mamozai, Martha. "Deutsche in aller Welt." In Schwarze Frau, weiße Herrin, 11–21. Reinbek bei Hamburg: Rowohlt, 1989.
- . "Einheimische und 'koloniale' Frauen." In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 14–30. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- . Herrenmenschen, Frauen im deutschen Kolonialismus. Hamburg: Rowohlt, 1982.
- . Schwarze Frau, weiße Herrin. Reinbek bei Hamburg: Rowohlt, 1989.
- . Zwischen Welten: Alltag im Entwicklungsgeschäft □; [eine kritische Bilanz]. Berlin: Pro Business, 2010.
- Mandrini, Raúl. La Argentina aborigen: de los primeros pobladores a 1910. 1. ed. Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Ed., 2008.
- Mangels, H. "Wirtschaftliche, naturgeschichtliche und klimatologische Abhandlungen aus Paraguay." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904).
- Mannes, Wilhelm. Von Lassalle bis Dernburg: Eine kolonial-soziale Betrachtung. Braunschweig: Pfanckuch, 1907.
- Manning, Patrick. Migration in World History. New York: Routledge, 2005.
- . Navigating World History: Historians Create a Global Past. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003.

- Mantej, Sebastian. Von der "Sandbüchse" zum Post- und Telegraphenland: der Aufbau des Kommunikationsnetzwerks in Deutsch-Südwestafrika (1884 - 1915). 1st ed. Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wiss. Ges., 2007.
- Manz, Stefan. Constructing a German Diaspora: The "Greater German Empire," 1871-1914. Routledge Studies in Modern European History 24. New York: Routledge, 2014.
- Marek, Hildegard, and Marcelo A. Marek. "Mujeres pioneras alemanas en Misiones." In La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera, edited by Olga Zamboni, 157–63. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Marfany, Roberto H. El indio en la colonización de Buenos Aires. Buenos Aires: Talleres gráficos de la Penitenciaría nacional de Buenos Aires, 1940.
- Marin, Séverine-Antigone, and Georges-Henri Soutou, eds. Henri Hauser (1866-1946): Humaniste - Historien - Républicain. Paris: Presses Paris Sorbonne, 2006.
- Marquiegui, Dedier Norberto. "Pluralismo social y cultural, crisol de razas y Multiculturalismo en el estudio de las migraciones masivas a la Argentina: una mirada histórica retrospectiva." Astrolabio, no. 2 (2005).
- Märtens, P. Süd-Amerika unter besonderer Berücksichtigung Argentinens. Nach den neuesten amtlichen Quellen und auf Grund einiger Anschauungen von ... Früherer Redakteur des Argentinischen Wochenblattes und der La Plata-Zeitung in Buenos Aires. Berlin: Johannes Rade, 1899.
- Marti, Oscar Albert. The Anglo-German Commercial and Colonial Rivalry as a Cause of the Great War; A Thesis Presented to the Department of History, University of Southern California, Los Angeles. Boston, Stratford Co., 1917.
- Martin de Moussy, Victor. Description géographique et statistique de la confédération Argentine. Vol. 2. Paris: Didot, 1860.
- . Description géographique et statistique de la confédération Argentine. Vol. 1. Paris: Didot, 1860.
- . Description géographique et statistique de la confédération Argentine. Vol. 3. Paris: Didot, 1864.
- Martin, Kurt. "Die Aussichten des Auswanderers in Argentinien. Berlin 1919." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Otto Quelle, Vol. 7. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1919.
- . Die Aussichten des deutschen Auswanderers in Argentinien. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 13. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1919.
- Martin, Werner. Deutsche Kolonialpolitik unter Bismarck - Das Für und Wider eines staatlich-formellen Kolonialismus. GRIN Verlag, 2007.
- Martinez de Richter, Marily, ed. Moderne in den Metropolen: Roberto Arlt und Alfred Döblin; internationales Symposium, Buenos Aires - Berlin, 2004. Würzburg: Königshausen & Neumann, 2007.
- Mattenklodt, Wilhelm. A Fugitive in South-West Africa, 1908 to 1920. Translated by Oakley Williams. London: T. Butterworth, 1931.

- . Afrikanische Jagden und Abenteuer. Edited by Julius Steinhardt. München: Mayer Verlag, 1936.
- . Verlorene Heimat: Als Schutztruppler und Farmer in Südwest. Berlin: P. Parey, 1928.
- Maurel, Chloé. “Introduction □: Pourquoi l’histoire globale □?” Cahiers d’histoire. Revue d’histoire critique, no. 121 (2013): 13–19.
- . Manuel d’histoire globale: comprendre le “global turn” des sciences humaines. Paris: A. Colin, 2014.
- May, Karl. Am Rio de la Plata. Freiburg im Breisgau: Friedrich Ernst Fehsenfeld, 1894.
- . In den Cordilleren. Freiburg im Breisgau: Friedrich Ernst Fehsenfeld, 1894.
- Mayer, L. “Die ersten Vorläufer der deutschen Kolonisationsbestrebungen in Afrika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 791–96.
- Mayhaus, George. “Das Schulwesen in den amerikanischen Kolonien.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 59–62.
- McBride, David, Leroy Hopkins, and Carol Blackshire-Belay, eds. Crosscurrents: African Americans, Africa, and Germany in the Modern World. Columbia, SC: Camden House, 1998.
- McCusker, John J, ed. History of World Trade Since 1450. Detroit: Thomson Gale, 2006.
- McFarland, Rob, and Michelle Stott James, eds. Sophie Discovers Amerika: German-Speaking Women Write the New World. Rochester, NY: Boydell & Brewer, 2014.
- McKeown, Adam. “Global Migration, 1846-1940.” Journal of World History 15, no. 2 (2004): 155–89.
- McLean, David. War, Diplomacy and Informal Empire: Britain and the Republics of La Plata, 1836-1853. London; New York: British Academic Press, 1995.
- Medina, Sinval. Saga: retrato das colônias alemas no Brasil. Sao Paulo: Terra Virgem, 1997.
- Meding, Holger. Flucht vor Nürnberg?: deutsche und österreichische Einwanderung in Argentinien, 1945-1955. Köln: Böhlau, 1992.
- , ed. Nationalsozialismus und Argentinien: Beziehungen, Einflüsse und Nachwirkungen. Frankfurt am Main; New York: P. Lang, 1995.
- . “Procesos de integración retardados en el marco de una colonización organizada. El caso de la migración germanohablante en Misiones.” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 65–78.
- Meding, Holger, and Georg Ismar, eds. Argentinien und das Dritte Reich: mediale und reale Präsenz, Ideologietransfer, Folgewirkungen. Berlin: Wissenschaftlicher Verlag Berlin, 2008.
- Meinecke, Gustav. Katechismus der Auswanderung: Kompaß für Auswanderer nach europäischen Ländern, Asien, Afrika, den deutschen Kolonien, Australien, Süd- und Zentralamerika, Mexiko, den Vereinigten Staaten von Amerika und Kanada. 7. Aufl., Vollständig neu bearb. Leipzig: Weber, 1896.

- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Vol. 11. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1898.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Achter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1895. Vol. 8. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1896.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Achter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1895. Vol. 8. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1896.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Neunter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1896. Vol. 9. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1897.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Siebter Jahrgang. Vol. 7. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1895.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Zehnter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1897. Vol. 10. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1897.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Dritter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1890. Vol. 3. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1891.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Erster Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1888. Vol. 1. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1889.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Fünfter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1892. Vol. 5. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1893.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Sechster Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1893. Vol. 6. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1894.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Vierter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1891. Vol. 4. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1892.
- , ed. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Zweiter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1889. Vol. 2. Berlin: Carl Heymann, 1890.
- , ed. “Kolonisation in Brasilien.” Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Neunter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1896 4 (1897): 158–204.
- Meinhof, Ulrike Hanna, and Anna Triandafyllidou. “Beyond the Diaspora: Transnational Practice as Transcultural Capital.” In Transcultural Europe: Cultural Policy in a Changing Europe, edited by Ulrike Hanna Meinhof and Anna Triandafyllidou, 200–222. New York, NY: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006.
- Meinhold. “Betrachtungen über die deutsche Kolonisation in Südbrasilien.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 431–34.
- Meinhold, Eberhard. “Bäuerliches Leben in Sao Lourenço (Rio Grande do Sul).” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 284–98.

- Melber, Henning. It Is No More a Cry: Namibian Poetry in Exile and Essays on Literature in Resistance and Nation Building. Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, 2004.
- . “‘Versöhnung ist kein Stoßgebet’: Namibisch-deutsche Geschichte, Identitäten und Versöhnung.” In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig. Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Melber, Henning, Mary Melber, and Werner Hillebrecht, eds. In Treue fest, Südwest!: Eine ideologiekritische Dokumentation von der Eroberung Namibias über die deutsche Fremdherrschaft bis zur Kolonialapologie der Gegenwart. Edition Südliches Afrika 19. Bonn: Informationsstelle Südliches Afrika, 1984.
- Menge, Adolf. “Die Verwendung von Fremdwörtern in der deutschen Literatur über Süd- und Südwest Afrika ...” 1954.
- Mensch, Franz, and Julius Hellmann, eds. Von der Heydt’s Kolonial-Handbuch: Jahrbuch der deutschen Kolonial- und Uebersee-Unternehmungen. Vol. 5. Berlin, Leipzig, Hamburg: Verlag für Börsen- und Finanzliteratur, 1911.
- , eds. Von der Heydt’s Kolonial-Handbuch: Jahrbuch der deutschen Kolonial- und Uebersee-Unternehmungen. Vol. 7. Berlin, Leipzig, Hamburg: Verlag für Börsen- und Finanzliteratur, 1913.
- Merensky, Alexander. Deutschlands Pflicht gegenüber den Heiden und dem Heidentum in seinen Kolonien. Beiträge zur Missionskunde 13. Berlin: Buchh. der Berliner Evang. Missionsges., 1905.
- . Die Arbeit der deutschen Missionen. Berlin: Berliner ev. Missionsgesellsch., 1905.
- . Kolonisation und Mission. Berlin: Selbstverl. des Evang. Missionshauses, 1888.
- Mertins, Günter. “Deutsche Reiseberichte des 19. Jahrhunderts über Kolumbien als geographische Quelle.” In Die Wiederentdeckung Lateinamerikas: die Erfahrung des Subkontinents in Reiseberichten des 19. Jahrhunderts, edited by Walther L. Bernecker, Gertrut Krömer, and Kristina Birn, 179–90. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1997.
- Mettauer, Philipp. Erzwungene Emigration nach Argentinien: österreichisch-jüdische Lebensgeschichten. Studien zur Geschichte und Kultur der iberischen und iberamerikanischen Länder; Bd. 14. Münster: Aschendorff-Verl., 2010.
- Metz, H. Innere Kolonisation in den Provinzen Brandenburg und Pommern 1891 bis 1901: Erfahrungen und Verfahren der Königlichen Generalkommission zu Frankfurt an der Oder. Berlin: Verlangsbuchhandlung Paul Parey, 1902.
- Meyer, Hermann. “Die deutsche Auswanderung nach Südamerika, besonders nach Südbrasilien.” In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- Meyer, Michael. Word & Image in Colonial and Postcolonial Literatures and Cultures. Amsterdam [u.a.]: Rodopi, 2009.
- Middell, Matthias. “World Orders in World Histories before and after World War I.” In Competing Visions of World Order Global Moments and Movements, 1880s-1930s, edited by Sebastian Conrad and Dominic Sachsenmaier, 97–117. The Palgrave Series in Transnational History. New York: Palgrave, 2007.

- Miescher, Giorgio. Die rote Linie: die Geschichte der Veterinär- und Siedlungsgrenze in Namibia (1890er - 1960er Jahre). Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, 2013.
- Miescher, Giorgio, Lorena Rizzo, and Jeremy Silvester. "Visualizing Namibia: Posters and Publics before Independence." Critical Interventions: Journal of African Art History and Visual Culture, 2008.
- Miethe, Adolf. La Guerra y el humanitarismo. Lo que es Alemania 3. Buenos Aires: Unión de librerías alemanas, 1916.
- Mignolo, Walter. The Darker Side of the Renaissance: Literacy, Territoriality, and Colonization. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1995.
- . The Idea of Latin America. Malden MA; Oxford: Blackwell Pub., 2005.
- Mills, Greg, and Claudia Mutschler, eds. Exploring South-South Dialogue: Mercosur in Latin America and SADC in Southern Africa. Johannesburg: South African Institute of International Affairs (SAIIA), 1999.
- Miranda, Marisa. Controlar lo incontrolable: una historia de la sexualidad en la Argentina. 1. ed. Buenos Aires: Biblos, 2011.
- Miranda, Marisa, and Gustavo Vallejo, eds. Darwinismo social y eugenesia en el mundo latino. Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno de Argentina Editores, 2005.
- Mirau, Leo Paul. Argentinien von heute: Schilderung von Land und Leute. Buenos Aires: Librería Mirau, 1920.
- . Grüsse vom Silberstrom. Buenos Aires: Leo Mirau, 1909.
- . Meine Lieder. Leipzig: P. Eberhardt, 1909.
- . Wie ich die Heimat fand. Buenos Aires: Leo Mirau, 1913.
- Mirelman, Víctor. En búsqueda de una identidad: los inmigrantes judíos en Buenos Aires, 1890-1930. Buenos Aires, Argentina: Milá, 1988.
- . Jewish Buenos Aires, 1890-1930: In Search of an Identity. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 1990.
- Mitchell, Nancy. The Danger of Dreams: German and American Imperialism in Latin America. UNC Press Books, 1999.
- Mitre, Bartolomé. La inmigración espontánea en la República Argentina. Buenos Aires: Imp. de la sociedad anónima "La Nación," 1870.
- Mitre, Mariano de Vedia y. La presidencia de Rivadavia. Buenos Aires: E.J. Hall y ca, 1910.
- Mittheilungen des Vereins für Erdkunde zu Leipzig*. Duncker & Humblot, 1901.
- Möhlig, Wilhelm J. G. Frühe Kolonialgeschichte Namibias: 1880 - 1930. History, cultural traditions and innovations in southern Africa. - Köln: Köppe, 1997. Köln: Köppe, 2000.
- Mohr, Friedrich Wilhelm, and Walter von Hauff, eds. Deutsche im Ausland; Im Auftrage des Reichswanderungsamtes und in Verbindung mit dem Verein für das Deutschtum im Ausland. Breslau: F. Hirt, 1923.

- Mohr, Friedrich Wilhelm, Ludwig Schoen, and Walter von Hauff. Deutsche im Ausland; In Verbindung mit dem Verein für das Deutschtum im Ausland. Second Edition. Breslau: F. Hirt, 1926.
- Moldzio, Hans-Dietrich. Das waren noch Zeiten: Südwestler Erinnerungen, 1909-1925. Windhoek Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 1997.
- Molinari, Antonio Manuel. El drama de la tierra en la Argentina: la Ley de colonización y la enmienda Palacios. Second Edition. Buenos Aires: Editorial Claridad, 1944.
- Molinas, Florencio T. La colonización argentina y las industrias agropecuarias. Buenos Aires: Impr. A. Molinari, 1910.
- Mommsen, Wolfgang J. Theories of Imperialism. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1980.
- Monaghan. "Deutschlands Weltpolitik und Welthandel in den letzten dreißig Jahren." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 65–70.
- Moneke, Kirsten. Die Emigration der deutschen Juden nach Argentinien: (1933 - 1945); zur Rolle der jüdischen Hilfsvereine. St. Ingbert: Röhrig, 1993.
- Montserrat, Marcelo, and Jens Andermann. La ciencia en la Argentina entre siglos: textos, contextos e instituciones. Ediciones Manantial, 2000.
- Moran, Joe. Interdisciplinarity: The New Critical Idiom. London; New York: Routledge, 2002.
- Moraña, Mabel, Enrique Dussel, and Carlos Jáuregui. Coloniality at Large: Latin America and the Postcolonial Debate. Durham: Duke University Press, 2008.
- Moreau, Jean-Louis. "Grupos belgas y servicios públicos en Argentina." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 114–32. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Moreno Fragnals, Manuel. Africa in Latin America: Essays on History, Culture, and Socialization. New York: Holmes & Meier, 1984.
- Morgan, Karie L. "'To Heal the Wounds': Namibian Ovaherero's Contests Over Coming to Terms with the German Colonial Past." Ph.D., University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, 2010.
- Moritz, Eduard. "Das Schulwesen in den deutschen Kolonien." In Deutscher Wille, 34–39. Bücherrei Deutscher Wille 3. Berlin: Deutscher Wille [O. Franke], 1927.
- . Das Schulwesen in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Berlin: D. Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1914.
- . "Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Fortsetzung: die Berichte der Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846□: mit 1 Kt., Nr. 4." Mitteilungen aus den deutschen Schutzgebieten, 1916, 135–253.
- . Die Berichte der Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846. Edited by Helmut Bistri. Windhoek: Namibia Wiss. Ges., 2000.
- . Die Deutschen am Kap unter der holländischen Herrschaft, 1652-1806. Weimar: Verlag Hermann Böhlau Nachf., 1938.
- Moritz, Eduard, and Helmut Bistri, eds. Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil II: Die Berichte der

- Rheinischen Mission bis zum Jahre 1846*. Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2000.
- Moritz, Eduard, and Maria Fisch, eds. Die ältesten Reiseberichte über Namibia, 1482-1852. Gesammelt und herausgegeben 1915 von Professor Dr. E. Moritz. Teil I: Die 25 frühesten Landreisen, 1760-1842. Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 1999.
- Moritz, Walter. Auf dem Reitochsen quer durch's südwestliche Afrika: Missionar Schmelen, Ein Pionier der Sprache der Nama (1811-1848) am Oranje, in Bethanien, Steinkopf, und Komaggas. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 17. Werther [Germany]: Moritz, 2004.
- . Der Ochsenwagen erzählt. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 1. Schwäbisch Gmünd: Lempp, 1980.
- . Ein Bielefelder Missionar als Pionier in Namibia: Tagebuch und Briefe des F. H. Vollmer, Hoachanas, 1853-1866. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 15. Werther [Germany]: W. Moritz, 2000.
- . Herero-Namakrieg 1863-1870: Erinnerungen an Kriegswirren und Missionarische Friedensarbeit von P.H. Brincker. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 14. Werther, Westfalen: W. Moritz, 1997.
- . Hermann Heinrich Kreft: Der Diamantenmissionar aus Wallenbrück. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 9. Schwäbisch Gmünd: Afrika-Verlag Der Kreis, 1976.
- . Jonker Afrikaner und Missionar Kleinschmidt. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 18. Wether, Westf.: W. Moritz, 2006.
- . Schepmannsdorf/Rooibank und die älteste Druckerei in Südwestafrika/Namibia. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 5. Schwäbisch Gmünd: Lempp, 1978.
- . Verwehte Spuren in Der Namibwüste: Alte Ansiedlungen Am Kuiseb. Aus Alten Tagen in Südwest 13. Werther [Germany]: W. Moritz, 1997.
- . Vier Generationen Redecker in Namibia seit 1866: Aus Westfälischer Vergangenheit in die Namibische Zukunft. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 20. Werther, Westfalen [Germany]: W. Moritz, (Windhoek, Namibia: John Meinert Printing), 2010.
- Moritz, Walter, and Julius Baumann. Dr. Heinrich Vedder: vom Ravensberger Seidenweber zum berühmten Afrika-Missionar. Aus alten Tagen in Südwest 8. Schwäbisch Gmünd: Afrika-Verlag Der Kreis, 1973.
- Moritzen, Niels-Peter. "Koloniale Konzepte der protestantischen Mission." In Imperialismus und Kolonialmission, edited by Klaus Bade, 51–67. Steiner, 1982.
- Mörner, Magnus. European Travelogues as Sources to Latin American History from the Late Eighteenth Century until 1870. Stockholm: Institute of Latin American Studies, 1981.
- . "The Role of the Jesuits in the Transfer of Secular Baroque Culture to the Río de La Plata Region." In The Jesuits: Cultures, Sciences, and the Arts, 1540-1773, edited by John W. O'Malley, 305–16. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1999.
- Mossolow, N. "Architekt Gottlieb Redecker." In Afrikanischer Heimatkalender 1978, edited by Kirchenbundesrat des Deutschen Evangelisch-Lutherischen Kirchenbundes in Süd- und SüdwestAfrika, 21–26. Windhoek: Afrikanischer Heimatkalender, 1978.

- Moszkowski, Walter. Bernhard Dernburg. Persönlichkeiten; Illustrierte Essays über führende Geister unserer Tage 1. Charlottenburg: Virgil-Verlag, 1908.
- Moya, José. Cousins and Strangers: Spanish Immigrants in Buenos Aires, 1850-1930. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1998.
- Mueller, J. Ullrich. Die argentinische Gefrierfleischindustrie und ihre Bedeutung für den europäischen Verbrauch. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 1. Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912.
- Mühr, Stephan. "Die Deutschen Namibier Heute - Auswanderung, Musealisierung Oder Integration?" In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine Geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 244–55. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Mulhall, Michael George, and Edward T. Mulhall. Handbook of the River Plate. M.G. and E. T. Mulhall, 1892.
- Müller, Bernd. Von den Auswanderschulen zum Auslandsschulwesen: Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des deutschen Nationalismus vor dem Ersten Weltkrieg. Würzburg: B. Müller, 1995.
- Müller, Gustav. Die römische Propaganda in unseren afrikanischen Kolonien. Flugschriften des Evangelischen Bundes. Leipzig: Verlag der Buchhandlung des Evangel. Bundes, 1899.
- . "Ergebnisse der Kolonialgeschichte des vorigen Jahrhunderts für die deutsche Kolonialpolitik. Vortrag, gehalten in der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft, Abteilung Magdeburg, am 19. Februar 1901." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 2 (1901 1900): 626-.
- Müller, Jürgen. Nationalsozialismus in Lateinamerika: die Auslandsorganisation der NSDAP in Argentinien, Brasilien, Chile und Mexiko, 1931 - 1945. Historamericana 3. Stuttgart: Heinz, 1997.
- Müller, Michael, and Cornelius Torp. "Conceptualising Transnational Spaces in History." European Review of History - Revue Européenne d'histoire 16, no. 5 (2009): 609–17.
- Müller, Sven Oliver, and Cornelius Torp, eds. Das Deutsche Kaiserreich in der Kontroverse. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2009.
- , eds. Imperial Germany Revisited: Continuing Debates and New Perspectives. New York: Berghahn Books, 2011.
- Münster, Irene. "Librerías y bibliotecas circulantes de judíos alemanes en la Ciudad de Buenos Aires, 1930-2011." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 157–76.
- Munzinger, Ludwig. Zukunftsländer am La Plata: Eine volkswirtschaftliche Reisestudie. München: Der Verfasser, 1907.
- Museo de la Colonización. Museo de la Colonización Argentina: Esperanza, primera colonia agrícola. Esperanza, Provincia de Santa Fe, República Argentina: The Museum, 1984.
- Museo Social Argentino. El seguro obrero del imperio aleman: Manual redactado por miembros de la oficina imperial de seguros, Berlin, 1914. Buenos Aires: Oceana, 1914.
- Nagel, Joane. Race, Ethnicity, and Sexuality: Intimate Intersections, Forbidden Frontiers. New York: Oxford University Press, 2003.

- Nagel, Silke. Ausländer in Mexiko: die "Kolonien" der deutschen und US-amerikanischen Einwanderer in der mexikanischen Hauptstadt 1890-1942. Berliner Lateinamerika-Forschungen 17. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 2005.
- Nahmen, Carsten von. Deutschsprachige Medien in Namibia: vom Windhoeker Anzeiger zum Deutschen Hörfunkprogramm der Namibian Broadcasting Corporation: Geschichte, Bedeutung und Funktion der deutschsprachigen Medien in Namibia, 1898-1998. Windhoek, Namibia: Namibia Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft, 2001.
- Nampala, Lovisa T., and Vilho Shigwedha. Aawambo Kingdoms, History and Cultural Change: Perspectives from Northern Namibia. Basel Namibia Studies Series. Basel: P. Schlettwein Publishing, 2006.
- Napp, Richard. Die Argentinische Republik: Im Auftrag des Argentin. Central Comité's für die Philadelphia-Ausstellung und mit dem Beistand mehrerer Mitarbeiter. Buenos Aires: Gedruckt in der Dampfbuchdruckerei der Sociedad Anónima, 1876.
- . La república Argentina: obra escrita en aleman. Buenos Aires: Comité central argentino para la exposicion en Filadelfia, 1876.
- . The Argentine Republic Written in German, Assisted by Several Fellow-Writers for the Central Argentine Commission of the Centenary Exhibition at Philadelphia. Buenos Aires: Sociedad anonima, 1876.
- Naranch, Bradley. "Beyond the Fatherland: Colonial Visions, Overseas Expansion and German Nationalism, 1848-1885." Johns Hopkins University, 2006.
- . "Inventing the Auslandsdeutsche: Emigration, Colonial Fantasy, and German National Identity, 1848-71." In Germany's Colonial Pasts, edited by Eric Ames, Marcia Klotz, and Lora Wildenthal, 21–40. Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 2005.
- Naranch, Bradley, and Geoff Eley, eds. German Colonialism in a Global Age. Durham, London: Duke University Press, 2014.
- Nascimento, Luiz. Die zweite Kaiserzeit Brasiliens im Spiegelbild der deutsch-brasilianischen Handelsbeziehungen (1840-1888). Erlangen: [s.n.], 1983.
- Nationalsozialistische Deutsche Arbeiter-Partei. Kolonialpolitisches Amt. Bibliografia coloniale tedesca. Storia della colonizzazione mondiale; collezione di studi e monografie.; II; Milano: Fratelli, Bocca, 1943.
- Naumann, Kurt. Deutsche Evangelisch-Lutherische St. Martini Kirche, Kapstadt: Festschrift Zum 100 Jährigen Jubiläum. Kapstadt: ABC, 1961.
- Navarro Viola, Jorge. El Club de Residentes Extranjeros: 1841-1941. Buenos Aires: Coni, 1941.
- Ndeshi Namhila, Ellen. "Recordkeeping and Missing 'Native Estate' Records in Namibia: An Investigation of Colonial Gaps in a Post-Colonial National Archive." University of Tampere, 2015.
- Neebe, Reinhard. "German Big Business and the Return to the World Market after World War II." In Quest for Economic Empire: European Strategies of German Big Business in the Twentieth Century, edited by Volker R. Berghahn, 95–121. Providence: Berghahn Books, 1996.
- Nelke, Wilhelm. Geschlechterbuch der Deutschen am La Plata. Vol. 1. Montevideo: Genealogische Forschungsstelle am La Plata, 1937.

- Nelson, Robert L. "Colonialism in Europe? The Case Against Salt Water." In Germans, Poland, and Colonial Expansion to the East: 1850 Through the Present, edited by Robert L. Nelson, 1–9. Studies in European Culture and History. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009.
- Nelson, Robert L., ed. Germans, Poland, and Colonial Expansion to the East: 1850 Through the Present. Studies in European Culture and History. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009.
- Neubaur, Paul August Ferdinand. Der Norddeutsche Lloyd, 50 Jahre der Entwicklung, 1857-1907. Leipzig: Fr. Wilh. Grunow, 1907.
- Neuberger, Elsa. "Historia de una pionera del alto Paraná." In La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera, edited by Olga Zamboni, 81–100. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Neuer Deutscher Turnverein Buenos Aires: Satzungen*. Buenos Aires: Hergig, 1912.
- Neumann, Livia. Der Meisterspion Roman: Das Geheimdossier des Falles Redl. Buenos Aires: Cosmopolita, 1945.
- . Hab Mut zum Glück! Buenos Aires: Editorial Cosmopolita, 1942.
- . Puerto nuevo, neuer Hafen, Roman. Buenos Aires: Editorial Cosmopolita, 1943.
- Newton, Ronald C. German Buenos Aires, 1900-1933: Social Change and Cultural Crisis. Austin: University of Texas Press, 1977.
- . "Review of Germans in Brazil: A Comparative History of Cultural Conflict during the World I." The American Historical Review 94, no. 2 (1989): 562.
- . "Social Change, Cultural Crisis, and the Origins of Nazism Within the German-Speaking Community of Buenos Aires, 1914-1933." Northsouth 1 (1976): 62–105.
- . The "Nazi Menace" in Argentina, 1931-1947. Stanford Calif.: Stanford University Press, 1992.
- Nicholson, Gillian, ed. German Settlers in South Africa: A Bibliography. Cape Town: University of Cape Town, School of Librarianship, 1962.
- Nicoulin, Martin, and Béatrice Ziegler. Émigration suisse en Amérique latine, 1815-1939: essai bibliographique. Zurich: Bibliothèque nationale suisse, 1975.
- Nieborowski, Paul. Weihnachten in Südwestafrika oder: Das Christkind im Zuchthause. (Theater-Bibliothek □; Bdch. 39). Trier: Paulinus-Dr., 1907.
- Niederlein, Gustavo. Argentinien als deutsches Siedlungsland; Denkschrift dem Deutschen Reichstag unterbreitet ... Berlin: D. Reimer, 1922.
- . Argentinien und die Bedeutung seiner Jubiläumsausstellungen von Gustav Niederlein: Buenos-Aires 3. Juni bis 31. Juli 1910. Berlin: s.t., 1910.
- . Argentinien's wirtschaftlicher Zustand am Ende des Jahres 1912: Tatsachen, Möglichkeiten und Aussichten sowie Anregungen und Winke zu Gewinnbringenden Unternehmungen und Geschäftsverbindungen. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 2. Berlin: Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband, 1913.
- . Aussichten und Möglichkeiten in Argentinien in Viehzucht, Ackerbau, Industrie und Handel. Berlin: Reimer, 1911.

- . Catalogue spécial officiel de la République Argentine, Paris 1889. Classe 42 Produits des exploitations forestières, 1889.
- . Chancen und Möglichkeiten in Argentinien in Viehzucht, Ackerbau, Industrie und Handel. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1910.
- . Chances et possibilités de réussite dans la République Argentine, dans l'élevage, l'agriculture, l'industrie et le commerce. [Berlin], 1910.
- . Das argentinische und fremde Geschäftsleben in Buenos Aires in seinen Beziehungen zum deutschen Export. Berlin: Deutsch-argentinischer Centralverband, 1912.
- . Die argentinische Industrie und ihre Bedeutung für deutschen Export. Veröffentlichungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung wirtschaftlicher Interessen 5. Berlin: Süd- und Mittel-Amerika-Verlag, 1912.
- . Die Bedeutung Argentiniens für Welthandel und Kolonisation: Vortrag gehalten im Zweigverein Leipzig für Handelsgeographie. Berlin: Julius Sittenfeld, 1881.
- . "Die Pampas-Indianer vor und nach dem Jahre 1879." In Amerika: Eine ethnographische Rundreise durch den Kontinent und die Antillen. Charakterbilder, Sittenschilderungen, Scenen aus dem Volksleben. Nach den besten und neuesten, deutschen und ausländischen Quellen, edited by Johannes Baumgarten, 9–12. Stuttgart: Rieger'sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1882.
- . Discurso pronunciado por Gustavo Niederlein, comisionado especial y miembro de la junta de la exposición, en la apertura del museo permanente, el 23 de febrero de 1903. Manila: s.n., 1903.
- . Dos cuestiones de actualidad; Misiones y la cuestion argentino-brasilera de límites ante el arbitraje; Necesidad moral y material de concurrir á la exposicion universal internacional de Chicago. Buenos Aires: Imprenta del Departamento nacional de agricultura, 1891.
- . Eine Deutsch-Argentinische Siedlungsbank als Gegengewicht zur wirtschaftlichen Invasion der Yankees in Südamerika. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung Wirtschaftlicher Interessen 5. Berlin: Deutsch-argentinischer Centralverband, 1912.
- . "Einiges über die erste deutsch-argentinische coloniale Landprüfungs-Expedition in das untergegangene südamerikanische Reich der Väter Jesu und die Hundert Katarakte des Y-Guaza in Misiones: Vortrag, gehalten in der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin." In Verhandlungen der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin, 348–64. Dietrich Reimer, 1883.
- . Gutachten für Herrn Baron von Hirsch über die Colonisationsfähigkeit Paraguay's und der argentinischen Territorien Misiones, Formosa und Chaco Austral. Buenos Aires: Imp. Helvetia, 1892.
- . Herbario "Bettfreund." Enumeración Sistemática De Las Plantas Recogidas En Buenos Aires Y Sus Alrededores Por El Señor Don Carlos Bettfreund ... Del Núm. 29 Del Boletín Mensual Del Museo De Productos Argentinos, 1900. Segunda Edicion Revisada Y Aumentada. Buenos Aires, 1898.
- . "[Informe del Profesor Niederlein]." In La concurrencia universal y la agricultura en ambas Américas; Informe presentado al excelentísimo señor ministro de relaciones exteriores de la República Argentina, Dr. Don Eduardo Costa, by Estanislao Severo Zeballos, Second edition. Buenos Aires: Jacobo Peuser, 1896.

- . La riqueza florestal de la República Argentina en la exposicion universal de Paris de 1889. Buenos Aires, 1889.
- . Mis exploraciones en el territorio de Misiones. I. Resultados estadísticos y económicos segun el censo levantado en 1888. Buenos Aires: La Universidad, 1891.
- . Nach Misiones und zu den Hundert Cataracten des Y-Guazu. Reisebriefe von der deutsch-argentinischen Expedition zur Prüfung der Colonisationsfähigkeit der Lezama'schen Misionesländereien. Berlin: Sittenfeld, 1883.
- . Neue Daten und Betrachtungen über Argentinens Handels- und Verkehrspolitik: Wirtschaftliche Entwicklung und Gesetzgebung. Berlin: Deutsch-argentinischer Centralverband, 1912.
- . Notes Upon Argentine Flora. (Extracts from Gustavo Niederlein's Work, "La Riqueza Florestal De La Republica Argentina."). Buenos Aires: Anderson & Co., General Printers, 1904.
- . Official Handbook of the Philippines and Catalogue of the Philippine Exhibit. In Two Volumes / Wilson, William P.; 1844-1927. Manila: Bureau of Public Printing; [etc.], 1903.
- . Plantago Bismarckii Niederlein: morphologische, anatomische und pflanzengeographische Beschreibung eines alten Bismarck-Denkmal in Argentinien; Denkschrift. Zittau: Fiedler, 1915.
- . Reisebriefe von der Deutsch-argentinischen Expedition zur Prüfung der Colonisationsfähigkeit der Lezama'schen Misionesländereien an Richard Napp. Berlin: Julius Sittenfeld, 1883.
- . Resultados botanicos de exploraciones hechas en Misiones, Corrientes y paises limitrofes desde 1883 hasta 1888. ... Del Boletin 31 del museo de productos argentinos. Buenos Aires, 1890.
- . Ventajas y posibilidades de éxito en la República Argentina en la cría de ganado, agricultura, industria y comercio. [Berlin], 1910.
- Nießen. "Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein in Buenos Aires." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 3:173–74. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915.
- . "Ein argentinischer Gelehrter über Deutschland." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 3:179–82. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915.
- Niessen-Deiters, Leonore. Alt-Amerika: Kulturhistorische Briefe für die Kölnische Zeitung. Köln: DuMont-Schauberg, Expd. "Köln. Zeitg." 1927.
- . Berichte aus Argentinien in der Kölnischen Zeitung 1913 und 1920. Edited by Günter Vollmer. Berlin, 1994.
- , ed. Die deutsche Frau im Auslande und in den Schutzgebieten; nach Originalberichten aus fünf Erdteilen. Berlin: Egon Fleischel & Co., 1913.
- . "Die deutsche Frau in den Schutzgebieten und im Ausland." In Das Frauenbuch: Stellung und Aufgaben der Frau im Recht und in der Gesellschaft, edited by Eugenie von Soden, Vol. 3. Stuttgart: Franckh'sche Verlagshandlung, 1914.

- Ninkovich, Frank. "Kontinentale Expansion, Empire und die Zivilisierungsmission im Amerika des 19. Jahrhunderts." In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 285–309. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- Nöckler, Herbert Carl. Sprachmischung in Südwestafrika. Schriftenreihe des Instituts für Auslandsbeziehungen 5. München: Hueber, 1963.
- Nolden, Thomas. "On Colonial Spaces and Bodies: Hans Grimm's Geschichten Aus Südwestafrika." In The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy, edited by Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop, 125–40. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998.
- Norddeutscher Lloyd. 70 años LLoyd Norte Alemán Bremen: 1857 - 1927. Berlin: Atlantic-Verlag, 1927.
- Norel, Philippe, and Laurent Testot. Une histoire du monde global. Auxerre: Éd. "Sciences humaines," 2012.
- Nouwen, Mollie Lewis. Oy, My Buenos Aires: Jewish Immigrants and the Creation of Argentine National Identity. Albuquerque: University of New Mexico Press, 2013.
- Novick, Susana. Las migraciones en América Latina: políticas, culturas y estrategias. Buenos Aires Argentina: CLACSO; Catálogos, 2008.
- Novoa, Adriana, and Alex Levine. !Darwinistas!: The Construction of Evolutionary Thought in Nineteenth Century Argentina. Leiden; Boston: Brill, 2012.
- . From Man to Ape: Darwinism in Argentina, 1870-1920. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2010.
- Noyes, J. "Commerce, Colonialism, and the Globalization of Action in Late Enlightenment Germany." POSTCOLONIAL STUDIES 9, no. 1 (2006): 81–98.
- Noyes, John K. Colonial Space: Spatiality in the Discourse of German South West Africa, 1884-1915. Chur, Switzerland; Philadelphia: Harwood Academic Publishers, 1992.
- . "Geschlechter, Mobilität und der Kulturtransfer: Lene Haases Roman Raggys Fahrt nach Südwest." In Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, edited by Birthe Kundrus, 220–39. Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003.
- . "National Identity, Nomadism, and Narration in Gustav Frenssen's Peter Moor's Journey to Southwest Africa." In The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy, edited by Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop, 87–106. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998.
- . The Mastery of Submission: Inventions of Masochism. Ithaca; London: Cornell University Press, 1997.
- Oberländer, Richard. Deutsch-Afrika: Land und Leute, Handel und Wandel in unseren Kolonien. Leipzig: W. Friedrich, 1885.
- O'Donnell, Krista. "Home, Nation, Empire: Domestic Germanness and Colonial Citizenship." In The Heimat Abroad: The Boundaries of Germanness, edited by Krista O'Donnell, Renate Bridenthal, and Nancy Ruth Reagin, 40–57. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2005.

- O'Donnell, Krista, Renate Bridenthal, and Nancy Ruth Reagin, eds. The Heimat Abroad: The Boundaries of Germanness. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2005.
- Oelhafen von Schöllnbach, Hans. Die Besiedlung Deutsch-Südwestafrikas bis zum Weltkrieg. Berlin: D. Reimer, 1926.
- Oermann, Nils Ole. Mission, Church and State Relations in South West Africa Under German Rule (1884-1915). Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1999.
- Oetker, Karl. Die Neger-Seele und die Deutschen in Afrika, ein Kampf gegen Missionen, Sittlichkeits-Fanatismus und Bürokratie vom Standpunkt Moderner Psychologie. München: J.F. Lehmann, 1907.
- Offermann, C. "Technik und Wirtschaft in Argentinien." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 3:139–50. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915.
- . "Technik und Wirtschaft in Argentinien. III." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 6:49-. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1918.
- Official Guide to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at the City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, April 30th to December 1st, 1904: By Authority of the United States of America ...* The Official Guide Co., 1904.
- Oggier, Gabriel. Historia de San Jerónimo Norte: una colonia agrícola-ganadera de inmigrantes suizos en la República Argentina / Jullier, Emilio B. Rosario [Argentina]: Editorial Apis, 1984.
- Ojeda-Ebert, Gerardo. Deutsche Einwanderung und Herausbildung der chilenischen Nation, 1846-1920. München: Wilhelm Fink, 1984.
- Oldevis, Margareta. Im Sonnenland: Als Farmersfrau in Südwestafrika. Edited by Ernst Alker. 1.-3.Taus. Rüslikon-Zürich: Müller, 1946.
- Oloukpona-Yinnon, Adjaï Paulin. --notre place au soleil, ou, L'Afrique des pangermanistes, 1878-1918. Racines du présent. Paris; Lomé, Togo: L'Harmattan; Editions Haho, 1985.
- Olpp, Johannes. Angra Pequena und Gross-Nama-Land: Auf Grund vieljähriger Beobachtung kurz geschildert. Elberfeld: B.L. Friederichs, 1884.
- . Erlebnisse im Hinterlande von Angra-Pequena. Verlag der Rheinischen Missions-Gesellschaft, 1896.
- Olsen, Stephanie. Childhood, Youth and Emotions in Modern History: National, Colonial and Global Perspectives, 2015.
- Olstein, Diego Adrián. Thinking History Globally, 2014.
- Olusoga, David, and Casper W. Erichsen. The Kaiser's Holocaust: Germany's Forgotten Genocide and the Colonial Roots of Nazism. London: Faber and Faber, 2010.
- O'Malley, John W., ed. The Jesuits: Cultures, Sciences, and the Arts, 1540-1773. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1999.
- Omer-Cooper, John D. History of Southern Africa. London: James Currey, 1987.

- Opatrný, Josef. Emigración centroeuropea a América Latina. Praga: Universidad Carolina de Praga, Editorial Karolinum, 2005.
- Opitz, May, Katharina Oguntoye, and Dagmar Schultz, eds. Showing Our Colors: Afro-German Women Speak Out. Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press, 1992.
- Orbigny, Alcide Dessalines d', ed. Malerische Reise in Süd-und Nordamerika: eine geordnete Zusammenstellung des Wissenswürdigsten von den Entdeckungsreisen ... Translated by August Diezmann. Leipzig: Baumgärtners Buchhandlung, 1839.
- . Voyage dans les deux Amériques. Later edition. Paris: Furne et Cie, 1854.
- . Voyage pittoresque dans les deux Amériques. Paris: L. Tenré; Henri Dupuy, 1836.
- Orizio, Riccardo. Lost White Tribes: Journeys Among the Forgotten. London: Secker & Warburg, 2000.
- Orth, Kerstin. Die Migration in die deutschen Kolonien (1884-1914). BoD – Books on Demand, 2007.
- Ortíz, Rafael Otilio. “Memorias de Emilia Bischoff de Ferreyra Díaz.” In La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera, edited by Olga Zamboni, 41–60. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Ortner, Sherry B., ed. The Fate of “Culture”: Geertz and Beyond. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1999.
- Osayimwese, Itohan I. Colonialism at the Center: German Colonial Architecture and the Design Reform Movement, 1828-1914. ProQuest, 2008.
- Osterhammel, Jürgen. Colonialism: A Theoretical Overview. Translated by Shelley Frisch. Princeton; Kingston: M. Wiener; Ian Randle Publishers, 1997.
- . Die Verwandlung der Welt: eine Geschichte des 19. Jahrhunderts. C.H.Beck, 2009.
- . “‘The Great Work of Uplifting Mankind’. Zivilisierungsmissionen und Moderne.” In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 363–425. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- . The Transformation of the World: A Global History of the Nineteenth Century. Translated by Patrick Camiller. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 2014.
- Otero, Hernán. Crisol de razas e integración de inmigrantes en la estadística censal Argentina, 1869-1914. São Paulo: Centro de Estudos de Demografia Histórica da América Latina, Universidade de São Paulo, 1996.
- . Estadística y nación: una historia conceptual del pensamiento censal de la Argentina moderna, 1869-1914. Buenos Aires: Prometeo libros, 2007.
- . La guerra en la sangre: los franco-argentinos ante la Primera Guerra Mundial. Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 2009.
- Ottermann, Reino. The Centenary of the Synod, 1895-1995. Cape Town: Evangelical Lutheran Church in Southern Africa (Cape Church), 1995.
- Otterness, Philip. Becoming German: The 1709 Palatine Migration to New York. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 2004.

- Otto de Tori, Renata Ursula. "Los sueños de Edith." In La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera, edited by Olga Zamboni, 65–79. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Oven, Wilfred von. 100 Jahre Deutscher Krankenverein: 1857-1957; ein Jahrhundert deutsch-argentinischer Gemeinschaft im Spiegel des Wachstums und Werdens ihrer grössten und bedeutendsten Vereinigung. Buenos Aires: Impr. Mercur, 1957.
- Özkırmı, Umut. Theories of Nationalism: A Critical Introduction. 2nd ed. Basingstoke Hampshire [England]; New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010.
- Paatz, Annette. Liberalismus und Lebensart: Romane in Chile und Argentinien (1847-1866). Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 2011.
- Pablo, Juan Carlos de. Los economistas y la economía argentina. Buenos Aires: Ediciones Macchi, 1977.
- Pabst, Richard. Die Technischen Hilfsmittel für den Transport zu Wasser und zu Lande von Fleisch in gekühltem und gefrorenem Zustande / Die Argentinischen Fleischgefrieranstalten und deren gesundheitliche Überwachung. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Argentinischen Centralverbandes zur Förderung Wirtschaftlicher Interessen 1. Berlin: Deutsch-Argentinischer Centralverband, 1913.
- Pagni, Andrea. "Ins Land der Vorfahren und zurück: Juan Bautista Alberdi in Europa." In Die Wiederentdeckung Lateinamerikas: die Erfahrung des Subkontinents in Reiseberichten des 19. Jahrhunderts, edited by Walther L. Bernecker, Gertrud Krömer, and Kristina Birn, 391–403. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1997.
- Palmer, Robert R. The Age of the Democratic Revolution: A Political History of Europe and America, 1760-1800. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 1959.
- Pani, Erika, and Alicia Salmeron Castro, eds. Conceptualizar lo que se ve: François-Xavier Guerra, historiador: homenaje. México D.F.: Instituto Mora, 2004.
- Parpart, Jane L, and Marianne Rostgaard. The Practical Imperialist: Letters from a Danish Planter in German East Africa, 1888-1906. Leiden: Brill, 2006.
- Parr, Rolf. Die Fremde als Heimat: Heimatkunst, Kolonialismus, Expeditionen. Konstanz: Konstanz University Press, 2014.
- Passarge, Siegfried. Die Buschmänner der Kalahari. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1907.
- . Die Kalahari: Versuch einer physisch-geographischen Darstellung der Sandfelder des südafrikanischen Beckens. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1904.
- . "Zwei merkwürdige Gewächse." In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 14. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- "Pastor Jakob Riffel: Biografía." Pastor Jakob Riffel, 2011. <http://pastorjakobriffel.blogspot.com/p/biografia.html>.
- Patagonien, das unbekannt Land*. Verlag d. Deutschen Vereinigung f. Evangelisation u. Volksmission, 1929.
- Patagonien: Ein deutsches Kolonisationsgebiet*. Berlin: Deutsche Buch- und Kunstdruckerei, g.m.b.h., 1903.

- Patingre, Cécile, and Graciela Barrault. Monsieur Priebe, un nazi en Argentine. Paris: Sombrero productions, 2005.
- Patronato de la Infancia (Buenos Aires). Reglamento de la Colonia Agrícola-Ganadera. Buenos Aires: Impr. Tailhade & Rosselli, 1903.
- Pearson, Patrick. "The History and Social Structure of the Rehoboth Baster Community of Namibia." University of the Witwatersrand, 1986.
- Peck, Joachim. Kolonialismus ohne Kolonien: Der deutsche Imperialismus und China 1937. Studien zur Kolonialgeschichte und Geschichte der nationalen und kolonialen Befreiungsbewegung 3. Berlin: Akademie-Verlag, 1961.
- Peinemann, Norman. Notas sobre la Colonia Monte La Plata. Bahía Blanca [Argentina]: Trascender Ediciones, 1997.
- Peñaloza, Fernanda, Claudio Canaparo, and Jason Wilson, eds. Patagonia: Myths and Realities. Bern: Peter Lang, 2010.
- Penkwitt, Wolfgang. Preussen und Brasilien: zum Aufbau des preussischen Konsularwesens im unabhängigen Kaiserreich (1822-1850). Wiesbaden: In Kommission bei F. Steiner, 1983.
- Penny, H. Glenn, and Matti Bunzl, eds. Worldly Provincialism: German Anthropology in the Age of Empire. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2003.
- Pernet, Corinne A. "Die Zivilisierungsmissionen der Zivilgesellschaft. Die andere Art der US-Intervention in Lateinamerika von 1910 bis 1945." In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 311–33. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- Perras, Arne. Carl Peters and German Imperialism, 1856 - 1918: A Political Biography. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2004.
- Perraudin, Michael, and Jürgen Zimmerer, eds. German Colonialism and National Identity. New York: Routledge, 2011.
- Perthes, Justus. Geographisches Jahrbuch, 1866.
- Petermann, A., ed. Mittheilungen aus Justus Perthes' Geographischer Anstalt über wichtige neue Erforschungen auf dem Gesamtgebiete der Geographie. Gotha: Justus Perthes, 1856.
- Peters, Johann Hinrich, Ina Marie Peters, Hans Heinrich Ohlsen, and Andreas Ohlsen, eds. Mein lieber Andreas! Treue Seele!, 2005.
- Petersson, Niels P. "Markt, Zivilisierungsmission und Imperialismus." In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 33–54. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- Petit, Véronique. Counting Populations, Understanding Societies: Towards a Interpretative Demography. Heidelberg: Springer Science & Business Media, 2013.
- Peyret, Alejo. Une visite aux colonies de la République Argentine. Paris: Impr. Typographique de P. Mouillot, 1889.

- Pfannenschmidt, Ernst. Die argentinische Landwirtschaft. Edited by Fritz Ehrenforth. Der Weltmarkt für agrarische Erzeugnisse: Untersuchungen des Forschungsinstituts für Agrar- und Siedlungswesen zu Berlin 2. Berlin: Paul Parey, 1926.
- . Die argentinische Viehzucht im Hauptproduktionsgebiete. Berlin: P. Parey, 1914.
- . “Die kulturelle Entwicklung Paraguays und seine jetzige Bedeutung für europäische Kolonisation.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 285-; 315-; 347-; 369-.
- . Die Landwirtschaft in den nördlichen Provinzen und Territorien Argentiniens. Berlin: Verlagsbuchhandlung P. Parey, 1916.
- . Die landwirtschaftliche Konkurrenz Argentiniens, Inaugural-Dissertation. Heidelberg: Druck von J. Hörning, 1902.
- . Die landwirtschaftlichen Produktionsverhältnisse Argentiniens. Schriften des Vereins für Sozialpolitik 141. München; Leipzig: Duncker and Humblot, 1913.
- . Landwirtschaft und Kolonisation in Patagonien. Berlin: Verlagsbuchhandlung P. Parey, 1915.
- Pfeffer, Clemens. “Koloniales Denken im Spiegel der Rheinischen Missionsberichte: Neue Perspektiven zum Verhältnis von Mission und Kolonialismus in Südwestafrika, 1842-1884.” Universität Wien, 2010.
- Pfeilschifter, Jorge. El Cuidado espiritual de los soldados y la vida cristiana en el ejército alemán. Translated by Juan Langenstein. Los Alemanes, cómo piensan, cómo hablan, cómo se defienden 8. Buenos Aires: Beutespacher y Cía, 1917.
- Pfeil, Joachim Graf. “Die Boerenfrage in Südwestafrika.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Achter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1895 8 (1896): 133–47.
- Pieper, Renate, and Peer Schmidt, eds. Latin America and the Atlantic World. El Mundo Atlántico y América Latina (1500-1850). Essays in Honor of Horst Pietschmann. Köln; Weimar: Böhlau Verlag, 2005.
- Pierard, Richard V. “The German Colonial Society, 1882-1914.” Ph.D., State University of Iowa, 1964.
- Pierce, Joseph Matthew. “Writing and Kinship in the Argentine Fin de Siglo, 1890-1910: La Familia Bunge.” Ph.D., The University of Texas at Austin, 2013.
- Pimienta, Robert. L’ancienne colonie allemande du Sud-Ouest Africain. Paris: A. Challamel, 1920.
- Pincus, Robert. “Ein privates technisches Institut in Südamerika.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 3:175–76. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915.
- Pineda, Yovanna. Industrial Development in a Frontier Economy: The Industrialization of Argentina, 1890-1930. Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 2009.
- . “Manufacturing Innovation in Argentina, 1890-1930.” The Business History Review 83, no. 3 (2009): 539–62.
- . “Sources of Finance and Reputation: Merchant Finance Groups in Argentine Industrialization, 1890-1930.” Latin American Research Review 41, no. 2 (2006): 3–30.

- Piskorski, Jan M. "Medieval Colonization in East Central Europe." In The Germans and the East, edited by Charles Ingrao and Franz A. J. Szabo, 27–36. West Lafayette, Ind: Purdue University Press, 2007.
- Platz, Germán. El Kulturkampf francés y el alemán en sus causas y en sus consecuencias. Translated by Juan Langenstein. Beutesbacher y Cía. Los Alemanes, cómo piensan, cómo hablan, cómo se defienden 11. Bueno Aires, 1917.
- Plowman, Matthew Erin. "Doors Left Open Then Slammed Shut: The German Colonization of Southwest Africa and the Anglo-German Rivalry, 1883-1915." M.A., University of Nebraska at Omaha, 1995.
- Poddar, Prem, Rajeev Shridhar Patke, and Lars Jensen, eds. A Historical Companion to Postcolonial Literatures: Continental Europe and Its Empires. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2008.
- Podgorny, Irina. El argentino despertar de las faunas y las gentes prehistóricas. Buenos Aires: EUDEBA-Editorial Universitaria de Buenos Aires, Centro Cultural Ricardo Rojas, 2000.
- Podgorny, Irina, and Maria Margaret Lopes. El desierto en una vitrina: museos e historia natural en la Argentina, 1810-1890. Mexico, D.F.: LIMUSA, 2008.
- Podgorny, Irina, Marta Penhos, and Pedro Navarro Floria. Viajes: espacios y cuerpos en la Argentina del siglo XIX y comienzos del XX. Buenos Aires: Teseo, 2009.
- Pogge von Strandmann, H, Geoff Eley, and James N Retallack, eds. Wilhelminism and Its Legacies: German Modernities, Imperialism, and the Meanings of Reform, 1890-1930: Essays for Hartmut Pogge von Strandmann. New York: Berghahn Books, 2003.
- Pogge von Strandmann, Hartmut. Imperialismus vom Grünen Tisch: deutsche Kolonialpolitik zwischen wirtschaftlicher Ausbeutung und "zivilisatorischen" Bemühungen. Berlin: Ch. Links Verlag, 2009.
- Pohlmann, Cornelia. Die Auswanderung aus dem Herzogtum Braunschweig im Kräftespiel staatlicher Einflussnahme und öffentlicher Resonanz, 1720-1897. Franz Steiner Verlag, 2002.
- Polakowsky, Helmut. "Review of Durch Süd-Amerika. Reise- und kulturhistorische Bilder. Erster Band: Die Pampa-Länder by Alexander Join." Mitteilungen der Österreichischen Geographischen Gesellschaft 38 (1895): 194–97.
- Poley, Jared. Decolonization in Germany: Weimar Narratives of Colonial Loss and Foreign Occupation. Peter Lang, 2007.
- Poliakov, Léon. The Aryan Myth: A History of Racist and Nationalist Ideas in Europe. New York: Basic Books Inc. Publishers, 1974.
- Popp, Victor P., and Nicolas Dening. Los alemanes del Volga: tras largo peregrinar por Europa hallaron patria definitiva en América. Buenos Aires: o. V., 1977.
- Porter, Libby. Unlearning the Colonial Cultures of Planning. Farnham, Surrey; Burlington, VT: Ashgate Pub. Co., 2010.
- Possemiers, Jan. "Barcos de vapor belgas sobre el Río de la Plata (1906-1939)." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 93–98. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.

- Potthast, Barbara, Juliana Stroebele/Gregor, and Doerte Wollrad, eds. Ciudadanía vivida, (in)seguridades e interculturalidad. 1. ed. Buenos Aires: Friedrich Ebert Stiftung; Nueva Sociedad, 2008.
- Prado, Manuel. La ocupación del Rio Negro: Expedición realizada por el ministro de la Guerra General Julio A. Roca, 25 de Mayo de 1879. Buenos Aires: Establecimiento Tipográfico - Esmeralda 370, 1900.
- Pratt Guterl, Matthew. Josephine Baker and the Rainbow Tribe. Harvard University Press, 2014.
- Pratt, Mary Louise. Imperial Eyes: Travel Writing and Transculturation. London: Routledge, 1992.
- . Imperial Eyes: Travel Writing and Transculturation. Second Edition. London: Routledge, 2006.
- Preusse-Sperber, Otto. “Argentiniens handelsgeographische Lage.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 2:262–65. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914.
- . Auswanderer-Katechismus. Dresden: Verlag zeitgemäßer Schriftwerke, 1919.
- . Das Auslandsdeutschum: Vortrag. Berlin: Kriegspresseamt, 1918.
- . Deutschlands Auswanderungsfrage. Leipzig: Dieterich, 1924.
- . “Eisenbahnbauten in Verbindung mit Kolonisation.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 1:23–30. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913.
- . Süd-und Mittel-Amerika: Seine Bedeutung für Wirtschaft und Handel. Ein Ratgeber für Exporteure, Importeure, Ansiedler, Minen-interessenten, Kapitalisten u.s.w. Berlin: Salle, 1913.
- . Unter Ansiedlern, Gauchos und Indianern: Erlebtes und Erlauschtes eines deutschen Auswanderers in Südamerika. Leipzig: Dieterich, 1925.
- . Wegweiser für Argentinien zur Orientierung der Auswanderer und Kapitalisten. Buenos Aires: Herpig & Stoeveken, 1897.
- . Wegweiser für Argentinien zur Orientierung der Auswanderer und Kapitalisten. Second Edition. Flöha, Sachsen: Peitz & Sohn, 1905.
- . Yankee-Imperialismus und Dollar-Diplomatie, 1918.
- . “Zur handelspolitischen Eroberung Lateinamerikas.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 3:62–67. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915.
- Prieto, Leida Fernández. “Islands of Knowledge: Science and Agriculture in the History of Latin America and the Caribbean.” Isis 104, no. 4 (2013): 788–97.
- Primeras jornadas nacionales de literatura germanica: programa*, 1955.
- Prion-Rietfontein. “Ackerbau in Südwestafrika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 456–59.
- Prislei, Leticia. “Crisis del liberalismo y crisis del socialismo. La imagen de Bélgica en la prensa socialista argentina a fines de los '20.” In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina

- en los siglos XIX y XX*, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Probst, Ernst. Der rätselhafte Spinosaurus: Leben und Werk des Forschers Ernst Stromer von Reichenbach. München: GRIN Verlag, 2015.
- Pütz, Joe. Südwestler Stammbaum: 1898-1915. Windhoek: Star Binders & Printers / J. Pütz, 1984.
- Pyenson, Lewis. Cultural Imperialism and Exact Sciences: German Expansion Overseas, 1900-1930. Studies in History and Culture 1. New York: Peter Lang, 1985.
- Pyta, Wolfram, ed. Karl May: Brückenbauer zwischen den Kulturen. Berlin: LIT Verlag, 2010.
- Quattrocchi-Woisson, Diana, ed. L'Argentine après la débâcle: itinéraire d'une recomposition inédite. Paris: M. Houdiard, 2007.
- Quelle, Otto. "Beiträge zur wissenschaftlichen Orientierung über das lateinische Amerika." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 3:185–87. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1915.
- . "Die Ergebnisse der dritten argentinischen Volkszählung vom 1. Juni 1914 (Besprechung und Anregungen)." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Otto Quelle, 9:81-. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1921.
- . "Die Heimstättengesetze von Argentinien und Paraguay." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Otto Quelle, 7:2–9. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1919.
- , ed. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts. Vol. 7. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1919.
- , ed. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts. Vol. 8. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1920.
- , ed. Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts. Vol. 9. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1921.
- , ed. "Zur Geschichte der rheinischen Handelsbeziehungen mit Lateinamerika." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, 7:72–75. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1919.
- Quesada, Ernesto. La doctrina Monroe: su evolución histórica. Buenos Aires: Imprenta y Casa Editora "Coni," 1920.
- . La enseñanza de la historia en las universidades alemanas. La Plata: Facultad de ciencias jurídicas y sociales, 1910.
- . The Social Evolution of the Argentine Republic. Library of Alexandria, 1911.
- Quesada, Vicente Gregorio. Historia colonial argentina. Buenos Aires: La Cultura argentina, 1915.
- Rabe, Lizette. "Bete Und Arbeite": The Philippi Germans and Their Story. [South Africa]: Mzansimedia, 2010.
- Rabinovich, Alejandro Martín. La société guerrière: pratiques, discours et valeurs militaires dans le Rio de la Plata, 1806-1852. Rennes: Presses universitaires de Rennes, 2013.

- Rachel, Hugo, Johannes Papritz, and Paul Wallich. Berliner Grosskaufleute und Kapitalisten, Bd. 1: Bis zum Ende des Dreissigjährigen Krieges. Veröffentlichungen des Vereins für Geschichte der Mark Brandenburg. Berlin: de Gruyter, 1967.
- . Berliner Grosskaufleute und Kapitalisten, Bd. 2: Die Zeit des Merkantilismus, 1648-1806. Veröffentlichungen des Vereins für Geschichte der Mark Brandenburg. Berlin: de Gruyter, 1967.
- . Berliner Grosskaufleute und Kapitalisten, Bd. 3: Übergangszeit zum Hochkapitalismus, 1806-1856. Veröffentlichungen des Vereins für Geschichte der Mark Brandenburg. Berlin: de Gruyter, 1967.
- Rackow, Hermann. Der Kolonial-Interessent: Ratschläge f. d. Übersiedlung in das überseeische Deutschland und den dauernden Aufenthalt daselbst. Berlin: Deutscher Kolonial-Verl., 1911.
- Rahden, Till. Juden und andere Breslauer: die Beziehungen zwischen Juden, Protestanten und Katholiken in einer deutschen Grossstadt von 1860 bis 1925. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2000.
- Rahn, Lars. Theoretische Begründung deutscher Kolonisation in der ersten Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts: Untersuchung am Beispiel des Werkes von Friedrich List. München: GRIN Verlag, 2012.
- Raina, Uta. "Intellectual Imperialism in the Andes: German Anthropologists and Archaeologists in Peru, 1870-1930." Temple University, 2007.
- Raithel, Hellmuth. Der Schulstreit in Südwest, 1919-1921. München: W. & J.M. Salzer, 1977.
- Ramelow, H., ed. Zwanglose Mitteilungen und Berichte der Deutschen Exportvereinigung für Argentinien zur Förderung gemeinsamer Exportinteressen und zum Schutze der Mitglieder bei Auslandsprozessen. Vol. 1. Berlin: H. Büttner, 1909.
- Range, Paul Theodor. Beiträge und Ergänzungen zur Landeskunde des deutschen Namalandes. Hamburg: L. Friederichsen & Co., 1914.
- . Geologie des deutschen Namalandes. Berlin: Geol. Landesanst., 1912.
- . Reisestudien in Gross-Namaland. Berlin: [s.n.], 1908.
- Rapalo, María Ester, and María Victoria Grillo. "Un caso de solidaridad obrera: el conflicto de 1918 entre Bunge y Born y los obreros de sus empresas molineras." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 99–105. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Raquillet, Pauline. Alfred Ebelot: le parcours migratoire d'un français en Argentine au XIXe siècle. Paris: L'Harmattan, 2011.
- Rash, Felicity J. German Images of the Self and the Other: Nationalist, Colonialist and Anti-Semitic Discourse, 1871-1918. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012.
- Rassow, Hermann. Die Wahrheit über die deutschen Kolonien! Berlin: Nauck, 1908.
- Rave. "Der Weinbau in Klein-Windhuk." In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 21–23. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- . "Ein Spaziergang nach Klein-Windhuk." In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 19–21. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.

- Reber, Vera Blinn. British Mercantile Houses in Buenos Aires, 1810-1880. Harvard University Press, 1979.
- . “Bunge and Born.” In History of World Trade Since 1450, edited by John J McCusker. Detroit: Thomson Gale, 2006.
- Reden, Friedrich Wilhelm von. Die Staaten im Stromgebiet des La Plata in ihrer Bedeutung für Europa. Grundlage von Vorträgen im Geografischen Verein zu Frankfurt a.M. Anfangs 1852. Darmstadt: Verlag der Hofbuchhandlung von Gustav Jonghaus, 1852.
- Regel, Fritz. Argentinien. Angewandte Geographie. Hefte zur Verbreitung geographischer Kenntnisse in ihrer Beziehung zum Kultur- und Wirtschaftsleben, IV. 10. Frankfurt am Main: Heinrich Keller, 1914.
- Registro nacional de la República argentina*. Buenos Aires: Talleres gráficos de la penitenciaría nacional, 1891.
- Registro nacional de la República Argentina*. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1893.
- Registro Nacional de la República Argentina. Año 1902*. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1902.
- Registro Nacional de la República Argentina. Año 1905*. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1905.
- Registro Nacional de la República Argentina. Año 1905*. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1906.
- Registro Nacional. Provincias Unidas - Rio de la Plata*. Buenos Aires: Imprenta de los Expositos, 1825.
- Registro Nacional. República Argentina. Año 1899*. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1899.
- Registro Oficial de la República Argentina: Año 1891*. Vol. 40. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1891.
- Registro Oficial de la República Argentina que comprende los documentos espedidos desde 1810 hasta 1873*. Vol. 3. Buenos Aires: Imprenta Especial de Obras de “La República,” 1882.
- Registro Oficial de la República Argentina que comprende los documentos espedidos desde 1810 hasta 1890: Tomo: 1890*. Vol. 13. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1899.
- Rehbock, Theodor. “Ackerbau in Deutsch-Südwestafrika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 731-739; 863-.
- . Deutschlands Pflichten in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1904.
- . Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: Seine wirtschaftliche Erschliessung, unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Nutzbarmachung des Wassers. Bericht über das Ergebnis einer im Auftrage des “Syndikates für Bewässerungsanlagen in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika” durch das Herero- und Gross- Namaland unternommenen Reise. Berlin: D. Reimer, 1898.

- . “Die Ackerböden Deutsch-Südwestafrikas.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 2 (1901 1900): 109-.
- Reichert, Federico-. En la cima de las montañas y de la vida. [Buenos Aires]: Academia Nacional de Agronomía y Veterinaria, 1967.
- Reichskolonialamt. Die Deutschen Schutzgebiete in Afrika und der Südsee 1912/13. Amtliche Jahresberichte. Berlin: Reichskolonialamt, 1913.
- Reimer, Simon. Die Freizügigkeit in den deutschen Schutzgebieten, insbesondere die Ausweisung von Reichsangehörigen. Kolonialrechtliche Abhandlungen 3. Münster: F. Coppenrath, 1911.
- Rein, Raanan. Argentine Jews Or Jewish Argentines?: Essays on Ethnicity, Identity, and Diaspora. Leiden: Brill, 2010.
- Reinhard, Wolfgang. “Bewegung in der Imperialismusforschung.” In Imperialistische Kontinuität und nationale Ungeduld im 19. Jahrhundert, edited by Wolfgang Reinhard, 7–11. Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, 1991.
- , ed. Imperialistische Kontinuität und nationale Ungeduld im 19. Jahrhundert. Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, 1991.
- Reinhardt, Steven, and Dennis Reinhartz, eds. Transatlantic History. 1st ed. College Station: Published for the University of Texas at Arlington by Texas A & M University Press, 2006.
- Renan, Ernest. What is a Nation? - Qu'est-ce qu'une nation? (Conférence faite à la Sorbonne le 11 mars 1882). Edited by Charles Taylor. Toronto: Tapir Press, 1996.
- Rendtorff, D. “Evangelische Deutsche in Argentinien.” Sonderdruck aus: Kalender für Gustav-Adolf-Vereine 1913. Verlag von Arwed Strauch in Leipzig, 1913.
- Rentzell, Ilse von. Im argentinischen Chaco. Stuttgart: Strecker und Schröder, 1929.
- . “Las publicaciones científicas del Doctor Cristóbal M. Hicken.” Darwiniana 2, no. 4 (1937): 97–104.
- . Maravillas de nuestras plantas indígenas y algunas exóticas. Buenos Aires: Editores Ilse von Rentzell, 1935.
- Reports and Correspondence on the State of Affairs in Damaraland and Great Namaqualand, in Connection with the Mission of Rev. C. H. Hahn*. Cape Town: W.A. Richards & Sons, 1882.
- Repussard, Catherine. Idéologie coloniale et imaginaire mythique: la revue Kolonie und Heimat de 1909 à 1914. Faustus, études germaniques. Strasbourg: Presses universitaires de Strasbourg, 2014.
- Retallack, James. The German Right, 1860-1920: Political Limits of the Authoritarian Imagination. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2006.
- Rethmar, L. H. Wegweiser für Auswanderer nach Argentinien. Third Edition. Flöha, Sachsen: U. Beitz, 1912.
- Retterath, Hans-Werner. Deutschamerikanertum und Volkstumsgedanke: zur Ethnizitätskonstruktion durch die auslandsdeutsche Kulturarbeit zwischen 1918 und 1945. Marburg, 2000.

- Reuter, Gabriele. From a Good Family. Translated by Lynne Tatlock. Rochester, NY: Boydell & Brewer, 1999.
- . Kolonistenvolk: Roman aus Argentinien. Berlin: S. Fischer, 1897.
- Rey Balmaceda, Raul C. Comunidades extranjeras en la Argentina contribucion a una bibliografia. 1. Nachdr., Aug. 1980. Buenos Aires, 1980.
- Rheinen, Otto. Die Selbstverwaltung der Gemeinden in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Berlin: Buchdr. Gutenberg, 1913.
- Rheingantz, Jakob. Kolonie São Lourenço, Staat Rio Grande do Sul. Porto Alegre: Cäsar Reinhardt, 1907.
- Rhenius, Bill. Der Amateur-Kolonist: nützliche Winke und Geschichten aus dem La Plata Hinterwald. Buenos Aires: Selbstverlag des Verfassers, 1913.
- Rhys, William Casnodyn. A Welsh Song in Patagonia: Memories of the Welsh Colonization in Patagonia. Edited by David Hall Rhys. [United States?]: E.K. Vyhmeister, 2005.
- Richmond, Douglas. Carlos Pellegrini and the Crisis of the Argentine Elites, 1880-1916. New York: Praeger, 1989.
- Richter, Franz. “Die Frau und die Kolonien.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 654–713.
- Richter, Julius. Der Aufbau unserer südafrikanischen Missionskirche. Berlin: Berliner ev. Missionsgesellsch., 1905.
- Riffel, Jakob. Die Rußlanddeutschen insbesondere die Wolgadeutschen am La Plata (Argentinien, Uruguay und Paraguay) -- Festschrift zum 50-jährigen Jubiläum ihrer Einwanderung. Est. Lucas Conzalez, Entre Rios: Selbstverl. d. Verf., 1928.
- Ring, Hartmut. Robert Krause: Auf den Spuren des Landschaftsmalers durch das 19. Jahrhundert. Norderstedt: BoD – Books on Demand, 2013.
- Ringrose, David R. Expansion and Global Interaction, 1200-1700. New York: Longman, 2000.
- Rinke, Stefan. “Der letzte freie Kontinent”: deutsche Lateinamerikapolitik im Zeichen transnationaler Beziehungen, 1918-1933. Stuttgart: Heinz, 1996.
- . “Deutschland und Argentinien zwischen Erstem Weltkrieg und Weltwirtschaftskrise.” In Argentinien und das Dritte Reich: mediale und reale Präsenz, Ideologietransfer, Folgewirkungen, edited by Holger Meding and Georg Ismar, 13–24. Berlin: Wissenschaftlicher Verlag Berlin, 2008.
- . “Eine Pickelhaube macht noch keinen Preußen: preußisch-deutsche Militärberater, ‘Militärethos’ und Modernisierung in Chile, 1886-1973.” In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 259–83. Münster: Lit, 2004.
- . “Export einer politischen Kultur: Auslandsdeutsche in Lateinamerika und die Weimarer Republik.” In “Integration und Transformation”: Ethnische Gemeinschaften, Staat und Weltwirtschaft in Lateinamerika seit ca. 1850, edited by Stefan Karlen and A. Wimmer, 353–80. Stuttgart: Akademischer Verlag, 1996.
- . Im Sog der Katastrophe: Lateinamerika und der Erste Weltkrieg. Frankfurt am Main: Campus Verlag, 2015.

- Rinke, Stefan, Monika Contreras Saiz, and Lasse Hoelck, eds. Regieren an der Peripherie: Amerika zwischen Kolonien und unabhängigen Republiken. Stuttgart: Verlag Hans-Dieter Heinz Akademischer Verlag Stuttgart, 2011.
- Rippy, J. Fred. "German Investments in Argentina." The Journal of Business of the University of Chicago 21, no. 1 (1948): 50–54.
- Rischbieter, Julia Laura. Mikro-Ökonomie der Globalisierung: Kaffee, Kaufleute und Konsumenten im Kaiserreich 1870-1914. Köln: Böhlau, 2011.
- Ritter, Paul, ed. Afrika spricht zu Dir: Selbsterlebnisse deutscher Kolonialpioniere. Mühlhausen, Thüringen: Bergwald-Verlag Walter Paul, 1938.
- . Der Kampf um den Erdraum: Kolonien vom Altertum bis zur Gegenwart. Leipzig: P. Reclam jun., 1935.
- . Der Kampf um den Erdraum: Kolonien vom Altertum bis zur Gegenwart. Fifth Edition. Leipzig: P. Reclam jun., 1942.
- Ritz-Deutch, Ute. "Alberto Vojtech Fric, the German Diaspora, and Indian Protection in Southern Brazil, 1900-1020: A Transatlantic Ethno-Historical Case Study." Binghamton University, 2008.
- Rizzo, Lorena. Gender and Colonialism: A History of Kaoko in North-Western Namibia, 1870s - 1950s. Basel Namibia Studies Series 14. Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien, Namibia Resource Center & Southern Africa Library, 2012.
- Robinson, Ronald. "Non-European Foundations of European Imperialism: Sketch for a Theory of Collaboration." In Studies in the Theory of Imperialism, edited by Robert Owen and Bob Sutcliffe, 117–42. London: Longman, 1972.
- Roche, Jean. La colonisation allemande et le Rio Grande do Sul. Paris: Institut des Hautes Etudes de l'Amérique latine, 1959.
- Rode, Karl. "Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904).
- Rodgers, Daniel T. Atlantic Crossings: Social Politics in a Progressive Age. Cambridge, Mass.: Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 1998.
- Rodrian, Philipp. Das Erbe der deutschen Kolonialzeit in Namibia im Fokus des "Tourist Gaze" deutscher Touristen. Würzburger geographische Arbeiten. Mitteilungen der Geographische Gesellschaft Würzburg 102. Würzburg: Selbstverlag des Instituts für Geographie der Julius-Maximilians-Universität Würzburg, 2009.
- Rodríguez, Ana María, ed. Estudios de Historia Religiosa Argentina (Siglos XIX y XX). Rosario [Argentina]: Prohistoria Ediciones, 2013.
- Rodríguez, Julia. Civilizing Argentina: Science, Medicine, and the Modern State. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 2006.
- Rodriguez, Luis D. "La Argentina": Descripción de la Capital Federal, Provincias y Territorios Nacionales. Estadística comercial. Productos. Industrias en explotación. Valor de terrenos de cultivos y destinados á la ganadería en la República, basado en las últimas ventas. Buenos Aires: M. Rodriguez Giles, 1908.

- Roeder, Philip. Where Nation-States Come From: Institutional Change in the Age of Nationalism. Princeton N.J.: Princeton University Press, 2007.
- Roediger, David. The Wages of Whiteness: Race and the Making of the American Working Class. London; New York: Verso, 1991.
- . Working Toward Whiteness: How America's Immigrants Became White: The Strange Journey from Ellis Island to the Suburbs. New York: Basic Books, 2005.
- Rohland de Langbehn, Regula. "El proyecto de un catálogo de libros en alemán editados en la Argentina." In Lenguas, literaturas y sociedad en la Argentina: dialogos sobre la investigación en Argentina, Uruguay y en países germanofónos: actas del coloquio (Viena, 25-28 de marzo de 2003), edited by Joachim Born and Georg Kremnitz, 123–32. Wien: Edition Praesens, 2004.
- . "La Iglesia Evangélica Alemana como promotora de asociaciones benéficas en Buenos Aires. Dos casos: el Deutscher Frauenverein y el Deutsches Seemannsheim." In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 109–24. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- . "Un socialista alemán de primera hora en Buenos Aires: Oswaldo Seyffert y sus observaciones sobre el submundo porteño de 1904." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 109–22.
- Rohland de Langbehn, Regula, and Miguel Vedda, eds. La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- Rohlf, Gerhard. Angra Pequena: die erste deutsche Kolonie in Afrika; dem ganzen deutschen Volke gewidmet. Bielefeld; Leipzig: Velhagen, 1884.
- Rohner, F. "Im Herzen Südamerikas: evangelisches Deutschtum in Paraguay." Gut Deutsch und Evangelisch Allewege, no. Nr. 28 (1910).
- Rohrbach, Paul. Aus Südwest-Afrikas schweren Tagen. Berlin: Weicher, 1909.
- Rohrbach, [Paul]. "Bericht des Ansiedlungskommissars." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 300–; 368–.
- Rohrbach, Paul. Deutsch Südwest-Afrika ein Ansiedlungs-Gebiet? Berlin-Schöneberg: Hilfe, 1905.
- . Deutsche Kolonialwirtschaft. I. Band: Südwest-Afrika. Berlin: Hilfe, 1907.
- . Deutsche Kolonialwirtschaft, kulturpolitische Grundsätze für die Rassen- und Missionsfragen. Berlin-Schöneberg: Buchverlag der "Hilfe," 1909.
- . Die Diamanten von Südwest-Afrika. Frankfurt a.M.: Frankfurter Societäts-Dr., 1910.
- Rojer, Olga Elaine. Exile in Argentina, 1933-1945: A Historical and Literary Introduction. New York: P. Lang, 1989.
- Roller, Kathrin. "Mission und 'Mischehen', Erinnerung und Körper - geteiltes Gedächtnis an eine afrikanische Vorfahrin. Über die Familie Schmelen-Kleinschmidt-Hegner." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 194–211. Wolfratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- . "Zwischen Rassismus und Frömmigkeit - Biopolitik aus erfahrungsgeschichtlicher Perspektive. Über die Geschwister Hegner, Mathilde Kleinschmidt und Ludwig Baumann

- als Nachfahren einer deutsch-afrikanischen Missionarsfamilie.” In Rassenmischehen, Mischlinge, Rassentrennung: zur Politik der Rasse im deutschen Kolonialreich, edited by Frank Becker, 220-. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 2004.
- Romer, Sandra. Eine neue Heimat in Südwestafrika?: die Schweizer Auswanderung nach Namibia, 1870-1946. Basel: Basler Afrika Bibliographien; Namibia Resource Center & Southern Africa Library, 2003.
- Romero, Luis. La crisis argentina: una mirada al siglo XX. Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Editores Argentina, 2003.
- Roscher, Wilhelm. Geschichte der National-Oekonomik in Deutschland. Geschichte der Wissenschaften in Deutschland. Neuere Zeit 14. München: R. Oldenbourg, 1874.
- . Kolonien, Kolonialpolitik und Auswanderung. Second Edition. Leipzig, Heidelberg: C.F. Winter, 1856.
- . “Nationalökonomische Ansichten über die deutsche Auswanderung.” In Deutsche Vierteljahrs-Schrift, 96–116. Göttingen, 1848.
- . Principles of Political Economy. Translated by John J. Lalor. Translation. Vol. 1 and 2. The Evolution of Capitalism. New York: Henry Holt & Co. [Arno Press], 1878.
- Roscher, Wilhelm, and Robert Jannasch. Kolonien, Kolonialpolitik und Auswanderung. Leipzig: C.F. Winter, 1885.
- Rövekamp, Walter. Südwest: nach einem Tagebuch über Erlebnisse in Deutsch-Südwestafrika Anfang des zwanzigsten Jahrhunderts. BoD – Books on Demand, 2010.
- Rüdiger, Klaus. Die Namibia-Deutschen: Geschichte einer Nationalität im Werden. Stuttgart: F. Steiner, 1993.
- Rupp, Erwin. “Die Entschädigung der Ansiedler in Deutsch-Südwestafrika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 296–99.
- . Soll und Haben in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1904.
- Ruppenthal, Jens. “Die Kolonialabteilung im Auswärtigen Amt der Weimarer Republik.” In “... Macht und Anteil an der Weltherrschaft”: Berlin und der deutsche Kolonialismus, edited by Ulrich van der Heyden and Joachim Zeller, 22–28. Münster: Unrast, 2005.
- . Kolonialismus als “Wissenschaft und Technik”: das Hamburgische Kolonialinstitut 1908 bis 1919. Stuttgart: Steiner, 2007.
- Russell, Margo, and Martin Russell. Afrikaners of the Kalahari: White Minority in a Black State. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 1979.
- Ryan, Carolyne. “Indigenous Possessions: Anthropology, Museums, and Nation-Making in Argentina, 1862-1943.” The University of Wisconsin - Madison, 2011.
- Rydell, Robert W. All the World's a Fair: Visions of Empire at American International Expositions, 1876-1916. University of Chicago Press, 1987.
- . “The Louisiana Purchase Exposition, Saint Louis, 1904: ‘The Coronation of Civilization.’” In Race and U.S. Foreign Policy from 1900 Through World War II, edited by E. Gates. Taylor & Francis, 1998.

- Rydell, Robert W, John E Findling, and Kimberly D Pelle. Fair America: World's Fairs in the United States. Washington, DC: Smithsonian Institution Press, 2000.
- Ryland, Glen P. "Translating Africa for Germans: The Rhenish Mission in Southwest Africa, 1829-1836." Dissertation, University of Notre Dame, 2013.
- Sábato, Hilda. Buenos Aires en armas: la revolución de 1880. Colección Historia y Cultura. Buenos Aires: Siglo Veintiuno Ed., 2008.
- . "Pluralismo cultural en la Argentina: un balance crítico." In Buenos Aires: Comité internacional de Ciencias Históricas. Comité Argentino: Historiografía Argentina (1958-1988), 350–66, 1990.
- Sachsenmaier, Dominic. Global Perspectives on Global History: Theories and Approaches in a Connected World. Cambridge University Press, 2011.
- Saenz Araya de Schwald, Raquel, and Josefina Fornieles. Austria-Hungría y el Centenario: Participación de Austria-Hungría en el Centenario de la Revolución de Mayo. Buenos Aires: el autor, 2009.
- Saenz-Peña, [Luis], and Tomás S. de Anchorena. "Departamento de Relaciones Exteriores, Decreto promoviendo al cargo de Cónsul en Franckfort, á Don Enrique Hobrecht, 28 febrero 1893." In Registro nacional de la República Argentina, 205. Buenos Aires: Taller Tipográfico de la Penitenciaría Nacional, 1893.
- Sahlin, Patricia María. "La correccion." In La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera, edited by Olga Zamboni, 141–45. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Saint Sauveur-Henn, Anne. "Problemas específicos de la integración: los colonos judío-alemanes en la Argentina 1933-1945." Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 49–64.
- . Un siècle d'émigration allemande vers l'Argentine, 1853-1945. Köln: Böhlau, 1995.
- Salaverria, José M. "Schlafendes Land." In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 1:19–23. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1913.
- Salzmann, Erich von. Im Kampfe gegen die Herero. Berlin: D. Reimer (E. Vohsen), 1905.
- . Im Kampfe gegen die Herero. Third edition. Berlin: Globus Verlag, 1912.
- Sammons, Jeffrey L. Ideology, Mimesis, Fantasy: Charles Sealsfield, Friedrich Gerstäcker, Karl May, and Other German Novelists of America. University of North Carolina Press, 1998.
- Sandelowsky, Erwin. Südwestafrikanische Geschichten und Geschichte, Gedanken und Gedichte. Second Edition. Windhoek: Afrika-Verlag der Kreiss, 1968.
- Sander. "Vorschläge zur Errichtung einer Musterfarm im Gebiete der Siedelungsgesellschaft in Deutsch-Südafrika." Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Zehnter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1897 10 (1897): 189–213.
- Sander, Dr. "Sollen wir Buren in Südwestafrika zur Ansiedelung zulassen oder nicht?" Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 1 (1900 1899): 610–37.

- Sander, Ludwig. Geschichte der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika von ihrer Gründung bis zum Jahre 1910. Vol. 1. 2 vols. Berlin: D. Reimer (E. Vohsen), 1912.
- . Geschichte der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft für Südwest-Afrika von ihrer Gründung bis zum Jahre 1910. Vol. 2. 2 vols. Berlin: D. Reimer (E. Vohsen), 1912.
- Sanders, James E. The Vanguard of the Atlantic World: Creating Modernity, Nation, and Democracy in Nineteenth-Century Latin America. Durham: Duke University Press Books, 2014.
- Sanderson, Jean-Paul. “La carne argentina en Bélgica, 1902-1914.” In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 133–36. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Santilli, Daniel Víctor. “Entre el clientelismo y el reforzamiento de vínculos. Familia y padrinazgo en Buenos Aires, 1780-1840.” Revista de Demografía Histórica XXVII, no. II (2009): 111–48.
- Sargent, Howard. “Diasporic Citizens: Germans Abroad in the Framing of German Citizenship Law.” In The Heimat Abroad: The Boundaries of Germanness, edited by Krista O’Donnell, Renate Bridenthal, and Nancy Ruth Reagin, 17–39. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2005.
- Sarkin-Hughes, Jeremy. Germany’s Genocide of the Herero: Kaiser Wilhelm II, His General, His Settlers, His Soldiers. Woodbridge, Suffolk: Currey, 2011.
- Sarmiento, Domingo Faustino. Civilizacion i barbarie: vida de Juan Facundo Quiroga i aspecto físico, costumbres i hábitos de la Republica Argentina. Santiago: Impr. del Progreso, 1845.
- . “Domingo Faustino Sarmiento: Frontier Barbarism.” In Where Cultures Meet: Frontiers in Latin American History, edited by David J. Weber and Jane M. Rausch, 26–32. Wilmington, Del.: SR Books, 1994.
- . Viajes en Europa, África i América. Vol. 1. Santiago: Imp. de Julio Belin y Cía, 1849.
- . Viajes en Europa, África i América. Second Edition. Vol. 2. Santiago: Imp. de Julio Belin y Cía, 1851.
- Sarmiento, Domingo Faustino, and Johann Eduard Wappäus. Emigracion alemana al Rio de la Plata, memoria escrita en Alemania. Santiago, Chile: Imprenta de Julio Belin, 1851.
- Sarramone, Alberto. Los abuelos alemanes del Volga. Buenos Aires: Ed. Biblos Azul, 1998.
- Sassen, Saskia. Territory, Authority, Rights: From Medieval to Global Assemblages. Princeton N.J.: Princeton University Press, 2006.
- Satzungen des Deutschen Schulvereins Buenos Aires: Gegründet am 19. August 1898. Estatutos de la Sociedad Educacionista Alemana Buenos Aires. Fundada el 19 de Agosto de 1898*. Buenos Aires: Imprenta “La Nueva Artística,” 1898.
- Satzungen des Deutschen Schulvereins in Concepción = Estatutos del Colejio Alemán de Concepción*. Concepción: Bittner, 1915.
- Sauer, Angelika E. “The Diasporic Moment: Elise von Koerber, Dr. Otto Hahn, and the Attempt to Create a German Diaspora in Canada.” In German Diasporic Experiences: Identity, Migration, and Loss, edited by Mathias Schulze, James Skidmore, David John, Grit

- Liebscher, and Sebastian Siebel-Achenbach, 205–16. Waterloo Ont.: Wilfrid Laurier University Press, 2008.
- Saunier, Pierre-Yves. “Circulations, connexions et espaces transnationaux.” Genèses 4, no. 57 (2004): 110–26.
- . Transnational History. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013.
- Scala, José Nicolás, Germán Winox Berraondo, and Carlos A. Goñi Demarchi. Yrigoyen y la Gran Guerra: aspectos desconocidos de una gesta ignorada. Buenos Aires: Ed. Ciudad Argentina, 1998.
- Scarzanella, Eugenia, and Mônica Raisa Schpun. Sin fronteras: encuentros de mujeres y hombres entre América Latina y Europa, siglos XIX-XX. Iberoamericana Editorial, 2008.
- Schaar, W. Freuden und Leiden auf einer Missionsstation in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Rheinische Missions-Traktate. Barmen: Rheinisches Missionshaus, 1900.
- Schachtzabel, Alfred. Angola: Forschungen und Erlebnisse in Südwestafrika. Jahresreihe / Buchgemeinde, Berlin / Buchgemeinde Berlin. - Berlin, 1927 1. Berlin: Buchgemeinde, 1926.
- Schechtman, Robert Thomas. “Community and Utopia: The Discourse of Gemeinschaft and the Search for a New Modernity in Germany.” Ph.D., University of California, Berkeley, 2008.
- Schelbert, Leo. Historical Dictionary of Switzerland. Lanham, Md.: Scarecrow Press, 2007.
- Schepp, Sven. Unter dem Kreuz des Südens: auf Spuren der Kaiserlichen Landespolizei von Deutsch-Südwestafrika. 1st ed. Schriftenreihe der Deutschen Gesellschaft für Polizeigeschichte e.V 8. Frankfurt am Main: Verlag für Polizeiwissenschaft, 2009.
- Schiavoni, Gabriela. Desarrollo y estudios rurales en Misiones. Edited by Leopoldo J. Bartolomé. Colección Trabajo, integración y sociedad; Variation: Colección “Trabajo, integración y sociedad”. Buenos Aires: Ediciones Ciccus, 2008.
- Schiefel, Werner. Bernhard Dernburg, 1865-1937: Kolonialpolitiker und Bankier im wilhelminischen Deutschland. Beiträge zur Kolonial- und Überseegegeschichte 11. Zürich; Freiburg im Breisgau: Atlantis Verlag, 1974.
- Schiller, Nina Glick, Linda Green Basch, and Cristina Szanton Blanc. “From Immigrant to Transmigrant: Theorizing Transnational Migration.” Anthropological Quarterly, 1995, 48–63.
- Schilling, Britta. “‘Deutsche Frauen! Euch und Eure Kinder geht es an!’: Deutsche Frauen als Aktivistinnen für die koloniale Idee.” In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 70–78. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- . Postcolonial Germany: Memories of Empire in a Decolonized Nation. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2014.
- . “Zwischen ‘Primitivismus’ und ‘Modernität’: ‘Neue Frauen’ in Afrika, 1919-1933.” In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 220–30. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- Schinz, Hans. Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: Forschungsreisen durch die deutschen Schutzgebiete Gross-Nama- und Hereroland, nach dem Kunene, dem Ngami-See und der Kalaxari, 1884-1887. Oldenburg: Schulzesche Hof-Buchhandlung und Hof-Buchdruckerei, 1891.

- . Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: (mit Einschluss der Grenzgebiete in botanischer Beziehung). Zürich: Zürcher & Furrer, 1911.
- . “Die deutsche Interessensphäre in Südwest-Afrika.” Fernschau: Jahrbuch der Mittelschweizerischen Geographischen-Commerciellen Gesellschaft in Aarau 4 (1890): 132–73.
- . Die Pflanzenwelt Deutsch-Südwest-Afrikas: (mit Einschluss der westlichen Kalachari). Genève: Romet, 1896.
- . “Die Vegetation des deutschen Schutzgebietes in Südwest-Afrika.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Sechster Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1893 6 (1894): 60–76.
- . Exploration dans le sud-ouest de l’Afrique. Genève: Schuchardt, 1887.
- Schinzinger, Francesca. Die Kolonien und das Deutsche Reich: die wirtschaftliche Bedeutung der deutschen Besitzungen in Übersee. 20. Stuttgart: Steiner-Verlag Wiesbaden, 1984.
- Schirp, Kerstin E. Die Wochenzeitung “Semanario Israelita”: Sprachrohr der deutsch-jüdischen Emigranten in Argentinien. LIT Verlag Münster, 2001.
- Schlettwein, Carl. “Ackerbau in Deutsch-Südwestafrika.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904).
- . “Ackerbau in Südwestafrika. Contra Rehbock.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 814–19.
- . Der Farmer in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Eine Darstellung sämtlicher für den afrikanischen Farmer in Betracht kommenden Erwerbszweige und Ein Leitfaden für Anfänger. First Edition. Wismar: Hinstorff, 1907.
- . Der Farmer in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Eine Darstellung sämtlicher für den afrikanischen Farmer in Betracht kommenden Erwerbszweige und Ein Leitfaden für Anfänger. Second and Improved Edition. Wismar: Hinstorff’sche Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1914.
- Schlettwein, Karl. Deutschlands bisherige Kolonialpolitik und die augenblicklichen Zustände in Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Berlin: Koloniale Zeitschrift, 1904.
- Schmidel, Ulrich. Eine wunderbare Reise in die neue Welt nach Brasilien und zum Rio de la Plata. Wiefelstede: Ed. Stiedenrod, 2010.
- . Eine wunderbare Reise in die Neue Welt nach Brasilien und zum Rio de la Plata: erlebt von Ulrich Schmidl aus Straubing in den Jahren 1534 bis 1554 und nach seiner Rückkehr niedergeschrieben. Edited by Heinrich Fromm. Bremerhaven: Dt. Schiffahrtsmuseum, 2010.
- . Ulrich Schmidels Fahrt in die Neue Welt: die Reise eines Straubingers, der 1534 aufbrach, die Welt zu entdecken, und 20 Jahre später zurückkam. Taufkirchen: Via Verbis Bavarica, 2000.
- Schmidt, E. W. “Die neuere deutsche Literatur über Argentinien.” Weltwirtschaftliches Archiv 4 (1914): 181–91.
- . “Entwicklungstendenzen der argentinischen Landwirtschaft.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 2:241–50. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914.

- Schmidt, Hermann. Geschichte der deutschen evangelischen Gemeinde Buenos Aires, 1843-1943. Buenos Aires: Deutsche Evangelische Gemeinde, 1943.
- Schmidt, Jean. Die deutschen Kolonien in Brasilien. Mainz: Siedler-Verl., 1909.
- Schmidt, Max. Aus unserem Kriegsleben in Südwestafrika: Erlebnisse und Erfahrungen. Berlin: Runge, 1907.
- Schmidt, Robert, and J. Giesberts. La acción social obrera en Alemania. 4. ed. Lo que es Alemania 7. Buenos Aires: Unión de librereros alemanes, 1918.
- Schmidt, Waldemar. Russlanddeutsche: die Auswanderung der Russlanddeutschen nach Deutsch-Ostafrika 1906-1913. Regensburger Hefte zur Geschichte und Kultur im östlichen Europa 7. Regensburg: Beate Herget, 2008.
- Schmidt, Wilhelm. Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika: Fotos aus der Kolonialzeit 1884 - 1918. Johann Wolfgang Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main; Zentrale Einrichtung. Universitätsbibliothek, 2001.
- Schmidt-Lauber, Brigitta. Die abhängigen Herren: deutsche Identität in Namibia. Münster: Lit, 1993.
- . “Die ehemaligen Kolonialherren: zum Selbstverständnis deutscher Namibier.” In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 226–43. Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- . Die verkehrte Hautfarbe: Ethnizität deutscher Namibier als Alltagspraxis. Berlin: D. Reimer, 1998.
- Schmidt-Pretoria, Werner. Deutsche Wanderung nach Südafrika im 19. Jahrhundert. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1955.
- Schmied, Rudolf Johannes. Carlos und Nicolás. Kinderjahre in Argentinien. Munich: Pieper, 1906.
- . Carlos und Nicolás. Kinderjahre in Argentinien. Ausgabe für die Jugend. Berlin: E. Reiss, 1909.
- . Carlos und Nikolas auf dem Meere. Berlin-Westend: E. Reiss, 1909.
- Schmied, Rudolf Johannes, and A. M. Stellwagen. Carlos und Nicolás Kinderjahre in Argentinien. Amsterdam: Meulenhoff, 1928.
- Schmiedel, Ulrich. “Neue Verkehrswege und Forschungen im patagonischen Waldgebiet.” In Mitteilungen des Deutsch-Südamerikanischen Instituts, edited by Paul Gast, 2:256–61. Stuttgart, Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Verlags-Anstalt, 1914.
- Schmieder, Oscar, and Herbert Wilhelmy. Deutsche Ackerbausiedlungen im südamerikanischen Grasland, Pampa und Gran Chaco. Leipzig: Hirt, 1938.
- Schmieder, Ulrike. “Das Bild Lateinamerikas in der preußischen und deutschen Publizistik vom Ende des 18. Jahrhunderts bis zur Mitte des 19. Jahrhunderts.” In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 59–92. Münster: Lit, 2004.
- Schmitt, Wilhelm. 50 Jahre Geschichte: 1911-1961. [Buenos Aires], 1961.
- Schmokel, Wolfe W. Dream of Empire: German Colonialism, 1919-1945. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1964.

- Schnabl, Leopold. Buenos-Ayres. Land und Leute am silbernen Strome, mit besonderer Rücksicht auf europäische Einwanderung, Handel und Verkehr. Stuttgart: Levy und Müller, 1886.
- Schnee, Heinrich. Das Buch der deutschen Kolonien. 4. erw. u. verb. Ausg. Leipzig: Goldmann, 1937.
- . German Colonization, Past and Future: The Truth about the German Colonies. London: G. Allen & Unwin, 1926.
- Schneider, Lukas M. Die Politik des Bundes gegenüber projektierten Kolonisationsunternehmen in Argentinien und Brasilien: Ein Beitrag zur organisierten Auswanderung aus der Schweiz (1880-1939). Geist und Werk der Zeiten: Arbeiten aus dem Historischen Seminar der Universität Zürich 87. Bern: Peter Lang, 1998.
- Schneider, Rosa B. Um Scholle und Leben: zur Konstruktion von "Rasse" und Geschlecht in der kolonialen Afrikaliteratur um 1900. Frankfurt am Main: Brandes & Apsel Verlag, 2003.
- Schneider-Waterberg, H. R. Der Wahrheit eine Gasse: Anmerkungen zum Kolonialkrieg in Deutsch-Südwestafrika 1904. Third Edition. Swakopmund Namibia: Gesellschaft für Wissenschaftliche Entwicklung, 2006.
- Schnell, E. L. G. For Men Must Work: An Account of German Immigration to the Cape, With Special Reference to the German Military Settlers of 1857 and the German Immigrants of 1858. Cape Town: Maskew Miller, 1954.
- Schnell, Hermann. Die wirtschaftlichen Grundlagen der deutschen Auslands-Politik. Rede, gehalten im Akademischen Freibund München. München: Buchhandlung Nationalverein, 1910.
- Schnorbach, Hermann. Für ein "anderes Deutschland": die Pestalozzische Schule in Buenos Aires (1934-1958). Pädagogische Beispiele 9. Frankfurt am Main: Dipa-Verlag, 1995.
- Schobinger, Juan. Inmigración y colonización suizas en la República Argentina en el siglo XIX. Buenos Aires: Instituto de Cultura Suizo-Argentino, 1957.
- Schoeneich, Hans. Deutsche Arbeit in Südamerika. Breslau: Ferd. Hirt, 1930.
- Schönwald, Matthias. Deutschland und Argentinien nach dem Zweiten Weltkrieg: politische und wirtschaftliche Beziehungen und deutsche Auswanderung 1945 - 1955. Paderborn: Schöningh, 1998.
- Schoonover, Thomas D. Germany in Central America: Competitive Imperialism, 1821-1929. Tuscaloosa, Alabama: University of Alabama Press, 1998.
- . Uncle Sam's War of 1898 and the Origins of Globalization. University Press of Kentucky, 2003.
- Schopflocher, Roberto. Der caudillo: Erzählung. Buenos Aires: El Zahir Editora, 2009.
- . Die verlorenen Kinder. S.l.: LangenMüller, 2013.
- . Historia de la colonización agrícola en Argentina. Buenos Aires: Editorial Raigal, 1955.
- . Weit von wo: Mein Leben zwischen drei Welten. München: LangenMüller, 2010.
- Schreiber, A. Fünf Monate in Südafrika. Barmen: Verlag des Missionshauses, 1894.
- Schreiber, Otto. Im Schatten des Calafate: Patagonisches, allzupatagonisches. Berlin: Brunnen-Verlag, K. Winckler, 1928.

- Schreiber-Stettin. "Die rechtliche Stellung der Bewohner der deutschen Schutzgebiete." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 760-.
- . "Die Sprachenfrage in den deutschen Kolonien." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 112–21.
- . "Koloniales Kirchenrecht." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6, no. 12 (1904): 871–84.
- Schröder, Peter J. Gesetzgebung und "Arbeiterfrage" in den Kolonien: das Arbeitsrecht in den Schutzgebieten des Deutschen Reiches. Europa-Übersee: Historische Studien 18. Berlin: Lit, 2006.
- Schröder, Wolfgang M. "Mission impossible? Begriff, Modelle und Begründungen der 'civilizing mission' aus philosophischer Sicht." In Zivilisierungsmissionen: imperiale Weltverbesserung seit dem 18. Jahrhundert, edited by Boris Barth and Jürgen Osterhammel, 13–32. Historische Kulturwissenschaft 6. Konstanz: UVK-Verlagsgesellschaft, 2005.
- Schroeder, Adolf. Die Kolonien als notwendige Ergänzung unserer nationalen Wirtschaft zur Erziehung eines zielbewußten Geschlechtes. Berlin: Duncker, 1908.
- Schroeder, R. A. "Die Besiedlungsfrage in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902): 381–90.
- . "Die Eingeborenenfrage in Deutsch-Südwestafrika und ihre Lösung." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 4 (1903 1902).
- Schroeder-Poggelow, Richard. Unsere Afrikapolitik in den letzten zwei Jahren. Berlin: Walther & Apolant, 1890.
- Schröter, Bernd. "Die Anfänge der preußischen Diplomatie in Südamerika." In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 93–104. Münster: Lit, 2004.
- Schubel, Christian. Verbandssouveränität und Binnenorganisation der Handelsgesellschaften. Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 2003.
- Schubert, Michael. Der schwarze Fremde: Das Bild des Schwarzafrikaners in der parlamentarischen und publizistischen Kolonialdiskussion in Deutschland von den 1870er bis in die 1930er Jahre. Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 2003.
- Schulte Beerbühl, Margrit. Deutsche Kaufleute in London: Welthandel und Einbürgerung (1660-1818). München: Oldenbourg Verlag, 2007.
- . The Forgotten Majority: German Merchants in London, Naturalization, and Global Trade, 1660-1815. New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2014.
- Schulte im Hofe, A. Die Welterzeugung von Lebensmitteln und Rohstoffen und die Versorgung Deutschlands in der Vergangenheit und Zukunft. Kolonial-Wirtschaftliches Komitee. Beiheft 1/2 zum "Tropenpflanzer", Jahrg. XIX, Nr. 2, Februar 1916. Berlin, 1916.
- Schulte-Varendorff, Uwe. Kolonialheld für Kaiser und Führer: General Lettow-Vorbeck - Mythos und Wirklichkeit. Edited by Paul Lettow-Vorbeck. 1st ed. Schlaglichter der Kolonialgeschichte 5. Berlin: Links, 2006.

- Schultheiss, Fr. Guntram. Alldeutschland an der Jahrhundertwende 1800-1900: Festvortrag gehalten in der Hauptversammlung der Ortsgruppe Stuttgart des Alldeutschen Verbandes, 12. Februar 1900. Flugschriften des Alldeutschen Verbandes 13. München: J. F. Lehmann's Verlag, 1900.
- . Deutschnationales Vereinswesen. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des deutschen Nationalgefühls. Der Kampf um das Deutschtum 2. München: J.F. Lehmann, 1897.
- Schultz, Hans-Dietrich, and Heinz Peter Brogiato. "Die 'Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin' und Afrika." In "... Macht und Anteil an der Weltherrschaft": Berlin und der deutsche Kolonialismus, edited by Ulrich van der Heyden and Joachim Zeller, 87–93. Münster: Unrast, 2005.
- Schultze, Leonhard. Aus Namaland und Kalahari: Bericht an die Kgl. Preuss. Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin über eine Forschungsreise im westlichen und zentralen Südafrika, ausgeführt in den Jahren 1903-1905. Jena: Gustav Fischer, 1907.
- . Zoologische und anthropologische Ergebnisse einer Forschungsreise im westlichen und zentralen Südafrika ausgeführt in den Jahren 1903 - 1905 mit Unterstützung der Kgl. Preußischen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Berlin. Jena: G. Fischer, 1908.
- Schulz, Wilhelm. Die erste deutsche Siedlung in Argentinien: die deutsche Kolonie auf dem Gelände des heutigen Chacarita-Friedhofes. [Buenos Aires]: [Der Weg], 1950.
- Schulze, Mathias, James Skidmore, David John, Grit Liebscher, and Sebastian Siebel-Achenbach, eds. German Diasporic Experiences: Identity, Migration, and Loss. Waterloo Ont.: Wilfrid Laurier University Press, 2008.
- Schumacher, Andreas. Die rheinischen Kaufmannseliten in Argentinien - vornehmlich am Beispiel der Familie Bunge. Wiesbaden: [Selbstverl.], 2010.
- Schumacher, Hermann. Posición de Alemania en la economía universal. Lo que es Alemania 6. Buenos Aires: Unión de Libreros Alemanes, 1916.
- Schumann, Gunter von. "Hauptorte in Südwestafrika in ihrer historisch-geographischen Entwicklung - Otjimbingue - Omaruru - Windhoek." Frankfurter Wirtschafts- und Sozialgeographische Schriften 53 (1989): 141–80.
- . "Ships on Which German Nationals Were Deported," February 18, 1978.
- Schuricht, Herrmann. Geschichte der deutschen Schulbestrebungen in Amerika. Leipzig: Friedrich Fleischer, 1884.
- Schuster, Adolf Niclus. Argentinien: Land, Volk, Wirtschaftsleben und Kolonisation. Diessen vor München: J.C. Huber, 1913.
- . El Suizo-Argentino 1913. Aarau: Trüb, 1913.
- , ed. Heimatfern: Lieder vom Silberstrom. Aarau: A. Trüb & Cie., 1913.
- . Paraguay: Land, Volk, Geschichte, Wirtschaftsleben und Kolonisation. Stuttgart: Strecker und Schröder, 1929.
- Schütte, Thorsten. Namibia - Generation X. Das kleine Fernsehspiel ZDF, 2005.
- Schvarzer, Jorge. Bunge & Born: crecimiento y diversificación de un grupo económico. Buenos Aires Argentina: CISEA; Grupo Editor Latinoamericano; distribuidor exclusivo Emecé Editores, 1989.

- Schwabe, Kurd. Afrikanische Erinnerungen, 1904.
- . Der Krieg in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 1904-1906. C. A. Weller, 1907.
- . “Die Entwicklung des Handels und der Siedelung.” In Mit Schwert und Pflug in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Vier Kriegs- und Wanderjahre, Second Edition., 349–73. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1904.
- . “Die Verbesserung der Verkehrsverhältnisse in unseren afrikanischen Schutzgebieten.” Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 859.
- . Dienst und Kriegsführung in den Kolonien und auf überseeischen Expeditionen: Dargestellt und an Beispielen aus der kolonialen Kriegsgeschichte erläutert. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1903.
- . Mit Schwert und Pflug in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Vier Kriegs- und Wanderjahre. Second Edition. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1904.
- Schwarcz, Alfredo. “La inmigración judeo-alemana. El proceso de integración a la luz de la continuidad generacional.” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 143–56.
- . Trotz allem ...: die deutschsprachigen Juden in Argentinien. Wien: Böhlau, 1995.
- Schwartz, D. von. Mission und Kolonisation in ihrem gegenseitigen Verhältnis: Missionsstudie. Leipzig, 1912.
- Schwarz, Maria-Theresia. “Je weniger Afrika, desto besser”: die deutsche Kolonialkritik am Ende des 19. Jahrhunderts: eine Untersuchung zur kolonialen Haltung von Linkliberalismus und Sozialdemokratie. Frankfurt am Main; Bern: P. Lang, 1999.
- Seeber, Francisco. Apuntes sobre la importancia económica y financiera de la República Argentina. Buenos Aires: Coni, 1888.
- . Argentina, Brasil, Chile, Uruguay, Perú, Bolivia y Paraguay: Estudios comparativos geográficos, étnicos, económicos, financieros y militares. Buenos Aires: [Talleres gráficos de L.J. Rosso], 1903.
- . Cuestiones económicas de actualidad: junio 1878. Buenos Aires: Imprenta de La Tribuna, 1878.
- . Ensayo sobre inmigración y colonización en la Provincia de Buenos Aires. Buenos Aires: La Nación, 1881.
- . Estudio sobre la nacionalización del banco de la Provincia de Buenos Aires: acompañado de una reseña histórica de la moneda y los bancos. Buenos Aires: Kidd, 1882.
- . Great Argentina: Comparative Studies between Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Perú, Uruguay, Bolivia and Paraguay. Buenos Aires: J. Peuser, 1904.
- . Proyecto de un Banco Rural. Buenos Aires: L. J. Rosso, 1902.
- . Über Staatswirtschaft und Finanzen der argentinischen Republik: Notizen über die ökonomische und finanzielle Lage der Argentinischen Republik. Buenos Aires: Peuser, 1888.

- Seed, Patricia. "Parents Versus Children: Marriage Oppositions in Colonial Mexico, 1610-1779." University of Wisconsin, 1980.
- . To Love, Honor, and Obey in Colonial Mexico: Conflicts Over Marriage Choice, 1574-1821. Stanford Calif.: Stanford University Press, 1988.
- Seefeld, Ruth. "La emigración alemana y la inmigración alemana en la Argentina." In La inmigración a America Latina: primeras jornadas internacionales sobre la migración en America., edited by Instituto Panamericano de Geografía e Historia., 135–52. Mexico: Instituto Panamericano de Geografía e Historia, 1985.
- Segal, Alicia. "Sobrevivientes." In La inserción de la minoría alemana en Argentina entre 1900 y 1933, edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn and Miguel Vedda, 15–31. Buenos Aires: Asociación Argentina de Germanistas, 2008.
- Segesser, Friedrich. Argentinien, seine Kolonien und die deutsche Einwanderung. Scheitlin & Zollikofer. St. Gallen, 1876.
- Seidel, A., ed. "Auswanderung und das Deutschtum im Ausland." In Deutsche Kolonial-Zeitung, Organ der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft. Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft, 1901.
- , ed. Deutsche Kolonial-Zeitung, Organ der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft. Berlin: Verlag der Deutschen Kolonialgesellschaft, 1901.
- . Die Aussichten des Plantagenbaus in den deutschen Schutzgebieten. Wismar: Hinstorffsche Hofbuchhandlung Verlagsconto, 1905.
- . Die deutschen Schutzgebiete und ihr wirtschaftlicher Wert: Abriß der deutschen Kolonialgeschichte, Beschreibung der deutschen Kolonien und Untersuchung ihrer wirtschaftlichen Bedeutung. Berlin: Duncker, 1905.
- . "Die Sprachverhältnisse in den deutschen Schutzgebieten." Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Dritter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1890 3 (1891): 26–45.
- Seidel, D. Deutschlands erste Kolonie: Gesammelte Erfahrungen und Erlebnisse während eines Aufenthaltes von neun Jahren in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Hamburg: O. W. C. Busch, 1898.
- Seigel, M. "Beyond Compare: Comparative Method after the Transnational Turn." Radical History Review, no. 91 (2005): 62–90.
- Seiguer, Paula. "La iglesia anglicana en la Argentina: Religión e identidad nacional." Anuario del IEHS 17 (2002).
- . "La Iglesia anglicana en la Argentina y la colectividad británica: identidad y estrategias misionales, 1869-1930." Ph.D., Universidad de Buenos Aires, 2009.
- . "¿Son los anglicanos argentinos? Un primer debate sobre la evangelización protestante y la nación." Revista Escuela de Historia 5.1, no. 5 (2006).
- Seligmann, Matthew S. Rivalry in Southern Africa, 1893-99: The Transformation of German Colonial Policy. Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire; New York: Macmillan Press; St. Martin's, 1998.

- Sembritzki, Emil Wagner, ed. Der Kolonialfreund: Kritischer Führer durch die volkstümliche deutsche Kolonial-literatur. Berlin: "Kolonie und Heimat" Verlagsgesellschaft m.b.h., 1912.
- Semler, Johannes. Meine Beobachtungen in Süd-West-Afrika: Tagebuchnotizen und Schlussfolgerungen. Hamburg: Verlag und Druck von Hermann's Erben, 1906.
- Semmel, Bernard. The Rise of Free Trade Imperialism: Classical Political Economy the Empire of Free Trade and Imperialism, 1750-1850. Cambridge, UK: Cambridge University Press, 1970.
- . The Rise of Free Trade Imperialism: Classical Political Economy the Empire of Free Trade and Imperialism, 1750-1850. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2004.
- Sepp, Anton. Kontinuation oder Fortsetzung der Beschreibung der Denckwürdigeren Paraquarischen Sachen, 1710.
- Sepp, Anton, and Anton Böhm. Reißbeschreibung: Wie dieselbe aus Hispanien in Paraquariam kommen. Nürnberg: Johan Hoffinanns, 1698.
- Sering, Max. "Die deutsche Einwanderung in die landwirtschaftlichen Distrikte Nordamerikas." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 844–55. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- . Die innere Kolonisation im östlichen Deutschland. Leipzig: Duncker & Humblot, 1893.
- Service de l'église chretienne réformée*. Buenos Ayres: Imprimerie Française de J. A. Bernheim, 1854.
- Sewell, William H. "Geertz, Cultural Systems, and History: From Synchrony to Transformation." In The Fate of "Culture": Geertz and Beyond, edited by Sherry B. Ortner, 35–55. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1999.
- Seyferth, Giralda. "German Immigration and the Formation of German-Brazilian Ethnicity." Anthropological Journal of European Cultures 7, no. 2 (1998): 131–54.
- . Nacionalismo e identidade étnica: a ideologia germanista e o grupo étnico teuto-brasileiro numa comunidade do Vale do Itajaí. Florianópolis S.C.: FCC Edições, 1982.
- , ed. Representação do "trabalho alemão" na ideologia étnica teuto-brasileira. Rio de Janeiro: Museu Nacional, 1982.
- Sheldon, Kathleen E. Historical Dictionary of Women in Sub-Saharan Africa. Second Edition. Lanham, Md.: Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, 2016.
- Shippey, Thomas A. "Germanen, Deutsche und Teutonen in der englischsprachigen Geistesgeschichte." In Zur Geschichte der Gleichung "germanisch-deutsch": Sprache und Namen, Geschichte und Institutionen, edited by Heinrich Beck, Dieter Geuenich, Heiko Steuer, and Dietrich Hakelberg, 325–41. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2004.
- Shome, Raka. "Post-Colonial Reflections on the 'Internationalization' of Cultural Studies." Cultural Studies 23, no. 5–6 (2009): 694–719.
- Short, John Phillip. "Colonialism and Society: Class and Region in the Popularization of Overseas Empire in Germany, 1890-1914." Ph.D., Columbia University, 2004.

- . Magic Lantern Empire: Colonialism and Society in Germany. New York: Cornell University Press, 2012.
- Shumway, Nicolas. The Invention of Argentina. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1991.
- Shweder, Richard A., and Byron Good, eds. Clifford Geertz by His Colleagues. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2005.
- Sidbury, James, and Jorge Cañizares-Esguerra. “Mapping Ethnogenesis in the Early Modern Atlantic.” William and Mary Quarterly 68, no. 2 (2011): 181–208.
- Siebold, Hans. In Südwest unter englischer Herrschaft. Potsdam: Stiftungsverlag, 1916.
- Siegel, August Ludwig, C. Rodewald, C. Bunge, G.C. Deetjen, J. J. Klick, F. J. Mohr, H. Bechstedt, and S. G. Weigel. Allgemeine Kirchen-Statuten für die Deutsch-Evangelische Gemeinde in Buenos Ayres. Buenos Aires: Imprenta de la Gaceta Mercantil, 1847.
- Siemann, Wolfram. Vom Staatenbund zum Nationalstaat: Deutschland 1806-1871. München: Beck, 1995.
- Siepe, Raimundo, and María de Monserrat Llairó. La democracia radical: Yrigoyen y la neutralidad 1916-1918. Buenos Aires: Editores de América Latina, 1997.
- Sierra, Marta. Gendered Spaces in Argentine Women’s Literature. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012.
- Sievers, K. R. Festschrift zum 100 jährigen Jubiläum der Deutschen Evangelisch-Lutherischen Gemeinde Windhoek: 20. Januar 1996. Windhoek: DELG, 1996.
- Sievers, Wilhelm. Afrika: Eine allgemeine Landeskunde. Leipzig, Wien: Bibliographisches Institut, 1891.
- . Süd- und Mittelamerika. Second edition. Allgemeine Länderkunde. Leipzig, Wien: Bibliographisches institut, 1903.
- . Südamerika und die deutschen Interessen; eine geographisch-politische Betrachtung. Stuttgart: Strecker & Schröder, 1903.
- Sikora, Carlos. “Mujeres inmigrantes.” In La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera, edited by Olga Zamboni, 147–56. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Silvester, Jeremy. “‘Sleep with a Southwester’: Monuments and Settler Identity in Namibia.” In Settler Colonialism in the Twentieth Century: Projects, Practices, Legacies, edited by Caroline Elkins and Susan Pedersen, 271–86. New York: Routledge, 2005.
- Silvester, Jeremy, and Jan-Bart Gewald, eds. Words Cannot Be Found: German Colonial Rule in Namibia: An Annotated Reprint of the 1918 Blue Book. Leiden; Boston: Brill, 2003.
- Silvestri, Graciela. “Proyectos urbanos y proyectos industriales en los años de la racionalización. La empresa Tornquist y los capitales belgas en la construcción de Buenos Aires, 1925-1940.” In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 107–14. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Simonsfeld, Henry. Die Deutschen als Colonisatoren in der Geschichte. Hamburg: J.F. Richter, 1885.

- Sippel, Harald. "Fremde oder Heimat? - Zur Funktion der kolonialen Rechtsordnung in Deutsch-Südwestafrika." In Deutsche in der Fremde: Assimilation, Abgrenzung, Integration, edited by Torsten Kühlmann and Bernd Müller-Jacquier, 191–220. St. Ingbert: Röhrig Universitätsverlag, 2007.
- Slatta, Richard W. "'Civilization' Battles 'Barbarism': The Limits of Argentine Indian Frontier Strategies." In The Military and Conflict Between Cultures: Soldiers at the Interface, edited by James C. Bradford, 130–62. College Station: Texas A&M University Press, 1997.
- . Gauchos and the Vanishing Frontier. Lincoln, Neb.: University of Nebraska Press, 1992.
- . "The Gaucho in Argentina's Quest for National Identity." In Where Cultures Meet: Frontiers in Latin American History, edited by David J. Weber and Jane M. Rausch, 151–64. Wilmington, Del.: SR Books, 1994.
- Smidt, Karen. Germania führt die deutsche Frau nach Südwest: deutsche Frauen in der ehemaligen Kolonie Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika (1884 - 1920). Münster: Lit, 1999.
- Smith, Anthony. Ethno-Symbolism and Nationalism: A Cultural Approach. London; New York: Routledge, 2009.
- . Nationalism: Theory, Ideology, History. 2nd ed. Cambridge UK; Malden MA: Polity, 2010.
- Smith, Woodruff D. German Colonial Empire. Chapel Hill: UNC Press Books, 1978.
- Sociedad anónima Frigorífico argentino-alemán (. Estatutos de La Sociedad Anónima Frigorífico Argentino-Alemán (Deutsch-Argentinischer Gefrieranstalt)). Buenos Aires, 1922.
- Sociedad promotora del arte alemán en el exterior. Segunda Exposición de Arte Alemán Contemporáneo, Buenos Aires 1913. Buenos Aires: Club Alemán, 1913.
- Soden, Eugenie von, ed. Das Frauenbuch: Stellung und Aufgaben der Frau im Recht und in der Gesellschaft. Vol. 3. Stuttgart: Franckh'sche Verlagshandlung, 1914.
- Sofer, Eugene F. From Pale to Pampa: A Social History of the Jews of Buenos Aires. New York: Holmes & Meier, 1982.
- Solf, Guillermo. La política colonial alemana. Lo que es Alemania 4. Buenos Aires: Unión de librerías alemanas, 1916.
- Sollars, James W. African Involvement in the Colonial Development of German South West Africa, 1883-1907. [Seattle]: University of Washington, 1972.
- Sollen wir Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika behalten?: ein offenes Wort an das reichsdeutsche Publikum von einem südafrikanischen Deutschen*. Berlin-Charlottenburg: Continent, 1904.
- Sommerlad, Theo. Der deutsche Kolonialgedanke und sein Werden im 19. Jahrhundert. Halle an der Saale: Max Niemeyer, 1918.
- Sommi, Luis Víctor. Los capitales alemanes en la Argentina: Historia de su expansión. Buenos Aires: Editorial Claridad, 1945.
- Sonnenberg, Else. Wie es am Waterberg zugeht: Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Hereroaufstandes. Braunschweig: Wollermann, 1906.
- Sosa de Newton, Lily. Diccionario biográfico de mujeres argentinas. Buenos Aires: Plus Ultra, 1980.

- Soyaux, Herman. Deutsche Arbeit in Afrika: Erfahrungen und Betrachtungen. Leipzig: F.A. Brockhaus, 1888.
- Speitkamp, Winfried. Deutsche Kolonialgeschichte. 17047. Stuttgart: Reclam, 2005.
- Sperber, O. "Die argentinische Provinz Cordoba und ihre Kolonisation." Koloniale Zeitschrift: Zeitschrift des Deutsch-Nationalen Kolonialvereins, 1902, 361–63.
- Spiecker, Johannes. Mein Tagebuch: Erfahrungen eines deutschen Missionars in Deutsch-Südwestafrika 1905-1907. Berlin: Simon Bibliothekswissen, 2013.
- . Welche Pflichten hat das evangelische Deutschland in Südwestafrika? - Referat des Herrn Missionsinspektors Pastor Spiecker, Barmen, in der Versammlung der Bergischen Gruppe des Evangelischen Bundes am 23. Oktober 1907. Bonn: Carl Georgi, Universitäts-Buchdruckerei und Verlag, 1907.
- Spivak, Gayatri. "Can the Subaltern Speak?," 1988.
- Springer, Balthasar. Die Merfart vn[d] erfahrung nüwer Schiffung vnd Wege zu viln onerkanten Inseln vnd Künigreichen von dem großmechtigen Portugalische[n] Kunig Emanuel Erforscht funden bestritten vnnd Jngenomen. [Oppenheim], 1509.
- Springer, Balthasar, and Franz Schulze. Balthasar Springers Indienfahrt 1505/06: wissenschaftliche Würdigung der Reiseberichte Springers zur Einführung in den Neudruck seiner "Meerfahrt" von Jahre 1509. Strassburg: J.H.E. Heitz (Heitz & Mündel), 1902.
- Spurr, David. The Rhetoric of Empire: Colonial Discourse in Journalism, Travel Writing, and Imperial Administration. Durham: Duke University Press, 1993.
- Srivastava, Rachna. Namibia, a Study in the Process of Decolonization. Delhi: Nirmal Publications, 1994.
- St. Lys, Odette, ed. From a Vanished German Colony: A Collection of Folklore, Folk Tales and Proverbs from South-West Africa. London: Gypsy Press, 1916.
- Staab, Rudolf. Die Unternehmertätigkeit deutscher Banken im Auslande: eine besondere Form des deutschen Kapitaleports. Lörrach (Baden): Wiesentäler Handelsdruckerei Carl W. Auer, 1912.
- Staden, Hans, and Robert Lehmann-Nitsche. Wahrhaftige Historia und Beschreibung einer Landschaft der wilden, nacketen grimmigen Menschenfresser Leuten, in der neuen Welt America gelegen. Buenos Aires: Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein, 1921.
- Stals, E. L. P. The Commissions of W.C. Palgrave: Special Emissary to South West Africa, 1876-1885. Van Riebeeck Society, The, 1991.
- Stals, E. L. P. Wie is jy? □: 'n bundel historiese opstelle oor die Afrikaner in die voormalige Suidwes-Afrika. Windhoek, Namibia: Macmillan Namibia, 2008.
- Stangneth, Bettina. Eichmann vor Jerusalem: das unbehelligte Leben eines Massenmörders. Zürich: Arche, 2011.
- Stappenbeck, Richard, and Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein zur Kultur- und Landeskunde Argentinien. Die Minerallagerstätten Südamerikas und ihre wirtschaftliche Bedeutung für das Deutsche Reich. Buenos Aires: Deutscher Wissenschaftlicher Verein; Herpig, 1916.
- Statuten des Deutschen Lehrervereins Buenos Aires*. Buenos Aires: Herpig, 1907.

- Stefan, Kuhn. "Von Bern über Santa Fe nach Buenos Aires: Die Vorgeschichte der Gründung des Argentinischen Tageblatts." Argentinisches Tageblatt. April 29, 2009.
- Steiger jr., Otto. Meine Reise Durch Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Leipzig: Jehne, 1912.
- Steinmetz, George. "The Colonial State as a Social Field: Ethnographic Capital and Native Policy in the German Overseas Empire before 1914." American Sociological Review 73, no. 4 (2008): 589–612.
- . The Devil's Handwriting: Precoloniality and the German Colonial State in Qingdao, Samoa, and Southwest Africa. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2007.
- Stelzner, Alfred. Geologischer Theil. Beiträge zur Geologie der Argentinischen Republik und des angrenzenden, zwischen der 32. und 33. S. Br. gelgenen Theiles der Chilenischen Cordillere. Beiträge zur Geologie und Palaeontologie der Argentinischen Republik 1. Cassel und Berlin: Theodor Fischer, 1885.
- Stengel, Karl v. "Die Rechtsverhältnisse der deutschen Schutzgebiete." Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Vierter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1891 4 (1892): 13–31.
- . Fünfundzwanzig Jahre deutscher Kolonialpolitik: Vortrag. München und Berlin: R. Oldenbourg, 1909.
- . "Herrenloses Land in den deutschen Schutzgebieten." Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Siebter Jahrgang 7 (1895): 10–37.
- Stengel, Karl von. "Die Konzessionen der deutschen Kolonial-Gesellschaften und die Landfrage in den deutschen Schutzgebieten." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 6 (1904): 158–60.
- Stoecklin, Jules. Les colonies et l'émigration allemandes. Paris: L. Westhauser, 1888.
- Stoerk, Felix. Das Reichsgesetz über das Auswanderungswesen vom 9. Juni 1897 nebst Ausführungsverordnungen und Anlagen. Berlin: Heymann, 1899.
- . "Die völkerrechtliche Staatengesellschaft und das koloniale Problem." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongreß. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- Stoler, Ann Laura, and Frederick Cooper. "Between Metropole and Colony: Rethinking a Research Agenda." edited by Ann Laura Stoler and Frederick Cooper, 1–56. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1997.
- Stols, Eddy. "Presencia belga en la República Argentina: emigrantes y expatriados, comerciantes y empresarios (siglos XIX y XX)." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 9–36. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Stößlein, Hartmut. Deutsch-spanischer Sprachkontakt am Rio de la Plata: eine Untersuchung am Korpus deutsch-argentinischer Zeitungssprache. Bamberg: University of Bamberg Press, 2009.
- Strahuber, Hermann. Die Entwicklung des landwirtschaftlichen Kreditwesens in Deutsch-Südwestafrika: ein Beitrag zur Wirtschaftsgeschichte dieser Kolonie. Nürnberg: Georg Heydolph, 1915.

- Stramberg, Gerh. von. Reiseskizzen aus dem unteren La Plata-Gebiete (Süd-Amerika). Antwerpen: Selbstverlag, 1887.
- Straten, Axel von der. Die Rechtsordnung des Zweiten Kaiserreiches und die deutsche Auswanderung nach Übersee 1871-1914. Berlin; Baden-Baden: Berlin Verlag A. Spitz; Nomos, 1997.
- Stricker, Wilhelm. Die Verbreitung des deutschen Volkes über die Erde: Ein Versuch. Leipzig: G. Mayer, 1845.
- , ed. Germania: Archiv zur Kenntniss des deutschen Elements in allen Ländern der Erde. Vol. 1. Frankfurt am Main: Heinrich Ludwig Brönnner, 1847.
- , ed. Germania: Archiv zur Kenntniss des deutschen Elements in allen Ländern der Erde. Vol. 2. Frankfurt am Main: Heinrich Ludwig Brönnner, 1848.
- , ed. Germania: Archiv zur Kenntniss des deutschen Elements in allen Ländern der Erde. Vol. 3. Frankfurt am Main: Heinrich Ludwig Brönnner, 1850.
- Strobel, Christoph. The Global Atlantic: 1400 to 1900. Routledge, 2015.
- Stroeever-Chicago, Carl. "Treibende Kräfte amerikanischer Kolonialpolitik." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 2 (1901 1900): 129–32.
- Stromer von Reichenbach, Ernst. Die Geologie der deutschen Schutzgebiete in Afrika. München: R. Oldenbourg, 1896.
- Struck, Wolfgang. Die Eroberung der Phantasie: Kolonialismus, Literatur und Film zwischen deutschem Kaiserreich und Weimarer Republik. Göttingen: V&R unipress, 2010.
- Struycken, A. El libro blanco alemán sobre la guerra en Bélgica: un comentario. Londres: Eyre and Spottiswoode, 1917.
- Stuchtey, Benedikt. Die europäische Expansion und ihre Feinde: Kolonialismuskritik vom 18. bis in das 20. Jahrhundert. Oldenbourg Wissenschaftsverlag, 2010.
- Stürmer, Michael, and Siegfried Ziegler. Das deutsche Kaiserreich und die europäischen Großmächte im Zeitalter des Imperialismus. Arbeitsmaterialien für den Geschichtsunterricht in der Kollegstufe 1. München: R. Oldenbourg, 1977.
- Sturz, Johann Jakob. Die deutsche Auswanderung und die Verschleppung deutscher Auswanderer. Mit speziellen Documentation über die Auswanderung nach Brasilien zur Widerlegung fälscher Angaben. Berlin: F. Kortkamp, 1868.
- . Die Krisis der Deutschen Auswanderung und ihre Benützung für Jetzt und Immer: Ein Hebel für deutsche Schifffahrt, deutschen Handel, deutsche Rhederei und Gewerbe, zur deutschen Flotte, und eine Gewährleistung für deutsche Einigung, Kräftigung und Selbstachtung diesseits und jenseits des Weltmeers. Berlin: Hickethier, 1862.
- . Einige Worte über deutsche Auswanderung. Berlin: G. Lange, 1863.
- . Kann und soll ein Neu-Deutschland geschaffen werden und auf welche Weise?: I. Ein Vorschlag zur Verwerthung der deutschen Auswanderung im nationalen Sinne. Berlin: Nicolai, 1862.
- . Neue Beiträge über Brasilien und die La Plata-Länder. Berlin: Im Selbstverlage des Verfassers, 1865.

- . Nothwendigkeit der Bildung eines deutschen Central-Vereins für Auswanderungsangelegenheiten aus dringenden nationalen Gründen. Berlin: Druck von E. Krause, 1862.
- . Schafzucht und Wollproduction für deutsche Rechnung in Uruguay als Grundlage für deutsche Ansiedelungen im La-Plata-Flussgebiete. Berlin: Kühn, 1864.
- Subrahmanyam, Sanjay. “Connected Histories: Notes Towards a Reconfiguration of Early Modern Eurasia.” Modern Asian Studies 31, no. 3 (1997): 735–62.
- . “Historicizing the Global, or Labouring for Invention?” History Workshop Journal 64 (2007): 329–34.
- Sunderland, Willard. “Empire without Imperialism? Ambiguities of Colonization in Tsarist Russia.” Ab Imperio 2 (2003): 101–14.
- . Taming the Wild Field: Colonization and Empire on the Russian Steppe. Cornell University Press, 2006.
- Suny, Ronald Grigor. “The Empire Strikes Out: Imperial Russia, ‘National’ Identity, and Theories of Empire.” In A State of Nations: Empire and Nation-Making in the Age of Lenin and Stalin, edited by Ronald Grigor Suny and Terry Martin, 23–57. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2001.
- Supple, Barry E. “A Business Elite: German-Jewish Financiers in Nineteenth-Century New York.” The Business History Review 31, no. 2 (1957): 143–78.
- Symoens, Jean-Jacques. “Un botánico belga en Argentina: Lucien Hauman.” In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 143–45. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Szuchman, Mark, and Johnathan Brown, eds. Revolution and Restoration the Rearrangement of Power in Argentina, 1776-1860. Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1994.
- Szuchman, Mark D. Order, Family, and Community in Buenos Aires, 1810-1860. Stanford University Press, 1988.
- Szurmuk, Mónica. Women in Argentina: Early Travel Narratives. Gainesville: University Press of Florida, 2000.
- Tabel, Werner. Autoren Südwestafrikas: Biographien, Rezensionen und Hintergrundinformationen. Göttingen; Windhoek: Klaus Hess Verlag, 2007.
- Tagung des Deutsch-Chilenischen Bundes: abgehalten vom 13.-15. Oktober 1916 in Concepción*. Concepción: Verl. des Deutsch-Chilenischen Bundes, 1916.
- Tajnssek, Melanie. “Sprach- und Schulpolitik als Instrument der Selbstbehauptung einer ethnischen Minderheit: eine Fallstudie anhand der Deutschsprachigen in Namibia.” Ph.D., Ruhr-Universität Bochum, 2000.
- Tams, Georg. Die Portugiesischen Besitzungen in Süd-West-Afrika: Ein Reisebericht. Hamburg: Robert Kittler, 1845.
- Tarnopolsky, Samuel. Libros con indios pampas y conquistadores del desierto. Buenos Aires: Editorial Expansión Bibliográfica Americana, 1958.
- Tatlock, Lynne, and Matt Erlin, eds. German Culture in Nineteenth-Century America: Reception, Adaptation, Transformation. Rochester, NY: Camden House, 2005.

- Taylor, A. Germany's First Bid for Colonies, 1884-1885: A Move in Bismarck's European Policy. [Hamden, Conn.]: Archon Books, 1967.
- Tena, Alberto. La otra Alemania. Buenos Aires: A. Moen y Hermano, 1915.
- Tepp, Max. Blumen und Bäume am Nahuel Huapi. Buenos Aires: Die Umwelt, 1936.
- . Buenos Aires, oder: Die Kinder des Landes bauen eine Stadt. Buenos Aires: Die Umwelt, 1940.
- . Cap Arcona in Buenos Aires. Buenos Aires: Verl. Die Umwelt, 1935.
- . Die Grenzverteidigung Argentinien gegen die Indianer: mit einer Karte der Verteidigungslinien aus dem Jahre 1875. Buenos Aires: Die Umwelt, 1942.
- . Die Indianerkinder in der Löwenhöhle. Braunschweig: Westermann, 1954.
- . Die Indianer-Missionen in Südamerika. Buenos Aires: Verl. Die Umwelt, 1937.
- . Rotkäppchen Zu Weihnacht u. zur Wintersonnenwende gespielt u. getanzt. Leipzig: A. Strauch, 1930.
- Tesch, Johannes, ed. Kolonial-Handels-Adressbuch 1912 (16. Jahrgang). Vol. 16. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1912.
- , ed. Kolonial-Handels-Adressbuch 1914 (18. Jahrgang). Vol. 18. Berlin: Wilhelm Süsserott, 1914.
- The Argentine Republic; Or Buenos Ayres. By a Friend of Free Government*. London: A. H. Baily & Company, 1865.
- Thompson, Leonard, and Howard Lamar. The Frontier in History: North America and Southern Africa Compared. ACLS Humanities E-Book, 2008.
- Thurner, Rudolf. "Deutschsprachige Agrarkolonisation in der argentinischen Provinz Santa Fe, 1856 - 1914." M.A., Freie Universität Berlin, 1986.
- Tille, Alexander. "Die wirtschaftliche Grundlage und die Entwicklung der deutschen Auswanderung seit 1871." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 597–615. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- Tilley, Helen. "Introduction: Africa, Imperialism and Anthropology." In Ordering Africa: Anthropology, European Imperialism and the Politics of Knowledge, edited by Helen Tilley and Robert J Gordon, 1–45. Studies in Imperialism. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2007.
- Tilley, Helen, and Robert J Gordon, eds. Ordering Africa: Anthropology, European Imperialism and the Politics of Knowledge. Studies in Imperialism. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2007.
- Timm, Uwe. Deutsche Kolonien. Köln: Parkland-Verl., 2001.
- Tjarks, Hermann. "Deutsches Wirken und Wesen in Argentinien. (Veröffentlicht in der Zentenaar-Ausgabe der 'Nacion')." In Zur Jahrhundertfeier Argentinien 1910: Festausgabe der Deutschen La Plata Zeitung und La Plata Post, 41–45. Buenos Aires: Hermann Tjarks & Cía, 1910.

- . Zur Jahrhundertfeier Argentiniens 1910: Festausgabe der Deutschen La Plata Zeitung und La Plata Post. Buenos Aires: Hermann Tjarks & Cía, 1910.
- Tjarks, Joh. G. “Die wirtschaftliche Entwicklung Argentiniens.” In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses 1902, zu Berlin am 10. and 11. Oktober 1902, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 809–13. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1903.
- Tölölyan, Khachig. “The Contemporary Discourse of Diaspora Studies.” Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa and the Middle East 27, no. 3 (2007): 647–55.
- Tolten, Hans. Die Herden Gottes: Menschen und Tiere in Urwald und Kamp. Frankfurt am Main: Rütten & Loening, 1934.
- Tonchi, Victor, William A. Lindeke, and John J. Grotzinger, eds. Historical Dictionary of Namibia. Lanham, Md.: Scarecrow Press, 2012.
- Tonnellat, Ernest. L’expansion allemande hors d’Europe: Etats-Unis, Brésil, Chantoung, Afrique du Sud. Paris: Armand Colin, 1908.
- Toprak, Metin. “Der wissenschaftliche Reisebericht und Kolonialismus Die Forschungsreisen von Oscar Baumann nach West- und Ostafrika.” german Acta Germanica □: German Studies in Africa 42 (2014): 9–20.
- Tornquist, Carlos. The Argentine Republic of Today. [Buenos Aires?], 1916.
- Tornquist, Ernesto. The Economic Development of the Argentine Republic in the Last Fifty Years. Buenos Aires: Ernesto Tornquist & Co., 1919.
- Torre, Claudia. El otro desierto de la nación argentina: antología de narrativa expedicionaria. Bernal: Universidad Nacional de Quilmes, 2011.
- Torres Fernández, Patricia. “Políticas misionales anglicanas en el Chaco Centro-Occidental a principios de siglo XX: entre comunidades e identidades diversas.” Población & Sociedad, no. 14/15 (2008): 139–76.
- Tortella, Gabriel, and Gloria Quiroga, eds. Entrepreneurship and Growth: An International Historical Perspective. Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire; New York, NY: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013.
- Töttemeyer, Andrée-Jeanne. “Desert Survival and Wilderness Adventures. Juvenile Literature for a Young Namibian Nation?” In Preserving the Landscape of Imagination: Children’s Literature in Africa, edited by Raoul Granqvist and Jürgen Martini, 119–36. Amsterdam; Atlanta: Rodopi, 1997.
- Töttemeyer, Andrée-Jeanne, J. Loubser, and A. E. Marais, eds. Coordination of Information Systems and Services in Namibia. Papers of the Seminar (Windhoek, Namibia, February 25- March 5, 1993). Bonn; Windhoek: German Foundation for International Development; Ministry of Education and Culture (Namibia); University of Namibia, 1993.
- Townsend, Mary Evelyn. Origins of Modern German Colonialism, 1871-1885. Studies in History, Economics and Public Law 223. New York: Columbia University, 1921.
- Trachsler, Heinrich. Reisen, Schicksale und tragikomische Abendteuer eines Schweizers während seines Aufenthaltes in den verschiedenen Provinzen Südamerikas, Rio de Janeiro, Ilha Santa Catharina, Armação, São Pedro do Sul, Rio Grande, Corrientes, Montevideo, Buenos-Aires etc. in den Jahren 1828 bis 1835. Zürich: H. Trachsler, 1839.

- Trey, Aenne. Leideseignet: ein Lebensbild von Schwester Lina Stahlhut Südwestafrika. Wuppertal-Barmen: Verlag des Missionshauses, 1938.
- Trommler, Frank, and Elliott Shore, eds. The German-American Encounter: Conflict and Cooperation Between Two Cultures, 1800-2000. New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2001.
- Trüper, Ursula. “‘Ich bin Ausländer und werde ausgewiesen’: Die Ängste der Marie Hegner.” In Frauen in den deutschen Kolonien, edited by Marianne Bechhaus-Gerst and Mechthild Leutner, 111–21. Berlin: Links, 2009.
- Tschapek, Rolf Peter. Bausteine eines zukünftigen deutschen Mittelfrika: deutscher Imperialismus und die portugiesischen Kolonien; deutsches Interesse an den südafrikanischen Kolonien Portugals vom ausgehenden 19. Jahrhunderts bis zum ersten Weltkrieg. Stuttgart: Steiner, 2000.
- Tschuggnall, Monika. “El exilio como Modernidad vivida. Las autobiografías de Alfredo Bauer y Diego Viga.” Estudios Migratorios Latinoamericanos 25, no. 70 (2011): 241–50.
- Tyrrell, Ian. “Reflections on the Transnational Turn in United States History: Theory and Practice.” Journal of Global History 4, no. 3 (2009): 453–74.
- . Transnational Nation: United States History in Global Perspective Since 1789. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007.
- Uhlemann, Gerhard. “Die neuere ländliche Kolonisation der Welt unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Siedlungsformen.” Ph.D., Landwirtschaftliche Hochschule Berlin, 1930.
- Unger, Manfred, ed. Deutsches Schulwesen in Lateinamerika: [1843 - 1993]. Buenos Aires: Zago, 1994.
- Unterrichts-Plan der Deutschen Evangelischen Gemeinde-Schule in Buenos Aires*. Buenos Aires: Wilhelm Kraft, 1889.
- “Unterstützung, Auszüge [...] Buenos Ayres,” 1874. EZA 200/1/7369, pg. 71.
- Uth, Max Rudolf. Im Sattel und Ochsenwagen: Erlebnisse und Beobachtungen in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Fulda: J. L. Uth Buchdruckerei, 1907.
- Vacano, Max Josef v. Buntes Allerlei aus Argentinien: Streiflichter auf ein Zukunftsland. Berlin: Reimer, 1905.
- Valentin, Veit. Historia de Alemania para los pueblos de habla española. Buenos Aires: Sudamericana, 1947.
- Valko, Jennifer. “Expressing Patagonia: Sightseeing, Journalism, and Immigration in Argentina.” University of California, Davis, 2005.
- . “Soñar con el futuro. Proyectos inmigratorios para la Patagonia argentina en Roberto J. Payró y Teodoro Alemann.” Iberoamericana. América Latina - España - Portugal 30 (2008): 27–45.
- Vallentin, Wilhelm. Argentinien und seine wirtschaftliche Bedeutung für Deutschland: Vortrag gehalten am 23. Jan. 1907 im Deutsch-Brasilischen Verein zu Berlin. Berlin: H. Paetel, 1907.

- . Chubut: Im Sattel durch Kordillere und Pampa Mittel-Patagoniens, Argentinien. Berlin: Hermann Paetel, 1906.
- . Chubut: Im Sattel durch Kordillere und Pampa Mittel-Patagoniens (Argentinien). Berlin: H. Paetel, 1912.
- . Das Deutschtum in Südamerika. Hermann Paetels Bücherei 1. Berlin: H. Paetel, 1908.
- . Der Burenkrieg. Wald-Solingen, Leipzig: Rheinisches Verlagshaus, 1903.
- . Die Buren und ihre Geschichte. Die Geschichte der Süd-Afrikanischen Republik 2. Berlin: Hermann Walther, 1901.
- . Die Buren und ihre Heimat nach authentischen Quellen mit Benutzung amtlichen Materials und aus eigener Anschauung. Berlin: Walther, 1900.
- . Die Geschichte der Süd-Afrikanischen Republik Transvaal. Berlin, 1902.
- . Die Ursachen des Krieges zwischen England und den Burenrepubliken: die politischen Verwickelungen in der Zeit vom Jameson-Einfall bis zum Ausbruch des Krieges; nach authentischen Quellen... Berlin: Hermann Walther, 1900.
- . Ein unerschlossenes Kulturland; Neuquén und Rio Negro (Argentinien). Berlin: H. Paetel, 1907.
- . Hunnen in Süd-Afrika! Betrachtungen über englische Politik und Kriegsführung. Berlin: Ernst Hofmann & Co., 1902.
- . In Brasilien. Second edition. Berlin: H. Paetel, 1909.
- . Irrfahrten: Reisebilder. Berlin: H. Walther, 1899.
- . Kolonialpolitische Studien mit besonderer Berücksichtigung Argentinens: Vortrag im grossen Saale des Deutschen Turnvereins zu Buenos Aires am 25. August 1904. Buenos Aires: [s.n.], 1904.
- . Kultur- und Wirtschaftsgeschichte von Transvaal: die politischen Verwickelungen der letzten Jahre. Berlin: H. Walther, 1901.
- . Meine Kriegserlebnisse bei den Buren: Erinnerungen und Skizzen aus dem südafrikanischen Kriege 1899/1900. Berlin: Hermann Walther, 1900.
- . Minenwesen und Goldindustrie in Transvaal. Berlin: H. Walther, 1900.
- . Paraguay. Das Land der Guaranís. Berlin: H. Paetel, 1907.
- . Streifzüge durch Pampa und Kordillere Argentinens. Sammlung belehrender Unterhaltungsschriften für die deutsche Jugend 27. Berlin: H. Paetel, 1908.
- . Tagebuchblätter eines in Kamerun lebenden Deutschen, 1894.
- . Westpreussen seit den ersten Jahrzehnten dieses Jahrhunderts: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Entwicklung des allgemeinen Wohlstandes in dieser Provinz und ihren einzelnen Teilen. Beiträge zur Geschichte der Bevölkerung in Deutschland seit dem Anfange dieses Jahrhunderts 4. Tübingen: H. Laupp, 1893.
- Vallentin, Wilhelm, and H. G Breyer. Die Geschichte der Süd-Afrikanischen Republik Transvaal: auf Grund authentischer Quellen unter Benutzung amtlichen Materials und aus eigener Anschauung dargestellt. Berlin: H. Walther, 1901.

- Vallentin, Wilhelm, and Franz Giesebrecht. Der Freiheitskampf der Buren: die Schlacht am Majuba Hill. Berlin: H. Walther, 1899.
- Vancini, Marcos Gabriel, and Alfredo Abriani, eds. Personalidades religiosas de Buenos Aires: Hombres y mujeres que dejaron su huella. Buenos Aires: Gobierno de la Ciudad de Buenos Aires, 2012.
- Vanden Berghe, Kristine. "Argentina en la comunidad literaria flamenca. Algunos datos." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 205–7. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Varela, Silvia, ed. Los suizos en la Argentina. Buenos Aires: M. Zago, 1995.
- Varga, Eugen. Der deutsche Imperialismus: Die historischen Wurzeln seiner Besonderheiten. Berlin: Oberbaumverlag, 1970.
- Vedder, Heinrich. Das alte Südwestafrika: Südwestafrikas Geschichte bis zum Tode Mahareros 1890. Nach den besten schriftlichen und mündlichen Quellen erzählt. Berlin: M. Warneck, 1934.
- . Die schwarze Johanna: Lebens- und Zeitbild der 99jährigen Johanna Gertze, der Erstlingsfrucht vom Missionsfelde des Hererolandes. Barmen: Verlag des Missionshauses, 1936.
- Verberckmoes, Johan. "Flamencos en el Río de la Plata, siglos XVI-XVIII." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 37–47. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Verein zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderer. "Verein zum Schutze germanischer Einwanderer: Viamonte 541□; Bureaustunden von 10 bis 12□; Buenos Aires." Buenos Aires: H. Herpig, 1913.
- Verein zur Förderung germanischer Einwanderung in Buenos Aires. Argentinien als Ziel für germanische Auswanderung: Handbuch herausgegeben vom Verein zur Förderung germanischer Einwanderung in Buenos Aires; nebst einem Stadtplan und der neuesten Eisenbahnkarte. Buenos Aires: Buchdruckerei von H. Herpig, 1906.
- Verhandlungen der Gesellschaft für Erdkunde zu Berlin*. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer, 1883.
- Verlag Amerika. Adressbuch der Deutschen im Auslande, I. Band: Südamerika. Berlin: Verlag Amerika, 1914.
- Vermeulen, Joos. "Emigrantes de la región de Aarschot." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 155–62. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Vetter, Jeremy. Knowing Global Environments: New Historical Perspectives on the Field Sciences. Rutgers University Press, 2011.
- Veyrassat, Béatrice. Reseaux d'affaires internationaux, émigration et exportations en Amérique Latine au XIXe siècle: le commerce suisse aux Amériques. Librairie Droz, 1994.
- Viales Hurtado, Ronny. "La colonización agrícola de la región atlántica (Caribe) costarricense entre 1870 y 1930. El peso de la política agraria liberal y de las diversas formas de apropiación territorial." Anuario de Estudios Centroamericanos, Universidad de Costa Rica 27, no. 2 (2001): 57–100.

- Vietor, Johann Karl. Geschichtliche und kulturelle Entwicklung unserer Schutzgebiete. Berlin: D. Reimer, 1913.
- Viljoen, Wilhelm Jacob. Allgemeine Einleitung zur Geschichte des Cap-holländischen. Inaugural-Dissertation. Strassburg: Verlag von Karl J. Trübner, 1896.
- Villanueva, Graciela. "La imagen del inmigrante en la literatura argentina entre 1880 y 1910." Amérique Latine Histoire et Mémoire. Les Cahiers ALHIM. Les Cahiers ALHIM, no. 1 (2000).
- Vints, Luc. "Bélgica y Argentina: iglesia y misiones." In En los deltas de la memoria: Bélgica y Argentina en los siglos XIX y XX, edited by Bart De Groof, Patricio Geli, Eddy Stols, and Guy Van Beeck, 147–54. Leuven: Leuven University Press, 1998.
- Vizzari, Omar Lopez Mato, Hernan S. Ángeles de Buenos Aires: Historia de los cementerios de la Chacarita, Alemán y Británico. Olmo Ediciones, 2011.
- Voeltz, Richard Andrew. German Colonialism and the South West Africa Company, 1884-1914. Monographs in International Studies. Africa Series 50. Athens, Ohio: Ohio University, Center for International Studies, 1988.
- Vogel, Hans. "El progreso rio-platense en el espejo de los viajeros europeos." In 1898-1998: fines de siglos historia y literatura hispanoamericanas, edited by Jacques Joset and Philippe Raxhon, 65-. Genève: Librairie Droz, 2000.
- . "Europäische Forschungsreisen in den Cono Sur in der zweiten Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts." In Die Wiederentdeckung Lateinamerikas: die Erfahrung des Subkontinents in Reiseberichten des 19. Jahrhunderts, edited by Walther L. Bernecker, Gertrud Krömer, and Kristina Birn, 149–67. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1997.
- Vogt, Andreas. National Monuments in Namibia: An Inventory of Proclaimed National Monuments in the Republic of Namibia. Windhoek, Namibia: Gamsberg Macmillan, 2004.
- Vogt, Annette Christine. Ein Hamburger Beitrag zur Entwicklung des Welthandels im 19. Jahrhundert: die Kaufmannsreederei Wappäus im internationalen Handel Venezuelas und der dänischen sowie niederländischen Antillen. Stuttgart: Steiner, 2003.
- Vohsen, Ernst. Denkschrift über die bisherige Thätigkeit der Siedelungsgesellschaft für Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Berlin: Trowitzsch, 1902.
- Voigt, Bernhard. "Ackerbau im Hererolande." In Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute, edited by Bernhard Voigt, 36–38. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- . Auf dorniger Pad. Aus Deutsch-Südwestafrikas alten Tagen. Berlin: Safari-Verlag, 1926.
- . Das Herz der Wildnis, ein Roman aus Deutsch-Südwest-Afrikas ersten Tagen. New Edition of Auf dorniger Pad. Berlin: Safari-Verlag, 1940.
- , ed. Deutsch-Südwestafrika: Land und Leute. Stuttgart: Strecher & Schröder, 1913.
- . Die Buren. Südafrikanisches Grenzerbuch. Berlin: Parey, 1929.
- . "Die Geschichte des langen Tom." In Afrika spricht zu Dir: Selbsterlebnisse deutscher Kolonialpioniere, edited by Paul Ritter, 259–79. Mühlhausen, Thüringen: Bergwald-Verlag Walter Paul, 1938.
- . Du meine Heimat Deutschsüdwest. Ein afrikanisches Farmerleben. Berlin: Safari-Verlag, 1925.

- . Im Schülerheim zu Windhuk: Abenteuer in Busch und Steppe. Berlin: Weiss, 1928.
- Volberg, Heinrich. Auslandsdeutschtum und Drittes Reich: der Fall Argentinien. Köln; Wien: Böhlau, 1981.
- . Deutsche Kolonialbestrebungen in Südamerika nach dem Dreissigjährigen Kriege ... Köln, Weimar: Böhlau, 1977.
- Vollbehr, Ernst. Deutschlands Kolonien: Deutsch Südwest-Afrika. Karlsruhe: Kunstdr. Künstlerbund GmbH, 1910.
- Volz, Berthold. Unsere Kolonien: Land und Leute. Leipzig: F.A. Brockhaus, 1891.
- Voss, Walter. “Deutsche Auswanderung nach und deutsche Kolonisation in Südamerika, mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Gebiete südlich des Wendekreises des Steinbocks.” Ph.D., Universität Marburg, 1922.
- Wächter, H. Jürgen. Naturschutz in den deutschen Kolonien in Afrika (1884-1918). Europa-Übersee 20. Berlin: Lit, 2008.
- Wackwitz, Andreas. “Aus Deutsch-Südwestafrika.” Deutsche Diaspora. Neue Folge der Beihefte “Die evangelische Diaspora” 2 (1934): 11–15.
- Waetge, H. Argentinien und seine Stellung in der Weltwirtschaft. Berlin: Mittler, 1919.
- Wagner, Hans Carl Hermann. Ueber Gründung deutscher Colonien. Sammlung von Vorträgen 5, 7. Heidelberg: Winter, 1881.
- Wagner, Rudolf. Eine Reise durch die deutschen Kolonien: Deutsch Südwest-Afrika. Kolonie und Heimat 4. Berlin: Verlag Kolonialpolitischer Zeitschriften, 1911.
- Wäldler, Alfred. “Wir wollen Deutsche bleiben.” Koloniale Zeitschrift: Zeitschrift des Deutsch-Nationalen Kolonialvereins, 1902, 367.
- Waldmann, Peter. “Algunas observaciones y reflexiones críticas sobre el concepto de elite(s).” In Elites en América Latina, edited by Peter Birle, 9–30. Madrid; Frankfurt am Main: Iberoamericana; Vervuert, 2007.
- Walgenbach, Katharina. “Die weisse Frau als Trägerin deutscher Kultur”: koloniale Diskurse über Geschlecht, “Rasse” und Klasse im Kaiserreich. Campus Verlag, 2005.
- Wallace, Marion, and John Kinahan. A History of Namibia: From the Beginning to 1990. New York: Columbia University Press, 2011.
- Wallich, Paul. Banco Alemán Transatlántico: eine Reise durch Südamerika. Edited by Manfred Pohl. Mainz: Hase & Koehler, 1986.
- . Bericht über eine Reise zu den Filialen des Banco Aleman Transatlantico in Argentinien, Chile, Bolivien, und Peru, 1908-1909, 1909.
- . Die Konzentration im deutschen Bankwesen, Inaugural-Dissertation. Stuttgart: Druck der Union deutsche Verlagsgesellschaft, 1905.
- Wallroth, E. “Die evangelische Missionsthätigkeit in den deutschen Schutzgebieten. Rundschau für 1890 bis 1891.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Vierter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1891 4 (1892): 32–48.

- . “Die evangelische Missionsthätigkeit in den deutschen Schutzgebieten. Rundschau für 1892 und 1893.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Sechster Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1893 6 (1894): 77–107.
- . “Die evangelische Missionsthätigkeit in den deutschen Schutzgebieten. Rundschau für 1894 und 1895.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Beiträge und Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete der Kolonialwissenschaft und Kolonialpraxis. Achter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1895 8 (1896): 234–56.
- . “Die Missionsthätigkeit in den deutschen Schutzgebieten. Rundschau für 1889-1890.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Dritter Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1890 3 (1891): 66–83.
- Wallroth, P. E. “Die Mission in den deutschen Schutzgebieten.” Edited by Gustav Meinecke. Koloniales Jahrbuch. Erster Jahrgang. Das Jahr 1888 1 (1889): 27–60.
- Walser Smith, Helmut. “From the Bodensee to the Banks of the Cumberland: A Reflection on the Writing of German History in the United States, and Elsewhere on the Periphery,” 2010.
- . The Continuities of German History: Nation, Religion, and Race Across the Long Nineteenth Century. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2008.
- . “The Logic of Colonial Violence: Germany in Southwest Africa (1904-1907); the United States in the Philippines (1899-1902).” In German and American Nationalism, edited by Hartmut Lehmann and Hermann Wellenreuther, 205–31. Oxford: Berg Publishers, 1999.
- . “The Mirror Turn Lamp: Senses of the Nation before Nationalism.” In The Continuities of German History: Nation, Religion, and Race across the Long Nineteenth Century, 39–73. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2008.
- . “The Talk of Genocide, the Rhetoric of Miscegenation: Notes on Debates in the German Reichstag Concerning Southwest Africa, 1904-14.” In The Imperialist Imagination: German Colonialism and Its Legacy, edited by Sara Friedrichsmeyer, Sara Lennox, and Susanne Zantop, 107–24. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1998.
- Walther, Daniel. Creating Germans Abroad: Cultural Policies and National Identity in Namibia. Athens: Ohio University Press, 2002.
- Walther, Daniel J. Sex and Control: Venereal Disease, Colonial Physicians, and Indigenous Agency in German Colonialism, 1884-1914. New York; Oxford: Berghahn Books, 2015.
- Wandel, Paul. Der deutsche Imperialismus und seine Kriege - das nationale Unglück Deutschlands: Ein Beitrag zum Verständnis von fünfundvierzig Jahren verhängnisvoller deutscher Geschichte. Berlin: Dietz Verlag, 1955.
- Wang, Q. Edward, and Georg G. Iggers, eds. Turning Points in Historiography: A Cross-Cultural Perspective. Rochester, NY: Boydell & Brewer, 2002.
- Wappäus, Johann Eduard. “Anmerkungen des Herausgebers.” In Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonisation, edited by Johann Eduard Wappäus, 60–112. Leipzig: J.C. Hinrichs, 1846.
- . Deutsche Auswanderung und Colonisation. Erste Fortsetzung: Deutsche Auswanderung nach Süd-Amerika (Rio de la Plata). Leipzig: Hinrichs Buchhandlung, 1848.
- . “Die Deutschen in Buenos-Ayres.” In Germania: Archiv zur Kenntniss des deutschen Elements in allen Ländern der Erde, edited by Wilhelm Stricker, 2:441–44. Frankfurt am Main: Heinrich Ludwig Brönnner, 1848.

- . Die Republiken von Südamerika geographisch-statistisch, mit besonderer Berücksichtigung ihrer Produktion und ihres Handelsverkehrs, vornehmlich nach amtlichen Quellen. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck und Ruprecht, 1843.
- . “Gelegentliche Gedanken über die neueren deutschen Emigrations- und Colonisations-Projekte.” Janus: Jahrbücher deutscher Gesinnung, Bildung und That 20–22 (1846): 698–715, 741–51, 757–67.
- . Handbuch der Geographie und Statistik des ehemaligen spanischen Mittel- und Süd-Amerika: nebst den europäischen Besitzungen. Leipzig: Verlag der J.C. Hinrichs’schen Buchhandlung, 1870.
- . Patagonien, die Argentinische Republik, Uruguay und Paraguay: geographisch und statistisch dargestellt. Leipzig: Hinrichs, 1871.
- Warburg, O., and F. Wohltmann, eds. Der Tropenpflanzer: Zeitschrift für tropische Landwirtschaft. Berlin; Halle a. S.: Mittler, 1905.
- Warmbold, Joachim. Germania in Africa: Germany’s Colonial Literature. New York: P. Lang, 1989.
- . “If Only She Didn’t Have Negro Blood in Her Veins: The Concept of Métissage in German Colonial Literature.” Journal of Black Studies 23, no. 2 (1992): 200.
- Warneck, Gustav. Abriss einer Geschichte der protestantischen Missionen von der Reformation bis auf die Gegenwart. Berlin: Warneck, 1898.
- . Abriss einer Geschichte der protestantischen Missionen von der Reformation bis auf die Gegenwart: mit einem Anhang über die catholischen Missionen. Berlin: M. Warneck, 1910.
- . Outline of the History of Protestant Missions from the Reformation to the Present Time: A Contribution to Recent Church-History. Translated by Thomas Smith. Translated from the Second Edition. Edinburgh: Gemmell, 1884.
- Warnke, Ingo H., ed. Deutsche Sprache und Kolonialismus: Aspekte der nationalen Kommunikation 1884-1919. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2009.
- . “Deutsche Sprache und Kolonialismus: Umriss eines Forschungsfeldes.” In Deutsche Sprache und Kolonialismus: Aspekte der nationalen Kommunikation 1884-1919, edited by Ingo H. Warnke, 3–62. Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2009.
- Warren, Louis. “Buffalo Bill Meets Dracula: William F. Cody, Bram Stoker, and the Frontiers of Racial Decay.” American Historical Review 107, no. 4 (2002): 1124–57.
- Washausen, Helmut. Hamburg und die Kolonialpolitik des Deutschen Reiches 1880 bis 1890. Hamburg: H. Christians, 1968.
- Wassink, Jörg. “Auf den Spuren des deutschen Völkermordes in Südwestafrika: der Herero-, Nama-Aufstand in der deutschen Kolonialliteratur; eine literaturhistorische Analyse.” M-Press, 2004.
- Watermeyer, J. C. Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika seine landwirtschaftlichen Verhältnisse; Bericht über die Resultate meiner ... in Begleitung des Herrn ... Rehbock ausgeführten Reisen in Deutsch-Südwest-Afrika. Berlin: Reimer, 1898.

- Webb, Walter Prescott. "Walter Prescott Webb: The Great Frontier." In Where Cultures Meet: Frontiers in Latin American History, edited by David J. Weber and Jane M. Rausch, 51–63. Wilmington, Del.: SR Books, 1994.
- Webber, Philip E. Kolonie-Deutsch: Life and Language in Amana, An Expanded Edition. University of Iowa Press, 2009.
- Weber, David J., and Jane M. Rausch, eds. Where Cultures Meet: Frontiers in Latin American History. Wilmington, Del.: SR Books, 1994.
- Weber, Gaby. Daimler-Benz und die Argentinien-Connection: von Rattenlinien und Nazigeldern. Berlin: Assoziation A, 2004.
- . "Krauts" erobern die Welt: Der deutsche Imperialismus in Südamerika. Hamburg: Libertäre Assoziation, 1982.
- . La conexión alemana: El lavado de dinero nazi en Argentina. Buenos Aires: Edhasa, 2005.
- Weber, Max. "Argentinische Kolonistenwirthschaften." Deutsches Wochenblatt 7, no. 2 (1894): 20–22.
- Weck, Rüdiger. In Deutsch-Südwestafrika 1913-1915: Blätter aus dem Nachlass des Rüdiger Weck. Edited by Gustav Weck. Berlin, 1919.
- Wehler, Hans-Ulrich. Bismarck und der Imperialismus. Second Edition, Reprint of 1968. Köln: Kiepenheuer & Witsch, 1969.
- . Das Deutsche Kaiserreich, 1871-1918. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1980.
- . "Transnationale Geschichte - der neue Königsweg historischer Forschung?" In Transnationale Geschichte: Themen, Tendenzen und Theorien, edited by Gunilla Budde, Sebastian Conrad, and Oliver Janz, 161–74. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2006.
- Wehner, Karl. "Johann Jakob Sturz und die deutsche Auswanderung." [s.n.], 1925.
- Wehrl, Franz. Mission am Oranje: Geschichte der Oblaten-Mission der Vikariate Keimoes und Keetmanshoop nach Briefen, Tagebüchern und Visitationsberichten. Eichstätt: F. Sales Verlag, 1994.
- Weichert, Ludwig. Das Schulwesen deutscher evangelischer Missionsgesellschaften in den deutschen Kolonien. Berlin: Verlag der Buchhandlung der Berliner ev. Missionsgesellschaft, 1914.
- Weichlein, Siegfried. Nation und Region: Integrationsprozesse im Bismarckreich. Düsseldorf: Droste, 2004.
- . Nationalbewegungen und Nationalismus in Europa. Darmstadt: Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft, 2006.
- Weigend, Guido G. Deutsche Siedlungsstrukturen in Namibia. Düsseldorf: Deutsche SWA/Namibia Vereinigung e. V., 1986.
- Weinmann, Ricardo. Argentina en la Primera Guerra Mundial: neutralidad, transición política y continuismo económico. 1. ed. Buenos Aires: Ed. Biblos, 1994.
- Weisbrot, Robert, and Robert Murciano. The Jews of Argentina: From the Inquisition to Perón. Philadelphia: Jewish Publication Society of America, 1979.

- Weiser, Martin. The Herero War - the First Genocide of the 20th Century? Norderstedt: GRIN Verlag, 2006.
- Weisl, Ernst Franz. "Zur Auswanderungsfrage." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Zeitschrift für Kolonialpolitik, Kolonialrecht und Kolonialwirtschaft 7 (1905): 374-389; 391-406.
- Weismann, Martin. "Imperialismus und Jingoismus." Edited by Deutsche Kolonialgesellschaft. Beiträge zur Kolonialpolitik und Kolonialwirtschaft 5 (1903).
- Wellnitz, Britta. Deutsche evangelische Gemeinden im Ausland: ihre Entstehungsgeschichte und die Entwicklung ihrer Rechtsbeziehungen zur Evangelischen Kirche in Deutschland. Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 2003.
- Wendland. Bethanien im Namaland bei Angra Pequena. Berlin: Verlag des Missionshauses, 1885.
- Wendt, Reinhard. Vom Kolonialismus zur Globalisierung: Europa und die Welt seit 1500. Paderborn: Schöningh, 2007.
- Wentenschuh, Walter G. Namibia und seine Deutschen: Geschichte und Gegenwart der deutschen Sprachgruppe im Südwesten Afrikas. 1st ed. Göttingen: Hess, 1995.
- Werner, Michael, and Benedicte Zimmermann. "Beyond Comparison: Histoire Croisée and the Challenge of Reflexivity." History and Theory 45 (2006): 30–50.
- , eds. De la comparaison à l'histoire croisée. Paris: Seuil, 2004.
- Werner, Michael, and Bénédicte Zimmermann. "Penser l'histoire croisée: entre empirie et réflexivité." Annales. Histoire, Sciences Sociales 58, no. 1 (2003): 5–36.
- Werner, Theodor Gustav. Die Beteiligung der Nürnberger Welser und Augsburger Fugger an der Eroberung des Rio de la Plata und der Gründung von Buenos Aires. Nürnberg, 1967.
- Werner, Wolfgang. "A Brief History of Land Dispossession in Namibia." Journal of Southern African Studies 19, no. 1 (1993): 135–46.
- . "An Economic and Social History of the Herero of Namibia, 1915-1946." University of Cape Town, 1989.
- . "Landenteignung, Reservate und die Debatte zur Landreform in Namibia." In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 292–303. Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- Werz, Nikolaus. Handbuch der deutschsprachigen Lateinamerikakunde. Arnold-Bergstraesser-Institut, 1992.
- Wessler, Adelheid. "Von Lebendabgüssen, Heimatmuseen und Cultural Villages museale Repräsentation des Selbst und des Anderen im (De-)Kolonisierungsprozess Namibias." Ph.D., Universität zu Köln, 2007.
- Wettstein, Karl August. Brasilien und die deutsch-brasilianische Kolonie Blumenau. Leipzig: Engelmann, 1907.
- . Durch den brasilianischen Urwald: Erlebnisse bei einer Wegerkundung in den deutschvölkischen Kolonien Süd-Brasiliens. Köln: Schaffstein, 1921.

- . Mit deutschen Kolonistenjungen durch den brasilianischen Urwald!: selbsterlebte Weihnachtsgeschichte; eine Reise nach und durch Südbrasilien und seine deutschvölkischen Kolonien. 2. Aufl. Leipzig: Engelmann, 1910.
- White, Richard. The Middle Ground: Indians, Empires, and Republics in the Great Lakes Region, 1650-1815. Cambridge; New York: Cambridge University Press, 2011.
- Wicker, Hans-Rudolf, ed. Mbya, Pai-Tavytera und Chiripa in Ostparaguay: zur Guarani-Sammlung von Adolf-Niklaus Schuster: Bernisches Historisches Museum, 1982. S.l.: s.n., 1982.
- Wiechmann, Gerhard. “Die Königlich Preußische Marine in Lateinamerika 1851 bis 1867. Ein Versuch deutscher Kanonenbootpolitik in Übersee.” In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 105–44. Münster: Lit, 2004.
- Wiedmann, Ingrid. “Elsa Plocher: Una Pionera del Alto Paraná.” In La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera, edited by Olga Zamboni, 15–30. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Wilcken, Guillermo. Las Colonias. Informe sobre el estado actual de las colonias agrícolas de la República Argentina presentado a la Comision Central de Inmigracion, 1872. Buenos Aires: Sociedad anonima, 1873.
- Wildenthal, Lora. German Women for Empire, 1884-1945. Durham, N.C.: Duke University Press, 2001.
- . “Notes on a History of ‘Imperial Turns’ in Modern Germany.” In After the Imperial Turn: Thinking With and Through the Nation, edited by Antoinette Burton, 144–56. Durham, N.C.: Duke University Press, 2003.
- . “Race, Gender, and Citizenship in the German Colonial Empire.” In Tensions of Empire: Colonial Cultures in a Bourgeois World, edited by Frederick Cooper and Ann Laura Stoler, 263–83. Berkeley Calif.: University of California Press, 1997.
- . “Rasse und Kultur: Koloniale Frauenorganisationen in der deutschen Kolonialbewegung des Kaiserreichs.” In Phantasiereiche: zur Kulturgeschichte des deutschen Kolonialismus, edited by Birthe Kundrus, 202–19. Frankfurt/Main: Campus, 2003.
- . “The Places of Colonialism in the Writing and Teaching of Modern German History.” In German Colonialism: Another Sonderweg?, edited by Marcia Klotz, Special Edition., 16:9–24. European Studies Journal 2. Cedar Falls, Iowa: University of Northern Iowa, 1999.
- Wilder, Gary. “Unthinking French History: Colonial Studies beyond National Identity.” In After the Imperial Turn: Thinking With and Through the Nation, edited by Antoinette Burton, 125–43. Durham, N.C.: Duke University Press, 2003.
- Williams, Glyn. The Desert and the Dream: A Study of Welsh Colonization in Chubut, 1865-1915. Cardiff: University of Wales Press, 1975.
- Williams, Michelle. South Africa & India: Shaping the Global South. Johannesburg: Wits University Press, 2011.
- Williamson, David. Germany since 1815: A Nation Forged and Renewed. Basingstoke Hampshire; New York NY: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005.

- Willich, Cissy. Kriegstage in Südwest: Tagebuchblätter aus den Jahren 1914 und 1915. Oldenburg: Gerhard Stalling, 1916.
- Willis, Bailey. A Yanqui in Patagonia. Stanford University, Calif.: Stanford University Press, 1947.
- Wilmsen, Edwin N. Land Filled with Flies: A Political Economy of the Kalahari. Chicago; London: University of Chicago Press, 1989.
- Windhoek Hebrew Congregation. Jewish Life in South West Africa/Namibia: A History. Windhoek, Namibia: Hewbre Congregation, 2014.
- Wirth, Lauri Emilio. Protestantismus und Kolonisation in Brasilien: Der evangelische Gemeindeverband in Brasilien; Kontextualität, Ekklesiologie und Institutionalisierung einer deutschen Einwandererkirche in Santa Catarina. Erlangen: Verlag der Ev.-Luth. Mission, 1992.
- Witbooi, Hendrik. Afrika den Afrikanern!: Aufzeichnungen eines Nama-Häuptlings aus der Zeit der deutschen Eroberung Südwestafrikas 1884 bis 1894. Edited by Wolfgang Reinhard. Berlin [u.a.]: Dietz, 1982.
- Wolf, Eugen. Deutsch-Südwestafrika: ein offenes Wort. Kempten: Kösel, 1905.
- Wolf, Nina. Deutschsprachige Vereinigungen in Argentinien: eine Bestandsaufnahme. Saarbrücken: VDM Verlag Dr. Müller, 2009.
- Wolfe, Patrick. "History and Imperialism: A Century of Theory, from Marx to Postcolonialism." American Historical Review 102, no. 2 (1997): 388–420.
- Wolff, Julius. "Das Deutschtum und die deutschen wirtschaftlichen Interessen in Argentinien." In Verhandlungen des Deutschen Kolonialkongresses, zu Berlin am 5., 6., und 7. Oktober 1905, edited by Deutscher Kolonialkongress, 1006–19. Berlin: Dietrich Reimer (Ernst Vohsen), 1906.
- Wolfzettel, Friedrich. "Ästhetik der Anden: Europäische Reiseberichte im Zeitalter der Romantik." In Die Wiederentdeckung Lateinamerikas: die Erfahrung des Subkontinents in Reiseberichten des 19. Jahrhunderts, edited by Walther L. Bernecker, Gertrut Krömer, and Kristina Birn, 239–63. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1997.
- . Reiseberichte und mythische Struktur: romanistische Aufsätze 1983 - 2002. Wiesbaden: Franz Steiner Verlag, 2003.
- Woodward, Wendy, Patricia Hayes, and Gary Minkley. Deep Histories: Gender and Colonialism in Southern Africa. Amsterdam: Rodopi, 2002.
- Wright, Winthrop R. British-Owned Railways in Argentina: Their Effect on the Growth of Economic Nationalism, 1854-1948. Austin, TX: University of Texas Press, 1974.
- Wuelfing, Walther. Die deutschen Südwesten. Ringendes Deutschtum. Deutsch-Südwestafrika. Reutlingen: Ensslin & Laiblin, 1939.
- Wulffen, Bernd. Deutsche Spuren in Argentinien: zwei Jahrhunderte wechselvoller Beziehungen. 1. Aufl. Berlin: Links, 2010.
- Wulschner, Hans, ed. Vom Rio Grande zum La Plata: Deutsche Reiseberichte des 19. Jahrhunderts aus dem südlichen Amerika. Second Edition. Stuttgart: Horst Erdmann Verlag, 1984.
- Wurm, Alexander. Identität im Dilemma?: Betrachtungen zur kulturellen Identität deutschstämmiger Namibier in Swakopmund. Regensburg, 2005.

- Wychgram, J., ed. "Deutsch als Unterrichtsgegenstand im South African College der Kapstadt." Deutsche Zeitschrift für Ausländisches Unterrichtswesen 1 (1896): 282.
- , ed. "Deutsche Schule in Kapstadt." Deutsche Zeitschrift für Ausländisches Unterrichtswesen 1 (1896): 282.
- , ed. "Generaldirektor Dr. Francisco A. Berra in Buenos Ayres." Deutsche Zeitschrift für Ausländisches Unterrichtswesen 1 (1896): 68.
- , ed. "Volksschulwesen in Argentinien." Deutsche Zeitschrift für Ausländisches Unterrichtswesen 1 (1896): 67–68.
- Zacharov, Viktor N, Gelina Harlaftis, and Olga Katsiardi-Hering, eds. Merchant Colonies in the Early Modern Period. London [u.a.]: Pickering & Chatto, 2012.
- Zamboni, Olga, ed. La colonización alemana en Misiones: la mujer pionera. Posadas, Argentina: Libros de la Región; Creativa, 2003.
- Zangger, Andreas. Koloniale Schweiz: Ein Stück Globalgeschichte zwischen Europa und Südostasien (1860-1930). Bielefeld: transcript Verlag, 2014.
- Zantop, Susanne. Colonial Fantasies: Conquest, Family, and Nation in Precolonial Germany, 1770-1870. Durham, N.C.: Duke University Press, 1997.
- . Kolonialphantasien im vorkolonialen Deutschland (1770-1870). Berlin: E. Schmidt, 1999.
- Zapata, José V. Memoria presentada al Congreso nacional de 1892. Vol. 2. Buenos Aires: Imprenta de obras de J. A. Berra, 1892.
- Zappen-Thomson, Marianne. Interkulturelles Lernen und Lehren in einer multikulturellen Gesellschaft: Deutsch als Fremdsprache in Namibia. Windhoek: Klaus Hess Publishers, 2000.
- Zavala, Silvio Arturo. Orígenes de la colonización en el Río de la Plata. México, D.F.: Editorial de El Colegio Nacional, 1978.
- Zeballos, Estanislao Severo. La concurrencia Universal y la agricultura en ambas Américas. Washington: Gibson Brothers, 1894.
- . La concurrencia universal y la agricultura en ambas Américas; Informe presentado al excelentísimo señor ministro de relaciones exteriores de la República Argentina, Dr. Don Eduardo Costa. Second Edition. Buenos Aires: Jacobo Peuser, 1896.
- . La conquista de quince mil leguas: Estudio sobre la traslacion de la frontera Sud de la república al Rio Negro, dedicado á los gefes y oficiales del ejército expedicionario. Second Edition. Buenos Aires: Establecimiento de Tipografico a Vapor de "La Prensa," 1878.
- Zech, Paul. La Argentina de un poeta alemán en el exilio 1933-1946. Edited by Regula Rohland de Langbehn. Buenos Aires: Sec. de Lit. en lenguas extranjer...Fac. de Fil. y Letras UBA, 1997.
- Zezeza, Tiyanbe. The Study of Africa: Global and Transnational Engagements. African Books Collective, 2007.
- Zeller, Jessica. "Der Beitrag deutscher Sozialisten in den Anfängen der Arbeiterbewegung und des Sozialismus in Argentinien, Der Verein und die Zeitung 'Vorwärts' in Buenos Aires (1882-1901)." Freie Universität Berlin, 2004.

- Zeller, Joachim. Kolonialdenkmäler und Geschichtsbewusstsein: Eine Untersuchung der kolonialdeutschen Erinnerungskultur. Frankfurt: IKO-Verlag für Interkulturelle Kommunikation, 2000.
- . “Kolonialkrieg und Denkmal: 100 Jahre Politik mit der Erinnerung.” In Namibia-Deutschland: Eine geteilte Geschichte, edited by Larissa Förster, Dag Henrichsen, and Michael Bollig, 124–43. Wolftratshausen: Edition Minerva, 2004.
- . Weisse Blicke - schwarze Körper: Afrikaner im Spiegel westlicher Alltagskultur: Bilder aus der Sammlung Peter Weiss. Erfurt: Sutton Verlag, 2010.
- Zeuske, Michael. “Deutsche ‘Hinterländer’ und Amerika: Die sächsischen Mitglieder der ‘Rheinisch-Westindischen Compagnie’ 1820-1830.” In Sachsen und Lateinamerika: Begegnungen in vier Jahrhunderten, edited by Michael Zeuske, Bernd Schröter, and Jörg Ludwig, 164–200. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert Verlag, 1995.
- . “Preußen, die ‘deutschen Hinterländer’ und Amerika. Regionales, ‘Nationales’ und Universales in der Geschichte der ‘Rheinisch-Westindischen Compagnie’ (1820-1830).” Scripta Mercaturae 26 (1992): 50–89.
- . “Preußen und Westindien: Handels- und Konsularbeziehungen.” In Preussen und Lateinamerika: im Spannungsfeld von Kommerz, Macht und Kultur, edited by Sandra Carreras and Günther Maihold, 145–216. Münster: LIT Verlag, 2004.
- Zeuske, Michael, Bernd Schröter, and Jörg Ludwig, eds. Sachsen und Lateinamerika: Begegnungen in vier Jahrhunderten. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert Verlag, 1995.
- Ziegler, Alexander. Der Geleitsmann. Katechismus für Auswanderer nach den Vereinigten Staaten von Nord-Amerika, nach Mittel- und Süd-Amerika und Australien ... Leipzig: J. J. Weber, 1856.
- Ziegler, Béatrice. “Auf der Suche nach Brot und Freiheit: Die Auswanderung aus Deutschland, Österreich und der Schweiz.” In Deutsche in Lateinamerika - Lateinamerika in Deutschland, edited by Karl Kohut, 48–66. Frankfurt am Main: Vervuert, 1996.
- Zielke, Katrin. “‘Deutschtum’ in Chile und Argentinien: die Entwicklung deutscher Bauernsiedlungen zu Auslandsdeutschen des 3. Reiches; eine Untersuchung zum Verhältnis der deutschen Kolonien in Chile und Argentinien zum deutschen Nationalsozialismus.” Ph.D., Freie Universität Berlin, 1996.
- Zimmerer, Jürgen. Deutsche Herrschaft über Afrikaner: staatlicher Machtanspruch und Wirklichkeit im kolonialen Namibia. Münster: Lit, 2001.
- . Genocide in German South-West Africa: The Colonial War (1904-1908) in Namibia and Its Aftermath. Monmouth Wales: Merlin Press, 2008.
- Zimmerman, Andrew. Alabama in Africa: Booker T. Washington, the German Empire, and the Globalization of the New South. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2010.
- . Anthropology and Antihumanism in Imperial Germany. Chicago: University Of Chicago Press, 2001.
- Zimmermann, Alfred. Die Handelspolitik des Deutschen Reichs vom Frankfurter Frieden bis zur Gegenwart. Second Edition. Berlin: E.S. Mittler, 1899.
- . Die Kolonialpolitik der Niederländer. Die europäischen Kolonien 5. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1903.

- . Die Kolonialpolitik Frankreichs. Die europäischen Kolonien 4. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1901.
- . Die Kolonialpolitik Grossbritanniens. Die europäischen Kolonien 2. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1898.
- . Die Kolonialpolitik Grossbritanniens. Die europäischen Kolonien 3. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1899.
- . Die Kolonialpolitik Portugals und Spaniens. Die europäischen Kolonien 5. Berlin: Ernst Siegfried Mittler und Sohn, 1896.
- . Die Kolonialreiche der Grossmächte, 1871-1916. Berlin: Ullstein, 1916.
- . Geschichte der deutschen Kolonialpolitik. Berlin: E.S. Mittler und Sohn, 1914.
- . Geschichte der preussisch-deutschen Handelspolitik. Oldenburg; Leipzig: Schulze, 1892.
- . Kolonialgeschichtliche Studien. Oldenburg: A. Schwartz, 1895.
- . Kolonialpolitik. Leipzig: C.L. Hirschfeld, 1905.
- . La politique coloniale. Bruxelles: Office de la Revue, 1908.
- . Weltpolitisches: Beiträge und Studien zur neueren Kolonialbewegung. Second Edition. Berlin: Allgemeiner Verein für Deutsche Litteratur, 1901.
- Zimmermann, Emil. The German Empire of Central Africa as the Basis of a New German World Policy. New York: George H. Doran company, 1918.
- . Unsere Kolonien, unter Mitwirkung hervorragender Afrikaner. Berlin, Wien: Ullstein & Co., 1912.
- Zolberg, Aristide. "The Exit Revolution." In Citizenship and Those Who Leave: The Politics of Emigration and Expatriation, edited by Nancy Green and François Weil, 33–60. Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 2007.
- Zollmann, Jakob. Koloniale Herrschaft und ihre Grenzen: die Kolonialpolizei in Deutsch-Südwestafrika, 1894-1915. Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2010.
- Zuniga, Jean-Paul. "L'Histoire impériale à l'heure de l'histoire globale". Une perspective atlantique." Revue d'histoire moderne et contemporaine 54, no. 4 bis (2007): 54–68.
- Zur Mühlen, Patrik. Fluchtziel Lateinamerika: Die deutsche Emigration 1933-1945: politische Aktivitäten und soziokulturelle Integration. Bonn: Verlag Neue Gesellschaft, 1988.
- Zweck, Albert. In welche Lande ist der deutsche Auswandererstrom zu lenken, um ihn dem Reiche nutzbar zu machen? Memel: J. W. Siebert, 1895.
- Zweig, Stefan. Brasilien: Ein Land der Zukunft. Stockholm: Bermann-Fischer, 194

Biographical Information

Isabelle Rispler is transatlantic transdisciplinary scholar with a special focus in history. She earned her PhD from the University of Texas at Arlington and her doctorate from the Université Sorbonne Paris Cité (Université Paris Diderot) in a joint degree agreement (cotutelle).