Fa11

Red, yellow and gold leaves were a sure sign that fall had arrived in Texas. Cold weather came early but it was late in the winter before the first snow arrived. On two consecutive February weekends, students took advantage of light snow accumulations to test out those seldom used sculpting and sledding skills.

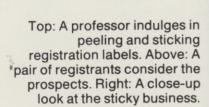

As a thin curl of sweat runs down your nose, you round the corner of the brick building and a line of equally hot, miserable students greets you. It's registration time again.

Long lines marked two and one-half days of fall registration as 19,135 students developed ulcers over crowds, schedule changes, the closing of courses and new forms to fill out.

The enrollment increased 4.8 per cent from last year's 18,261, making UTA the fifthlargest university in the state. Eleven thousand five hundred sixty-five men and 7,570 women signed up, 12,263 of them full-time

Registration

Freshmen again held the enrollment lead with 5,557, followed by 4,769 seniors, 3,189 juniors and 2,659 sophomores.

Ready for more figures? Industrious students working on their doctorates account for 312 of the student body, 2,504 men and women are working on master's and 148 over achievers already with degrees are working on another.

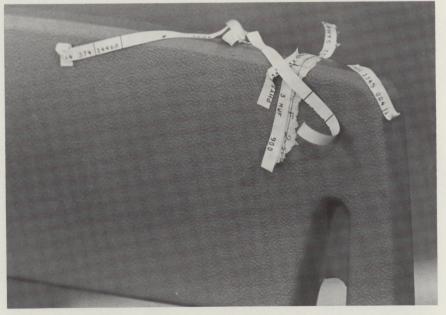

Yet registration wasn't all figures. New forms added to the usual confusion, with the faculty required to peel off sticky course labels and place them on the forms the students carried. This caused problems when classes were changed or switched. Registrar Zack Prince said that even though the new systems caused a few new problems, the forms worked well for the students, "even if it was harder for the faculty to put labels on the forms."

After the laughter, there's still a little evidence that we were there. Thanks for stickin' around, fellas.

Spring

It was another erratic springtime with an early burst of heat in January carrying temperatures into the 80's followed by a series of cold snaps dropping the thermometer into the 20's and 30's.

By early March the spring blossoms made their reluctant appearance; jogging shorts, bathing suits and bicycles were brought out of storage, and signs of color returned to the landscape.

Rush parties consisted of skits and costumes with special themes. One fraternity party had a Hawaiian theme, while others had gambling, Wizard of Oz, and detective themes. Bid day brought a sea of girls anxious for their bids, and smiling faces when they received them.

Rush

Fall rush is like UTA parking — bumper to bumper.

This year's rush began with 185 nervous girls moving from party to party in the University Center trying to impress the nine sororities. The equally nervous sororities entertained their future sisters with skits, songs, food and conversation.

Each group showed its mascots, flowers and jewelry, with an explanation of what was expected of the pledges — such chores as study hall, making paddles for big sisters and making chariots. Awards, trophies and silver were displayed, and sports, scholastic achievement and social activities stressed.

Precision timing moved nine rushee groups from room to room the first two nights of rush week, with 25 minutes allowed each group of girls. After meeting all the groups, the rushees either accepted or turned down invitations to return for more parties.

The rushees eventually trimmed their choices to two sororities on preference night, attending two formal parties. After the final parties, preference cards were filled out. The sororities made their own lists to compare with the preferences of the rushees.

Friday all the cake-nibbling and punch-sipping paid off as bids were passed out. The 150 new pledges ran down the red carpet one by one into the arms of their future sisters.

Fraternity rush operated differently. Although men were not allowed at sorority parties, women were allowed at fraternity parties.

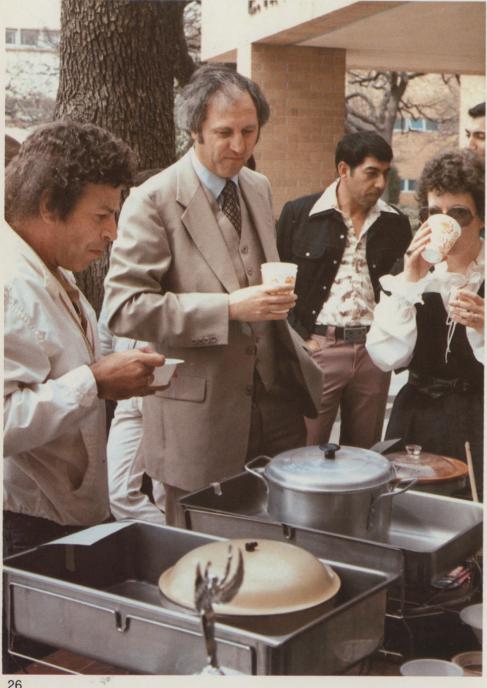

The 15 fraternities here attracted 400 potential rushees.

Country-Western Week

An eclectic assortment of buckaroos dusted off the old spurs and boots, March 17-21, for the first annual UTA Country-Western Week. Festivities began with Irish Night in the Dry Gulch, continued with a lawn dance at Brazos Hall and more or less ended with a chili cookoff and C&W fashion show on the campus mall. Country bands, like Salt Lick and Dewdrop, were herded in for a hoe-down or two. The doin's were organized by the Student Activities Board.

Chuck Mangione

Flugelhornist for the Olympics? Sure enough, that's what Chuck Mangione announced in his January 25 concert in Texas Hall.

Mangione told a "sold out" crowd of 2800 that ABC's Roone Arledge had cornered him in New York and asked him to write the music for the 1980 Winter Olympics. The result was "Give It All You Got." Mangione played that and other selections from his newest album for the UTA crowd.

The concert was split roughly in half: the first half devoted to new music, the second half for older, more familiar, more popular tunes.

Selections included "Pina Colada," "Chase the Clouds Away," "Land of Make Believe," "Hide and Seek," and the favorite, "Feels So Good." Among the hits which had the crowd on their feet were many which had won Grammys for the entertainer, and a number of gold and platinum best sellers.

Shortly after his visit to UTA, Mangione closed the winter games in Lake Placid with the same, irrepressible energy he displayed for the Arlington crowd.

A volcano of brilliant sound blasted forth from the famous flugelhorn, representing not only the spirit of American athletes at the games, but the spirit of Mangione's music as well, in the determination to "Give It All You Got."

Family Day

Once in a while, parents have to see what their kids are up to, when those kids are in college.

That was the purpose of Expo-UTA-79/Family Day in October, for the parents to see where their tuition money goes. Three hundred sixty-five registered parents and friends investigated 50 exhibits displayed by various departments in University Center.

The Family Day, sponsored by the Alumni Office and the Student Affairs Office, offered open house for university housing, campus buildings, religious centers and Greek organizations as well as general exhibits.

The six food service areas were open for business, and the Dry Gulch offered its giant television, among other inducements. The UTA Jazz Orchestra played in the Palo Duro Lounge, and the drama division presented a scene from "The Skin of Our Teeth." The Voices of Christ student gospel choir also performed.

And what about those parents who are attending UTA and whose children attended the open house? Well, once in a while kids have to see what their parents are up to, too.

Houston Ballet

It was like a dream, a fantasy, which kept the Texas Hall audience mesmerized for two and a half hours watching dancers literally floating through the air. The spectacle of grace and movement was the Houston Ballet company's performance of "Giselle," the last concert of the 1979-80 Curtain Call 2 series.

"Giselle" was one of four rep ballets performed by the Houston company during the year. Coming at the end of the group's international tour, the two-act ballet is the captivating story of an intrigue which pits Hilarion, the man Giselle's mother hopes she will marry, against Albrecht, a noble whom she can never hope to wed.

When true identities are revealed, at the end of Act I, Giselle siezes Albrecht's royal sword and kills herself.

The second act reveals Hilarion keeping vigil at the maiden's grave. At midnight, the wilis, ghosts of young girls who have been jilted and who died before their wedding, come forth to avenge themselves by dancing to death any man whom they may encounter in the night.

Hilarion is driven to his death by the wilis, who are led by their queen, Myrtha. Albrecht then comes, bringing flowers for Giselle's grave. Myrtha condemns him to death, and although Giselle urges him to keep within the safe circle of the cross on her grave, Myrtha commands her to dance and lure him away.

The performance offered all the spectacle the audience could have expected from the famed ballet. Up to the end when, just as death seems imminent for Albrecht but he is spared by the appearance of the dawning sun, the observers were spellbound.

The Houston company included 34 professional dancers and six scholarship students from around the world.

Summer School

School's out for the summer . . . well, not exactly, at least not for the 8,269 students enrolled for summer school.

To cool things off, the Student Activities Board scheduled a number of summertime activities, including a hamburger cookout on the mall, where students could get a hamburger, chips, dessert and drink for a dollar. And for the price of a meal, you could listen to a professional C & W band, composed of UTA students.

Another hot day had SAB bringing out cartons of ice cream, syrups, hot fudge, whipped cream, nuts and cherries to the mall where anyone with a little money and less self-control could build his own sundae.

At a "disco pool party," faculty members served as judges in the first annual George Hamilton Suntan Contest and the Belly-Flop Contest.

For more classical tastes, the Dallas Symphony Orchestra gave a nighttime performance on the Library mall. The group played pieces by Ravel, Gerschwin and Scott Joplin. The mall was blanketed by students, faculty and city residents, young and old.

Octoberfest

Wunderbar! Fort Worth was once again deluged with salted pretzels, foaming beer and sauerbrauten as the tenth annual Octoberfest got underway in the Tarrant County Convention Center.

Octoberfest, sponsored by the Symphony League of Fort Worth, first started in 1969 at the Texas and Pacific Railway Station with the assistance of 300 volunteers. The station was rented to the Octoberfesters for a whopping sum of two dollars, and the Symphony League reaped $7000 for their efforts.

The second year, the German celebration was held at Will Rogers Coliseum, but the festival outgrew that site as well.

"We may be outgrowing the convention center," said Rose Anderson, chairman of Octoberfest.

This year more than 100 booths operated by non-profit organizations and 500 volunteer workers provided food, drinks, games and diversions to a crowd of nearly 125,000 people. Their efforts brought in close to $83,000.

And the event was just as popular as ever. Edible goodies galore attracted those young at heart and full-in-wallet. Hot pretzels scented the convention center, along with the aroma of nachos, popcorn, German beer and link sausage.

Besides the fraternity dunking booths and face-painting booths that turned innocent young faces into creatures from Marvel Comics, a few carnival rides operated outside the building and a country singer entertained dancing crowds.

The International Students' Folk Dance Group from UTA performed during the festival and explained the histories of their routine for the spectators. The group involved the audience in their performances and used taped music of folk songs from a variety of countries.

Winter Olympics

If it seemed like a circus, it probably was, because the air was full of three-ring excitement and death-defying hilarity at the 15th annual Phi Delta Theta Winter Olympics held on campus last October.

The fraternity-sponsored olympic games pitted 100 sorority co-eds against each other in such all-American sports as egg-tossing, chariot-racing and beer-chugging. Although no medals were given and no world records were broken, the team with the most total points earned a hearty toast.

Divided into twelve events, the contest opened with the traditional Toga Queen beauty contest, rating the provocative hopefuls on appearance, poise and originality of costume. Chariots built from a mish-mash of chicken wire, metal scraps, wagons and tricycles were paraded for judging; and five newspaper-armed girls perched on the shoulders of big-brother war horses, swatted eggs taped to the men's foreheads. Last egg

A chariot race worthy of Ben-Her (pun intended) kept the spectators shouting as the ladies fought for the thrill of victory. A surprise event matched pledge trainers against each other in a horse-apple-throwing contest, and relay teams of four girls from each sorority downed bottles of beer for a shot at a blue ribbon, or a chance to prove that "the agony of defeat" was really a matter of taste.

After a tense egg-tossing contest (and not everybody put their eggs in one basket), blind-folded contenders smacked their partners with chocolate pies. Another event, the mystery event, required girls to change clothes in a sleeping bag while a teammate kept out the peering eyes of the crowd — some of the time.

Musical tubs, played the same as musical chairs, but with a tub of cold water to sit in instead of a cozy chair, was another favorite. But the bathing suit contest in which the girls had to design their suits from one yard of black material took the cake. The suits were accessorized with feathers and belts and, well, the trimmings were left up to Mother Nature. Fraternity men in short togas decked with laurel wreaths escorted the contestants to the judges. A dig for the sorority spoons in 1000 pounds of flour by the sorority presidents ended the afternoon's athletic events, as more than the powdered presidents were thrown into the sea of white.

Happy contestants, and some not-so-happy contestants, followed up the festivities by celebrating the happy hour at J. Gilligan's Bar & Grill. A Winter Olympics Dance awarded double points to the participants and their dates. Delta Delta Delta finished first, Zeta Tau Alpha second and Alpha Chi Omega took third. Delta Zeta a winner of the Winter Olympics for eight years, did not compete this year.

The olympic events really made a splash with the crowd. The drain of watching a pie-throw, eggtoss, musical tubs and bathing suit contest shows on one spectator as he takes a breather on a discarded "chariot."

Homecoming

Jack Frost may not have been nipping at our noses, but U.S. Rep. Martin Frost was there to light our fire.

Homecoming activities started at noon Nov. 16 with a pep rally and ended with a bonfire and street dance for the enthusiastic crowd of UTA students and alums.

The wood-gathering contest was discontinued this year, for a variety of reasons, but plenty of lumber was on hand for Rep. Frost to light at 8:30 p.m. before a crowd of 3,500. Country-Western band King Peach played from 8 to midnight, and a Budweiser hot-air balloon added a little excitement by giving rides and reflecting the bonfire's flames.

An exciting first half, in which UTA scored heavily, led to an equally exciting half-time with the Maverick Marching Band and the Sam Houston Rifles Drill Team performing before the crowd of 7,300 cheering fans.

Whether soaring with football activities, UTA

students and alums sparkled with UTA fever on Homecoming week-end. From the 3,500 bonfire revelers to the 7,300 football fans at Cravens Field, the turnout was good, and the sense of unity was among the best ever seen at UTA.

Ex-cheerleaders came onto the field to lead cheers for the younger generation; and James A. Cribbs was presented with the distinguished Alumnus Award. Dr. Mo-Shing Chen was named Distinguished Honorary Alumnus, and Vicki Clements was named Homecoming Queen.

The Movin' Mays went on to a 47-37 victory over the Cardinals. Fans showed their approval by tossing rolls of colored toilet paper onto the field to the chorus-line formed by the Saddleand-Spurs spirit club, and the spiritmakers responded by pitching back souvenir blue-and-white footballs.

After the game, the flag-waving, and the jingle and glitter of mums, a champagne reception for alumni, students and friends of UTA was held in the Palo Duro Lounge in University Center.

Below: Distinguished Honorary Alumnus Dr. Mo-Shing Chen watches half-time ceremonies at Cravens Field.

At 8 p.m. a block party and street dance came alive on Greek Row. Celebration and free beer kept spirits high as disco music was played from a stereo system set up on the street. A large and enthusiastic turnout kept the party going until midnight, when campus police subtly broke it up.

No one could say homecoming weekend was boring. It gave UTA people, new and old, a good, old-fashioned way of having fun and raising "heck" in the name of Maverick Madness.

The Homecoming game was preceded by a parade of the Sam Houston Rifles and flag twirlers. During the push-me-pull-you action of the game, spirited students challenged the Saddle and Spurs spirit group who aided in pulling a victory wagon onto the field.

UTA students received a night full of Chinese culture for free as their Chinese peers and some children showed their agility as well as their musical talents.

Grace and beauty highlighted China night in Texas Hall as 450 UTA students proudly showed their heritage.

The program featured a Kung Fu exhibition, folk dance, a Chinese opera, a performance of Chinese musical instruments and a fashion show of contemporary and ancient clothes.

As an added attraction, children performed for the crowd of 1,500, singing songs to complement the program. Zithers and guitars added atmosphere.

Sponsored by the Oklahoma and Texas area Chinese Student Associations and the International Office here, the evening featured performers from UTA, North Texas State University, UT Austin, the University of Oklahoma, University of Houston, and Southern Methodist University.

Slave Auction

And this was the year they sold slaves on the UTA campus. It wasn't a trip back to the Roman days, but Phi Mu sorority's slave sale on Halloween in the University Center to raise money for Project Hope.

The 17 girls who pledged the sorority in the fall were auctioned off to the highest bidder. Their chores — to do the drudgery of washing and cleaning and cooking for up to eight hours for the eager bachelors who bought them.

The auctioneer sold the girls by showing their baby pictures to the crowd. The pictures had been on display for a few days in the display case in the U.C. The girls raised over $200 for the charity, one girl going for as high as $30.

Although some rather high prices were paid, the ''masters'' did not really treat their slaves badly. There were no chains or whips or strict commands.

President's Kidnap

An organized gang staged a daring kidnapping of the presidents of all UTA fraternities last November. The ransom - at least 50 cans of food, by midnight — or else. The motive — to give the goods to charities such as the Arlington Battered Women's Home and the Arlington Senior Citizens' Home for Thanksgiving.

Ransom notes were delivered to the fraternities early on a Monday evening. The words of the notes had been cut from newspapers and magazines. The notes gave the ransom demands, the terms of release, and information about where the presidents could be rescued.

In fact, the presidents had been contacted earlier to insure their cooperation; and if they weren't on hand at the fated hour, a substitute hostage was delegated to take their place.

Squads of girls bent on mayhem fanned out from their hangout — the Phi Mu house on Greek row - to snatch their victims, take them back, and torture them with chocolate chip cookies, chips and dips, drinks and the Cowboy game playing on two color TV sets. They were only allowed one phone call each.

As the members of the fraternities arrived with the goods to buy their leaders' release, some of them elected to stay in captivity as well.

Although only 50 canned goods were required to buy a president's freedom, a keen competition began to determine who could bring in the most.

Winners were Sigma Phi Epsilon, with 472 cans, Delta Chi, with 438 cans, and Phi Gamma Delta (Fijis), with over 200 cans.

The caper was over soon enough, the well-treated hostages were freed, and the haul for local charities was locked away for later delivery. A strange enough situation for kidnapping; and nobody even called the police.

University Center

Between classes, students retreated to E. H. Hereford University Center. Food, recreation and relaxation were some of the center's main attractions.

Students grabbed a quick bite at the Sandwich Shop, lingered over nutritious meals at the Table Top and Caprock cafeterias and satisfied their sweet tooth at the center's Sweet Stop.

A six-foot television screen entertained students in the View Room. Also popular were the headsets for listening to tapes and records in the Echo.

Students were able to reserve space within the center for organizational promotions. The Student Activities Board sponsored a plant sale and an art sale.

In the basement, students bowled, played billiards and even saved the galaxy from beasties via an assortment of video games.

But the Dry Gulch with its live bands and weekend disco remained the center's most exciting spot.

Besides housing Student Congress and Student Activities Board offices, the center includes a post office, a general store and large comfortable lounging areas.

They call it the University Center, and some consider it the hub of the campus. Then again, some consider it a place to play pool, or study, or eat, or crash. It's hard to sleep, though, down in the Dry Gulch when director Bill Snodgrass and the UTA Jazz Band crank loose. Pinball machines, those flashing blinkos, will take your quarters, too, when they're up, which surprisingly, is most of the time considering their heavy use.

Black Emphasis Day

Black Emphasis Day, part of a trio of days commemorating minorities (including Mexican-American Day and Native American Day), got under way Tuesday, November 13, 1979.

Dr. Emery Davis, a professor at Austin College and renowned black sociologist, spoke to UTA students on the subject, "When History Catches Up." A dance group from Dallas, the "Performing Company of the Mary Lois School of Dance," performed.

On the sixth floor of the library there was a dedication of the Minority Culture Collection, which contained literature and art work of blacks, Mexican-Americans and American Indians.

Dance fever struck the University Center February 1 and 2 as a dance marathon kicked off Black History Month. The marathon, held in the Rio Grande Ballroom, was to benefit Sickle Cell Anemia.

The 24-hour dance started at 8 p.m. and continued till 8 the next evening. Proceeds from door admission and pledges totalled $600. Fourteen couples began the dance and six finished. Seventeen other universities besides UTA were invited, and a couple from Texas Christian University won the competition. Beth Robinson and John Hines received a trophy and a free dinner for their efforts.

Student Elections

It was one-armed bandit time again — not for slot machines, but for poll machines. It also was a time for gambling on candidates for student offices.

A seven-vote victory in the freshman class president election led to a dispute filed by the runner-up. The victory was upheld by a four-person election committee.

Chip Purcell's 156 votes put him in the president's seat; Mike Sauerhage polled 149. Bob King drew 179 votes to claim the vice-president post. Less than 10 percent of the Less than 10 percent of the student body went to the polls on the University Center second floor to choose their representatives.

Business majors chose Rusty Arnett, Michelle Cantu, Doug Chandler, Todd Feasell and Stacy Lyons as their representatives.

Engineering representatives were Cissy Elko, Mike Miller and Khleber VanZandt.

Terry Bridges and Vicki Fields won science representatives posts while Josie Francini won architecture representative.

Because of a tie in the nursing election, Debbie Claytor took the first six months of the term and Karen Patchen the second six months.

Liberal arts majors chose Terry Crumpton, Ed Gray, Rosanna Sandlin and Patti Valentine.

The race for Homecoming queen was narrowed to Vicki Clements, Mindy Kunze and Kristi Watson, with Vicki Clements announced the victor at the Homecoming game.

Campus galleries entertained visitors with the works of students, faculty and visiting artists.

Art is an important part of the entertainment and culture at UTA and the campus has a number of galleries and exhibits. Sometimes the exhibits are creative and unconventional.

The gallery in University Center opened in September 1978. According to Mari Ann Barta, program adviser for the SAB Arts Council, the general philosophy was to present a variety of exhibitions which would attract a wide assortment of students and visitors. Since its opening, the student exhibitions and photography shows have been very popular. Exhibitions come from on-campus students selected by the Arts Council.

The University Art Gallery in the Fine Arts Building presents a variety of touring exhibitions. Such exhibits as Asian sculpture and paintings of the Old Masters from the Blaffer Collection at the University of Houston have been shown in the Gallery.

Art Galleries

The student art gallery in the Fine Arts Building presents senior shows and architectural shows. It's sort of "building" an audience. Students reserve the gallery and present their own exhibits. Paintings, ceramics and sculpture are usually shown in this gallery.

Although the sixth floor of the Library is not an "art gallery," traveling exhibits are frequently shown there and all are open to the public. "Canadian Houses of Parliament," loaned by the Canadian Consulate in Dallas, was on campus for three weeks.

A multi-ethnic cultural exhibit also was displayed in the Library. When such exhibits are not on display, the Library's permanent collection, including works by Knoerzner and the Charles Williams Collection, are on regular exhibit.

You may not be treated to such unusual things as toothbrush trees and elephant-faucets or boney light bulbs, as was featured recently in the Student Gallery. At least you don't have to go to the Dry Gulch every time you want to see an unusual exhibition.

Paging Dr. Scholl!

Fifteen couples spent 24 hours — Friday, Dec. 7, through Saturday, Dec. 8 — dancing their feet off to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The agent responsible for arranging the event was UTA's Kappa Alpha Order. The fever was spread, authorities say, by word of mouth and posters.

Attendants did everything they could for those afflicted. Sleeping bags were brought for comfort, and doughnuts, oranges, bologna sandwiches, chicken and drinks were provided for the weary.

The marathon is perhaps a result of a new strain of a recent wide-spread epidemic, disco fever. Those who haven't been infected can recognize the symptoms as extreme tiredness, hunger, a standing position with rotating hips, heavy sweating and an overwhelming desire to "get down." There is no known cure.

Playboy Bunnies from the Dallas club offered a helping hand for publicity. A trip to the Playboy Club was one of the prizes offered the couple who raised the most money.

The 24-hour ordeal ended when the fever suddenly broke. The area was evacuated with no casualties and only one injury. A pulled tendon caused attendants some concern, but the woman pulled through and was evacuated with the others.

Sponsors' donations amounted to $2400. The couple receiving the most money, Ricky Bentley and Theresa Wigley, were given a dream date with a chauffeured limousine, a dinner at Bobby McGee's in Arlington and the trip to the Dallas Playboy Club.

Lamb's Players

One of the most unusual spectacles to hit campus last fall was the open-air staging of a medieval mystery play brought to UTA by the Lamb's Players, a touring group sponsored by the Baptist Student Union

To round up their audience, the religious theater group paraded around the campus to the music of reed flutes and tambur drums, in typical middle-ages style. Once they arrived at the impromptu stage, with multi-purpose curtain mounted at the back of the platform, they presented "The Hound of Everyman."

The play was a slightly modified version of the medieval drama of the 14th century: a lot of flash, color and market-place humor. The story centers on the mishaps of Everyman as he searches for "ultimate truth," and tries "to elude Death."

The wily Devil, who provided both ribald excitement and dramatic conflict, tries to snare Everyman; but in the end an equally crafty Angel foils the red man's attempts.

The comedy centered around the haps and mishaps of Everyman's bumbling in and out of trouble; but the message is provided when a friend shares the story he found in a book, that "man must choose between new life through a relationship with Jesus Christ, or death through Satan if he turns away."

The 45-minute play attracted a crowd of up to 200 students. After a brief stop at the campus BSU, the California-based group headed for their next stop in Houston.

The members of the Lamb's Players Street Theater perform scenes of the play, "The Hound of Everyman."

College Bowl

It was time for the fastest cerning general knowledge, hands in the west. It wasn't a shootout; it wasn't Family Feud. It was the College Bowl.

Even though that sounds like a football game, it isn't. The College Bowl is a battle of wits which challenges student teams with questions conscience, history, math, English and trivia.

Seven teams of aspiring scholars battled to represent UTA in regional competition. Delta Zeta, last year's local winner, once again claimed the victory over Phi Mu Winning team members were Joan Bothner, Melinda Manning, Mary Scanlon and Patti Valentine. The downed Phi Mu team consisted of Rebecca Parker, Donna Bice, Kim Nelson and Laura Gilbreath.

Last year the four woman DZ squad traveled to New Orleans and placed fifth in regional competition. This year's regional contest was in Fort Worth at TCU.

Thoughtful looks? It doesn't appear that way, but many students did strain to think of answers in the College Bowl competition. At Feast of Carols, the festival king tastes the victuals, a smiling receptionist gets ready to serve and guests listen to a playing minstrel.

If the fourth annual Feast of Carols was any indication of how medieval courtiers celebrated Christmas, Alka-Seltzer would also have been most welcome.

Not that the feast's food was bad. It wasn't. There was just so much of it.

The feast, presented by the music department and University Center, delighted people for three evenings with 15th century festivities. For $7.50 patrons were entertained with wassail, a cider drink, and a medieval musical quartet in the Palo Duro Lounge. They were led upstairs through a greeting line of madrigal singers (actually the Chamber Singers, directed by Gary Ebensberger) toward a buffet banquet fit for a, well, a king.

Demonstrations

Memories of the '60s echoed throughout the area as students took part in a variety of demonstrations. The demonstrations were both quieter and more localized than those of an earlier decade — but the issues were vital, nevertheless.

Protesters demonstrated for patriotism, energy alternatives, human rights, and religious beliefs.

Participating in an anti-Iran rally was one way students supported President Carter's demand for the release of the 50 Americans held captive in Tehran.

Led by senior business systems analysis major Cliff Petsch, more than 100 students marched up and down Cooper Street. Singing "God Bless America," the protesters passed out literature to motorists.

Sometimes the signs were lewd, and usually rude; but the several hundred students who marched at one time or another had one thing in common: a belief that America was worth fighting for.

In November, more than a hundred protesters, members of the Comanche Peak Life Force, were arrested for trespassing at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant site near Glen Rose.

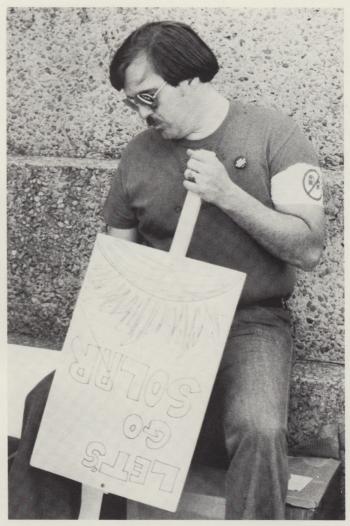

The demonstrators climbed across barbed wire fences and onto Texas Utilities Services' Inc. property. It was their understanding that life force attorneys had made previous arrangements — no arrests — for the group to demonstrate on power plant property. They understood wrong.

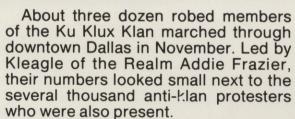

It was the group's second protest at the power plant. The first, held in June, resulted in the arrest of 48 life force members. After an enmasse trial ended in a mistrial, the defendants began the long drawn-out process of being tried separately. By December, two of these retrials had resulted in conviction and a fine of $200.

Unlike the anti-klan rally in Greensboro, N.C., where people were killed and injured, the countermarch, by the Coalition for Human Equality, was orderly and peaceful.

Both sides claimed success. The klan gained publicity and the coalition said it achieved a new sense of unity among minority groups.

A religious protester aroused curiosity from students before campus police asked him to move on.

Skin of Our Teeth

If mammoths, dinosaurs and wily satire appeal to you, you would have liked the Drama Division's fall production of "The Skin of Our Teeth." This offbeat play won Thornton Wilder his third Pulitzer Prize. He wrote it as the planet was on the brink of World War II; he seems to have been on another planet at the time.

The comedy is set in modern times, in prehistoric times, in troubled times — all at once. According to the program, "the play reflects the dichotomy of man's history exemplified during that time." It reflects the paradox of man as he simultaneously seeks to improve himself and destroy himself.

Ron Quade and Carmen Rasmussen, Mr. and Mrs. Antrobus, had a delightful romp in this comedy that includes dinosaurs, arks, fortune tellers and some rather bizarre extramarital affairs.

Kimberley Wilson portrayed Sabina, the eternal otherwoman for everyman Antrobus. Allison Hassell as Gladys, Garrick West as Henry and Kati Porter as the fortune teller added additional spice to the tale.

Past, present and future blended into an unimaginable cacophony of splash and spectacle when a sedate middle-aged couple, at left, fortune-tellers, below left, and other beauties and beasts, as below, burst into the Drama Division's raucous version of Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth."

The play is a parody of Genesis and Revelations at the same time. A big city in the midst of war and an ice age provide the background for the strange format of the play. Characters skipped scenes, stole cues and missed cues: not that they were accidents, that's what the script called for.

Jac Alder, UTA's director of theater, structured the production as a light-hearted look at the plight of man with a variety of other-worldly sets as well as some original characterizations.

South Pacific

The musical "South Pacific" bounded onto the stage of the Irons Recital Hall amid grass-skirted Navy men, colorful native girls and an invisible singing volcano.

The cast included members of the university's opera workshop, music and drama students, and even "hockey coaches," according to director and assistant professor of music, James Connor. The production featured two separate casts, each performing two nights of the week.

On a South Sea island during World War II, Nellie Forbush, played by Kate Haggerty and Susan Roth, falls in love with the wealthy, older Frenchman, Emile DeBecque. Les Hunter and Cal Brim shared the role of DeBecque. depicting the emotional struggles of a man who, in order to prove himself to Nellie, volunteers for a dangerous spy mission to a nearby island with Lt. Joseph Cable, played sympathetically and effectively by Wendell Williams.

During their adventure, Cable is killed, leaving behind his beautiful native sweetheart, Liat, played by Denise Lawlis. Mary Jack Seelye and Sara Price shared the role of Liat's indefatigable mother, Bloody Mary.

Just as Bloody Mary delights the audience with her rowdy songs and bartering tactics, Luther Billis, played by Jay Phillips, brought down the laughter with his escape and evasion technique.

Roy Harper was boldly convincing as the stern, cigarchewing unit commander; and the additional cast and chorus helped sustain the dramatic and romantic mood. "South Pacific" did more than soothe the savage breast; it made the audience want to hop the next canoe to Bali Ha'i.

Pal Joey

"Pal Joey" is a musical which deals with more serious stuff than most of the light-hearted, whimsical fare of the 30's and 40's. And producing the spectacle demands an innovative staging capable of dramatizing emotional as well as humorous themes, rather than mere musical reprise.

UTA's November production of this Lorenz Hart/Richard Rodgers classic chronicled the life and times of an ambitious nightclub entertainer who tries to set up his own club, Chez Joey, with the finances of a wealthy older woman.

Bill Barge, as Joey, and Janice Grupe, as Vera, the wealthy, widowed ex-stripper, were joined by graduate student and professional actress Jan Jamieson as Linda, the girl-next-door who loves Joey in spite of her high morals and his rather obvious lack of them.

Connie Speer, as Gladys, and Kelly Daniels, as Mike, set up a conflict-producing blackmail attempt on Joey, while Persis Womble, as the showgirl Melba, delighted the audience with some snappy steps. Greg Pugh, Steve Watson and Warren Spencer were others who gave notable performances.

Along the way the audience suspected, even hoped, that Joey was worth the reform attempts aimed at him by Linda; but he put up a pretty good front as a womanizer and troublemaker, and sometimes it was hard to tell.

Songs such as "Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered," "I Could Write a Book" and "The Lady Is a Tramp" were performed in a pageant of sequined dresses and glittering suits which were, literally, breathtaking.

Drama Department adjunct, Persis Forster, directed the 35-member cast.

Cooking accommodations may not always be the best, but between panty raids, slumber parties and spending time with friends, dorms do have their moments.

Dorms

Dear Mom,

This is my first letter since I settled into the dorm. I wanted to let you know what life is like in a cracker box. It's a nice cracker box, but I think my roommate is Jacques Cousteau the way she stays in the bathroom.

In my room there are twin beds, something I think is supposed to be a refrigerator, and a small closet. (Why are there shelves behind the place you hang your clothes? Ours is not to reason why.) I have a little desk where I do my homework, a telephone where I take serious calls, and a window to watch the panty raids.

There were three panty raids in the fall semester at Lipscomb dorm, but I don't think most girls minded. They just wrote their phone numbers on some underwear and tossed them to the waiting raiders. Some guys crawled in a window one night to say goodnight, but they ended up saying goodbye much quicker.

Besides the usual things—leaning trash cans of water against doors, water fights, fireworks, and painting a wall with hot-pink grafitti— there are serious activities, such as athletic competitions between the floors. Volleyball, basketball, racquetball, ping pong, backgammon and foosball tournaments are always keeping us busy. Our activity fee pays for the equipment. Toga parties, dances, movies, dinners and speakers are also offered.

On September 6 there was a Dorm Day held in Doug Russell park. We played new and traditional games, softball, horseshoes, volleyball. Hot dinner and cold beer kept us going through the competitions. And the beer kept some of us going even longer. But that's another story.

There are four dorms -Brazos Hall, Paschl, Lipscomb and Trinity. Brazos is co-ed while Lipscomb only houses women, and Paschl and Trinity house the men. Between us, we manage to make the campus an exciting place. What with people walking around on ledges and, well, it seems someone was rooming with an armadillo. Don't ask me how he managed to pay the rent, because I still haven't figured out how an armadillo can enroll in college.

Well, that's life in the dorm. I'll tell you more in the next letter, if I survive.

Love,

You know who

P.S. If you could spare a few dollars I sure could use them for the next raid — I mean a can of Raid.

Students build their experiences in dorm life by participating in pyramid-sitting. Then they came tumbling down.

Chinese Acrobats

"Beautiful," "colorful" and "amazing" all fall short of describing the Chinese Acrobats and Magicians of Taiwan, the first event of SAB's Curtain Call 2 series.

The performance was one of wonderment as the acrobats performed many stunts not familiar to an American audience. Acts of strength and endurance, demonstrations of kung fu, dances, tumbling, juggling and magic performances were also presented. Chinese music played by an accompanying band provided an added touch.

On tour for the third time in North America, the acrobats made 100 stops in the U.S., Mexico and Canada.

On concert tour promoting their new album, "Part of the Game," Pablo Cruise found a spark that ignited enthusiasm in a reserved audience.

Performing as the second event of the Curtain Call 2 series, the group intermingled several of their hits — "Whatcha Gonna Do," "Worlds Away," "Love Will Find a Way" — with songs from the new album. The audience was calm during the first half of the concert — then lead guitarist Dave Jenkins lit into "Atlanta June."

By concert's end, people were at the front of the Texas Hall stage rhythmically swaying and clapping.

Jack Anderson

"Next year is the year of the 'hoya,' and it's started a year early!" At least, that's how columnist Jack Anderson characterized the 1980 presidential election, after explaining the Indian word for manure.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist spoke to an audience of 683 persons November 3 as part of the Curtain Call series sponsored by the Student Activities Board.

Anderson spoke on "The News Behind the Headlines," including such ear-grabbing subjects as the 1980 presidential elections, the presidential candidates, Jimmy Carter's administration, Watergate and Richard Nixon, oil companies, the situation in Iran, Vietnam, Korea, the Cuban missile crisis and U.S. war readiness.

"Jimmy Carter's smile is wilted a little bit. There are those who think his electric underwear has shorted out," Anderson said. "I think the people basically like him. They want him to succeed. His success is our success."

Anderson suggested the polls indicate that Ted Kennedy will be nominated as the Democratic candidate. "But the country is in a conservative mood and Ted Kennedy is the liberal. He has a tendency to play poker with the taxpayers' money, and he never calls. He always raises."

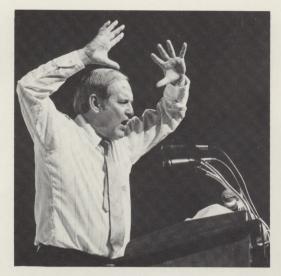

Anderson suggested that the man to watch on the Republican side is Howard Baker. "He's a moderate. The majority of Americans are moderates."

Of the Iranian crisis, Anderson said of the Shah, "He was our boy! We planted him there!" Anderson said it was a bad move for Carter to allow him into the country, and that his entrance was arranged by Henry Kissinger and the Rockefellers.

Answering a question on the harshness of recent Supreme Court decisions against press freedom, Anderson said, "It is our freedom that they seek to suppress — because we speak for the people."

Stephen DeGroote

Pianist Steven DeGroote's January 31 concert in Texas Hall attracted a varied audience of classical music fans for a program which included Mozart, Chopin, Brahms, Liszt and Prokofiev.

The 27 year-old South African performer used a rare 97-key Boesendorfer grand piano; and though there was still tuning going on at intermission, the audience responded to DeGroote's artistry, calling him back for two encores.

As winner of the 1978 Van Cliburn competition in Fort Worth, DeGroote had just recently completed his two-year world concert tour before coming to Arlington. Many pieces in the Curtain Call II performance were works which DeGroote had developed during that time.

At the post-concert reception in University Center the pianist met with local fans and discussed his music and his plans, which included an upcoming performance in Dallas.

For the past few years a cultural phenomenon has captured the imagination of the American people. It could be called Rootsology. And the instigator of this popular study appeared Valentine's Day in Texas Hall before over 500 people.

Alex Haley came to UTA as part of the SAB Curtain Call 2 to discuss his Pulitzer Prize-winning book, "Roots," and his various projects since the success of the television movie.

Explaining his choice of a writing career, Haley said, "I accidentally slid into it." Besides the familiar story of his boyhood, when he heard stories about the now-famous Kunta Kinte, Haley spoke about his years in the Coast Guard and a promising (if humorous) start as an author.

While at sea, Haley wrote letters to just about everyone he knew. Some of his shipmates noticed this and asked Haley to write letters to their girlfriends. Haley turned his abilities into a business. He took notes, and even kept a card file on the unfamiliar ladies. Little did he know what that early experience would lead to.

Before the rush of autographseekers buried him in a flurry of anxious hands and autograph books, Haley spoke on the importance of our heritage and the importance of revering our elders.

Despite a Ku Klux Klan demonstration outside Texas Hall, Haley's distinguished oratory impressed and delighted his audience, overcoming all thought of narrow-minded demonstrators in an atmosphere of calm and self-respect.

The fourth annual Sigma Phi Epsilon Water Carnival started with a splash, Thursday, February 7, with the bathtub-sitting contest. Fifteen competitors from UTA sororities and fraternities sat in half-filled tubs to raise money for the American Heart Association.

Sponsors donated money either in lump sums or by the hour for each tub-sitter. Competitors were also out to break the 26-hour world record established here last year.

Arlington councilman Leo Berman also took a turn in the wet-seat, helping the Sig Eps to promote the event. Channel 8's "PM Magazine" dropped in for the closing minutes, on Friday, as the fifteen water-logged record-breakers emerged exhausted, but clean, from the tubs.

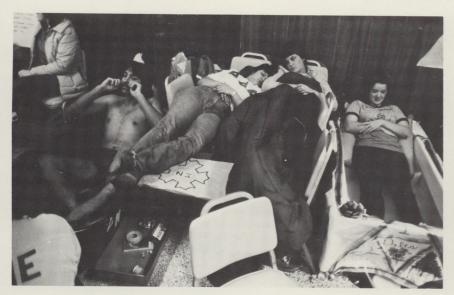

The Water Carnival was divided into two contests — the sports events and the fund-raising events. The sports were held at the indoor pool. They included a concrete boot race; a doughnut race, with contestants swimming across the pool with a doughnut in their mouth; water polo; a beauty-and-the-beast contest; a balloon relay; chicken fights; an inner tube race, and others.

Bunnies from the Dallas Playboy Club helped out with the judging, and Durwood Rowell, from "PM Magazine," took part in the inner tube race.

The co-ed teams competed for trophies to be awarded on the basis of overall points. Delta Delta Delta took first place, Phi Mu was second, and Alpha Phi came in third. More than 300 people came out on the icy night to participate and hear the results.

The prize for the group raising the most money (a $1200 stereo) went to Phi Mu. Phi Mu raised $800, the Fiji's raised $545 for second place, and Alpha Chi Omega raised $487 to take third. Nearly $3500 was collected for the Heart Association during the Water Carnival.

R.U.R.

With one foot in the past and the other in the future, as it were, UTA Theater offered one of the most striking plays of the season with an adaptation of the 1923 spectacle, R.U.R. Set in a world manned largely by robots, the melodrama contrasts the ruthless demands of the men of the future with the equally ruthless capacities of their creations.

The play, which first introduced the term "robot" to the American public, featured Greg Arth as Harry Domain, head robot-builder and Jennifer Kivikko, as the missionary, Helena Glory, sent to save the robots' souls. Tim Morton and David Budd were supporting humans, and Ron Quade and Carla Jordan were robots who decided to form their own society to conquer their inferior creators, and to rule the world.

Assistant Professor Jac Alder directed the unusual production. Sets were designed by Marc Dunkelberg. Joe Kongevick's lighting design highlighted the low-key background and added to the science-fiction effect. Costumes were designed by Karen Pierce.

Ms. Black UTA Pageant

Beautiful women and a variety of talent made the Miss Black UTA pageant a memorable evening. Contestants wore stunning gowns.

The crowning of Carleen Mayo brought her mother, Billie Mayo, up on stage for congratulations. Vanessa Robinson was first runner-up and Marilyn Mause was second runner-up.

Mayo and Robinson received scholarships and all three of the top winners received trophies. Certificates and flowers were presented to all contestants for participation.

Intramural Follies

The second annual Intramural Follies took place Thursday, Feb. 28, in the A-1 Classy Theater of the Activities Building. Talented students from all over campus came to participate and watch their friends.

As parents cheered and snapped pictures of their young stars-for-a-night, the parade of acts crossed the theater stage for two hours. Soloists and classical guitarists, rock and roll bands, country-western dance groups and clowns each took their turn in the spotlight.

Randy Miller and Arvie Sidhu emceed the talent show, assisted by a wandering clown, Fran Sewell, who filled in between acts as equipment was moved, transferred and tuned-up. In all, nine groups performed songs and instrumentals.

The Follies, first organized in 1979 by Ms. Sewell, who had worked in the intramural department, started out with just a few participants and spectators last year, but grew larger this year. Sewell was already looking forward to next year's show, she said.

Though there was no shortage of hams, the workers were kept busy.

"I was pulling the curtains and working the lights," Sewell said. She also doubled as a clown and lured children up on stage with the promise of attention.

Maybe Fanny Brice didn't start this way, but look out Ziegfield, the Intramural Follies are here to stay!

Fashions Etc.

SAB Fashions, Etc. council brings a touch of class to campus four or five times a semester, displaying clothes and accessories from stores such as Shirl's, Shepler's, Lester Melnick, Fashion Conspiracy, Casual Corner, Webster's and J. Riggings.

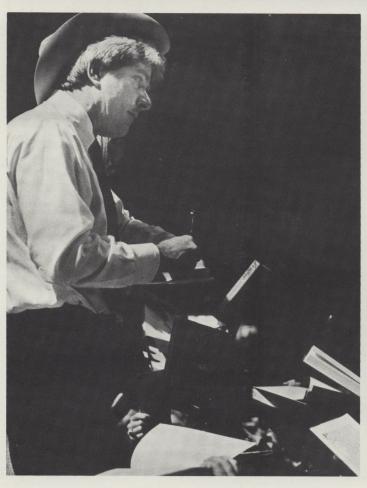

The council sold carnations in the University Center on Valentine's Day in cooperation with the Traditions Council. The event raised $400.

One of the largest SAB councils, the group has toured the Dallas Apparel Mart, held fashion and beauty workshops, and hosted several speakers. They also assist with the Cinderella Ball.

Donahue & Rose

Due to an over-capacity crowd, Charlie Rose, popular talk show host for Channel 5 in Ft. Worth, moved his show to Texas Hall. Rose's guest, Phil Donahue, popular Midwest talk show host, promoted his new book, signed autographs and even donned a cowboy hat and boots.

Don Williams

It was a foot-stompin', handclapping crowd of people who gathered in Texas Hall to hear the gentle rhythms of singer Don Williams.

Williams, the 1978 male country vocalist of the year, charmed his audience with songs about love and the pain thereof. "Love Me Tonight," "Love Me Over Again" and "Say It Again" were just some of the songs bringing nods of recognition to both old and young.

When the audience begged for "Amanda", Williams, dressed in jeans and a denim jacket, smiled.

"I can't sing that one yet," he said in his deep drawl. "You'd all go home."

But no one was ready to go home, not even at the end of the show. Williams stepped forward to wish his fans good luck.

"I think we're coming up on real hard times," he said. "And I just hope it doesn't hurt any of you too badly.'

The audience gave the balladeer a standing ovation, hoping to pull him back for one more tune. He stood at the edge of the stage, a look of amazement spread across his face. And as he called his band back for that one more song, he grinned a special "Don Williams" grin. Ray Wylie Hubbard, who Ray Wylie Hubbard, who opened the show for Williams, had to work a little harder for his applause. A local boy, "Hubbard's greatest claim to fame is writing the progressive country song, "Up Against the Wall,

Redneck Mother."

Dressed in black leathers and tight blue jeans, Hubbard presented a somewhat contrasting scene from Williams. But he soon claimed his audience with humble down-home talk about watching television and changing diapers.

Clockwise from above: The net can be a place of the "dink," or finesse play, but it also has room for the arm whip ending in the blast of the ball on the floor for the point. The offensive player is needed to score the points, but it takes good defensive play, like net blocking, to get ball possession to score.

Intramural Volleyball

Volleyball is the combination of power and grace, the resounding wallop of a spike and the small tap from a player who seems to hang in the air for minutes.

Intramurals offered volleyball this year, partly because it is a game that equalizes. The tall powerful player is needed for the front court, but they are useless without the finesse of the setters and the lightning quick moves in the backcourt.

It is a game that can have team work setting up plays and still have individual standouts who ram the ball down an opponents' throat for a moment of personal glory.

Volleyball is a mixture of all the things an intramural game needs. It is a sport for everyone.

Broomball

Broomball is a game sort of like hockey, except there is no puck, no real sticks, no skates, no pads and generally very little grace.

For three eight minute periods, with two minutes between to rub sore spots, teams battle over a soccer ball substituted for the puck with brooms. The objective is then just like ice hockey's, to get the ball into the opponent's net.

Phi Delta Theta managed to Phi Delta Theta managed to stand up long enough and often enough to win the Thursday night league and Galf Xi's did the same to be crowned champions of the Tuesday night league.

Frisbee golf, a budding sport, had participants running around, chasing after flying disks. A favorite summertime activity, the game was also a popular Greek Week event.

Whether in competition, in the bushes, or on the mall at lunchtime, frisbee chunkers could be seen around the campus, most any time, having a fling.

Intramural Frisbee Golf

Intramural Football

The Trojans overcame the perennially powerful Delts 14-12 this fall in intramural football. But the Delts didn't give up their crown easily as it took the Trojans an overtime and a lot of luck to win.

It was extra points that spelled doom for the Trojans. The regular period ended with the two teams tied at six. But the Trojans wouldn't have gotten into the overtime if not for a last minute desperation drive that ended with Randy Thorpe hauling in a six-yard pass from Scott Chambliss for a score.

In intramurals overtime rules each team is given four tries to score from 10 yards out. Gary Walker caught a 10-yarder on the final down and Thorpe hit for two final points to give the Trojans a 14-6 edge.

Festival

The spring intramural festival was a "different" approach to college sports. Sponsored in part by Coors Beer, the UTA event was one of eleven in the Western U.S.

There were no "winners" or "champions", but teams from thirty-four universities competed in volley-ball, inner-tube water polo and soft-ball, plus other "original" sports events.

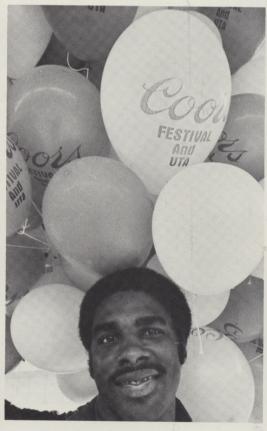

Held in the Activities Building, the event was to create closer relations between universities and other citizens and businesses.

UTA'ers had no trouble getting into the swing of things.

Clockwise from top: Eager students await the signal to start. Student keeps his head among the clouds with balloons advertising the heady sponsor. You paint my face, I'll paint yours. Participants flip a canopy during the festival.

Battle of the Sexes

It was the fair sex against the Nair sex in the second annual Delta Zeta Battle of the Sexes March 14 in the Activities Building as fraternities and sororities squared off to prove which was better.

The one and a half hour war included a trilimp walk-a-thon (a three-legged race), a spoon-and-string race, egg race, dart game, relay dressing (with clothes), a balloon race, a relay on crutches with a grapefruit between the legs, rolling a penny on the floor with the nose and a volkswagen-stuffing contest.

The last event, the car-stuffing contest, was the deciding factor, allowing the fraternities to surpass the sororities in points.

Every participating fraternity received a trophy for their mighty efforts. Sigma Phi Epsilon donated the most money to the DZ philanthropy, Gallaudet College for the Deaf. Zeta Tau Alpha had the most participation.

DU Spring Festival

The Delta Upsilon Spring Festival capped Greek Week at the Intramurals field, opening with a duck running in with the traditional torch to the theme song from "Rocky." Relays included a three-legged race, a

Men also had their share of fun when the Miss Spring Festival Beauty Contest got underway with six lovely ladies in bathing suits to choose from.

The second annual Beaux Arts Ball sprang to life April 12 in the Hall of State in Fair Park, Dallas.

The event, sponsored by the Architecture Constituency Council, has its roots in the late 1800's in France. The Beaux Arts Festival was originally a celebration of exhibitions, in which artists showcased their work. The celebration carried over into the 1900's into Architecture.

Regents

It had been seven years since the UT System Board of Regents officially met at the Arlington campus. Several UTA related items were approved. The board voted for a 10-foot underground easement to the Texas Electric Service Co. for new service to the Pisces Apartments and for an inscribed plaque to be placed on the new Nursing Building.

Also approved was a proposal to convert the undergraduate social work option to a bachelor of arts degree in anthropology.

As President Wendell Nedderman pointed out UTA's growth, he called attention to the University's depleted construction money.

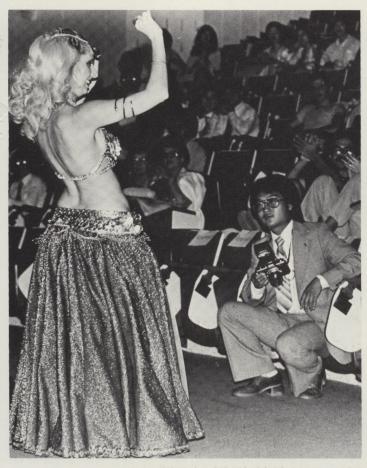

Regents agreed that Permanent University Funds would indeed give the institution a broader base of support, but added there were other priorities of equal importance such as increasing faculty and staff salaries.

International Day

The third annual International Day gave 1,523 UTA students representing 76 countries a chance to exhibit their native cultures.

Exhibits in the activities building were judged. Korea took first place in the judging. Pakistan and Ghana second and third. Ballots were sold for a quarter, the money benefitting the International Student Scholarship Fund. Tickets sold at an international talent show also benefitted the fund.

The talent show, held in the A-1 Classy Theater, presented a Pakistani singer, a 36-member Chinese chorus, Latin American singers, Korean singers, a Chinese Instrumentalist and a Greek singer. Other talent included an Indian singer, a Lebanese derbakeh player, a kung fu exhibition, a Syrian singer and a belly dancer.

The second annual Spring Photo Show, sponsored by Stu-dent Publications and the SAB Arts Council, brought entries from dozens of talented campus photographers.

Photos were judged in three categories, Art, Commercial and Photo-journalism, by local professionals.

'Best of Show' was also selected. All winners and other top entries were exhibited in the University Center Gallery during the month of March.

Students were hitting each other with confetti eggs, taking contracts out on people and breaking cars. No, it wasn't a campus revolt. It was the UTA 13th Birthday Bash All Nite Fair held Friday, April 18 from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m. in the University Center. Sponsored by the student Activities Board and the University Center, the fair presented booths of various organizations trying to raise money. Music included concerts by bands Bad Companions and Grand Theft in the Dry Gulch, Cherry Pie and Lighting in the Table Top, and a swinging Ballroom.

Roller Disco in the Rio Grande The bowling and games area offered Blue Pin Bowling, pool golf (sink a ball in all six pockets of a snooker table in the fewest number of shots) and pool croquet. Moonlight bowling entertained a few weary souls after the witching hour. There was also a Space Invaders Contest in the Dry Gulch.

On the mall, students could vent their frustrations on a wrecked car with a sledge hammer, bounce on a trampoline or ride a mechanical bucking bronc. Other activities included a dunking booth, sponge throw, egg toss and balloon shaving. Gymnasts also performed for on-lookers.

A11 Nite Fair

Booths in the Rim Rock, run by student organizations, included self portraits, a rock and fossil sale, pistol shooting gallery, reaction time game, pegboard game, caricature artist, marriage / divorce booth, confetti eggs, gangster "hits" with water guns, and obie dolls.

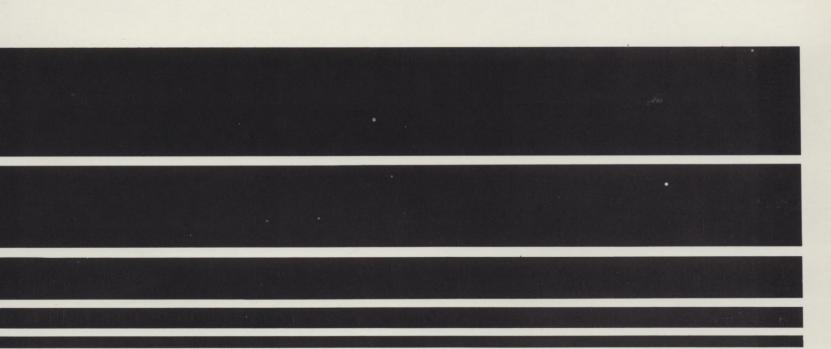

Angry students could also take revenge on friends by having them thrown in "jail" for a quarter. A popular booth run by Young Democrats consisted of two pictures of Ronald Reagan and George Bush — and darts to throw at them.

The Caprock was transformed into an intimate nightclub, serving wine and cheese along with live classical music. Large screen video games, a massage booth, a kissing booth and a beer walk also attracted customers. A casino was run in the Concho Room, manned by lovely ladies and serious card dealers.

Academics

The College of Liberal Arts is like a tapestry in which different departments — each one unique — intertwine. This year provided a particularly good opportunity for observing the impressive patterns that emerge.

In the Communications Department, a nationally-travelled debate team probed the issue of regulated media. The team had an impressive record, winning 60 percent of the 25 tournaments it entered. Student thespians produced top-rate entertainment such as "Skin of Our Teeth" and "Pal Joey."

Students enrolled in physical education were encouraged to investigate the entire scope of the department's activities. Weight control, self-defense, jogging and racquetball were among the most popular courses offered.

Professor Anne Simmons of the Physical Education Department led Rhythms Day. Participating were UTA students who taught square dancing to elementary school children.

Art students carried exploration a step further, experimenting with colors, textures and lines. The Art Department offered students a number of opportunities to display their work; it also sponsored exhibitions of well-known artists.

"Nathan Oliveira: A Survey of Monotypes, 1973-78" was the University Gallery's major exhibition of the fall semester. A student art show in November featured 35 works judged best in the show.

When Judd Scott, assistant chairman of the art department, said innovation was the key to art education, he could have been speaking for the entire college.

Foreign language professors used audio-visual equipment to imbue language study with realism. A class in Hispanic drama was another way of making learning fun.

Dr. Ronald Werth, chairman of the Foreign Language Department, said one of the department's goals was creating "attractive programs that would be of use to the non-language major." His enthusiasm was typical of those involved in liberal arts.

"I just wish my undergraduate study had been like this," said Dr. Thomas King, chairman of the Philosophy Department, pointing out the merits of a faculty that "knows its stuff."

In the research field, the English Department continued its work in textual criticism, working to establish a critical text of the works of Harold Frederic, the 19th century American writer.

The department also published the periodicals "World Literature Written in English," "Allegorica" and "American Literary Realism."

In the History Department, the annual Webb Memorial Lectures focused on culture and society in modern Germany.

Some degree plans called for community involvement. Under the direction of placement specialist Desiree Inget, sociology students participated in field work. Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Arlington and Planned Parenthood in Fort Worth were two of the 30 agencies the students worked with.

The Political Science Department has also developed a co-op program training paralegals, now in its second year. The department added international law and labor law as specialization fields.

Music students practiced their skills while entertaining the public with evening choir ensembles, jazz band concerts and musicals. The UTA/Arlington Communiversity Orchestra, made up of college students, faculty and local musicians, more than doubled in size.

The Military Science Department offered students the opportunity to participate in on-campus Army ROTC. All courses earned college credit and led toward a commission as 2nd lieutenant.

On Veteran's Day students from the Military Science Department worked a booth at the Arlington Veterans Day Celebration.

Students interested in studying religion could earn up to nine hours credit in the Religion Department.

College of Engineering

During the past year, the College of Engineering monitored a number of programs aimed at preparing UTA engineering students for the 80's.

The Construction Research Center conducted research and taught short courses relevant to the construction industry.

The college also continued to research solar energy. Plans were made to study the effects solar homes may have on utility companies.

The college's Energy Systems Research Center has gained such world prominence that research funds have been supplied by groups as far away as the Taiwan Power Company.

Another unique program within the college was the biomedical engineering program. Students and faculty working in this area of study were engaged in designing apparatus to help the handicapped perform essential job functions.

The computer science and engineering program prepared students for their role as registered professional engineers. Upon graduation, these students were versed in both the hardware and software of computers.

Students and professors received recognition for excellence on several occasions. Vittorio Argento, civil engineering professor, was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to the Texas Air Control Board.

The college's student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers upheld its ranking as the best in the state. In cooperation with the Arlington Boy's Club, members of the ASCE assisted with preparations on the site for a proposed Boy's Club gymnasium.

Study methods take on different modes as students examine subjects ranging from highway planning to water quality. Both theoretical and applied systems are tested.

College of Science

At one time only the scientifically astute approached chemistry or math with enthusiasm. But that story has changed. Today, students develop photographs, study the stars and explore wine-making, all with expertise provided through the College of Science.

It's not so strange that this college has met the non-majors' needs so effectively: today's lifestyles demand it.

"Computer science is making mathematics go everywhere," says Dr. Vangipur Lakshmikantham, chairman of the mathematics department.

In the chemistry department, students were offered an active lecture series as well as weekly departmental seminars. In one lecture, Nobel Prize-winner Illya Prigogine explained his theory of dissipative structures.

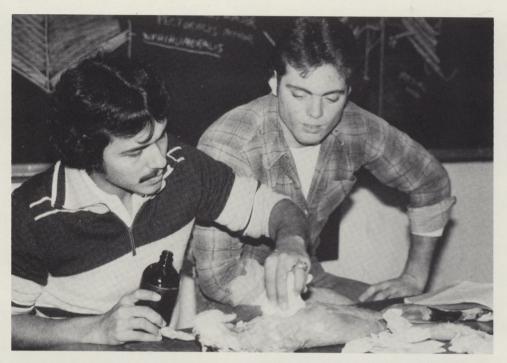

Department instrumentation was improved with the purchase of a computerized gas chromatograph-mas spectrometer used in research and teaching.

Dr. Robert McMahon returned to the biology department after a year in Ireland on a Fulbright Fellowship. Professors were enthusiastic about the renovation and expansion of research and teaching labs.

Research was also an important facet of psychology. Students studied personality theory and the effects of crowding on man. Dr. Dana Mathews studied the effects of prenatal alcohol exposure on the physhological development of rat pups.

The physics department was equally involved in research. Dr. Ronald Schachar, a practicing ophthalmologist and adjunct professor researched the causes of cataracts.

Always probing the earth for secrets of the past, geology stu-dents took off on a field trip to Oklahoma. On their way to class, these students could study a striking mineral display, donated as a memorial by the Reece Holden family.

Dr. Bruce Sellwood, a visiting professor from England, summed up his colleagues' feelings about the geological foundations. "Without land surface," he said, "there wouldn't be any place to put the university on!"

Biology and chemistry labs were of special interest to visiting high school students.

College of Business Administration

If business education can be linked with urban growth, UTA's business school, ranked among the top five in the Southwest, is a natural place for it to happen.

With an enrollment of more than 6,000 students, the College of Business Administration is one of the 10th largest colleges of business in the nation.

But size is only half of the picture. The college's academic program is also outstanding. Students pursued degrees in accounting, economics, finance and real estate, management, marketing, and systems analysis.

Practical experience is encouraged in a number of ways. The Small Business Institute arranged for students to assist small businesses with their problems. Other students elected to combine school with a business-oriented job. Not surprisingly, job opportunities for these graduates were plentiful.

"It's the market forces that are speaking in our high enrollment," says Acting Dean Walter Mullendore. He quickly adds that the students, themselves have a strong reputation, too.

Many students become acquainted with area businessmen on Business Day. This event, held annually in November, features a number of prominent businessmen speaking on current business practices and job possibilities for the graduate.

School of Nursing

With the scope of health care expanding in every direction, it's understandable that the nurse's role should also be in transition. During their second year on campus, the UTA School of Nursing placed emphasis on the nurse assuming a primary role in health maintenance and illness prevention.

Studies during the year were geared toward health assessment, disease screening and teaching. Students worked in local health agencies, gaining knowledge in management as well as health care.

addition, plans were made for the previously non-credit nurse practitioner program to be incorporated into the graduate school curriculum.

Male nurses provided still more change. In the past, men have usually gone into nursing while serving in the armed forces. Recent male graduates, however, seem to have been attracted to nursing right out of high school.

Faculty worked on curriculum improvements that would allow students to attend school part time and work part time. Also toward the future, UT System regents approved the plans for the construction of a $14.2-million nursing building.

Male Nursing

In the children's ward of a local hospital, a little boy refused to go to bed one night. An army of nurses couldn't convince him to sleep — until one particular nurse came into the room. Then a gentle suggestion was all that was needed.

"I asked him if he wanted to go to bed. It gave him some control," the nurse said.

What was different about this certain nurse?

The concerned individual in starched white was a male.

In recent years, males have been entering a field many people thought only suited for women. Males in nursing rose from 0.9 percent in 1962 to 1.4 percent in 1972, and one survey showed the percentage of men graduating from nursing schools jumped from 2.6 percent in 1970 to 4.5 percent in 1973.

In spring 1979, 35 males were registered in UTA's nursing program, 11 percent of the total. In spring 1980, 30 were enrolled or 13 percent.

In addition to childhood backgrounds and occupational experiences, the socio-economic background is a factor in the career decisions of male nurses.

A 1976 study at a Midwestern University for Nursing Forum magazine showed that male nurses "tend to be like their female counterparts in some respects and dissimilar in others. Like their female counterparts, the respondents tended to be from rural areas or small towns and to be from lower middle-class backgrounds."

The study also showed that "males who enter the baccalaureate nursing program are more likely to be older, to be married and have more education than female nursing students."

The same study revealed that job security and opportunity, interest in the biological sciences and a desire to work in a humanistic field were other reasons males are drawn to nursing. The humanistic appeal is strong for men who enter the medical field. They enjoy working with patients and becoming involved with them.

Because of the male image of the "father figure," male nurses can play a large part in the psychological handling of patients. As in the case of the little boy who would not go to bed, he was attached to his father.

"I don't find a male nurse has more authority. I find a male nurse takes more aggressive authority," said a married UTA nursing student.

Some wonder if male nurses have as much empathy as women in the field. Women are taught to be more empathetic because of the qualities needed to raise a family. But tests show men scoring as well as women in the same skills; and the nursing profession is still understaffed.

School of Architecture & Environmental Design

The economy coughed and sputtered, but students of architecture remained undaunted. In spite of economic fluctuations, architecture continues to move in so many directions that the future looks fairly stable.

Students in the School of Architecture and Environmental Design were offered study options in either interior design, landscaping, city and regional planning, or architecture.

Under the direction of Anthony Antoniades, director of architecture and environmental design, research was conducted in architectural theory, history and building material.

Lecture series made even more knowledge available. During one of the lectures, Canadians Aldo and Francesco Piccaluga presented their prize-winning works in design and architecture.

Associate Professor Joel Goldsteen introduced a class on U.S. census methods. It not only explained how the census works, but paid students for working as enumerators.

Dr. Kenneth Schaar, architectural historian and assistant professor, added another dimension to learning by combining lectures with the widely-publicized excavation of the rock walls of Rockwall.

Over in the Construction Research Center, one group of students researched the feasibility of using sulfur in concrete production. Though architecture students have several options, Professor Ernest Buckley said one of the school's foremost goals is to "make students aware of the professional's responsibilities and obligations to the public.'

Gradute School of Social Work

While others bid the '70s adieu, the Graduate School of Social Work readied itself for a decade of challenge.

A population shift, from fewer children to more elderly citizens, was one of the changes social workers faced, so the curriculum was revised accordingly. Two substantial grants allowed the school to place emphasis on the Mexican-American elderly.

As one of the first such projects in the nation, plans were made for courses focusing on the Spanish-speaking elderly and in-service training and workshops for various agencies.

Research projects delved into the role of parenting. Using video tapes, Drs. Richard Dangel and Richard Polster developed a training program for par-

In addition to a campus-andcommunity counseling program, the Human Resource Center provided evaluation of Department of Human Resource personnel and trained them for executive positions.

Students spent up to three days a week working with such organizations as the Plano Independent School District, Moddox Community Center in Fort Worth and Los Barrios Unidos Community Clinic in Dallas.

Dr. James Callicutt, associate dean, said he believes field work is a major part of the school's academic program. Not only are students acquiring new knowledge, he said, "they are testing things they've learned in the classroom."

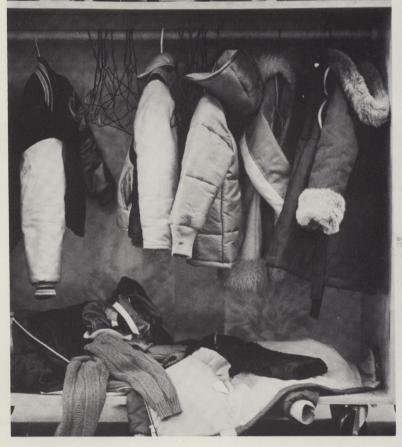

Properly done, the job of teaching is next to impossible. A teacher must be instructor, counselor, diplomat, friend and authority — all at once.

One of the ways UTA education students prepared for their multifaceted profession was by participating in SAIL — Summer Adventure in Learning. The tutorial program for exceptional kids, proved to be a learning experience for education majors and community children alike.

But turning out new teachers wasn't the only concern of the Center for Professional Teacher Education. The center continued to emphasize in-service training for local teachers through seminars. The International Year of the Child was celebrated with a symposium, "The State of the Child 1979."

The center's graduates have had outstanding success in obtaining teaching positions. It could just be because, as Dr. Charles Funkhouser, director of teacher education, said, "our students are better prepared."

If you're among those who would be more at home with the armadillo, the Institute of Urban Studies has your best interest at heart. Helping Texans deal with urbanization is what the institute is all about.

Created by an act of the Texas Legislature in 1967, the institute was originally authorized to conduct urban research, assist city governments, and grant undergraduate criminal justice degrees. Today, with the addition of graduate degrees in urban affairs and criminal justice, research and community involvement are the areas which set the IUS apart.

Throughout the year, curricula focused on energy conservation, local government finances, human and community development, information processing and intergovernmental cooperation.

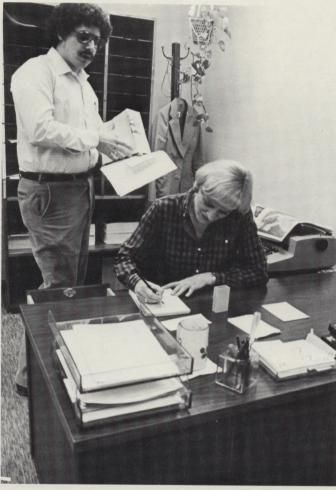

Students could practice their skills while interning with law enforcement agencies. A traffic safety program allowed the institute to work with public school officials to arrange safety programs for school children.

Speaking at a campus seminar, Vincent Barabba, U.S. census director, urged community participation in the 1980 census and discussed census-monitoring programs which will be conducted by UTA departments.

Institute of Urban Studies

After college then what? For some, the answer is more college — but this time in the somewhat more relaxed atmosphere of UTA's Continuing Education Office.

Registrants attended evening classes in more than 320 subject areas, ranging from clowning to speedwriting.

Informative seminars were also a part of the program. Participants explored the single's life, earth-covered housing and decision-making.

A course designed for senior citizens examined the possibilities of volunteer work. Students of wood blocking learned how to create their own stationery, and those attending the private pilot ground school prepared for the FAA written flight exam.

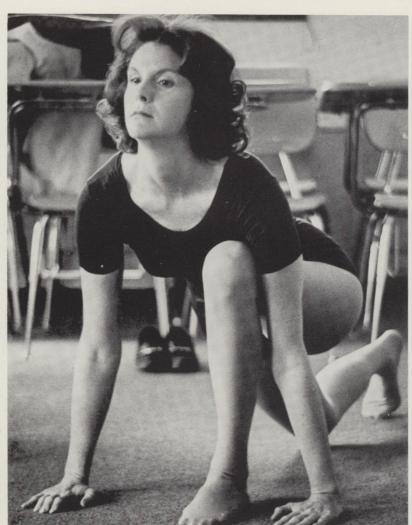

Local citizens pursue new interests through the Continuing Education office. Clowning, emergency health care and dancing were among the 320 subject areas taught during the year. Yoga, aerobics and other exercise classes were popular, as always.

The UTA 1979 football season will probably be remembered by two games. The high point and the low point of the season were reached within weeks.

The Mavs best of the season was the 21-14 win over TCU. The game was emotional for the team and the fans as the media seemed shocked at the upstart UTA slapping down a Southwest Conference member.

Quarterback Roy Dewalt was at the top of his game against the Horned Frogs toting the ball 19 times for 114 yards and two touchdowns, and hitting 4 of 7 passes for 78 yards including a 58-yarder to Scott Burt.

The low point came in the very next game, after the Mavs had a week off. McNeese came to town and everyone figured the Southland Conference title was going to be decided right then. Unluckily for UTA, the prognosticators were right.

Although the game had many turning points, the players must see one play every time they think of their championship hopes. The ball not quite making it back to punter Odes Mitchell. McNeese players pouring in. Mitchell struggling to get the ball away, only to have three Cowboys pounce on him. The ball falling to the turf, engulfed by McNeese for a touchdown.

UTA could never get past the turnover and were forced to swallow their Independence Bowl hopes, 14-13. UTA wound up with a 9-2 record, but the combination of the SLC's reputation and the fact the school doesn't carry a legion of free-spending fans kept the Mavs out of every bowl.

Still the season left reasons for pride. The other loss of the season was a typical no-bullets-left-unshot type of game that saw UTA fall behind North Texas State 19-3 in the fourth quarter only to score 11 points and get 18 yards from victory when their luck ran out. The Blue and White slipped, 19-14.

During the season UTA swept by West Texas State 10-6, Northwestern Louisiana 37-14, New Mexico State 42-14, New Mexico State 42-14, Louisiana Tech 30-16, Arkansas State 56-18, Southwestern Louisiana 24-10, Lamar 47-37 and Idaho State 48-0.

Five senior Mavs were named honorable All-American including Dewalt, guards Bill Harris and Kevin Kogucz, end Mike Matocha and linebacker Willie Thomas. The fiver were also first team all-SLC selections.

Men's Cross Country

Despite a number of setbacks during the 1979 cross country season, UTA hosted one of the best individual meets of the year, with four of five Maverick harriers setting their best times, and with Arlington tying for top honors.

During the overall season, UTA tied for first at the UTA Quadrangular and placed second in the North Texas Quadrangular, eighth in the Arlington Invitational and 11th in the Texas Invitational.

Untimely injuries, illness and an inexperienced team were among the factors which kept Mav harriers from bettering their season record. Although they had started the season with high hopes, one jinx after another managed to hold the team back.

As a result, UTA wound up fifth in the Southland Conference, for the second consecutive season, and 11th in NCAA District VI. Both finishes were just one notch from last.

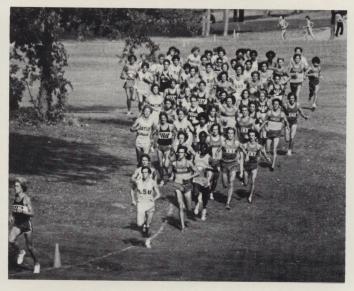

According to Coach Harold Perkins, it was the little things which did them in. Three weeks before the conference competition, Dale Flippinger sprained an ankle and collapsed from heat exhaustion.

Flippinger never completely recovered and ended up 31st in the event and sixth of the UTA runners. Most of the year he had been the Mavs number two man.

Don Taylor was top Mav in the SLC meet, as he had been in most of the season's contests. His conference time was 48 seconds better than his previous best effort in the 10,000 meter run, but Taylor alone was not enough to overcome the other problems.

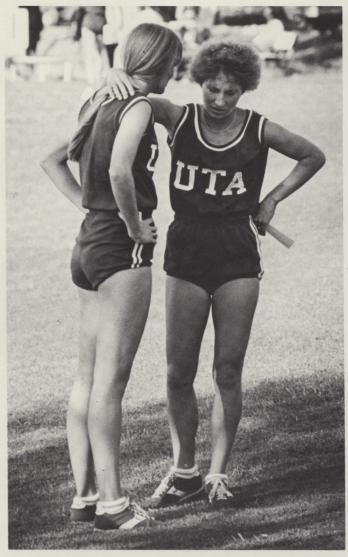

But bad luck comes in cycles, Perkins insists. With a little battery charging and a little luck, the Mavs expect to come back next season and show what they had in mind all along. "We may be a little down now," said Taylor, "but we're not out."

Preparation, endurance and stamina are all important parts of the distance runner's regimen. And success demands good direction and team spirit, but in the end it's a very personal matter.

Women's Cross Country

The women's cross country program at UTA is only a youngster. The 1979 season was really the first time anyone could say it was a team because it took that long to gather enough people — five. But like any child, with time and maturity it becomes better and more responsible.

Sharon Nelson, Melody Dennis, Kathy Schmidt, Mary Kurtnick and Susan Freeland composed the Maverick team this year. Nelson continued her team leadership repeatedly finishing at the team's head in each race. "She is looking the best she has in three years," coach Harold Perkins said during the season.

The team didn't place well in any of the meets during the year, as some of the runners were first year team members. But Perkins saw hope in the finishes. "We're getting better all the time," he said.

Volleyball

The women's volleyball team had their typical year: a trip to the nationals competition and the eighth spot in the final national rankings. But this year it was a lot harder than before.

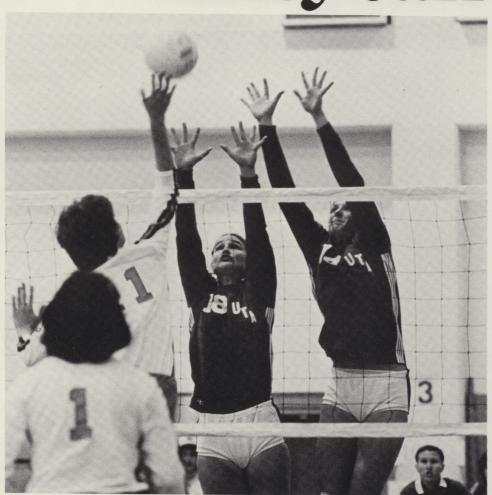

Most seasons the Lady Mavs are the consensus cream of the crop in Texas; but the sport has been growing here and in 1979 they had to face strong challenges from Houston and Lamar.

But the Blue and White began a strong charge in the state tournament by beating UT-Austin twice to nail down the third ranking in regionals.

Regionals were home matches for UTA, and the Lady Mavs took advantage of the fans' voices. Psyched up by crowds and some previous tough matches, UTA took it to Lamar, a team ranked above them for the meet.

"We wanted to beat Lamar and wanted them to know we had beaten them," coach Mary Ridgway said after the match.

She had predicted before the meet that the match would be decisive.

Two defeats of Lamar and another upset over Houston handed UTA something people months ago would never have believed they could win: a spot in the nationals.

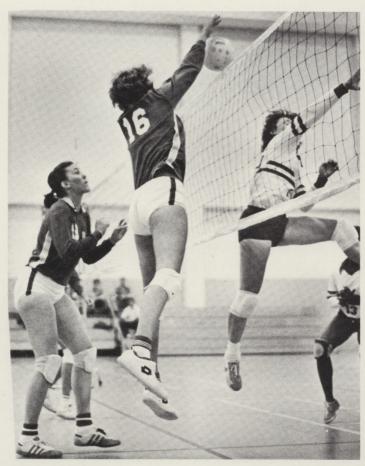

At nationals the team drew the top seed in the nation, Utah State, for the first match. It was a tough road all the way for the Lady Mavs, but they continued to improve their national image by finishing in the eighth spot.

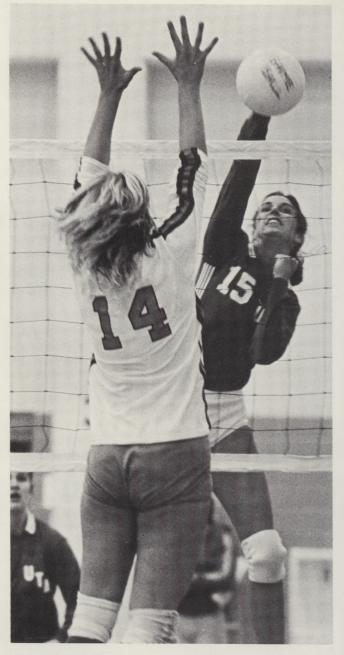

The finish was impressive mainly because of the early season slump the team suffered. First team setter Terry Bagley was injured at the first of the year and the team was learning a new type of play that hampered them. But when Bagley returned and the new system caught on, the team began to improve.

It was a young team to begin with, no seniors on the squad. Outstanding players throughout the year included spiker Theresa Noggler, who was unstoppable in almost every match, and Kim Hudson. But the team was noted mainly for their team play, a group who could substitute and lose little talent.

"This is a most cohesive team," Ridgway said. "They play with a lot of feeling. Sometimes you can beat a greater talent if you play with heart."

It was a team that played with emotion and beat teams that may have had greater talent. But after it was over it wasn't as typical a season as it seemed. Below: Julie LaRue takes over the net and stops the ball dead. Right: Kim Hudson was one of the team's top scorers with a wicked spike. Bottom left: LaRue displays the power of her smash. ### Basketball

Take a team that has an 11-16 record. Now take away that team's top two scorers. What have you got?

The first winning season in a decade.

With Miles Robertson and Cal Tate leaving in their caps and gowns, the future looked bleak for Coach Snake LeGrand. But an influx of recruits pulled the team into the victory margin.

Part of the credit goes to returning players. Post Paul Renfro showed his three previous seasons of college experience, and Jeff Stewart ran the offense better than the average sophomore should.

But most of the credit for the turnaround must go to names like Melvin Polk and Andre Langford. They added a bench strength, along with senior Ronny Newton, that the team had lacked.

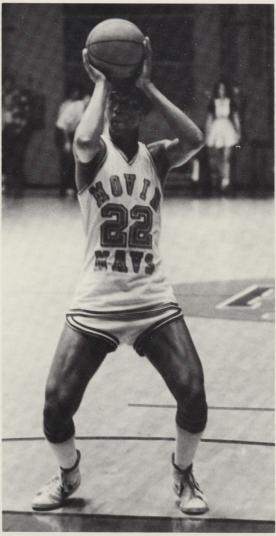

The Mavs opened with two Southwest Conference opponents, TCU and Rice. The rejuvenated Frogs slapped UTA, 103-98, but the Rice game was typical of the Mavericks' season.

With one second left and UTA trailing by one, Rice's Brian Burns fouled Tom Colbert trying to rebound his own missed free throw. Colbert hit both ends of the one-and-one, giving UTA the win, 81-80.

Legrand said he had "never seen a game like that." He saw something close to it many more times during the season.

The Mavs wound up in four overtime games, two with double playoffs. They lost both the double overtimes by a total of three points and went to extra periods in both games with McNeese.

In the second McNeese battle, Renfro hit a bucket on the last tick for the first overtime, and Polk hit another with nine seconds left to go into the second overtime.

But Stewart's timing was off, as he dumped in the shot that would have given UTA a one-point victory. Referee Paul Galvan ruled Stewart was a half second behind the buzzer and the Cowboys rode out with a 98-97 win.

The next week a slightly demoralized team had to meet the cream of the SLC crop, Lamar, in Beaumont. The Cards took it to UTA, 118-81. The Mavs were quickly sinking into oblivion in the conference race with a 1-3 record.

They added another number to each side of the won-loss record before the return home match with Lamar. The Cardinals were looking to wrap up the championship and Coach Billy Tubbs had his cigar ready.

He almost swallowed it as the Mavericks battled as if it were their last breath. The game seesawed until the final minutes when Lamar's experienced, heavily talented squad wore UTA down. The Mavs went under, 99-82 in a game that was considerably closer.

"They just keep coming," Langford said of the Cards after the game. "You think you have one boxed out, and here comes another one."

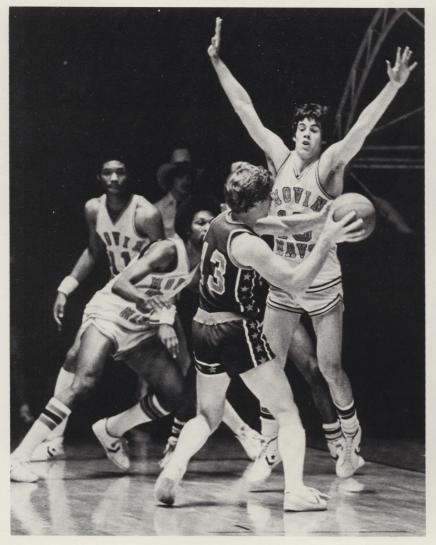

From there it was playing for the record book. The Mavs clinched their first winning record in a decade by stopping St. Edward's 94-65, but missed their best record as a four-year college when Louisiana Tech corked them up, 91-82.

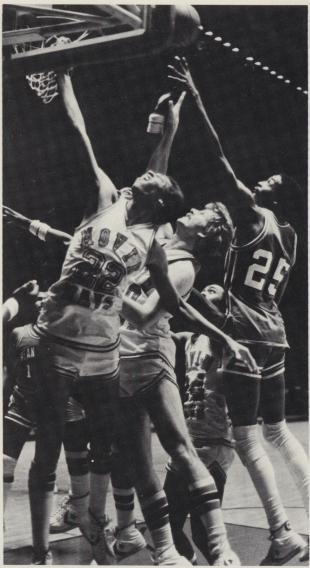

UTA finished 3-7 in conference and 14-13 season.

It was a year of adjustment for the women's basketball team. The players had spent their UTA careers under Coach Cindy Salser who suddenly resigned at season's end last year. Then Connie Kelch was hired to take over the team.

But you couldn't call it a rebuilding year. It quickly became Kelch's team and she led them to a 12-16 record. The Lady Mavs refused to fall into any real slumps during the season, never losing more than four in a row.

The team opened with a few surprises and three straight wins. Then it was four consecutive losses and the season seesawed for the rest of the year.

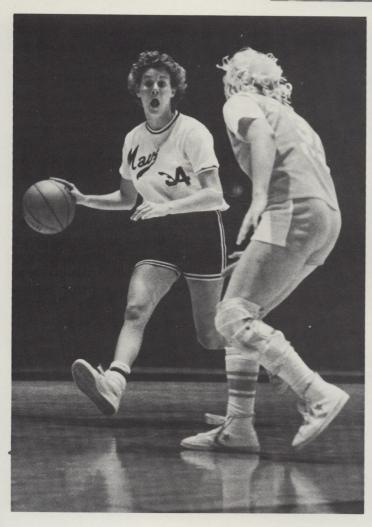

Even in the losses, the Mavericks stayed close. The only true blow outs were against strong schools like UT Austin, Texas A&M and Houston.

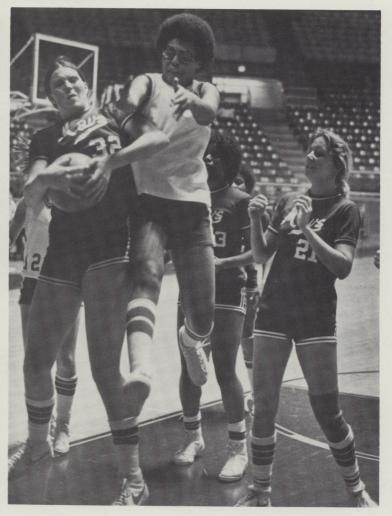

It turned out that playing so close was a problem for the team. Coach Kelch could teach her style, but when it got close they sometimes reverted to instinct. "They have a lack of discipline on the court," Kelch said late in the season. "Once they get in a tight situation, they don't take the time to adjust — they revert back to their old ways of playing Sharon Jones led the team in both scoring and rebounding for the season. Jones averaged over 14 points and 11 rebounds followed by Julie Massey with over 12 tallies and 7 rebounds.

Two other players, Linda Wright and Julie Smith, scored in double figures for the season.

As an example of how closely the team played its opponents, less than a point separated the average final scores.

Freewheelers

Right: Brian "Pic" Welnack prepares to pass off in practice session. Below: Jimmy Strader goes for the bank shot in game against UT Austin here.

Before the Freewheelers' season even started, player-coach Jim Hayes had his doubts. "We're in trouble talent-wise," he said. By season's end he was calling it the best wheelchair basketball UTA ever had.

That was quite a compliment, as previous teams already owned two state championships. But the 79-80 edition tacked on one more, this time without a true superstar on the team.

Hayes' early worries were soothed some in the preseason tournament, which the team won. But the victory proved deceiving. Soon after, the team that usually challenged UTA for the Texas title, UT Austin, annihilated the 'Wheelers, 50-23.

The 'Wheelers served notice by giving their regular scrimmage opponents, the semi-pro Dallas Raiders, fits winning 39-32. "We played the best team ball since I've been here," Hayes said. "We used everybody on the court."

The defense continued to improve with the addition of Glenn Williamson in the middle. He dominated the boards from his first game, and UTA pulled even with the 'Horns with a November Homecoming win, 53-45. The inside game was the difference, as UT Austin could penetrate the lane only twice the entire match.

The decisive game came in Texas Hall, and the defense once again won it for UTA, 42-29. "They were like a well-oiled machine," Hayes said after his team walloped the Austinites to nail down the title.

Baseball is a team sport, but sometimes it can come down to one man. The game, and the season, did just that for the Mavericks this year. Unluckily the man was on the other team.

The North Zone race came down to UTA and Louisiana Tech, and the Mavs needed only a double-header sweep to claim the crown and go on to the conference championship against Lamar.

But the first, and what proved to be the final, game of the double-header belonged to Keith Thibodeaux. He tossed a neat one-hitter, but Thibodeaux's killing contributions was his bat. With two out in the 11th inning, Thibodeaux smashed a three-run homer and the UTA season. The Mavericks went down 3-0.

The reason for the Mavs even being in the zone race was arms. After the previous season when the team had to try and outscore the opposition, this year they could go on the field and count on pitching.

The team compiled a respectable 3.83 earned run average for the season, led by Fred Wilburn's 2.10 ERA. But the story of the pitching staff was Steve Dearman, the staff ace with 12 wins and only one loss. Unluckily, the loss was the final Tech game. Dearman's victories tied a Southland Conference record for single season wins and his 13 complete games tied a school record.

But the team didn't have to count totally on the pitching. They could pop the ball, too. Five players with over 50 at bats, hit over .300, led by Richard Wilkinson's .382. Wilkinson also slammed 10 home runs, leading the team, and struck out only 17 times. Richard Valenta was the top runs-batted-in man with 54.

As a team the Mavs carried a .292 batting average and averaged over five runs a game.

At home the Mavericks were a terror, running up a 28-13 record, but on the road they were only 7-12. Their overall record was 35-25 with a 10-5 SLC ledger.

Besides Dearman's conference record, Wilkinson also set new standards for total bases in a career, 312, and runs-batted-in in a career, 151. Randy Thorpe nabbed 53 stolen bases to get into the SLC book. Twelve school records were broken in the season by the team including most of the batting standards and most games won. Wilkinson also claimed seven school individual records.

It wasn't exactly a turnaround, but it wasn't the previous year's 8-22 record, either. Under new coach Randy Porter, the women's softball team improved their win record to 17-14 margin in the fall.

"Really, I'm pleased with the season and I'm a hard person to please," Porter said. "Looking back at how we looked when we started — realistically — I know we've come a long way."

A big piece of that long way was the maturing of freshmen pitchers. Veteran Ida Gandee was forced to take most of the tougher games while the freshmen were allowed to work in slowly and avoid shell shock.

That experience paid off especially well for Debbie Brown, who finished with a 7-2 record and a 1.23 earned run average. Porter called her a bright spot on the team.

Another freshman, Tracy Haynie, ended with a 3-0 record and a sparkling 0.67 ERA. She contests with St. Mary's 10-0, Texas Wesleyan 3-1 and West Texas State 12-2 in the state tournament.

Gandee finished with a 6-9 record, but was the hard luck pitcher on the team as evidenced by her 1.86 ERA.

But it wasn't just the pitching that improved. The team batting average was .292, led by Libby Pollard's .345. Tammi Martens backed her up with .330 along with Sheba Thomas and Trisa Curtis' .333. Right fielder Cindy Spradling was the team RBI leader with 20.

The spring season was a continuation of the development. The team pulled down a 33-19 record for a year's record of 50-33. Brown had an 18-9 won-lost slate and Haynie was 15-10, with both pitchers keeping their ERA under 2.0.

The spring saw a marathon 25-inning game with Minnesota that ended with UTA losing 2-1, handing Haynie her first loss of the year.

But the team seemed to peak a little too early in the season. Warning came when the Lady Mavs finished third in their own tournament, which they expected to win. The truth came out at the Southwest Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women tournament when UTA tied for seventh.

Track

The UTA men's track team had the proven stars it needed this year. But to really challenge for the Southland Conference title, they needed depth. They seemed to have found it.

An influx of new blood and the continued success of sprinterlong jumper Gilbert Smith and javelin thrower Allen Lowes led the Mavs to second place in the SLC.

It was a continuation of the conference ladder climb Coach Harold Perkins' teams began four years ago when they were in the cellar.

In addition, Smith and Lowes qualified for the NCAA meet, Smith for the second time and Lowes for the third. Lowes reached the qualifying mark at the Baylor Invitational with a toss of 247-6. The throw brought on a sigh of relief from Perkins, since Lowes had been sorearmed most of the season and not nearly up to par. Smith took Lowes' lead and a little over a week later, qualified with a long jump of 24-10 at the Texas Relays.

Other steady performers during the season were shot-puter Ken Justice and sprinters Kevin Woods and Anthony Gouldsby.

Woods and Anthony Gouldsby.
The team took firsts in the Arlington Relays and Texas Tech Invitational and seconds at the Southwest Recreational and the conference meet.

Seven school records were set, after the previous year's team had already rewritten the book. Four of those records were set in relay events.

Go1f

For the fourth straight year, the university golf team putted its way over the Southland Conference meet course into fifth place. And worse, the fifth place finish was indicative of the entire season.

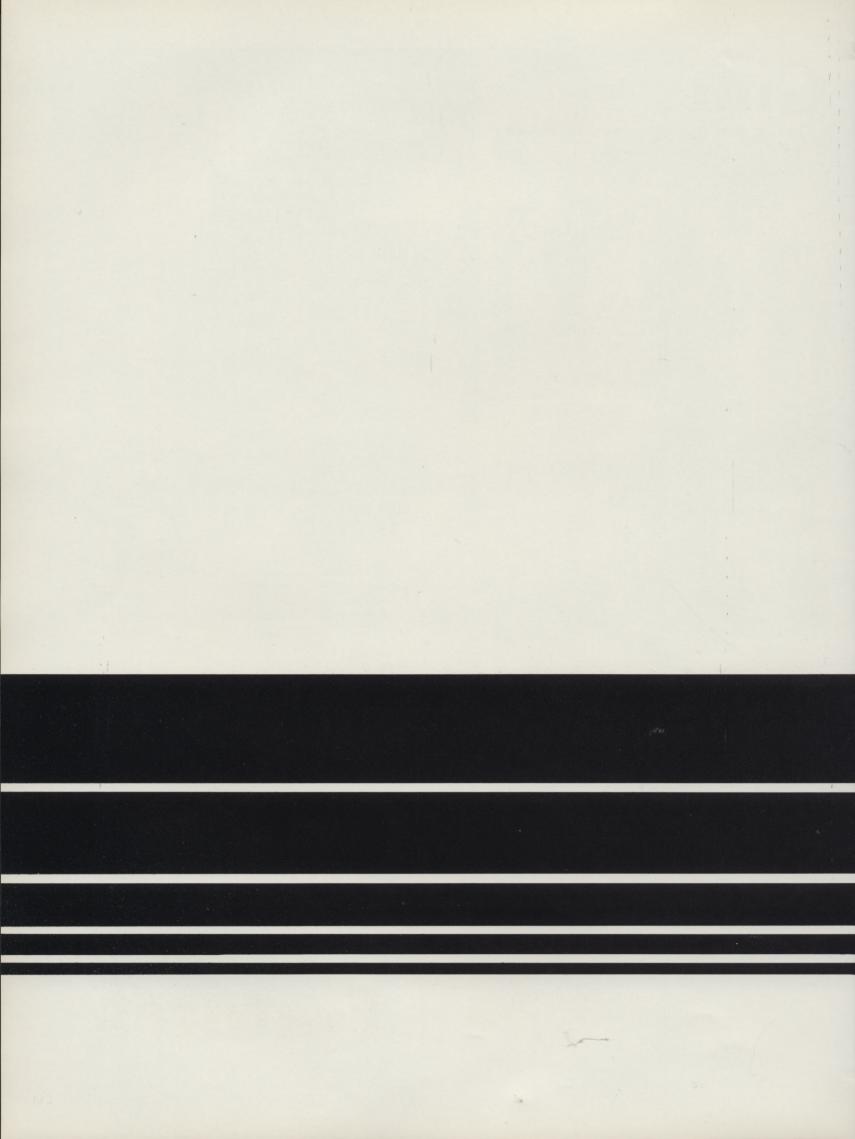

Seventh, twelfth and tenth were all too common finishes for the team. The only meet victory of the year was at the TCJC Invitational, primarily against junior college teams.

Bright spots for the team were Kent McGee, Tom Chick and Larry Salter who were consistent players throughout the season. McGee was the Mavs' top finisher at the SLC meet, claiming 11th place.

The golf team had a tough year as putts wouldn't fall and drives drove a little too far. In a sport where nerves play such an important part, each failure added to the pressure in the next round. In the end the little problems added up to a disappointing fifth place SLC finish.

Women Warriors

Staring into the distance, Diann Coleman fidgets with the diamond on her left ring-finger. Soon to come is an elaborate wedding, a new house and, someday, a child or two.

ness world.

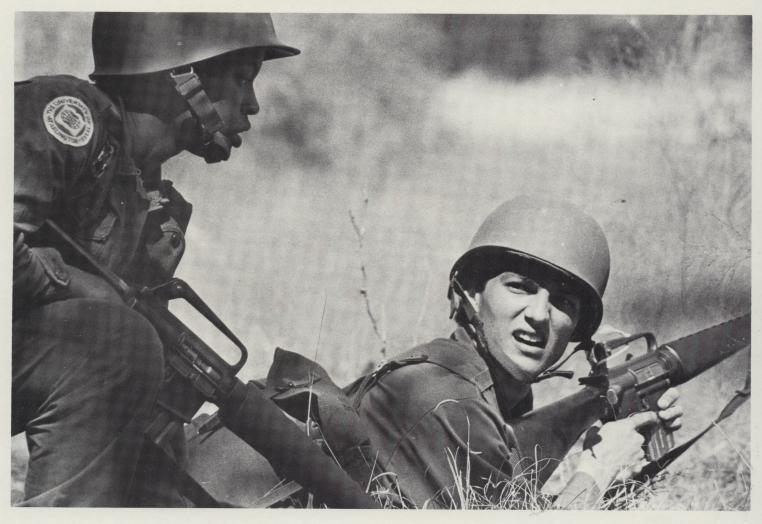

This year, however, found American women examining their role in society once again. For when President Carter sent Congress his recommendation that selective service registration be reinstated, he requested that women be included.

America's reaction was varied. For some, the potential opportunities of the armed services sounded exciting. Other Americans felt betrayed. College protesters seemed to be taking up where the 60's left off, ERA proponents began strengthening their stance and Pentagon officials bristled at the thought of overhauling the military system to accommodate female draftees.

Though Carter said America was over-reacting to his registration bill, he estimated that by 1985 12 percent of armed forces personnel would be women.

selective service at their local post office. Next year would find 18-year-olds doing the same.

The President assured us that women would not be serving in combat, but Americans were still not at ease. And many were still questioning whether or not the United States was ready to draft women long after the issue was settled.

"We don't think women should be drafted, if we are going to be denied our rights," said Lois Kantor, president of the NOW Fort Worth chapter. "But I personally think the passing of the registration bill will help ERA by enabling people to separate the issues. Congress can draft women right now — but we still don't have ERA."

Capt. Charles Smith, assistant professor of military science, also believed the issues were confused — but in a different way.

"We're wasting time dickering over whether to draft women, when we need to be establishing legislation to enact the draft,"

he said.

There are now 150,000 women in the armed services. Jobs range from guarding ballastic missiles to serving as cooks; overall, the women are described as efficient and capable.

Ninety-eight women are enrolled in the ROTC program here.

Smith said combat duty would never be appropriate for women, mainly due to the physical differences between male and female.

"And then, of course, there is the problem of field sanitation, in such close quarters" he said. "Living conditions during combat are crude — sometimes you even have to bathe in a stream."

Sophomore Renade Martin, a pretty blonde, who looks more like the Colonel's pampered daughter than the stereotyped enlisted woman, has just completed three years of active duty in the Air Force. She found the issue of field sanitation irrelevant.

"People aren't going to be concerned about bathing during a battle," she said. "If women want to engage in combat, they should be allowed to."

The Air Force was a source of advancement, travel and unlimited experience for Martin, but she doesn't totally support a mandatory draft.

"It takes a couple or three years out of your life," she said. "If your heart's not in it, you mess up your whole career with poor performance."

One reason Smith was against women in the field is the basic "emotional factor" that exists between men and women.

"It would result either in favoritism or rejection," he said, "and the slightest friction might break the cohesive unity so important in combat."

Other considerations were of equal importance. Child care, maternity leave and the separation of married couples would all have to be worked out for a universal draft to function smoothly.

"I don't see why men should have to bear the burden of the military," said Betsy Honea, an education major and mother of two girls. But I do think they'll have to work out a special system for people with children."

A married couple, Tracy and Larry Ramey, saw pregnancy as an easy out in the event of female induction.

Tracy, a freshman nursing major, said no cause would make her willing to serve. Larry, a biology major, adamantly agreed. "I don't want my wife in the serivce," he said "and if it comes to it, she'll get pregnant."

Pregnancy no longer results in a compulsory discharge, but — it is one sure way of obtaining an immediate release from the service, if one is desired. Quite often, such releases cause hard-to-fill vacancies in the military's womanpower, officials say.

When senior Ed McDonald and wife Debbie joined the Army, they were told they would not be separated. And they weren't — for a while. But just when Debbie became pregnant, Ed was reassigned to Korea. The problem? Military regulations state mothers-to-be must leave overseas posts by the 18th week of pregnancy.

The whole idea of combat for women is highly controversial. More than one woman contacted said she did not have the emotional makeup to kill.

"I'd be killed in the first 10 minutes of combat, because I'd just stand there," said a freshman coed.

Congress did not pass the President's bill and Carter soon settled down to the idea of allmale registration. But Americans didn't feel they had worried needlessly.

Senior Mary Fickle, whose daughters are ages 5 and 8, summed up the American women's feelings when she said, "A man will fight for his country, but if the need arises, a women will fight for her own as well as her children's freedom."

1979-80:

It was a strange year. Tense. Nervous.

The campus rolled with the punches. Reverberations from a revolution that overthrew a 2,500-year-old monarchy birthed anti-Iranian sentiment here.

The hostage situation didn't help the already frayed American-Iranian student relations, either.

It was a year of presidential primaries. Reagan, the man on the white horse, versus Carter, the prisoner of Pennsylvania Ave.

There were bright moments. John Anderson's idealism. Eric Heiden's winter gold. But they seemed like stars in the dark void of Klan demonstrations, Afghanistan, and world revolutions.

We were caught in the strangle hold of rising gas prices and skyrocketing inflation.

And, damn, if somehow, somewhere, in the midst of the tumult, we managed to study anyhow.

We pursued our academic lives, occasionally stopping, ears cocked, momentarily distracted from that all important goal—a career.

The world going to hell on a tobogan wasn't enough to deter

"What a circus," we sighed over a disco beat. A three-ring affair.

SALT treaties, Three Mile Island, Extoc 2 — the names still tweek familiar chords in us. We remember the tune, sure, but we just can't get the words right.

How soon we begin to forget.

Does anyone remember Kent State? Remember the Saturday Night Massacre? Remember My Lai 4? Richard Nixon? Vietnam? Napalm?

"We're not history majors," we cried.

An Overview

The past year seems just as vague at times, its escapades overshadowed by more important things.

Chemistry 1301. English 2303.

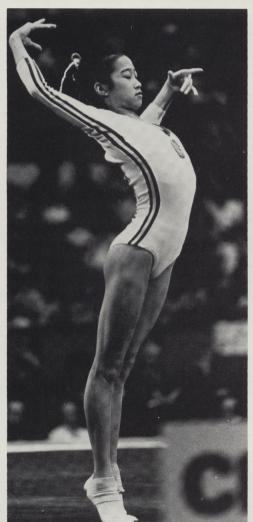

Our careers.

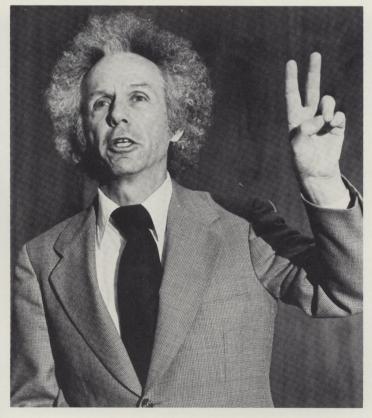

We noticed Iran enough in the last year to learn to hate another culture. We noticed Afghanistan enough to learn how to turn athletes into weapons. We noticed the candidates enough to know there was no real choice.

So, we closed our eyes and made our choices anyway, and then we hit the books some more.

So, the world might go boom someday. And, we might even notice it.

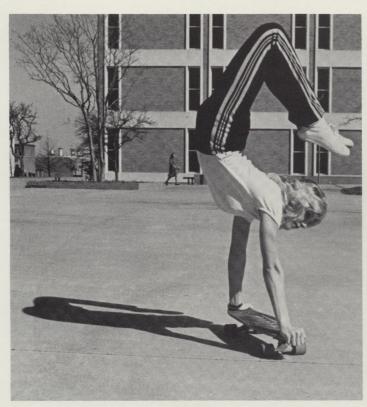

But at least we'll go with a college degree.

Modes of Transportation

Story by: Kathy Shirley Photos by: Peggy Kilmer

The year is 1913. Henry Ford revolutionizes the automobile industry with his assemblyline Model T.

But history records that Leonardo da Vinci considered the idea of a self-propelled vehicle 'way back in the 1700s.

And the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and the Automobile Club de France say that Nicolas-Joseph Cugnot of Lorraine built the first true automobile.

Other inventors around the world followed suit, trying to better what had already been done.

After Ford and mass production, the market boomed. Today, though some years after Ford's Model T, the public is again looking for new modes of transportation.

Why aren't we satisfied with what we have?

One reason is inflation. Not only is the oil running out, but gas and car prices are skyrocketing.

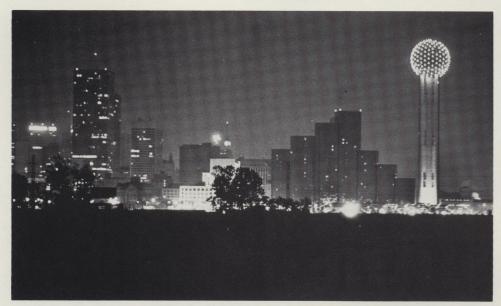

Despite mass production, the public is again having a hard time affording the car. So we turn to motorcycles, which use gas, but not so much. Also skates, skateboards and bicycles. Self-propulsion.

The campus has 337 acres, so walking can take too long.

Maybe some bright UTA engineer should invent battery-operated skates for those really long runs.

Night1ife

When the gray twilight settles over the UTA campus and daylight recedes from the senses, a strange transformation occurs. Eyelids heavy from lack of sleep suddenly pop open with new life. Those red rings miraculously clear. Limbs cramped from hauling textbooks all day take on new energy and a shot of adrenalin surges up to recharge that iron-poor blood.

It's nighttime in the city and a host of UTAer's are ready for a change.

The Dry Gulch, UTA's own nightspot, opened in October, 1978.

The Gulch owes its existence to a spirited (excuse the pun) group of people who fought for a campus club from 1971 until the opening of the Gulch in 1978.

Other college campuses allowed the sale of beer and wine, and some thirsty people decided it was UTA's turn. Students and faculty wanted some sort of coffeehouse where they could talk, study, get away from it all, maybe watch television or dance. In other words, diversions from the grueling grind of school.

The Gulch offers those diversions as well as live entertainment, with a seven-foot TV screen, a color TV with a cozy conversation pit, electronic games and a dance floor with the traditional silver ball.

Local clubs, like J. Gilligan's, attract a number of students for lunch, happy hour and late night entertainment.

For a two dollar cover charge, a female can see 12-15 male dancers on three stages stripping and dancing to the music, at one of the three LaBare clubs in Dallas and Fort Worth. The dancers have such aliases as "The Greek," "The Prince" and "Snake." They pass out kisses for a dollar, letting the women slip the folded dollar bills into their G-strings.

Why would women be interested in male strippers? "Why not?" one dancer asks. "Men have been doing this for ions."

Which leads into the next night spot, "Baby Dolls," a topless club, mostly for men. Located on Highway 157, it is a neon purple building, with a pink neon sign announcing the presence of the place if the crowd of cars outside doesn't already give it away. A popular night spot for birthday celebrations, stag parties, and "wild nights out with the guys," "Baby Dolls" offers 15-20 dancers for entertainment.

The Showdown, located off Cooper Street, is a saloon which attracts 150-200 people a night.

Story by: Laura Gilbreath

An old-fashioned knot-holed building, you might expect someone to hitch a horse outside.

There is ice skating at the Forum 303 ice chalet, and Six Flags Over Texas attracts two and a half million visitors a year.

Other discos and nightspots include Spencer's Palace, The Daily Double, The Beggar, Flanigan's, the Playboy Club, Papagayo, The Sunset, Fat Alberts and Summerfields.

Graham Central Station on Cooper Street has three bars to service thirsty dancers, backgammon for those with sore feet, and a game room on raised platform at the back of the disco.

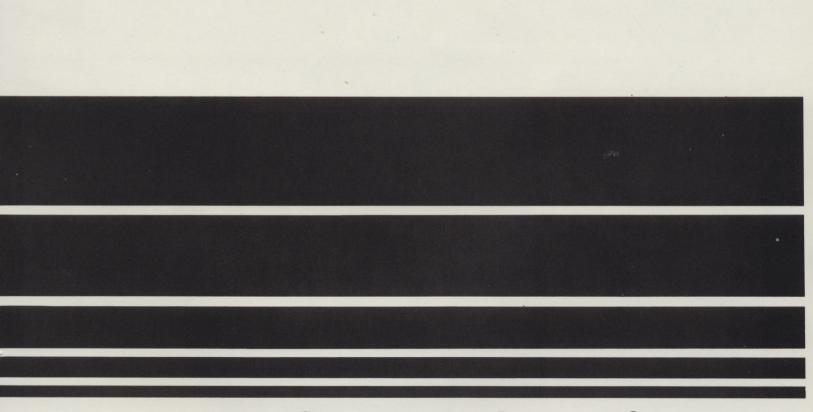

Eating places are also numerous and varied, but some of the most popular are Cheddar's, Daniel's, Bobby McGee's Butterfields, Mama's Pizza, J. R. Bentley's, Galligaskin's, Zeke's and Matches.

After a good meal, there is no place to go like a good movie. Area theaters include Cinema 4 on Pioneer Parkway, Forum 303 Mall, the Six Flags Mall cinemas, and a Hulen 6, not to mention the drive-ins (which we won't.) On campus, there is the A-1 Classy Theater in the activities building. Nearly four years old, the facility was first used in 1976 when the first movie, "Tommy," was shown there. The theater seats 509 people and is used for a variety of activities, including movies, lectures, magic shows, hypnotists and more.

When daylight returns, eyelids become heavy with lack of sleep. Eyes become bloodshot. Limbs scream from too much exercise and iron-poor blood becomes poorer as it creeps like sludge through the veins.

School becomes a reality again, a cup of coffee is needed to start the day. Numb fingers pick up discarded textbooks and less-than-enthused feet start walking in the direction of an 8 o'clock class to the strains of "I love the night life, I want to boogie . . ." And the cycle starts again.
